Mayor Thomas Koch, sworn in to his third term at inauguration ceremonies Tuesday evening at Quincy High School, said the city stands on the threshold of job growth and opportunity and pledged high achievement in education, public safety and public services.

Quoting President Theodore Roosevelt, Koch also called upon his colleagues in government to work together to meet and exceed the challenges ahead.

"When history judges our deeds, let it be said that we were in the arena, that we met our challenges with courage and that we forged ahead with creativity and conviction. Ladies and gentlemen, we will continue to meet the needs of our citizens and lay the foundation for prosperity — and the triumph of high achievement — for our children and grandchildren.

"Let us continue working together," the mayor said, "striving valiantly with great enthusiasm and devotion; four ours is a worthy cause."

Quincy's 33rd mayor received applause when he told the audience he was "committed to doing everything in my power to provide Quincy jobs for Quincy people."

Before delivering his inspiring 12-minute address, Koch was administered the oath of office from City Clerk Joseph Shea. Joining the mayor at the podium were his wife, Christine and

New School Committee Vice Chairperson Isola Urges Colleagues Be 'Creative, Cost Efficient'

Newly-elected School Committee Vice Chairperson Barbara Isola called upon her colleagues to be "creative and cost efficient" to create a "culture of achievement" at Tuesday's inauguration ceremony at Quincy High School.

"We are in the midst of a cultural sea change — having to do more with less. Therefore, it is incumbent upon us to be creative and cost efficient," said Isola in remarks after her unanimous election as the committee's vice chairperson.

New Council President McFarland Hospitalized

City Councillor Michael McFarland was elected council president at the city's inauguration Tuesday but was unable to attend the ceremonies because of hospitalization.

McFarland was admitted to Massachusetts General Hospital over the weekend with flu-like symptoms. He was expected to be released this week — perhaps as early as Wednesday.

City Clerk Joseph Shea visited McFarland Monday evening in the hospital where he was sworn in to a MICHAEL MCFARLAND new two-year term in office. McFarland was elected to his fourth term on the council last November.

"I spoke to Mike today and he's in good spirits," Shea said.

McFarland was undergoing some tests Tuesday that prevented him from attending the evening ceremonies at Quincy High School. Shea said a city councillor may be elected council president without physically being present when the election occurs.

McFarland plans to give his council presidency remarks at the Tuesday, Jan. 17 city council meeting.

After 153 Years In Landmark Bell Tower, Church Will Receive Refurbished Bell

Historic United First Parish Church Bell Removed

MOVING DAY – Workers from Shaughnessy & Ahern Co. help guide the United First Parish Church bell from the bell tower Dec. 29 as it is hoisted high into the sky with a giant crane. The cracked bell will be replaced with a refurbished bronze bell. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

By EMILY TAFT

Around 25 onlookers stopped to watch as the 153-year-old bell from United First Parish Church (The Church of Presidents) was lifted down to the ground Dec. 29.

The bell, which has a crack around 28 inches long, will be replaced with a refurbished bell in late January. The 3,012-pound bell is a 54½ inch Hooper Cast Bronze Bell, cast in 1859, 29 years before Quincy became a city. Since 1987 the bell has been hung in a fixed position after it was found that swinging it could cause it to break.

Bell riggers from Shaughnessy & Ahern Co. in South Boston removed the old bell last Thursday by turning it on its side and encasing it in a custom-made metal crib to remove it from the tower. A crane lowered the bell from its former perch 75 feet above Hancock Street to a flatbed truck below in about 15 seconds.

The old bell was transported to a warehouse in South Boston where it will be preserved until it is decided what will be done with it.

To remove the old bell, workers from Campbell Construction had to cut out pieces of the tower's new mahogany columns for it to fit through. Joints were put in the columns that had to be cut, and the pieces will be placed back in and fixed after the new bell is set in.

Verdin Bells & Clocks, after inspecting the old bell, is refurbishing a bell from a church in Chicago, which Verdin has made to look brand new. The new bell will also have an added feature: it will be positioned in a way to allow it to swing and give off a different tone when rung. The old bell – which had been a swinging bell originally – was later fixed because of structural issues with the bell tower floor. As a result, the sound that came off the bell was barely audible to passers-by.

The new swinging bell can be controlled by a remote control, according to James Edwards, Principle of Holmes & Edwards, Inc., and the architect firm in charge of the renovations. There will be a whole new ringing mechanism, new wheel, new support equipment, and new paint.

Everything that made the old bell and clock tick will be taken out and replaced with new equipment allowing for an easier way for the tower to be run.

The clock's paint has been stripped down to the bare granite and will be repainted to give it a new and fresh look. Before scrapping off the old clock face, painting contractor, M.L. McDonald, made a template to copy off of once the painting begins.

Heaters are running, up in the tower, to allow for the right temperature for painting. According to Edwards the painting will be done by mid January, and the finishing touches should be complete by the end of January.

The church was able to pay for the new look with grants from Partners in Preservation, and Save America's Treasures. After the work is complete the church will have, for the first time in 25 years, a bell that can ring for all to hear.

"The restored towers, with its golden dome and ringing bell, will be a magnificent centerpiece for Adams Green and the new Quincy Center," said Rev. Sheldon Bennett, the church minister. "The congregation thanks the citizens of Quincy for their supporting the Community Preservation Act, which has made this process possible."

Edward said the well executed bell removal process "demonstrates how great skill, experience and teamwork benefit a complicated project such as the one we witnessed today (Dec. 29)."

"Shaughnessy & Ahern's rigging crew and crane operator were amazing to watch in each phase of the removal effort. It's fascinating to think that the City of Quincy and United First Parish Church are without the 1859 Henry Hooper bell for the first time in some six generations.

"Mayor Koch and Rev. Bennett are, I know, looking forward to the next phase of the project which will see a new bell installed to replace the badly cracked Hooper bell," Edwards added.

Prefer Daylight Route Through Quincy Center 11 Residents Appeal Town Brook Relocation

By SCOTT JACKSON

The proposed relocation of Town Brook has been appealed once again.

Quincy Environmental Network founder Steve Perdios, one of the 11 residents who filed the appeal, said "the plan the city put forward is terrible" and added that it's based on the idea of "getting the brook out of the way."

Perdios said he wants the brook to run through Quincy Center, instead of along the southside of the Walter Hannon Parkway as the city plans to do. The key to his plan is opening more of the brook up to daylight. The city's proposal would expose more than 200 feet of the brook, while the alternate would leave two to three times more than that open, according to Perdios.

Perdios said the brook should serve as a centerpiece for the new Quincy Center. He also said he's received support from the community, citing a past meeting he attended with over a hundred residents. "Everyone thought daylight was a good idea," he said.

The relocation of Town Brook is part of the $1.6 billion Quincy Center redevelopment plan. The plan the city chose calls for replacing approximately 1,700 linear feet of the brook's current culvert with a new 1,200-foot long, 11-foot wide culvert. Illegal sewer connections to the river will also be removed during construction.

Before settling on placing the brook next to the new parkway, the city did consider having the waterway go through Quincy Center. But that would've been more expensive, and it called for the buying of private property, which could delay the project.

Perdios dismissed concerns over the cost as "speculation and guesswork."

The residents originally challenged Quincy's conservation commission's permit for the work, and last month the state Department of Environmental Protection backed the city. But included in the DEP's decision, called a superseding order of conditions, were 47 guidelines the city must abide by. "The superseding conditions are far better than the original plan," Perdios said.

The matter will next be heard by state regulators, with a pre-hearing scheduled for later this month. Perdios wouldn't predict the outcome of that hearing. "I couldn't guess," he said. "Regulators are always hard to read."

If residents lose the appeal this time around, they'd be free to appeal the decision in the court system. But Perdios said litigation might not be necessary if the next hearing produces added favorable superseding conditions.

Revere Road resident Arline Goodman, one of the 11 residents who filed the appeal, also filed a separate appeal since the brook would be diverted through her property under the city's plan.

Goodman also cited concerns about flooding on her property because she's already been dealing with flooding.

"It looks like they want (Town Brook) to make a turn in my backyard," she said. "I'm already getting flooding now."

A spokesman for Mayor Tom Koch said the city's plan will improve the brook "10-fold."

"The DEP issued an order of conditions with more than 50 specific conditions tied directly to expanding the environmental benefits of a Town Brook project restoration that was already a 10-fold improvement on current conditions, including a dramatically improved smelt habitat and more than 200 feet of the brook that will now be daylight and enjoyed by the public as a park space," said Christopher Walker, spokesman for Mayor Tom Koch. "The conditions placed on the project are serious, rational, and represent an immense amount of due diligence by the state agencies involved. We fully expect to build this project based on those conditions."

Church Restoration Like Clock-Work

THE RESTORATION OF The United First Parish Church clock tower includes repainting and regilding the clock faces. Here Mike Camara (left), mason foreman with Phoenix Bay State Construction Company, checks the mortar around the window of one of the clock faces that has been removed and boarded up. A new window and clock face that measures about 6 feet in diameter will be installed in the coming weeks. Looking on is architect Jim Edwards of Holmes and Edwards.

Keenan: Council Over; Mayoral Run Not On Radar

State Sen. John Keenan – who has bid the City Council farewell – doesn't see himself returning to that elected body some day.

Keenan, who didn't seek re-election as a councillor at-large last fall, says he's squarely focused on serving his Senatorial constituents.

But could the popular Keenan who honed a reputation as a fiscal watchdog during his nine-year council tenure run for mayor some day?

"At one point I thought I'd be interested in it. I had a pretty decent interest in running for mayor. You never say never but right now it's not on the radar," Keenan says.

Of course, Keenan would not challenge incumbent Tom Koch who is his brother-in-law. And Keenan admits that he probably couldn't run if (when) Koch steps down because it would seem too much like a relative passing down a family heirloom.

His only political ambition now: becoming an effective state senator.

"Right now I'm focused on the Senate. It's fascinating. I think my personality is pretty well suited to the legislative process, although you do get a little antsy sometimes because you want something done and it's a little bit of a process but to become effective (on Beacon Hill), you need time to build relationships and if you're constantly looking at some other office, it takes your focus away from building those relationships you need to get legislation through and relationships within the state administration to help the district, whether it's money for streets or something else."

Keenan ran for the council in 2001 but finished fourth. However, that spot made him the logical choice to fill the unexpired term of Tim Cahill in early 2003 after Cahill resigned his seat after being elected state treasurer in the fall of 2002.

Keenan campaigned and won his first full two-year term in 2003 and was re-elected three times. His last election – 2009 – he topped the City Council ballot.

He says he perceived his role on the council as a fiscal watchdog and as an independent thinker. It also created an interesting dynamic since his brother-in-law is the mayor.

For example, when Koch submitted his first budget to the council, it was Keenan who advocated for a $5 million cut in that spending plan.

"There was a proposal to cut $5 million and ultimately there was a compromise to cut $3 million. But I thought $5 million was something we should have done at the time. It was painful – a lot of people were opposed to it. It would have meant cuts to the school, fire and police – across the board.

KEENAN

"We had a lot of votes at the outset of the process and they all disappeared pretty quickly," Keenan said. "I think it was a 9-0 in support of cutting the money but when things got hot it ended up being a 6-3 vote. That was a good experience to go through because I stuck to my guns and it was crowded (in the Council Chamber) that night.

"I remember getting home that night and I had a bunch of emails and a bunch of phone calls from people saying they disagreed with the cut for $5 million. They were afraid of the impact but they respected the fact that I go up there and did it."

Keenan, the chairman of the council's Finance Committee – was one of the three votes to cut the budget by $5 million.

Did he get a call from the mayor after that vote?

"He wasn't too happy," Keenan replied.

Keenan joined the council five years before Koch was elected mayor. He said serving on the council while his brother-in-law has been the mayor was an adjustment for him.

It also created a different political perception that he soon had to deal with.

On the one hand, Keenan realized that if he voted with the mayor, he would be perceived by some as a rubber stamp. On the other, opposing Koch might create some family fireworks.

As it turned out, it also thrust Keenan's name into some mayoral campaigns. Even though he wasn't campaigning for the city's highest elective office.

"I remember when Bill Phelan ran against Tommy in 2009. Bill campaigned against Tommy saying 'even his own brother in-law voted against his budget. Imagine how bad this would be – his own brother voted against it' suggesting that my role would be to always vote whatever way my brother in-law wanted me to vote."

The inference: things are so bad that's the only reason Keenan wouldn't support Koch's budget. As it turned it, Koch defeated Phelan in a mayoral re-match to win a second term.

Then, when Keenan ran for state senator in 2010, an opponent distributed an attack ad claiming he never voted against his brother in-law.

"My attitude early on was I can't win in that respect so I just did what I thought I had to do. Tommy and I have had our political tussles . . . but it's never affected our personal relationship. There are things we won't talk about politically but it's left in the political realm. He's pretty thick-skinned. There's not much that really gets to him."

Keenan also shared his thoughts about charges of nepotism and cronyism that were leveled against the Koch and Keenan families during last year's contentious mayoral race by challenger Anne Mahoney. In one ad put out by the Mahoney camp, Keenan was among about a dozen family members listed on the city payroll. It also included their salaries including Keenan's $22,300 earnings as a councillor.

"The part (of the ad) with me in it was politics as usual," Keenan says. "From a pure political perspective, you could make an issue of it. I don't think it was an accurate portrayal but in this day in age, with everything that goes on at every level of government, where you could trot that out there and it would have the ability to stick – people would take notice from it.

"From a pure political standpoint, yeah, I can see why Anne would have gone with that approach. I thought Anne had a valid thing to say. We've been through a tough campaign when Bill Phelan was mayor and Tom Koch challenged him and now there's a perception of Tom Koch and what he's doing. (She was saying) 'I'm not either one of those.' So you could see that it was a logical campaign approach."

But, he continued, "I think it back-fired a little bit. When I went out to a lot of senior centers, people asked me, 'why was your name on that ad?' We voted for you. I think she maybe went a little too far but it's hard not to be offended."

Keenan has two brothers employed by the city: Police Chief Paul Keenan and Matthew Keenan, a Quincy firefighter.

"I'm proud of my brother Paul. He's a guy who went through the (police) ranks and it would have been a shame for him to be penalized – basically not getting the chief's job because of who he's related to. There's always the danger of that happening. We can't make you chief because it won't look good politically.

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

"My brother Matt is on the fire department. He's been nominated for firefighter of the year. If I had to call 911, I want my brother Matt coming down the street. If it's a police situation, I'd want my brother Paul. They are both good workers."

As for the mayor's relatives who are on the city payroll, Keenan calls them "phenomenal" workers.

"If you were to put all of the city's best workers together, they are in that group without a doubt. It's a shame that good employees who show up, work hard get roped into the political process just because of who they're related to.

"But it's part of the political process. It's unfortunate that the people who are not involved politically do get drawn into it."

Public service, Keenan says, is now looked up upon by many with negativity.

"It's not just Quincy, it's statewide and across the country. If you're involved in government (the perception is) you must know somebody, you're not a good worker, you couldn't make it in the private sector and there are a lot of good people who work in the public sector.

"When you get into that type of politics it just fuels that whole negative perception of what goes on in government."

After graduating from North Quincy High School in 1982, Keenan attended Harvard University. To help pay for his education, he worked 40 hours a week in the university's equipment room for all the major sports teams.

After receiving his B.A. in government concentration in 1986, Keenan enrolled at Suffolk Law School and received his law degree in 1989.

His political roots soon began to grow. Now, years later, he doesn't forget those who helped launch his career in public service.

At his final city council meeting Dec. 19, Keenan and former Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi were presented plaques for their service by their colleagues.

Offering some parting words, Keenan thanked his family for their support, especially his wife Jeanne and their three sons: Chris, age 18; Tim, 16 and Kevin, 11.

He also praised several individuals who were instrumental in his political tutelage:

- Former Mayor Frank McCauley who appointed Keenan chairman of the Mayor's Commission on Handicap Affairs (Keenan's first political appointment.)

- Former Mayor James Sheets who appointed Keenan to the Quincy Zoning Board and later named him his executive secretary.

- Bob Foy, who was the auditor when Keenan worked in the mayor's office. "That's when I was really introduced to municipal finance. He is a great public servant. When I think back to all the people who I have met, he's the guy who really left an impression."

In fact, it was Foy who gave him the one piece of advice that has become integral to Keenan's approach to government.

"From a financial standpoint, it was Bob Foy who said you may have all the plans of what you want to do in government but it comes down to how well you manage the finances and being able to pay for what you want to do in government. That's always stuck with me.

"Other people have told me that you put the focus on your family and that has held. I think it's important for people to have that balance; otherwise it's all consuming and you lose a little bit of perspective.

"Don't get so involved that you forget to have a life outside (of government)."

And to the new and future councillors, Keenan has his own advice:

"Enjoy it. I hate saying 'don't take it too seriously' because it is a serious job but you have to find balance. What I've learned over the years it's far more effective to work with people, to build bridges, to find compromise that it is to stake out an extreme position and not work with people."

THIS IS A 1920 postcard view of the old Swedish Baptist Church that was at 388 Granite Street in Brewer's Corner in southwest Quincy. In 1920, there were four Swedish Protestant churches of different denominations in this part of Quincy. They were: Baptist, Congregational, Lutheran and Methodist-Episcopal. Eight Swedish immigrants who had come to Quincy to work in the granite industry founded this Baptist congregation in 1885. They first met in their homes and then in a small building on Station Street until they built this church in 1896. In 1922 they built a new church on Washington Street next to the old YMCA building. They then merged with the Calvary Baptist Church and became the Central Baptist Church, which it remains today. The building shown here still stands without the steep, porch and large windows. Other church groups used it and for many years it served as home to Quincy Community Action Program, but has now been converted to low-income housing. Retracts Statement About Tax Increase

I sent in a article Dec. 12 regarding the Quincy tax increase.

I stated that Quincy Mayor Koch, told the taxpayer he would not increase taxes during his term in the mayors office.

I was wrong to make that statement.

During the mayor's recent campaign for reelection, Koch did state he would have to raise taxes, but would try to keep the increase under $100, per house hold. He did keep that promise, as the taxes is less than $100.

I still feel that building that cross town connector was a big mistake, as the road did remove vital tax revenue for this city. That, I will not back down from.

Also, taking three buildings for a school is also a big mistake, as well as cutting down, a very healthy tree for a parking lot.

James Green Takes Readers On Three Journeys 'Tales Of Boston Harbor' Author Chronicles Fond Memories Of Quincy

By EMILY TAFT

For Author James Green writing about the shores of Boston Harbor came as natural as stepping out his front door to go running at age 79.

Green, a graduate of Quincy High School, grew up in Houghs Neck and Adam Shore, where he lived for 27 years. He recently wrote the book Tales of Boston Harbor, a book that takes the reader on three separate journeys as a clamdigger, a rock skipper, and with six seamen unraveling the mystery of a missing clipper.

"I had a couple of interesting experiences when I was a young man," said Green. "I started thinking about the shore where I grew up and just started writing things down."

Green wrote down his stories and memories over the years. He recently decided to finish them up to form a book.

"It was kind of a relief to finish," said Green. "You feel like you have had a unique experience, adventure, and you would like to share it and hope that others will be able to enjoy it."

The story of the Clamdigger follows Green as a teenager and his life growing up on the shore. Green, who started clam-digging in 1940, says in the book that clamdigging is the most natural work a man could do. The story follows him from when he first began to dig, talking of men he met along the way and where you could find the most experienced clamdiggers.

"For today's youth and for anyone brought up after the 1970's, it's hard for them to understand what their parents went through earning money and learning to survive," said Green. "I wrote the clamdigging story because I thought it was a very rare experience to go through, working on a different shore every day."

Not much of an athlete back then, Green said he finds now that the work of a clamdigger prepared him for the life of a marathon runner.

"It was a very unusual experience to be a clamdigger," said Green. "It was good for upper body strength, and produced a mental fitness that made marathon running easier. The hard work of a clamming was a big part of my future success in running."

Throughout his life Green has ran in marathons. He's competed – and for fun – 22 Boston Marathons, races in Korea, Pan American races, and Olympic tryouts. He came in second in the Pan American Challenge, and was the first alternate in the 1960 and 1964 Olympic marathon teams.

"I was able to run strongly up until my 50's," said Green. "When you're running well and feeling good it's kind of a celebration of both agony and ecstasy."

Green said he has thought about writing stories of his running career but isn't sure if he will be able to complete a book about it. He continues to run and even compete in races, running an average of five miles four days a week.

The second story in the book titled, "Chortov," follows six seamen attempting to solve the mystery of a missing clipper off Houghs Tombs in Quincy. The story begins by following a young man interested in a town with unusual history, which leads him to Quincy. The story then goes into some of the history Quincy comes with, from two U.S. Presidents being born there, and the different places within Quincy, such as Mount Wollaston, Merrymount and Houghs Neck, and how they got their names.

"Every time I go to those places it gives me a sense of mystery," said Green. "You see all these old structures there and it's hard not to feel a little sense of mystery and awe, and being there is what triggered me to write about it."

The last piece to the book takes the reader to Thompson's Island to skip rocks. Green talks of one particular day in June where he made the trip out to Thompson's from Squantum and was able to throw a rock that skipped 19 times. When he arrives he recalls the history of Thompson's Island, the first trading post in the Massachusetts colony was established on its southern shore. He then goes off into a dream state, with plans on how to make rock skipping a sport, until he was brought back to reality, having to return home.

Green said that talking with old friends and finding out they also skipped rocks on the shores near their homes made him want to write about the one place he enjoyed going to find the perfect skipping rocks. He said he frequently visited Thompson's Island and always found himself looking at the collection of rocks on the shore wondering where they came from and how great they all were for skipping.

The three stories form together to tell the life of a man who grew up on the shores of Quincy. Now Green is living in Marblehead with his wife of 46 years, Michele.

Before writing, Green received a degree in education, political science, and teaching, after being in the Army's language school. He then became a teacher, where he taught English, history, and Russian and now in his later years he continues to teach as a substitute teacher.

For now Green is enjoying promoting his book, and substitute teaching. He said that so far he has sold around 50 books, and plans on doing some book tours in the near future.

"You carry something in your head for so long, there is a little satisfaction to finally see it in print," said Green. "I hope now people will say you can judge a book by its cover."

Quincy Catholic Academy Sponsors Food Drive, Donates Christmas Gifts

Quincy Catholic Academy students donated gifts and sponsored a food drive to help those in need this holiday season.

During a recent event at the Academy called "Santa's Secret Workshop" where students can purchase Christmas gifts for their family members, students had the opportunity to thank those in need and purchased hats, gloves, mittens and scarves to donate to My Brother's Keeper Christmas Program.

My Brother's Keeper is a volunteer Christian ministry located in Easton. Since 1990, My Brother's Keeper has brought joy to kids and removed stress from parents who could not provide presents for their children at Christmas.

In addition to their presents, each family also receives a ham or turkey and a $40 gift card to Shaw's Supermarkets to help provide a special Christmas meal.

Quincy Catholic Academy also sponsored a food drive during December to benefit the Food Pantry of the Holy Trinity Parish.

The food pantry serves many families and elderly throughout Quincy.

High Schools Students Participate In Harvard's Program For Int'l Education

Over 150 Quincy Public Schools freshmen and sophomores recently participated in the Harvard Program for International Education's (HPIE) Negotiations and Diplomacy seven-week course.

Undergrads from Harvard travelled to Quincy once a week to share their expertise in the area of global peace making with history students. Participants learned about historical negotiations and diplomacy including the Berlin Conference, the Paris Peace Treaty and the Good Friday Accords, as well as the current efforts to negotiate peace in Iraq and Afghanistan and between Israel and Palestine.

The culmination of the program was a field trip to Harvard University which included a discussion by Donna Hicks, Associate, at the Weatherhead Center for International Affairs at Harvard. Hicks spoke to students about dignity and the role it plays in resolving conflict. She discussed her seminar training, which not only included working with world leaders, but the importance of dignity in all relationships, including our personal relationships.

HPIE later hosted a mock crisis where students were separated into groups which included high school participants from Boston and Belmont. The crisis centered on the present situation in Syria – and its Arab Spring origins – and the possible options for resolution.

The day closed with awards for essay and poster entries that showcased students' learning over the seven weeks. Winning essays for detailing a current global conflict and its possible resolution were submitted by Suhail Purkar, and Lindsay Schrier (Quincy High) and Joe McGillicuddy (North).

Winning posters for outlining the roles of third party organizations (i.e. the United Nations and the Arab League) were submitted by Dana Grasselli, Paige Flaherty and JoJo Huang (North).

Boston's Downtown Movie Palaces Slide Presentation Jan. 10 At Library

Through compelling images and fascinating stories, Arthur Singer and Ron Goodman will illustrate decades of Boston movie going at a free slide presentation Tuesday, Jan. 10 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The show will rekindle memories of double features, kiddie shows, newsreels, world premieres, and the luxury and sheer enjoyment of "going out to the movies."

The free program will include images from the new book "Boston's Downtown Movie Palaces" published by Arcadia Publishing. Copies of the book will be available for sale after the program.

Singer is a veteran broadcaster and author. Born and raised in Dorchester in the 1940s and 1950s, Singer was attracted to the arts and media of Boston from an early age, from its seven daily newspapers and its diverse local radio stations and pioneering TV stations to its movie houses, theaters, and concert halls.

A resident of Newton, he consults with broadcasting and nonprofit clients and is the founding president of the Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame organization.

Goodman, a Quincy resident, is a published photographer and college teacher. Goodman's love of the movies began at the Rialto Theater in Lowell where he first saw Destination Tokyo in 1943, and he became an avid film fan at the Brattle Theater in Cambridge where he was taken by his aunt to see The Red Shoes in 1948. He worked and lived in downtown Boston in the 60s and 70s and has vivid memories of many of the movie venues discussed in this book.

Brown Sugared Apple Pancakes

When my grandchildren sleep over, I give them their choice of pancakes, French toast, or various types of eggs.

I think that about half the time they choose pancakes.

I like to try something different instead of the norm...so I found delicious way of making them. It's a nice change and one I made on New Year's Day.

It's hard to give the exact amount because of the number of pancakes that you are planning to make.

APPLE PANCAKES

1 or 2 Granny Smith apples (sliced thinly)

1-tablespoon brown sugar

Butter for sautéing

Pancake mix

Slice the apples and put them in a bowl. Add the brown sugar and mix well.

In a frying pan, melt the butter and sauté the apples until tender. Add the pancake mix over and cook until done. I hope you will try this and enjoy them as much as we all do.

Ann's Easy Bake Cake

While at a luncheon recently with my cousins who get together at least once a month, I overheard my cousin Ann talking about the easiest cake she ever baked. Naturally my ears perked up and asked her to mail me the recipe.

And after reading it, she was right. The biggest difference in baking this cake is that it is all done in the baking pan (no mixing bowl). Hope you will enjoy it as much as I did.

EASIEST CAKE

1-½ cups flour

¾-cup sugar

3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa

1-teaspoon soda

1-teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Slightly grease a baking pan. Mix all ingredients in the baking pan and level off. Make three holes in the mixture. In one hole, put four tablespoons vegetable oil. In another add one-tablespoon cider vinegar. In the last hole, put one teaspoon of vanilla. Now pour one cup of cold water over all and mix thoroughly.

Bake for 35 minutes.

Any frosting will do.

Bring a lunch or grab a bite at Billy's Café at the library and enjoy a free movie matinee every Friday at 11:30 a.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

In January, laugh and cry with Woody Allen while revisiting some of his cinematic hits beginning with his acclaimed 1977 romantic comedy "Annie Hall" tomorrow (Jan. 6).

The film is based in part on Allen's life and chronicles his love affair with Annie Hall/Diane Keaton.

On Jan. 13, watch the witty, ironic and heartwarming 1986 comedy-drama "Hannah and Her Sisters", which chronicles the lives, loves and infidelities of an extended family.

On Jan. 20, art imitates life in the 1992 comedy-drama "Husbands and Wives" as the Woody Allen/Mia Farrow relationship dissolves onscreen (and off) and Woody becomes involved with a young student.

On Jan. 27, Allen ventures far from his usual Manhattan haunts in the 2005 dramatic thriller about ambition and obsession, the seduction of wealth set in London.

The film series is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1301.

'Super 8' Film Tonight

Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Milton Hospital Formalize Affiliation

It's Now Beth Israel Deaconess-Milton

Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and Milton Hospital have formalized their long-standing collaborative relationship under a new agreement that will enhance the existing clinical affiliation and allow both institutions to further their common missions of promoting the health of the communities they serve.

Under the new arrangement, Milton Hospital will be renamed Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton to reflect the greater integration.

The new agreement, which took effect on Jan. 1, will result in better coordination of care and services through shared electronic medical information and coordinated clinical and programming. BIDMC will work more closely with Milton to identify opportunities to enhance the services available locally to patients. Patients with complex medical needs who require tertiary care or specialty services unavailable in Milton will have a smooth access to caregivers and services at BIDMC, a teaching hospital of Harvard Medical School.

"Over the past eight years, Milton's association with BIDMC has allowed us to expand services and strengthen the quality of care we deliver," said Joseph V. Morrissey, CEO of Milton Hospital. "This new agreement cements the already-strong commitment between the two hospitals. It allows Milton to become part of BIDMC's large health care delivery system ensuring that patients in Milton and the neighboring communities of Quincy, Randolph, Braintree, Canton, Hyde Park and Dorchester, where Milton Hospital has served residents for the past 108 years, will continue to receive the very best care available."

"We are pleased by the opportunity to formalize our work with this excellent community hospital," said Kevin Tabb, MD, President and CEO of BIDMC. "Our expanded relationship with Milton strengthens our community network, and is fundamental to our long-standing philosophy to provide care in the right place at the right time."

"We are delighted to expand our collaboration with Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and are pleased that our patients from Granite Medical Group and Harvard Vanguard will have another excellent community-based option for their care on the South Shore in Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton," said Gene Lindsey, MD, president and CEO of Atrius Health.

"Milton Hospital has provided the town's residents with high quality medical treatment for more than 100 years," said state Sen. Brian A. Joyce of Milton. "I am confident this new, closer affiliation of two excellent health care organizations will mean that my constituents, neighbors and family will continue to receive the same high quality care in the community that we have grown accustomed to over the last century."

In 2003, BIDMC and Milton began collaborating on geriatric services and the development of the Cardiac Rapid Transfer program, which provides emergency cardiac access in the community for patients undergoing coronary angiography, angioplasty, stent placement and other cardiac procedures. Cardiologists at both hospitals use joint protocols and procedures for patient care to ensure a smooth transition from the community to tertiary setting as needed.

Harvard Medical Faculty Physicians (HMFPP) at BIDMC operates the Emergency Department at BID-Milton. The hospitals also have strong existing relationships in hospitalist services, cardiovascular health, orthopedics, gynecology, prostate health and geriatrics. For the past five years, the hospitals have jointly funded the salary of a Chief Medical Officer who is dedicated to Milton but has tight linkages to BIDMC's Department of Health Care Quality.

Under the new agreement, day-to-day operations remain unchanged and locally driven. Milton retains its separate license, Board of Directors, independent medical staff and senior leadership, some of whom will have new reporting relationships to BIDMC counterparts.

BIDMC representation on the Milton board will increase to three members from the current two and the Chair of the Milton Hospital Board of Directors will become a member of the BIDMC Board of Directors.

BIDMC is committed to providing additional clinical resources, including bringing additional primary care physicians to the communities served by BID-Milton, being a resource for the development of enhanced local clinical programs, and to adding more types of medical specialists as may be required to support new programs and services.

"Combining our existing services with the resources of BIDMC, our hospital will become clinically stronger, financially more secure and better able to enhance the level and types of services in a cost-effective manner," said H. Esterbrook Longmaid, MD, Milton's chief of radiology and a member of the Board of Directors.

"Milton Hospital patients will continue to receive high-quality care from the providers they know and trust," said Stanley M. Lewis, MD, BIDMC's senior vice president of network integration. "At the same time, they will become part of a larger health care delivery system, where patients with complex medical needs who require tertiary or specialized care not available in Milton will have a direct link to caregivers and services at a Harvard-affiliated academic medical center."

Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center is a patient care, teaching and research affiliate of Harvard Medical School, and currently ranks third in National Institutes of Health funding among independent hospitals nationwide. BIDMC is clinically affiliated with the Joslin Diabetes Center and in the community with Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Needham, Lawrence General Hospital and Anna Jaques Hospital and is a research partner of Dana-Farber/Harvard Cancer Center. BIDMC is the official hospital of the Boston Red Sox. For more information, visit www.bidmc.org.

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton, is an 81-bed community hospital. Its medical staff provides a wide range of services, including primary care, a range of surgical specialties and sub-specialties, emergency medicine, critical care, neurology and ambulatory surgery. It has been serving Milton and the surrounding communities since 1903.

Montclair School Raising Funds For New Playground

Needs $37,000
To Meet Goal
Of $50,000

By EMILY TAFT

This holiday season The Quincy Sun asked fifth graders to write their wishes down to be printed in the newspaper, and a common theme throughout the students at Montclair Elementary School was the hopes of a new playground.

"A lot of their wishes were for a new playground," said 5th grade teacher Janice Ronayne. "The kids are very invested in this. It's really a great thing that they want this playground."

As the only elementary school in Quincy without a playground, Montclair teachers, parents and students began working together to raise the $50,000 to build a place where the kids can enjoy recess. A committee was formed last September to help with ideas and discuss how they wanted the playground to look. After some discussion, they then began fundraising in October.

"We have a couple of fundraisers lined up to help us raise money," said Ronayne. "Not only would (the playground) be for the mental and physical growth of the students but it will bring the whole neighborhood and community together." Ronayne said that they have raised nearly $13,000. They hope to raise the rest by April.

Without a playground, students play on a black top with fading games painted on such as hopscotch, tic-tac-toe, and kickball, among some others. When the new playground is built, Ronayne said that Mayor

Tom Koch has agreed to reseal the black top to prepare it for painting new stencil games on it, along with supplying mulch or other grounding for the play structure. The also said the mayor will have the Parks Department maintain the playground once it is installed. The new playground will include monkey bars, a slide, and swings among other things.

Before any plans can be set into motion the school must raise the remaining $37,000 through fundraising. Flyers out were recently distributed to neighbors asking for donations, which was a big success. This month, a Zumba night is set for Jan. 20 from 6 to 7 p.m. at the school gym. Donation is $10 per person.

"The last time we held a Zumba night it was a lot of fun," said Ronayne. "It's a low-impact Zumba so everyone can enjoy themselves."

A parents' night out is also in the works next month. Parents drop off their children at the school from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. and enjoy a night out. The last time the school held this event was during the holiday season and it allowed parents to go out and shop while their kids were being watched.

The event will cost $20 for the first child and $10 for each additional child. It's set for Feb. 10.

The students of the elementary school will also be getting involved in raising the funds. Fun days such as a slipper day, and a crazy hat day are among a few ideas Ronayne said they have come up with. For each day the students will pay a fee to dress up for the occasion.

During December, students worked together to raise $1,017.95 in a penny fundraiser.

The Montclair playground council, which meets once a week, has been coming up with plans to help raise the rest of the money, and has also set up a website in hopes to receive donations there.

"It has been an enormous undertaking," said Ronayne.

"We are doing ok. It will be a nice improvement when we finally get it installed."

For more information, on how to donate, or for upcoming fundraisers visit, www.montclairplayground.org.

SPECIAL THANKS for Quincy Credit Union's EJ. Louis and Eric Sawler for counting the thousands of coins for the Montclair School. The coins totaled $1,017.95.

Social Security Resolutions

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Happy 2012 from Social Security!

With the new year, many people put together lists of goals and resolutions. Allow us to share with you some new year's resolutions that you may find worth keeping.

Think about retirement. Whether you're 26 and beginning a career or 62 and thinking about the best time to stop working, give some thought to what your retirement plan will be. Social Security is the largest source of income for elderly Americans today, but it was never intended to be your only source of income when you retire. You also will need savings, investments, pensions or retirement accounts to make sure you have enough money to live comfortably when you retire. The earlier you begin your financial planning, the better off you will be. For tips to help you save, visit www.mymoney.gov.

Plan ahead. The best way to begin planning for retirement is by using the free resources provided by Social Security. Start by using our Retirement Estimator, where you can get a personalized, instant estimate of your future retirement benefits using different retirement ages and scenarios. Visit the Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

Make sure you have all your numbers. While tax season may seem far away, now is the time that many taxpayers start gathering records and documentation for filing tax returns. One of the most important things you need is a Social Security number for everyone whom you will claim as a dependent. If you don't have a number for one of your dependents, you need to apply now to have the Social Security number in time to file your tax return. Learn more at www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber.

Do a little light reading. The best way to learn more about Social Security, the benefit programs, and what they mean to you and your family is to browse through our online library of publications. You can find overviews as well as more detailed booklets. Our library at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs is always open.

Help a loved one. Sometimes we get the most satisfaction out of helping someone else. If you have a grandparent, parent, relative, or friend who could benefit from Social Security, share our website and online services with them. You can even help a loved one apply for retirement or Medicare benefits — or for Extra Help with Medicare prescription drug costs — in as little as 10 minutes. Whether you forward a publication or sit down to help someone apply for Social Security, the place to go is www.socialsecurity.gov.

We hope you'll consider some of these resolutions.

Happy New Year from Social Security!

Collecting Cell Phones For Soldiers

By EMILY TAFT

Joseph Cortese, owner of Presidents City Auto Wholesale in Quincy, teamed up with the Quincy Veterans Services Director Thomas Stansbury to collect cell phones for soldiers a year and a half ago.

To date, more than 2,000 phones have been collected. For each donated cell phone, a soldier receives minutes to call home.

Cell Phones for Soldiers is a non-profit organization providing deployed and returning troops cost-free methods to communicate with family while serving in the military. Since its inception in 2004, they have raised over $7 million and have provided more than 114 million minutes of free talk time.

For Stansbury, a Navy veteran, and Cortese, a Marine Corps veteran, the cause hits close to home.

"It's very important for

the soldiers overseas to have that connection to home. It makes a big difference when they need a pick-me up," said Cortese. "It's important to do things for them because they are overseas fighting for our lives."

Cortese said he would continue to collect cell phones until all the soldiers return home.

"I don't think we will ever stop collecting," said Stansbury. "There will always be a need. There will always be soldiers stationed overseas."

Cortese said if another device is needed — such as webcams — so that soldiers can continue to talk to loved ones here, he will help.

"It's a brotherhood," said Cortese. "Until the last soldier comes home we will continue to help in anyway we can."

Cortese said that he has had many family, and friends of soldiers stop into his office on 65 School St. thanking him, not only for the cell phones for soldiers but because outside his business is a large banner saying welcome home soldiers.

"We are all connected, we all know someone who is serving this country," said Cortese. "If they are willing to put themselves in harms way for us, this is the least we can do."

Those wishing to donate can drop off cell phones at 65 School St. between 9:30 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Quincy College To Launch New Fitness Research Study

Dr. Wayne Westcott, Exercise Science instructor at Quincy College, will launch a new adult fitness research study beginning Jan. 9 at Quincy College.

The 16-week study will follow the new fat loss program featured in Dr. Caroline Apovian's new book. Dr. Apovian is a professor of medicine at Boston University School of Medicine and is director of Nutrition and Weight management at Boston Medical Center. She is also a nutrition consultant for NASA, as well as co-director of the International Conference on Practical Approaches to the Treatment of Obesity, a conference hosted annually by Harvard Medical School.

The nutrition portion of the program will follow Dr. Apovian's fat loss diet plan which includes unlimited fruits and vegetables; low fat, high fiber, and protein rich foods.

The workout routine will consist of thirty minutes of muscular exercise using Nautilus One strength machines, twenty minutes of cardiovascular exercise using Nautilus aerobic training equipment, and five minutes of flexibility exercise using at-machine stretching techniques and Stretch Mate apparatus.

In past research studies at Quincy College, participants concurrently replaced muscle and reduced fat while improving their fitness and body composition. For the upcoming study, computerized body composition assessments will determine changes in fat weight and lean muscle.

Interested participants are encouraged to attend an orientation tonight (Thursday) from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. at Quincy College's Newport Hall at 150 Newport Ave. Extension in North Quincy.

To RSVP for the orientation, contact Dr. Wayne Westcott at 617-984-1716.

Water Meter Replacement and Automated Meter Reading System Project

Information for Residents

The Quincy Department of Public Works is updating 24,000 water meters throughout the city. The project includes the replacement of both the water meters and external reading system. The completed project will greatly improve the reliability and accuracy of water meter reading operations and will increase the efficiency of the DPW. The city has contracted with Easton Winwater Services, who will be performing the installations. Easton Winwater Services will need access to each water customer's house or business for this work. Please be aware that Easton Winwater Services will contact customers directly via U.S. mail. Residents of Quincy are reminded not to respond to unsolicited phone calls or home visits. All personnel installing water meters are issued identification and will arrive in uniform and in marked vehicles. A link to names and pictures of each installer can be found on the DPW website. If you believe you have been contacted by someone other than Easton Winwater or the city, please call the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212.

The meter replacement work will begin in September in the North Quincy/Squantum area, and will progress throughout the city by water meter reading route over the course of a two-year period. There is a systematic implementation plan for this project and therefore customers are asked to not contact Easton Winwater Service or Public Works for their meter replacement until they have received a notification letter from Easton Winwater. For a current update on this program please visit the DPW website at <http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/WaterMeterReplacement.cfm>

extends our heartfelt gratitude for the prayers and generosity offered by so many in support of our father / grandfather / husband / brother / son-in-law, Richard "Rick" Bragg

With reluctance and deep sadness, we must announce that Rick's health has declined rapidly and he can no longer benefit from the course of treatment we were seeking in California.

Accordingly, our fundraising activities and the event scheduled for January 14 are now canceled. If you would like your donation to go to the annual Boston Prostate Cancer Walk, or to the Bragg family to help with medical expenses, please let us know by January 31. Otherwise, we will return donations the first week of February.*

Ringing The Bell For The Salvation Army

MORE THAN 80 community leaders recently volunteered to man the Salvation Army kettle at two locations in Downtown Quincy. Kettles were positioned in front of City Hall and the Granite Trust Building (Bank of America) on Hancock Street on two separate days in December. The kettle donations raised nearly $5,000 for the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps to help needy Quincy families this holiday season. Captain Heather Odom, commander of the Quincy Temple Corps, thanked the community leaders and all those who dropped donations in the kettle. The community leader kettle was initiated by Quincy Sun founder and Salvation Army Advisory Board member Henry Bosworth.

Isola Urges Colleagues Be 'Creative, Cost Efficient'

Lebo said Isola brings both professional experience and personal experience, as a mother, to the position.

"I know she will help move the district forward," Lebo said. "I respect her participation in school events and I know we will achieve higher levels with her leadership."

Isola thanked her colleagues for their support. She succeeded Anne Mahoney who served as vice chairperson the past two years.

She said it is important that the school committee, superintendent and his leadership team, principals and teachers as well as parents work together to achieve goals.

"Nothing gets accomplished in isolation," Isola said. "It is important that all the stakeholders have a voice in our process."

She said it's imperative the committee establish a smart goal for the next year.

"What do we wish to accomplish? Obviously, we all establish our own goals as committee members. This will provide us with an opportunity to examine our purpose as an organization. It will provide us with a time to reflect on our role and the impact we wish to have on Quincy Public Schools.

"Many studies have shown that the most successful people in any field establish goals for themselves and constantly strive to achieve those goals."

Isola said she will also asked each school committee sub-committee to establish well-defined goals.

"Again, this will provide a framework for our work."

At the suggestion of School Committee Emily Lebo, Isola said a teaching and learning sub-committee will be established. The sub-committee will be chaired by Lebo.

"This vision for this committee is a place for us to study our test results and our data. Our professional staff does this all the time and presents it to us. However, we rarely have the time to adequately analyze it in terms of setting guidelines or policies for the district."

"It will give us in-depth information to allocate funds without our budget," Isola added.

The new vice chairperson also said the school committee should look at the implementation of the new core curriculum.

"How can we, as a committee, assist with the smooth transition for the benefit of our students and professional staff? Our budget may be impacted by this and keeping our eye on asset allocation will be key," Isola said.

Regarding other fiscal matters, Isola said, "We constantly have to meet with unfunded mandates that are dictated by the state Department of Elementary and Secondary Education and the federal government. We need to deal with these creatively to strive to meet our goals."

"Given our tight fiscal times, I request that our state delegation look at revisiting the foundational budget formula so that Quincy will receive a larger amount of state funds to soften the burden on Quincy taxpayers. The current formula is inequitable in that it gives too much money to a handful of cities.

"There are things that do not cost a penny," she continued. "Things that we already do, but can do better. We should always push to create a culture of achievement for all members of Quincy Public Schools. I personally will commit to working harder and smarter in my role as a school committee member."

In closing her remarks, Isola asked the audience to ponder a question about the state of education today.

"It is a question that I don't think can be answered in a short time, but guides me as I do my job as a committee member. In this data-driven, test-driven system, how do we provide our students with the tools to take risks, explore and think outside the box?"

"This is our true challenge."

"Big deeds require big spirits," Isola said. "I am aware of the magnitude of the task at hand and I embrace it."

"With collaboration and common spirit, we have no bounds."

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 9, 1493, Christopher Columbus, sailing near the Dominican Republic, sees three "mermaids" and describes them as "not half as beautiful as they are painted." They were in reality manatees. Mythical mermaids have existed in seafaring cultures since the time of the ancient Greeks.

• On Jan. 14, 1639, in Hartford, Conn., the first constitution in the American colonies, the "Fundamental Orders," is adopted. The Fundamental Orders declared that "the foundation of authority is in the free consent of the people."

• On Jan. 10, 1901, a drilling derrick at Spindletop Hill near Beaumont, Texas, produces an enormous gusher of crude oil, signaling the advent of the American oil industry. The geyser flowed at an initial rate of approximately 100,000 barrels a day and took nine days to cap.

• On Jan. 15, 1919, two million gallons of fiery hot molasses floods the streets of Boston, killing 21 people and a dozen horses. The molasses burst from a 58-foot-high tank in the heart of the city. An 8-foot-high wave of molasses swept away freight cars, knocked over the local firehouse and pushed over the support beams for the elevated train line.

• On Jan. 13, 1939, Arthur "Doc" Barker is shot and killed while trying to escape from Alcatraz Prison in San Francisco Bay. Barker, of the notorious "Bloody Barkers" gang, was spotted on the rock-strewn shore of the island after climbing over the walls and tying pieces of wood together into a makeshift raft.

• On Jan. 11, 1973, the owners of America's 24 major-league baseball teams vote to allow teams in the American League to use a "designated pinch-hitter" that could bat for the pitcher, while still allowing the pitcher to stay in the game.

• On Jan. 12, 1984, a panel overseeing the restoration of the Great Pyramids in Egypt abandons modern construction techniques in favor of the method employed by the ancient Egyptians. Restorers stopped using mortar and adopted the system of interlocking blocks practiced by the original pyramid builders.

Mayor Koch: 'Our Cause Is High Achievement'

their three children: sons Cornelius and Tom, Jr. and daughter Abigail.

The mayor also announced several goals for his third term in office.

Among them:

- A major campaign to attract the growing bio-tech industry to Quincy.

- $3 million in roof repairs to school buildings throughout the city.

- Expand the city's Drug Task Force and enhance partnerships with Sheriff Michael Bellotti and Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey.

- Install solar panels on a number of municipal buildings this year, part of a 20 percent reduction in energy use over the next five years.

- Delivery of a new ladder truck to the fire department this month, part of a pledge to update its apparatus.

The mayor also sounded a tight fiscal policy alarm:

"We will continue to explore new efficiencies, cost-savings and creative solutions to our problems, as we did with reforms in our snow removal operation, employee health care reform and wage freezes. Let us also be mindful that our city workers have been with us each step of the way, making sacrifices and accepting changes that have saved this city tens of millions of dollars and hundreds of jobs," Koch said.

The mayor thanked several public servants who recently concluded their service with the city while welcoming a host of new elected officials.

Here is the text of Mayor Thomas Koch's Third Inaugural Address:

I stand here before you tonight humbled and privileged to be your Mayor. Mayor of the greatest City in the Commonwealth — made great by its rich history and its diversity of people. I am proud — proud of what we have endured, what we have accomplished and what we will do together as a community. And I am grateful — grateful to my colleagues in government, elected officials, Department Heads, City Employees, Members of Boards and Commissions, Service organizations, spiritual leaders and our business and labor leaders, for your commitment to the citizens of Quincy.

Let me take a moment to thank those who have served with us working for a better Quincy.

Senator John Keenan: we thank you for your service to our city as a city councillor. As Chairman of the Finance Committee you helped me balance fiscal foresight with fiscal transparency. Your leadership will be missed, John, best wishes to you as you represent our city in the Massachusetts State Senate.

Commissioner Dan Raymondi: we thank you for your service to our city as a city councillor and school committee member, bringing your energy, knowledge and talent to help our City, never forgetting why we do this. I would point out that since Dan has been Commissioner it has not yet snowed.

School Committee Member Jo-Ann Bragg: I am sorry to see you go, we are grateful for your hard work and leadership on so many educational issues over the last sixteen years. You and your family are in our thoughts and prayers.

School Committee Member Elaine Dwyer: We are so grateful to your dedication to the children of our City.

To those who are newly elected to office, Welcome! Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes; you follow in the footsteps of hardworking and dedicated councillors. I have every confidence you will be up to the task and I look forward to working with you.

Paul Bregoli and Kathy Hubley, I look forward to working with you and the entire school committee as we continue to prepare our young people for life's challenges. The enthusiasm and fresh eyes you bring to our work is most welcome.

President Theodore Roosevelt said,

"The Credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dirt and sweat and blood, who strives valiantly; errs and comes short again and again; who knows great enthusiasm, great devotion, and spends himself in a worthy cause; who at best knows the triumph of — HIGH ACHIEVEMENT; and who, at the worst, if he fails, fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat.

As I reflect upon those historic words, I believe that we, our community, are in the arena together. Our devotion is indeed great and our cause worthy. And I know with all my heart that by continuing to work together, we will further know the triumph of high achievement.

OUR CAUSE IS HIGH ACHIEVEMENT IN ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PROVIDING

JOB AND OPPORTUNITY.

With the opening of the Walter J. Hannon Parkway, the redevelopment of Quincy Center is now a reality. This year, we will continue to move forward on the task of permitting, designing and constructing the vital infrastructure that will be the foundation for thousands of new jobs; for 1.6 billion dollars of investment and millions of dollars in new revenue for the City. In the coming months, construction will begin to restore the Town Brook through downtown, a critical component of our development plan and a substantial, tangible result of the work of the last four years by so many people to create what is the most aggressive development plan in the Northeast.

Together with our partners at Street-Works, new investors will join us at the table as we continue to attract private capital that will drive our plan forward. I remain committed that you will see the first rising steel of our new downtown in 2013. It will not be easy, there will be challenges and there will always be those who say it can not or should not be done, but let us be clear, we are engaged in a worthy cause.

The promise of economic opportunity must — and does — extend beyond Quincy Center. Last year, working together with the City Council and a volunteer task force, we instituted the first major overhaul of our City's zoning code in a generation, allowing us to meet our commitment to protect our neighborhoods while at the same time directing development to the right places. In the coming year, we will build upon that work by creating the zoning and permitting framework — as we did in downtown — to attract new investment in both Wollaston Center and Norfolk Downs.

Working in close collaboration with our Chamber of Commerce, we will launch a major campaign to attract the growing bio-tech industry to Quincy; we will continue to work with our friends at the Crown Colony Office Park, Fore River Shipyard and other appropriate locations across the City to provide the incentives and the cooperation necessary to capitalize on Quincy's immense economic potential. Construction will occur in many areas, and I remain committed to doing everything in my power to provide Quincy jobs for Quincy people.

OUR CAUSE IS HIGH ACHIEVEMENT IN ED-UCATION.

As a community, we have no greater responsibility than to provide the tools for our children's future, and that future is embodied by the health, growth and success of the Quincy Public Schools. Even amid the most challenging economic times since the Great Depression, the School Committee, our Superintendent and his leadership team have remained focused on the classroom. Our school system is strong, but it must be continually made stronger, and our administration is committed to providing the investment required to keep the Quincy Public Schools among the best school systems in the Commonwealth.

Our teachers are the heart of our school system, their work in the classroom is impossible to overstate. We can all agree about the need for standards and assessments for our students. But let us never underestimate the personal connection our teachers make with students on a daily basis. It is these relationships — and the work of teachers to mentor, encourage and tap the creativity of children that is the most vital part of the classroom, and our work must live up to those ideals.

Our responsibility to our educators and our children extends beyond the classroom to the school buildings that are among our most important public assets. This year, we will see the beginning of construction on a new Central Middle School after more than 30 years of talk. We will make the same commitment to our taxpayers on this project as we did with this beautiful building — the new Central Middle School will be built on time and on budget.

Providing a functional and safe learning environment for our children does not mean just building new schools — it means investing in the schools that already exist. This year, we will be completing more than 3 million dollars in roof repairs to school buildings across the City, and my administration is committed to continue making these kinds of vital investments in our public assets.

OUR CAUSE IS HIGH ACHIEVEMENT IN PUBLIC SAFETY.

Our firefighters and police officers risk their own safety every day to provide secure neighborhoods and the peace of mind for residents that comes with knowledge that hard-working and highly trained public safety departments are only a phone call away. It is our responsibility to provide the necessary resources and investment to ensure these brave men and women can do their job. As a result of careful financial management, this year we are able to add both police officers and firefighters, bolstering our ranks.

We must continue to face our challenges. Four years ago, I stood before you to announce a first-of-its-kind task force in an effort to battle the growing problem of substance abuse in our City. While we've enjoyed many successes — the hard work of our Police Department has resulted in dramatic increases in drug arrests, new partnerships with state and federal authorities and dozens of lives saved by anti-overdose treatments — we must acknowledge that the challenge remains. We have much more work to do, and in the coming year, we will expand the drug task force's role, enhance our partnerships with Sheriff Bellotti and District Attorney Morrissey and other agencies, improve educational programs and continue to tackle this problem head-on together as a community.

In our Fire Department, there is no nothing more important than providing the adequate tools and equipment these devoted first responders need to provide the life-saving services, which is at the core of their mission, and to ensure they can do their jobs safely. As part of our Capital Improvement Plan, we will take delivery this month of a new ladder truck as part of our effort to update our fleet of apparatus.

Whatever our challenges, we will always meet our responsibility to the public safety of our residents.

OUR CAUSE IS HIGH ACHIEVEMENT IN PUBLIC SERVICES.

Let me say that I appreciate the value of our public employees. Whether it's the van driver taking a senior to a medical appointment, the Veterans' Service office working closely with our returning servicemen and women to ease their reentry to civilian life, a laborer building a new sidewalk or lining a ballfield for a new season, the librarian who introduces the child to the wonderful world of books, or the building inspector who takes the time to guide the first-time home owner through the construction process. We cannot ignore the value of this work, and we will continue to protect those services our residents expect and deserve.

Those services include our Capital Improvement Plan and the millions of dollars of long-overdue flood relief projects, seawall repairs, road and sidewalk reconstruction and water and sewer replacements. These projects are possible not through a large increase in spending, but rather a defined plan that meets our challenges in an affordable and aggressive way.

We will continue to explore new efficiencies, cost-savings and creative solutions to our problems, as we did with reforms in our snow removal operation, employee health care reform and wage freezes. Let us also be mindful that our City workers have been with us each step of the way, making sacrifices and accepting changes that have saved this City tens of millions of dollars and hundreds of jobs.

OUR CAUSE IS MEETING OUR CHALLENGES TO OUR ENVIRONMENT.

I am proud of our work that recently led to the formal designation of Quincy as a Green Community by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, a determination of our environmental commitment achieved by only a few cities our size and one that now qualifies Quincy for nearly $400,000 in grant money. As part of our designation, the City has committed to a goal of a 20 percent reduction in energy use over the next five years. This is challenging but attainable.

As part of our effort, we will embark on a bold plan — at no cost to the City — to install solar panels on a number of municipal buildings this year. Our ongoing overhaul of our sewer systems continues to produce cost-savings and pollution reduction. We do this work mindful that it is our responsibility to leave this City to our children and our grandchildren clean, green and prepared to meet the energy demands of the future.

When history judges our deeds, let it be said that we were in the arena, that we met our challenges with courage and that we forged ahead with creativity and conviction. Ladies and gentlemen, we will continue to meet the needs of our citizens and lay the foundation for prosperity — and the triumph of high achievement — for our children and grandchildren.

Let us continue working together striving valiantly with great enthusiasm and devotion; for ours is a worthy cause.

God Bless you and God Bless the great City of Quincy.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, Dec. 27, 2011, at 10:38 a.m., Quincy Police Officers were dispatched to, "Citizens Bank at 1200 Hancock Street was just robbed." The bank employee who called stated that a male fled the bank and there was a dye pack in the money stolen.

Communications relayed that Security at 150 Hancock St. reported that the suspect may be in the parking garage. A description of the suspect was given out but he was not in the garage.

Officer Jim Goldrick interviewed the Security Officer, who said that he observed a male meeting the description of the suspect inside the area of 1250 Hancock St. by the security desk on the first floor. After reviewing video tape of the area, Officer Goldrick observed the male suspect, which provided a better description. He relayed an updated description to communications and the units on scene.

Officer Goldrick radioed to officers to check the trash barrels in the 1250 Hancock St. complex on the first floor because in one screen, the suspect was wearing a puffy blue jacket and in the next he was not wearing the jacket. Lieutenant Patrick Glynn and Officer James Karvelis checked numerous barrels and soon after located the jacket with red dye stains (from the exploding dye pack inserted in money) and took the jacket as evidence. Inside the jacket pocket was cash that was stained red. There was also a white bracelet in the pocket with a male person's name and a picture of a male party. On the bracelet was the date of birth and the words "Essex County/Sheriffs Department." Officer Paul Jackson used this information to provide a driver's license photo to all officers.

Detectives reviewing the video at the bank noted that the suspect had a red hat on at the time. A further search of the trash barrels revealed the red hat. Meanwhile, Officer Declan Breslin was at the Quincy Center T Station bus area passing on information to bus drivers, when he learned that one of the drivers had a suspicious male on his bus. Officer Breslin located and interviewed the driver, who said that a male ran in front of his bus as he was driving southbound on Hancock Street. He provided a description of the male and his clothing, which matched the suspect. He said that the male appeared to have red paint or ink all over his hands and face. When asked where he dropped the suspect off, the bus driver said Des Moines at Chubbuck Street.

Officer Breslin forwarded this information to Communications and Officers responded to the area. He also requested that the T provide Video from the Bus as evidence. Lieutenant Kevin Tobin and Sergeant Sean Dugan, along with Officers' Breslin, Paul Jackson, Karvelis, DARE Officer John Grazioso, Goldrick and K-9 Officer Paul Foley arrived on scene. Sergeant Dugan ordered a perimeter be set up around the residence at Des Moines Road. A male wearing a light colored t-shirt then exited one of the entrances.

Officer Karvelis, using his weapon, ordered the male down onto the ground. The unidentified male stated, "It's me," giving his first name which matched the name on the bracelet, and then proceeded to the ground on his stomach. At this point, Lieutenant John Steele arrived and using cover, Officer Karvelis placed the male suspect in handcuffs pending further investigation. The suspect said his name, which matched the bracelet in the pocket of the jacket. The picture also matched the suspect. As the suspect was lifted to his feet, Lieutenant Steele then stated that he observed red dye and red stained cash hanging out of his left side short pockets. He also observed that the suspect had shaved facial hair off as seen in the videos. The suspect was then given his Miranda rights.

The red stained cash that was recovered from his left side pocket was seized for evidence. The suspect, a 40 year-old homeless person, was transported to the Quincy Police Headquarters and charged with, "Unarmed Robbery."

During the fingerprinting process, a red tint was found under the nails of the suspect. Photos of the cash recovered on the suspect - 8 "red" stained $ 50 bills and 6 "red" stained $100 bills were taken as evidence.

At the station, Detective Bill Monteith interviewed the suspect's brother, who live together. He said that his brother, a heroin user, was recently released from Middleton Jail, where he "beat his case." He stated that he told his brother/suspect at approximately 9:00 A.M.

Street-Works Development Purchases Historic Granite Trust Building

Street-Works Development, the company leading the $1.6B redevelopment of downtown Quincy, has purchased the iconic Granite Trust Building, located at 1400 Hancock Street in Quincy.

The building was purchased from Ronus Properties for $5.77 million.

According to the Quincy Assessors Department, the property is assessed at $6,793,700. Of that figure, the building is valued at $4,905,100; land $1,198,700; "extra building features" $656,500 and "outbuildings" $33,400.

Street-Works has housed the headquarters of the New Quincy Center redevelopment in the building since the spring of 2010.

The purchase brings to completion Street-Works' plan to acquire the historic building. In 2008, Street-Works entered into an agreement to acquire the property with Ronus Properties, with whom they partnered on their successful Blue Back Square project in West Hartford, CT. Street-Works has now purchased the building outright in accordance with the original agreement.

"Our purchase of the Granite Trust Building has always been part of the plan for Street-Works, and is a critical piece of the downtown as we have envisioned it," stated Jeff Levien, Senior Director of Development for Street-Works. New Quincy Center is a $1.6 billion transit-oriented, master planned, mixed-use development in Downtown Quincy that will include approximately 700,000 square feet of retail space, 1.1 million square feet of office space, 2 hotels, 1,400 residential units and over 5,000 new structured parking spaces.

In January 2011, The City of Quincy and Street-Works signed the Land Disposition Agreement that kicked off the ambitious Quincy Center project. Over the course of the year, the redevelopment has received $50M in I-Cubed and $10.1M in MassWorks funds from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In 2012, work will commence on the relocation of the Town Brook culvert and other public improvements. Commercial development is expected to begin in 2013.

Junior Dan Gould Scored 25 Points In Win;
Raiders Now 4-1 Overall, Quincy 1-3

Gould, North Quincy Top Quincy, 68-44

By SEAN BRENNAN

Dan Gould for three. Say that seven times fast.

In the consolation game of the annual John Adams Basketball Classic last Wednesday versus archrival Quincy at North Quincy High School, the junior shooting guard went off from beyond the arch, burying seven three-pointers — he finished with a game-high 25 points — to lead the Red Raiders to a commanding 68-44 win.

Gould connected three times from three-point land in the game's first 16 minutes as North Quincy took a 31-21 lead into halftime, but it was in the third quarter when the sharpshooter displayed his ability to connect from most anywhere on the hardwood.

Gould opened the half by sinking a deep three from the right corner that gave the Raiders a 34-21 cushion and, before the quarter ended, he had made three more as North Quincy used fluid ball movement to storm out to a 20-point lead (52-32) entering the final eight minutes of regulation.

"I wasn't feeling it really in the first half but once I came out in the second half I started warming up and feeling it," said Gould about his late-game hot streak. "I love this hoop down here (pointing at the basket at north end of the NQHS court). It looked very big in the second half."

"Quincy has a weird zone (defense) but once we got used to it, we just dominated," he said about how the Red Raiders cracked a Quincy defense that had held them to 59 points on Dec. 23. "We just had to swing the ball to the opposite side and try and find Timmy (Liuzzo) inside. We needed to establish Tim inside — he is our big man — because we have shooters all around with me, Pat (Gould) and Marquis (McClendon). And we have Tubby (senior Paul Cunniff) crashing the boards better than anyone else."

The offensive adjustment worked to perfection. The Raiders, who were coming off a 75-72 loss to Weymouth in the Classic's opening round, continually made the extra pass, either inside to Liuzzo, or back around the arch from McClendon to Dan Gould to Pat Gould to get open looks on almost every possession to beat the Presidents' hybrid 2-3 zone.

North Quincy's scoring binge began late in the first quarter. Following a three from the Presidents' Reggie Cesar (five points), which gave Quincy its last lead of the night at 10-7, the Raiders used a 13-0 run, highlighted by treys from Gould and sophomore Kyle Richardson (seven points), to take a 20-10 advantage.

Quincy point guard Tino Goncalves (team-high 15 points) scored four straight to cut it back to 20-16, but Gould pushed the lead up to 23-16 with his second three of the game. On the next Presidents' possession, Goncalves buried a three to trim the deficit to 25-21, but Gould answered back with his second 3-pointer of the quarter (28-21). Pat Gould (six points) pushed the North Quincy lead to double digits with a buzzer 3-pointer.

The Raiders and Gould distanced themselves from Quincy in the third. North Quincy outscored Quincy 21-11 in the quarter before taking the foot of the gas in the fourth.

"We got good effort from a lot of different kids tonight — it was a well-balanced attack," said North Quincy head coach Kevin Barrett. "Dan led us in terms of our offense but I thought a lot of guys chipped in one way or another."

"We made a couple of adjustments to their (Quincy's zone) defense," continued Barrett in explaining how his team found the open shooting lanes this time around versus the Presidents. "To Quincy's credit, that is a defense that you don't see a ton of. They camouflage it up front with the man-to-man and then fall back to a real aggressive 2-3 zone. It was a matter of us making a few adjustments. We took a look at some film (from the Dec. 23 game) and I was happy with the way we made those adjustments and put ourselves in a position to make some key baskets."

And none were bigger than the seven daggers that Dan Gould buried into Quincy throughout quarters one through three. But the thing about this North Quincy team is that they have multiple offensive weapons at their disposal. Seven rotation players filled up the score sheet. Gould led the charge and Richardson and Pat Gould chipped in, but senior big men Liuzzo and Cunniff dominated as well.

Cunniff led all North Quincy scorers in the first quarter with five points. His tenacity on the boards, both offensively and defensively, set the tone early while Liuzzo after being held to four first-half points dominated in the second half. The senior captain scored three points in the decisive third quarter and scored a team-high seven points in the final eight minutes to finish with 14 points for the game.

Junior swingman McClendon chipped in just two points but his ability to go off at a moment's notice kept Quincy's defense in line and opened up additional space for his teammates.

Senior Ryan Evans finished with three points.

"We have a lot of different weapons but we took what Quincy gave us tonight," said Barrett. "Dan had some open looks and he knocked them down. If they took him away I was confident he would find his teammates in a position to score and he did that tonight a couple of times."

To Quincy's credit, the Presidents battled hard but they just didn't have the same giddy-up as they displayed in the first game. Goncalves was the scoring star but senior Zerick Fadairo added five points and junior Jaquan Harris chipped in with eight.

Sophomore Brendan Cunningham, who almost single-handedly rallied Quincy to a win on Dec. 23 with 12 points, was held scoreless.

"We took full note that Cunningham can shoot," Barrett said about Quincy's rising sophomore before explaining what his defense did to stop him this time around. "We talk about getting out and contesting shots. At this level there are a lot of guys who can knock down a wide open, uncontested 20-footer. But if you close out and get a hand in the face we feel pretty good about deterring it or keeping shooting percentages where they should be."

"Obviously our other emphasis is going and rebounding the basketball, which I thought we did a pretty good job of tonight," continued Barrett.

The Raiders improved to 3-1 overall with the win. But for Barrett, his team is still a work in progress.

"We are moving in the right direction. It is a work in progress not only in games but also in practice," he said. "We preach that we have to get better and that is certainly what we are on track to do this season but we still have some things we need to clean up. Saying that, we are happy with where we are right now."

Quincy fell to 1-3 overall following the loss.

North Quincy vs. Weymouth

Dan Gould exploded for 27 points against Weymouth but North Quincy could not hold onto a late-game lead and lost to the Wildcats, 75-72, in the opening round of the John Adams Holiday Classic.

North Quincy got solid games from Marquis McClendon (nine points), Tim Liuzzo (eight), Paul Cunniff (eight) and Pat Gould (eight).

The Presidents fell behind 15-7 after one, 34-12 at halftime and 52-18 entering the fourth quarter as Braintree overwhelmed Quincy to win in a rout, 60-32, in first-round action.

Zerick Fadairo led all Quincy scorers with 10 points while Jaquan Harris and Tino Goncalves each finished with seven points.

Team Notes

North Quincy continued its hot start following a 76-49 home win over nonleague Bedford on Dec. 30.

In improving to 4-1 overall, the Raiders got 20 points from Dan Gould (six 3-pointers), 12 points from Marquis McClendon, and nine points from Pat Gould. Sophomore Efthim Butka poured in eight second half points to finish with a career-high ten.

The Red Raiders hosted nonleague Fatima High (R.I.) on Wednesday. North Quincy opens Patriot League action on Friday with a home tilt versus Hingham — tip-off is set for 6:30 p.m.

Quincy's scheduled home game versus nonleague Bridgewater-Raynham, set for Tuesday, was moved to a later date due to the swearing in ceremonies for city officials at QHS.

On Friday, the Presidents travel to Scituate High to play in their Patriot League opener against the team that finished first in the Fisher Division last year. Quincy took second. Home games versus Whitman-Hanson (Jan. 10) and Pembroke (Jan. 13) are on tap for next week.

Quincy Defeated North Quincy, 47-31, In The Consolation Game of Abigail Adams Classic

Presidents Dominate Red Raiders, Improve To 5-1

By CHRIS McDANIEL

This time around the final result was never in doubt.

Last Wednesday in the consolation game of the Abigail Adams Holiday Classic at Braintree High School, the Quincy High girls' basketball team defeated the North Quincy Red Raiders, 47-31.

Just three days earlier on Dec. 23, the Red Raiders took the Presidents to the brink before falling 53-51 on a buzzer beating shot from Quincy senior Nicole Lamie.

This contest was much different than that first meeting. One reason was the attendance. In the first matchup at North Quincy the house was full compared to this time around when fewer than 30 people were in the stands. But the biggest reason was that Quincy's senior-laden roster regained its composure.

"Composure was a big difference," said Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch who watched as his team started the first quarter with a 15-1 scoring run that North Quincy couldn't overcome.

For Quincy (5-1 overall), the seniors were the most impactful players on the floor. Forwards Kiley McDonald and Caity Lowry paved the way as the Presidents earned their fifth win of the season.

McDonald was especially impressive in the first quarter. She was aggressive on defense, but stayed away from foul trouble and was able to force some early turnovers. She also showed a wide array of post moves, including a lefty finish in the lane in the fourth quarter. McDonald finished the game with 14 points, 12 rebounds and three blocks.

"(Kiley) was terrific throughout the tournament," said Bretsch. McDonald played well enough to win an award after the game for being the most outstanding player for the Presidents during the tournament.

Lowry chipped in 14 points and also had more first half points than the whole Red Raiders team, 9-8.

"Caity Lowry is so versatile," said Bretsch. "She played point guard tonight and that's not usually her role, she just does whatever the team needs."

The game may have very well been decided in the first quarter. The biggest advantage for the Presidents in the first eight minutes was turnovers and fast-break buckets.

Quincy had just two turnovers compared to North Quincy's ten in the first frame, which led to a multitude of fast-break opportunities for the Presidents who protected possession of the ball very effectively.

"I think having played them already helped. It didn't feel hectic," said Bretsch before adding, "We're a balanced, unselfish team and defensively, our reserves didn't miss a beat when we took our starters out."

North Quincy showed signs of life in the second half and never gave up. The Red Raiders won many of the hustle plays late in the game, despite being down by a lot.

"We never gave up," said North Quincy head coach Jessica Worden.

The scariest moment of the game happened in the final minutes as North Quincy junior Annie Dow was running out trying to receive an outlet pass on a fast break. The pass was just a little too high and the ball went over her head and out of bounds but Dow couldn't stop her momentum and hit hard against two wooden doors about seven feet out of bounds. Dow remained down for a few seconds but got up with some help and walked gingerly over to the bench. After just a few seconds she was smiling and seemed to be uninjured.

"(Dow) is doing good, it was just another hustle play," said Worden.

While McDonald won Quincy's player of the tournament award, junior Caitlin Bulger won the player of the tournament award for the Red Raiders.

Offensively, Bulger almost mounted a one-woman comeback in the third and fourth quarters. She hit two 3-pointers, one more than Quincy had all game, in the closing minutes of the third quarter to spark some life into the Red Raiders. The two threes were Bulger's first points of the game and she continued that hot streak in the fourth quarter.

"[Bulger] has a nice shot, sometimes she hesitates to shoot and I tell her if she's open, she's got to take the shot," said Worden.

Bulger finished with 10 points, all in the second half.

Her best play came in the fourth quarter when she stole the ball and converted a fast-break lay-up. She also had a nice lefty finish on a drive to start the fourth quarter.

One aspect of the game that the Red Raiders did control was offensive rebounding. They had 17 offensive rebounds compared to Quincy's 12. Sophomore Maya Umoren, who converted multiple second chance opportunities, led their offensive rebounding attack.

North Quincy's hustle continued the whole game, including the last minute. They were fouled twice in the closing minute on strong takes by senior captain Erin Renken and junior Kristylin Mark.

"They knew we like to go to our post a lot, and they did a good job stopping that," said Worden. "Our shots just weren't falling."

In the opening round of the Abigail Adams Holiday Classic, North Quincy lost to Weymouth, 57-47.

10-9 lead after the first quarter but the Wildcats used a 14-3 scoring run in the third quarter to finish off North Quincy. Leading the way for the Red Raiders were Maya Umoren (15 points), Caitlin Bulger (14) and Olivia Umoren (eight).

Quincy vs. Braintree

The Presidents could never catch any traction against the Wamps in first round action. Quincy struggled throughout with Braintree's full-court defense and fell behind 15-8 after eight minutes. That deficit grew to 30-17 at halftime.

Kiley McDonald led all Quincy scorers with 16 points but Braintree handed the Presidents their first loss of the season, 46-31.

Team Notes

North Quincy is off until Friday when the travel to Hingham to play in a Patriot League contest. The Red Raiders are back home on Tuesday, Jan. 10 when they play Middleboro at 6:30 p.m. A road game at Duxbury is set for Friday, Jan. 13.

Quincy traveled to non-league Brockton on Tuesday and will host a big game against Scituate this Friday at 6:30 p.m. League road game versus Whitman-Hanson (Jan. 10) and Pembroke (Jan. 13) are on tap for next week.

North Hosts Somerville, Quincy At Revere

By SEAN BRENNAN

North Quincy's unbeaten basketball team will face undefeated and perennial Greater Boston League (GBL) champion Somerville Friday at the North gym, while Quincy, after getting its first GBL win, goes to Revere.

North Quincy head coach Bob Nolan's quintet looks like a good bet to make another Tech Tourney appearance and also shapes up as a GBL title threat after bombing Chelsea, 97-60, for its third win in a row and second straight league victory.

"We had been in a scoring famine in our first two games and in the first half of (the Chelsea) game we certainly broke out of it in the second half," Nolan said. "I just hope it continues. We have been playing great ball on defense and a few more points will make us a real tough club to beat."

The Raiders' Pete Quinn came off the bench and scored 13 of his 15 points in the second half, as did Ken Marsters. Dave Nelson scored finished with 18, Jim Driscoll chipped in 10 and Jamie Doherty added 14.

Marty Finnegan's Quincy team topped Malden, 66-58, for its first GBL win. Ken Furfari and Bob McDermott had 16 points apiece and John Reggianni 15. Quincy improved to 2-2 overall heading into the showdown with Revere.

"It was a sloppy game but we again had good shooting in spurts," Finnegan said. "But we are still making too many mistakes."

SYLVIA DISAPPOINTED, ERIKSON PLEASED IN GBL HOCKEY

Quincy's hockey team has a 2-2-1 record as it tries to successfully defend its GBL championship. But head coach Bob Sylvia admitted he is disappointed in the Presidents performance and labeled his team's 4-3 win over winless Chelsea "one of the worst performances by any of my teams."

The Presidents were coming off a 2-1 loss to Somerville. Quincy goalie Artie Boyle, one of the finest goalies in the GBL, had 27 saves but his mates couldn't put the puck in the net.

"I know this sounds like a broken record, but we just didn't get the scoring," said Sylvia. "We out-shot Somerville but scoring is the only thing that counts in hockey and we just are not scoring."

At North Quincy, head coach Ron Erikson's team stands at 1-4 overall but the coach has been pleased with the steady improvement of his young Raiders.

"I know it sounds repetitious to say we have improved every game, but we simply have," he said following last week's 3-2 loss to unbeaten Revere.

Against Revere, North's first goal was scored in the second period by Steve Graham off an assist from Keith Losordo but Revere scored twice late in the period to take a 3-1 lead into the third. With time running out, Erickson pulled goalie Rich Masotta and Graham found Brian MacIsaac for the final tally.

Red Raiders Tripped Up By Brockton, 3-2

Another North Quincy Rally Falls Short

By ALAN MCCALL

For the second time in nine days, the Brockton High hockey team almost gave one away. However saved by the Herculean effort by freshman goaltender Franco Mascaro, the Boxers escaped Quincy Youth Arena with a 3-2 win over host North Quincy last Friday night.

The Red Raiders also lost to Brockton 3-2 on Dec. 21 in Brockton, in similar fashion, rallying from a 3-0 third period deficit, only to fall one goal short in the end.

"We were flat to start, and I had hoped our team would have been a bit more ready to play a team that just beat us last week," said North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons, whose team fell to 2-3-1 on the season. "We have been a team that plays well in spurts, but we have to be able to play well consistently for the entire game."

North Quincy certainly had its chances to reverse the fortunes of a week ago, having had eight power play chances in the game, but not being able to convert. The best chance came in the second period when the Boxers were whistled into the sin bin twice in a twenty second span, leaving the Red Raiders with a 5-on-3 advantage with Brockton leading 1-0.

But not only did North Quincy fail to score, they gave up a goal as Brockton's Mike Heffernan won the race to a loose puck along the boards at the blue line, made a nice move around a defender, then snapped a perfect shot into the top left corner to put Brockton ahead 2-0.

"That was a tough goal to let in, but we got down on ourselves instead of realizing that we still had a two-man advantage for over a minute and we didn't focus on that opportunity," said Gibbons. "Our power play just was not there tonight, we were not patient and did not get many quality shots."

Just prior to the two-man advantage, Brockton broke the ice for a 1-0 lead, again set up by Heffernan, who created a 2-on-1 in the North Quincy zone. Heffernan's shot from the top of the left circle was kicked out by Red Raiders goalie James Dunn (16 saves), but Justin Allen was in perfect position for the rebound and steered the puck into wide open net.

Brockton (4-1-1) made it 3-0 moments after the two-man advantage for North Quincy expired as Ryan Martin found space in a scramble between the circles in front of Dunn and scored through a screen.

Meanwhile at the other end, Mascaro, whose first varsity start was last week against North Quincy, was turning away everything the hosts could throw at him. His best saves came from point blank range as Tim Marks and Tommy O'Brien each had chances in close while the game was still scoreless.

It appeared that the freshman goalie was headed for his first career shutout until the Red Raiders made things interesting in the final minutes. Sophomore forward Robbie Cameron finally got North Quincy on the board with 2:02 to play in the game, collecting a loose puck in front of the Boxers cage and slipping a backhand past the screened Mascaro to make it a 3-1 score.

After North Quincy pulled the goaltender in favor of an extra skater, Rudy Tryon redirected a Nick Furey shot from the blue line for another tally with 30 seconds to play. But Brockton held on again to skate away with the 3-2 win.

"Our penalty killers and goaltending did it for us again tonight," said Brockton head coach Chris Cunningham. "The goal while being two players down was a big lift and we were able to catch some momentum from that and capitalize on it. We have to learn to play better with lead, but give North Quincy credit for not giving up."

The Red Raiders hit the road this week to take on Hanover (Wednesday) and Silver Lake (Saturday).

"Those are two tough away games for us. We have played three games in five days so maybe playing away from this building for two games might get us back on track," said Gibbons.

Next week North Quincy hosts Patriot League foes Pembroke (Jan. 11, 7:20 p.m.) and Scituate (Jan. 14, TBA). Following the game against Scituate, the Red Raiders have a week off to prepare for a road game at Whitman-Hanson on Jan. 21. A home contest versus Duxbury is set for Jan. 25, setting up the second showdown with Quincy on Jan. 28.

League Games To Decide Post-Season Fate An Exciting January Awaits Basketball, Hockey Teams

By SEAN BRENNAN

The winter high school sports season plays out more like a 5K than a marathon. Amazingly enough, this season, for the basketball and hockey teams at Quincy and North Quincy High, has already reached the quarter-pole. By the time the month of January comes and goes we should have a clearer understanding of where these local teams stand in relation to tournament status.

But what we already know is that several of these programs, most notably the boys' basketball program at North Quincy and the girls' basketball team at Quincy High are already gaining speed as the halfway mark nears.

Let's take a closer look at where each of these teams stand as of Jan. 3, 2012 and what they still need to do to have the opportunity to make a run for a state championship.

Basketball

The most exciting team to date at Quincy High has easily been the girls' hoops team. Head coach Jeff Bretsch has his senior-laden team on track to match last year's recording breaking 17-win season. The Lady Presidents currently sit at 5-1 overall following last week's impressive 47-31 victory over North Quincy in the consolation game of the annual Abigail Adams Holiday Classic.

Quincy opened the season with a nonleague win over Brockton and followed that up with a 44-35 win over state power Duxbury, sending an early-season message to the rest of the Patriot League that the Presidents are going to be a tough out this season.

Bretsch's girls throttled nonleague Wareham, 66-55, to run their record to 3-0 leading up to the first of three games versus North Quincy. Thanks to a buzzer beating, game-winner from senior Nicole Lamie, the Presidents escaped the Red Raiders, 53-51 to head into Christmas at a perfect 4-0.

In the first round of the Abigail Adams Holiday Classic, Quincy hit a road bump against a tough Braintree High team, losing 46-31 despite 16 points from tournament team MVP Kiley McDonald. But this team has shown itself to be resilient. Quincy roared back against archrival North Quincy, winning 47-31 as McDonald and fellow senior Caitly Lowry scored 14 points each.

Quincy had to travel to Brockton on Tuesday before diving in to the Patriot League schedule on Friday with a huge game against Scituate. The season ends with a flurry of league games including back-to-back road games at Whitman-Hanson and Pembroke next week.

Expect the good times to roll. It may be premature, but you can probably ticket Quincy for a spot in the Division 1 state tournament come early March.

The Quincy boys' team got things started with a nice 50-48 win over league favorite Duxbury, but since that point Head Coach David Parry's team has struggled to find its identity, but it is still early.

Losses to Bridgewater-Raynham, North Quincy (twice) and Braintree – in the first round of the John Adams Holiday Classic – have the Presidents entering Fisher Division action at 1-4 overall, just don't count this team out.

Last year, Quincy finished their league portion at 9-6 overall and advanced to the Division 2 state finals because of it. The Presidents still have plenty of Patriot League games left and, truthfully, win more than you lose here and a post-season invitation awaits.

Quincy plays a monster road game on Friday at Scituate. Scituate edged the Presidents for a division title last season. Quincy plays back-to-back home games against Whitman-Hanson and Pembroke next week, returning to their home court for the first time since Dec. 16.

At North Quincy, Head Coach Kevin Barrett has a team that is deadly from all areas of the court. His team has shown an ability to hurt opposing teams from the outside or the inside and that has allowed the Red Raiders to storm out to a 5-1 start.

Wins over Silver Lake and (a close one) Quincy (59-56) got Barrett's boys off to a 2-0 start. A well-played game against Weymouth in the opening round of the John Adams Holiday Classic ended in a 75-72 defeat, but the Red Raiders made a statement with their performance against one of the better teams in Div. 1 South.

Junior Dan Gould put on a shooting show in the consolation game versus Quincy, scoring 25 points on seven 3-pointers as the Raiders romped 68-44. A nonleague destruction of Bedford High last Friday ran the record to 5-1 entering Wednesday's game against nonleague Fatima (R.I.).

A league home game on Friday versus Hingham opens up a Patriot League slate that continues next week with an away game at Middleboro followed by a huge home tilt against Duxbury on Jan. 13.

This is a team to watch very closely as January turns into February.

First-year head coach Jessica Worden earned her first career victory in the season-opener against non-league Everett – an overtime thriller, 52-50. Since that point, the Red Raiders have played well, but have nothing to show for the effort.

North Quincy lost to Silver Lake 53-34 back on Dec. 16, fell to nonleague Plymouth North and just missed upsetting favored Quincy before losing at the end on Lamie's game-winner, 53-51.

Back-to-back defeats in the Abigail Adams Holiday Classic to Weymouth 57-47 and Quincy 47-31 have dropped North Quincy to 1-5 entering Friday's road game at Hingham. The good news, underclassmen Caitlin Bulger and Maya Umoren have been standouts giving real hope for a late-season push for North Quincy.

Hockey

One game already stands out for Head Coach Tim Lewis' Quincy Presidents – the team's thrilling 2-1 win over rival North Quincy in the first round of the Quincy Youth Christmas Tournament back on Dec. 26 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

In that game, freshman sensation Patrick Freeman scored both goals and senior goalie Justin Keenan turned back 38 shots as Quincy prevailed. The Presidents would lose to Milton in the tournament final, but the first shot across the bow of the QHS-NQ rivalry went to Quincy.

The Presidents played host to Duxbury on Wednesday and host Whitman-Hanson this Saturday at 7:50 p.m. looking to improve on their 1-5 overall record.

For North Quincy, any hope of returning back to the Div. 2 South state tournament rests on how they perform this month when the Patriot League schedule gets going.

The Red Raiders have struggled offensively, having already lost twice to non-league Brockton by identical 3-2 scores and to Quincy 2-1. A 1-1 tie to Duxbury was a good start as was the team's 4-3 win over King Philip and their 5-2 win over Whitman-Hanson, but a return to the tournament rests on how well the team plays

Terrence Rooney: Soccer Star At Catholic Memorial

Quincy's Terrence Rooney got a taste of soccer glory during his sophomore year of high school at Catholic Memorial, playing for the Knights' Division 1 state championship team. Two years later, Rooney, now a senior, had hopes to lead the team he captained back to another state crown.

Rooney and Catholic Memorial came up a little short.

After a rebuilding year for the Knights in 2010, Rooney and head coach John Finn's team faced their share of obstacles this past fall. After a quick 2-0 start, Catholic Memorial faced perennial Catholic Conference powerhouse St. John's Prep, losing 7-1.

But three weeks later, in their second matchup against the Prep, Rooney and his teammates managed to hold off St. John's for most of the game, and fell by a mere goal. And in the two weeks following this game, the Knights recorded wins over BC High, Braintree, Xaverian, Boston Latin, O'Bryant and Waltham.

This late-season run propelled Rooney and Catholic Memorial into the 2011 MIAA South Division 1 tournament as the tenth seed. The Knights finished the regular season with an impressive 11-5-2 record.

On the strength of this mark, the Knights earned themselves a preliminary round bye. In a first round game, Catholic Memorial and Rooney fought hard and edged No. 7 Oliver Ames, 1-0, to advance into the sectional quarterfinals against archrival BC High.

The Eagles, ranked No. 15 overall, kept Catholic

TERRENCE ROONEY, of Quincy, helped lead Catholic Memorial to a 11-5-2 record this season on the soccer field. Rooney, who got his start playing soccer at the Merrymount School in Quincy, is also a star on the basketball court for the Knights.

Memorial at bay and walked off the pitch 1-0 winners, ending Rooney's high school career just short of his and his team's goal of reclaiming the state championship.

The season-ending loss stung but Rooney stood out according to his coach as a team leader and strong player up-and-down the pitch.

"Terrence plays hard, and he's a good motivator for the other players on the team," said Finn before the playoffs began. "He's a perfect team leader, bringing out good qualities in all the other players."

Rooney, who is currently starring for the Knights on the basketball court, got his start playing soccer while attending the Merrymount School in Quincy. Next year, Rooney hopes to continue his studies at Providence, Stonehill or Loyola (Maryland).

"I want to study education and be a teacher," he said.

Off the soccer field and basketball court, Rooney's involved in the National Honor Society, Peer Ministry, and the school's "Superfan" Club, which gets vanloads of fans to tough varsity matchups to support classmates.

OUR CONCERN FOR CHILDREN

Not only do chiropractors treat adults, but we also take care of children. As is the case with adults, a variety of problems, ranging from sports injuries to asthma, can lead children to seek treatment from us. Chiropractic philosophy also embraces preventive measures that help avoid chronic conditions and avert the need for crisis intervention. Concerning the last category, it bears mentioning that more than 5,100 American children fall out of windows each year. Toddlers account for two-thirds of injuries requiring medical attention. As these young children lean over, their high centers of gravity lead them to fall head-first. While most falls occur from the second floor, parents (and grandparents) should inspect their entire homes for possible dangers. Many people, including children, experience relief with chiropractic care. Unlike conventional medicine, which focuses on treating illness and disease, the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC focuses on improving your overall health and wellness in order to reduce the risk of illness and avoid disease. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Children with structural abnormalities may benefit from a chiropractic assessment and non-invasive treatment.

versus league competition moving forward.

North Quincy traveled to Hanover on Wednesday and plays at Silver Lake Friday. January contests against Pembroke, Scituate, Whitman-Hanson, Duxbury and Quincy (Jan. 28) should go a long way to deciding if this team is the real deal or not.

QHS-NQ Track Note

At the annual MSTCA Boston Holiday Challenge Invitational held on Dec. 27 at the Reggie Lewis Center in Boston, freshmen sisters Emily and Julia Bryson finished second and third, respectively in the freshman girls' one-mile event.

Emily was edged at the finish line by Erika Pena of Toll Gate HS (R.I.), but both Emily and Julia broke the six-minute mark. Keep an eye on these two moving forward – they are only freshmen.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

W. Somerset Maugham wrote: "For the average man a sufficient role of life is to follow his instincts controlled by the moral standard of the society in which he lives."

SCOTT DEWARE Have you ever been caught in a horrible storm while driving a car? ... When your windshield wiper could hardly clear your window to give you a clear view of the road? Were not the yellow and white lines on the road helpful to you? Without them you probably would not have been able to continue driving. They protected you from going into the ditch.

Let's think about these questions in regard to our day-by-day living. ... Safety lines have been given to us. The lines are safety guides and common sense should tell us how important they are ... Yet, some people continually ignore them. ...

The basic guides are in the Bible such as the Beatitudes, the Lord's Prayer and, of course, the all important Ten Commandments. It is not true that if we follow these white lines carefully, we would avoid the many 'ditches' of difficulty in our daily living?

that he was going to the Social Security Office in Quincy Center to apply for SSI, and then go to Boston. While in the square, according to the brother, he received a call from his brother/suspect telling him that he had to come home immediately so he could get into the apartment. He said that his brother/suspect told him to take a cab and he would pay for it, so he did this.

Upon arrival at home, the brother/suspect came over to the cab and gave his brother a $100 bill, which was then given to the cab driver. When asked where he got that kind of money, the suspect said, "Don't worry about it, someone owed me money." The cab driver returned approximately $90 in change. They then went into the apartment, where the suspect stepped into the bathroom to shave and shower. The brother claimed that he didn't observe the red dye on the suspect and did not know that he just robbed a bank. When asked that it seemed suspicious that the brothers would be in the same location when the bank robbery occurred, the brother was adamant that he did not know a bank robbery was going to occur.

In addition to evidence collected, there was also a Citizen's Bank withdrawal slip found in the suspect's jacket. The bank robbery note in the jacket was covered in red dye, and scorched around the edges, indicating it was close to the dye pack when it exploded. The note read, "100's, 50's, 20's No Dye No Button No Buddy gets hurt." There was also a baseball cap with a "BC" emblem on the front of it.

As for the $100 bill that the cab driver got, he didn't remember seeing any red dye on it. He drove to a local bakery, where he ordered a cake for $25. He gave the clerk the $100 bill and received $75 in change. Detectives Pieper and Dentremon later retrieved the $100 bill from the bakery.

Nice Work!

THE TRUTH OF THE MATTER: If you wire transfer money out of the country for a purchase and you were scammed, there is very little chance that you will get your money back. Wiring money is like sending cash—it's nearly impossible to track and even harder to prosecute. Imagine trying to bring a suspect from another country to our courts, factoring in the extradition process and the costs associated with it. Ultimately, you are responsible for any check you cash.

Don't accept a check from someone as part of the transaction, with instructions to wire transfer money back after cashing the check. When the sender mails you a check with more money than the arranged deal, this should be a sign of a scam. Financial institutions need time to verify a check and are required to tell the person cashing the check that there will be a hold on the check. In some cases, it takes weeks to determine that a check is a forgery and you will end up being responsible for the loss.

Instead of a wire transfer, offer to use a credit card, which affords some protections. Reputable companies provide this option—scammers don't.

This is not to say that all transactions online are scams, but rarely does a day go by that someone hasn't reported being victimized. Some victims who sent money via wire transfers to an address in the United States believe that there is a good chance that the local Police will be able to get the money back, but this is cost prohibitive.

Consider a victim who lost $2,000 to a scam based in California. It would conservatively cost $1,000 for travel costs for a detective just to interview the suspect. It would take weeks to extradite the suspect if he didn't voluntarily opt to return to Massachusetts. Once cleared to return to Massachusetts, this would result in two detectives flying to California to bring the suspect back just for an arraignment. This would be an additional $2,500 in airfare.

Most likely, the suspect would meet bail requirements and be given a future court date. If the suspect didn't show, a warrant could be issued but again, it would be costly to bring him back if he returned to California. Prosecuting the case would be a difficult matter too, since much of the evidence would be either circumstantial or based on confessions.

Ultimately, this financial burden would be placed on the taxpayers.

Moving The Historic United First Parish Church Bell

From Here To There

AFTER BEING HOISTED from the church bell tower to the ground by a giant crane, the bronze bell is eased into an upright position on the back of a flatbed trailer for transport to a warehouse in South Boston. The building in the background is the James R. McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall.)

READY TO GO - A rigger signals to the crane operator using a walkie-talkie that the United First Parish Church bell is secured and ready to be hoisted from the bell tower to a flatbed truck positioned on Hancock Street outside the church below.

A PAIR of steel rails were set up on wood cribbing (supports) to allow the bell which had been dismounted from its original support system and which can be seen in its custom built carrying cage, to be slid from the interior of the tower to a position outside the columns where it could be hoisted to the ground with the crane.

Thursday, Sept. 6 Primary May Also Fall On First Day Of School Ballots, Books On 'Collision Course?'

By SCOTT JACKSON

The state's decision to hold the Massachusetts state primary on Sept. 6 is forcing Quincy officials to take a second look at the school calendar.

The primary, in which voters will determine the nominees for Congress and the State Legislature, normally falls on a Tuesday and was originally set for Sept. 18. But Mass. Secretary of the State Bill Galvin moved it to the earlier date to comply with the Federal Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment (MOVE) Act.

The MOVE Act requires

states to mail absentee ballots to servicemembers and other citizens outside of the country 45 days before a general election. It does, however, allow states to apply for waivers with the Department of Defense, which would allow them to mail their ballots at a later date.

Massachusetts and four other states were granted such waivers in 2010. An official at the Secretary of State's office said Monday that it is unlikely Massachusetts would receive another waiver this year.

It is believed the Sept. 6th primary may be the first time Quincy votes on a Thursday. Typically, city and state elections are held on Tuesday.

But the Sept. 6th date may mean ballots and books could be on a "collision course."

Although the 2012-2013 school calendar has not been set yet, the first full day of school for all Quincy public school students has traditionally been the first Thursday after Labor Day. This year, the first Thursday after Labor Day is Sept. 6.

Herren Tells Students: 'You're Special; There's No Reason To Change'

By SCOTT JACKSON

"You kids are special and you need to know that," former Celtic guard Chris Herren told Quincy High's senior and junior classes during an assembly Friday.

Over the course of two days, Herren spoke to all of Quincy and North Quincy's students in four different assemblies.

"There's no reason to change who you are by drinking, smoking, becoming someone else, because you're perfect the way you are."

Herren, 36, knows firsthand the problems alcohol and drugs can cause. He was a star at Fall River's Durfee High School who earned a

New Maternity Ward Among QMC Upgrades

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) has announced plans for a number of major new projects that will not only transform the appearance of the facility but also expand the services it provides to the community.

In the next year, Steward Health Care, which acquired QMC on Oct. 1, will invest $30.8 million into capital projects at Quincy Medical Center.

"Providing superior quality health care is our number one goal," says Daniel Knell, QMC President. "We are proud of the quality of care that we provide here and we are working diligently to modernize the facility, and to bring on more physicians and services to meet the needs of our community. We are eager to present a whole new face of Quincy Medical Center and Steward Health Care System - one that better reflects our commitment to quality and excellence."

The announcement of the creation of a new 22,000 square foot maternity suite encompassing the hospital's entire sixth floor has generated enthusiastic support from staff who were sad to see the hospital's former maternity service close in 1998.

"Bring maternity back to Quincy' is what I've heard over and over as I've been out talking to people in the community," Knell said. "There is a very strong connection between this hospital and generations of families who were born here. We want to make sure that this service is here for generations to come."

The $12.8 million project will commence later in 2012 pending approval from the state Department of Public Health.

Among the other projects planned for 2012, are a $3.4 million renovation of the parking area, which includes improvements to traffic flow, creation of a new patient drop-off and handicapped parking area. This project began in late 2011 with the demolition of the Gordon House building and is expected to be complete in the spring.

Also currently under way is the creation of a new 12-bed orthopedics suite specially designed for patients undergoing joint replacement surgery. The unit incorporates the latest in technology and patient comfort as well as a special rehabilitation area. The new unit is scheduled to open in approximately eight weeks.

In addition, the hospital has slated $11 million for a multi-phase, state-of-the-art renovation of its surgical suite, including renovation of six operating room suites, 20 perioperative bays and patient and family support space, as well as construction of a new 6,500 square foot two-story glass-enclosed lobby and reception area located at the rear of the hospital. This $3 million project will begin in the spring and will incorporate new registration and admitting area and expanded radiology waiting area.

"We are very excited about the revitalization of Quincy Medical Center and what it means to our patients and our surrounding community," Knell said. "Not only are we improving the services we offer, we are also contributing to the local economy. Construction and economic activity from these projects are expected to create more than 150 new jobs in Quincy."

The commencement address was delivered by Thomas F. Clasby, Jr., a Quincy College alum and lifelong resident of Quincy. He received the Distinguished Alumnus Award from Quincy College.

Clasby began his career in local government in 1997 when he was appointed the Manager of Transportation and Housing for the Department of Elder Services by Quincy Mayor James Sheets. Working with federal, state and local government agency officials, Clasby was part of the city's team to convert military housing into a senior living campus. This project was the first of its kind in the country and has become a national model. He augmented the city's medical transportation and implemented the TransVan program, which provides a taxi like service for Quincy's elder population.

In 1999, Clasby was promoted to Director of the Department of Elder Services. As Director, he developed "The Elder Service Plan" which is a comprehensive program to address all issues confronting senior citizens. He hosts "Elder Update", a weekly access television show which focuses on senior issues.

Quincy Continuum Awarded

$3 Million For Homeless Assistance

Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington are pleased to announce that the Quincy/Weymouth Continuum of Care has been awarded $3,064,469 in homeless assistance funding under the 2011 McKinney-Vento Program, administered by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Some $1,346,398 will be allocated among nine renewal "Supportive Housing" projects, which will be used to provide housing with supportive services over the next year for 146 households, consisting of 147 adults and 48 children.

Another $1,648,524 will be allocated to three renewal projects under the "Shelter Plus Care" program, which is a rental assistance program through the Quincy Housing Authority. These projects will provide housing vouchers over the next year for 108 households, comprised of 163 adults and 49 children.

In addition, $69,547 in renewal funding has also been awarded to enable local housing providers to continue participating in a program called the Homeless Management Information System (HMIS), which provides homeless assistance data to HUD. HMIS also allows the local Continuum of Care to track homeless individuals and forecast trends in homelessness.

Quincy Chamber Of Commerce Sets Membership Goals

Business Organization Entering Third Year

By EMILY TAFT

Quincy Chamber of Commerce will celebrate its two-year anniversary this month after forming in January 2010. The four-person team is entering their third year working with Quincy business owners to support economic growth.

In the last calendar year, the Chamber brought in over 100 new business members. President Dean Rizzo said they hope to have a net gain of 50 new members each year and a goal of 750 new members by the year 2015.

Rizzo is optimistic about reaching that goal.

"We have around 500 members now, and 85 percent of them are Quincy-based businesses," said Rizzo. "Eighty percent of those memberships are smaller businesses throughout Quincy."

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce was first established as a partnership between two Quincy organizations: Quincy 2000 Collaborative and Discover Quincy.

They spent the first two years growing the chamber and networking. Now the chamber aims to establish new benefits for its members.

"We want to continue to make (becoming a member) an attractive option," said Rizzo. "We are now getting the word out there to residents, consumers, and tourists with the shop local campaign."

The free shop local program encourages local residents and businesses to purchase goods and services from local businesses. It offers coupons, job listings, and daily specials for businesses in and around Quincy. Rizzo said that bringing the program on board is one more benefit for a business to join.

According to Rizzo there are a number of benefits to those businesses that join the chamber. Membership gives businesses promotional and marketing opportunities, networking events, and a newsletter sent out to over 1,600 entities among other perks.

The smallest membership is for businesses with less than six full-time employees. This level one category is a $275 investment annually. The largest level of membership – for corporations with 125 or more full-time employees – requires an investment of $1,000 annually. Rizzo said that the remaining 20 percent of memberships go to those larger businesses.

"The smaller businesses need our help more than the larger ones," said Rizzo. "The smaller businesses rely largely on expanding their own businesses."

The chamber offers small business owners an atmosphere of support, certainly in uncertain economic times, according to Rizzo.

"Some of these sole business owners, or entrepreneurs, feel as though they are on their own," said Rizzo. "When they attend our meetings and events they learn that they are not alone. It's not just their business that has challenges."

Rizzo said that another goal the chamber has is for members to have no doubts or questions as to whether

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 22, 1779, famed Tory outlaw Claudius Smith meets his end on the gallows in Goshen, N.Y. Smith earned the label "Cowboy of the Ramapos" for his use of guerrilla tactics against Patriot civilians. Legend has it that Smith's skull was filled with mortar and included in the edifice of the Goshen Court House.

• On Jan. 19, 1809, poet, author and literary critic Edgar Allan Poe is born in Boston. In 1836, Poe married his 13-year-old cousin, Virginia Clemm, and completed his first full-length work of fiction, "Arthur Gordon Pym." He became known for dark horror stories like "The Fall of the House of Usher" and "The Tell-Tale Heart."

• On Jan. 17, 1893, on the Hawaiian Islands, a group of American sugar planters under Sanford Ballard Dole overthrow Queen Liliuokalani, the Hawaiian monarch, and establish a new provincial government with Dole as president. Three hundred U.S. Marines were called to Hawaii, allegedly to protect American lives.

• On Jan. 18, 1912, after a two-month ordeal, the expedition of British explorer Robert Falcon Scott arrives at the South Pole, only to find that Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen had preceded them by just more than a month. Caught in a storm on the way back to base camp, Scott and two others perished.

• On Jan. 16, 1945, Adolf Hitler, leader of Nazi Germany, takes to his underground bunker, where he remains for 105 days until he commits suicide on April 30 in the waning days of World War II. Hitler and his wife swallowed cyanide capsules (which had been tested on his "beloved" dog and her pups). For good measure, he shot himself with his pistol.

• On Jan. 20, 1980, bleachers at a bullring in Sincelejo, Colombia, collapse, killing 222 people. The deadliest tragedy at a sporting event in Colombia's history was the result of overcrowding and poor construction.

The New Hampshire Primary

I get a little nostalgic around this time every four years. The intense media coverage of the New Hampshire presidential primaries – held Tuesday this week – reminds me of the day I cast a ballot in the nation's first Presidential primary.

It was 28 years ago – Feb. 28, 1984. I was an undergraduate student at the University of New Hampshire in Durham. The campus is a popular campaign stop for Presidential contenders. Those visiting UNH during my time there included Jesse Jackson, John Glenn, Gary Hart (1984 race) and Howard Baker, Dick Gephardt and Bruce Babbitt (early stages of the 1988 campaign). Some, like Glenn and Baker, showed up at political science classes without notice. Vice President George Bush – seeking the GOP nomination in 1988 – was commencement speaker in 1987.

Having a front row seat to Presidential politics can be interesting. But how engaged can one be in the political process if you're not registered to vote?

I took care of that.

Although I still resided in Braintree at the time, New Hampshire law does not require voters live a certain time in the state before being allowed to register there. So, after I got settled into my freshman dorm, I headed to Durham Town Hall to change my registration.

Tuesday, Feb. 28, 1984, was a snowy day in Durham. The voting precinct was located at the Oyster River Elementary School located a few miles from the main campus. As I walked to the school, the snow's intensity picked up.

As I reached Oyster River, people were milling about near the doors leading to the gymnasium. "Campaign workers," I thought.

Yes, but not all.

One guy came up to me and introduced himself as a candidate from South Carolina. (To get on the ballot, an individual must file a declaration of candidacy form and submit a filing fee. Today that fee is $1,000.) This guy was more like a publicity hound trying to find 15 minutes – or 15 seconds – of fame.

I retreated indoors. A maze of voter booths filled the gym. The polling precinct buzzed with activity. Sample ballots were plastered on the walls.

My first decision: what ballot should I take?

As an undeclared (independent) voter, I had the option of taking a Democrat ballot or a Republican one. On the GOP side, it was a no-brainer. President Ronald Reagan was assured of re-nomination. Voting for Reagan was like the Yankees beating the Red Sox: a foregone conclusion (remember, this in 1984.)

So, I took a Democrat ballot instead.

It read more like a phone book. Name after name. Maybe 20 in all.

Now what?

I scanned all the names. Some were familiar, most were not.

Time to make a choice. And then I made it. After marking my paper ballot, I headed out the door and came across some exit pollsters. I ignored their requests for my ballot selection.

That was personal, I reasoned.

Besides, I wanted to tell my dad first.

So, that night, I called home (reversed the charges from the dorm pay phone of course) and talked to my mom and then my dad. The polls had closed and news spread that Colorado Sen. Gary Hart had upset former Vice President Walter Mondale in the Democrat primary. Just eight days prior, it was Mondale who had soundly defeated Hart in the Iowa Caucus.

After a little chit-chat, my dad asked the inevitable: "So who did you vote for today?"

He may have sensed that my vote contributed to Hart's impressive victory.

"I voted for George McGovern," I replied.

"McGovern?" Henry said his voice rising with disbelief. "How could you vote for McGovern?"

Henry had a way of getting right to the point.

It was if I had announced I was shelving my studies to travel the world.

McGovern, after all, was the Democratic nominee in 1972 who was trounced by Richard Nixon in one of the largest landslides in presidential election history. The former U.S. Senator from South Dakota had as much chance of winning New Hampshire as that guy outside the school – zilch.

In retrospect, I'm not surprised that my dad reacted the way he did. That's because I really don't remember why I voted for McGovern.

Perhaps I found all of the Democrats uninspiring. (Some Republicans may be feeling the same way this year.)

Or maybe I just thought McGovern was a decent guy.

It was my only swing in the batter's box of New Hampshire presidential primary politics.

And I whiffed.

McGovern finished tied with Jesse Jackson for fourth in the New Hampshire primary with five percent. Hart was first (37%), Mondale second (28%), John Glenn third (12%).

Hart later won key primaries in Ohio and California but his momentum stalled after a famous exchange with Mondale during a debate. Mondale, commenting on Hart's "New Ideas" platform, questioned the challenger by borrowing a fast-food ad slogan: "Where's the beef?"

The debate in part derailed Hart's campaign and Mondale eventually secured the nomination.

Twenty-eight years later, my New Hampshire primary voting experience would have made a better story had it helped propel Hart to victory. Maybe a mention in Henry's coveted "Sunbeams" column, too.

But at least I voted. And learned that casting a ballot is more important than always being on the winning side.

In the general election, I voted for Reagan over Mondale.

And helped win another one for "The Gipper."

QUINCY and the rest of Massachusetts will hold its Presidential Primaries Tuesday, March 6.

The last day for Quincy voters to change their party affiliation or to register to vote to be eligible to vote in the Presidential Primaries is Wednesday, Feb. 15. The city's Election Department will be open until 8 p.m. that evening.

Registered Democrats will be allowed to vote only in the Democrat primary. Registered Republicans can vote only the GOP primary. Unenrolled voters can select a Democrat or a Republican ballot March 6.

JAN. 3 marked the first city inauguration held on a Tuesday in six years. The city's charter calls for the inauguration of the mayor, city councillors and three school committee members on the first Monday of January – unless that Monday is New Year's Day (or the observance of New Year's in the event Jan. 1 is a Sunday like it was this year.)

Inauguration Days 2006 and 2012 shared some common threads.

Both were held on a Tuesday.

On both days, incumbent mayors were sworn in to their third terms (Mayor William Phelan in 2006, Mayor Tom Koch 2012).

And both inaugurations occurred in the auditorium at Quincy High School. Of course this year's ceremony was held in the new QHS; 2006 in old QHS.

The next time an inauguration will be held on a Tuesday again will be six years from now – in 2018. That year, New Year's Day is Monday, Jan. 1. The inaugural will likely be Tuesday.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1924 real photo postcard view of Beach Street in Wollaston looking west from Billings Road. The American Elm trees lining this street were planted in 1890 when the Wollaston Park Land Company laid out this area into house lots. They planted hundreds of these trees on dozens of streets they laid out between Sachem Brook and today's Fenno Street. Most of the trees are gone today due to Dutch Elm disease and storms. Before this area was formally laid out Beach Street connected Hancock Street to the end of Sachem's Brook where there was a small beach and wharf on the shore of Quincy Bay. Quincy photographer Henry Frink, who usually parked his car so that it would be in the picture, published the postcard. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Peacetime Employment Highest At Shipyard

John T. Wiseman, general manager of the Bethlehem Steel Company's Boston district, said employment at the Fore River Shipyard had reached 8,000, a peacetime high, and was expected to increase to 9,500 in the next few months.

In Navy work, the shipyard was completing the cruiser USS Salem, converting a destroyer, converting the cruiser USS Northampton to a fleet command ship and had contracts to build two large destroyers.

Other work included completion of five tankers that had already been laid down, five other tankers to be started soon and contracts to build two ships for the American Export Lines.

Sam Wakeman, the shipyard manager, said Fore River also was ready to bid on a $30 million contract to build two passenger ships for the Grace Lines.

OLD COLONY RIDERS DROP

Alexander Purdon, executive vice president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, said a recent sharp decrease in commuters on the Old Colony Railroad was threatening the future of passenger service on the line.

"The hopes of retaining rail passenger service in the South Shore decreases in almost direct proportion to the drop in commuter patronage," he said.

The deadline set by the parent New Haven Railroad for abandonment of passenger service on the Old Colony line was only seven weeks away.

PRACTICE ELECTION

The Quincy Civic Association announced plans to hold a "practice" election under Plan E procedures at the Woodward School for Girls.

Practice is necessary, said Melvin Thorner of the QCA, "so that voters will familiarize themselves with the intricacies of the new system before the actual election."

Wants Environment Protected, Downtown Improved

To The Quincy Sun:

Thank you for calling me yesterday for comments on the most recent Town Brook Appeal. First of all, you asked me about money and I'd like you to understand I am not looking to be silenced with money but what is right and ethical and fair as well as improving the downtown as well as protecting the environment.

My take on relocation of the Town Brook is exactly what Mr. Harrington said in April and that is to "prepare the Hancock Lot" for the developer. That means getting rid of the Town Brook so the developer can build directly above the present culvert. I filed a separate Appeal to protect my property because I was unaware that my property was part of the plan until I was notified in late November by the Dept of Marine Fisheries.

What we are being told is not the whole or exactly the most accurate information by the City and the developer. We can have a better plan if parties are willing to listen. So far there has been little to no communication forcing me to file the Appeals.

Attached for you to read is my Appeal that was submitted on Dec. 16th written by me and I am also attaching a complete copy of the DEP letter of Dec. 2nd allowing the project based on compliance of 47 Superceding Orders of Condition. Please see on Page 4 under Alternative Analysis third paragraph.

Also explored during the course of the SOC review is an alternative which would improve the transition between the new alignment and the existing channel. As originally proposed, the new channel would be constructed parallel to the existing channel in the vicinity of Parcel D 90. (Parcel D 90 is me I found out.) The EXIST-

ING CHANNEL WOULD BE ABANDONED once the project was constructed and would remain as a dry concrete shelf adjacent to the new channel. (This means leave my half the brook as an empty, ugly, and dangerous ditch.)

The alternate is preferred by DMF as it provides better conditions for smelt spawning." (This means the original proposal is NOT GOOD for the smelt spawning.)

Thank you following and reporting on the Town Brook.

MOSWETUSET HUMMOCK is located in a small, wooded hillock on Quincy Bay.

Website Highlights Historical Significance Of Moswetuset Hummock

A group of history students at Eastern Nazarene College have created a website highlighting the historical significance of Moswetuset Hummock, a small, wooded hillock on Quincy Bay.

It's the location from which the Commonwealth of Massachusetts derives its name.

Under the direction of History Prof. Randall Stephens, ENC students enrolled in the college's Critical Readings in History class have created a new website (www.enc.edu/history/mh) that explains the important role the hummock played in early relations between local Native American tribes and the first colonial settlers.

The website explains how the hummock was the summer seat of Chickatabot, the leader of the Moswetuset, or Massachusetts, Native American tribe. It was at Moswetuset Hummock that Chickatabot first met with Myles Standish in 1621 to establish trade with the pilgrims of the Plymouth Colony.

"I definitely hope that our website about Moswetuset Hummock helps boost visitor interest," ENC senior Alexandra Foran said. "The hummock is one of the few historical locations in our nation that remains untouched and appears close to what the colonists would have seen in the early 1600s. It's like you are able to step back in time there."

Almond Biscotti

With the price of foods escalating so much, things like store bought biscotti can be pricey, but they are pretty easy to make at home. And you can be creative by adding nuts, butterscotch chips or substitute vanilla or anise in place of almonds.

Last week I had brunch at my daughter Ann Marie and Davey's home. One of the desserts she served was an almond biscotti with nuts. I enjoyed them so much that it is today's recipe.

ALMOND BISCOTTI

2 1/4 cups flour
1-teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 extra large eggs
1-cup sugar
1/2 cup vegetable oil

2 teaspoons pure almond extract
1 1/3 cups slivered blanched almond toasted

It takes 10 minutes at 350 degrees. (Cool before using)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Slightly grease a baking sheet or use aluminum foil or parchment paper.

Place the eggs and sugar in a mixing bowl, and beat for two minutes. Add the oil, the almond extract and almonds beat well. Add the flour, baking powder and salt and mix until thick and smooth.

Place the mixture on a floured board and knead for a couple of minutes. Make two rolls, place on a cookie sheet and bake for 15-20 minutes.

After they come out of the oven, slice in half inch pieces and bake until they are toasty.

Butterscotch Pudding Coffee Cake

Most mornings when I have my coffee, I love to have a bite or two of something sweet, such as muffin, cake or whatever.

And I found this great unique recipe for a coffee cake that just hits the spot. The only thing about this recipe is that it takes about 6-8 hours for the rolls to rise, so if you prepare it the night before, it just has to be baked in the morning.

BREAKFAST COFFEE CAKE

1 package of yeast rolls
1/2 cup brown sugar
1 stick butter (melted)

1/2 cup pecans
1 package of butterscotch pudding (uncooked)

In a greased bundt pan start with placing the yeast rolls all around the pan. Then on top add the brown sugar and the melted butter. Then add the pecans and the butterscotch pudding. Cover tightly and refrigerate overnight.

Bake in a 350-degree oven for 35 minutes or until all the rolls are slightly browned. After it is baked, turn the baking pan over on a plate and it is spectacular.

Cut in pieces as needed.

Proposed Nursing Home Draws Support, Concerns

South Cove Manor Seeks Approval For 141-Bed Facility At 290 Washington St.

By SCOTT JACKSON

A proposed new nursing home in Quincy Point received lukewarm support from residents concerned about flooding and traffic in the area.

South Cove Manor currently operates a 100-bed facility on Shawmut Street in Boston. But their facility isn't big enough, according to CEO Richard Wong. "Our current home we have now is too small," he said in an interview prior to the meeting. "We run close to 99% occupancy."

The new nursing home, which will have 141 beds, is planned for 290 Washington Street, currently home to Hassan Motors car dealership. Wong said they selected the site because they couldn't find a suitable site in Boston and because of Quincy's large Asian population.

"When we were looking to expand, we looked for property in Boston and Greater Boston," Wong said. "We couldn't find a parcel in Boston, and Quincy's Asian population has grown considerably in the past 20-25 years, so it made sense to expand into Quincy."

Monday's meeting was co-hosted by Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall. Because of recent redistricting, the site is now in Ward 1 after previously being in Ward 2.

The project is expected to cost $25-30 million. Laforest told the meeting she was happy the group was making such an investment during the current recession. "$30 million is very significant, particularly in this depressed economy when we're crying for jobs, we're crying for construction," she said.

During the meeting, residents at nearby properties voiced their worries about flooding. Pond Street resident Michael DiCesare lives behind the site. He was critical of the proposal's plan to utilize pipes, no longer in use, under his backyard that drain into Town River.

"I'm concerned that if you're going to connect to those existing pipes, that water is not make it to the Town River," DiCesare said. "It's just going to bubble up

South Shore Chamber: Save Ferry Service

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce has called on the MBTA to back away from a proposal to eliminate ferry service between the South Shore and Boston.

In a letter to MBTA general manager Jonathan Davis, Chamber president Peter Forman said dropping ferry service "would severely undermine a regional development strategy pattern on the South Shore that has been actively pursued by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and strongly supported by the Patrick administration."

Commuter boats provide transportation from Quincy, Hingham and Hull to downtown Boston and Logan Airport. The ferries operate under contract to the MBTA.

In the early 1980's, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce obtained the funding to begin the commuter boat service.

"The economic future of the South Shore depends on its transportation network. The major development projects underway or on the drawing board are all designed around a mix of transportation alternatives," Forman said. "Water transportation is a vital part of that mix."

Forman cited the development at the Hingham Shipyard, "where one of the anchor assets to that residential and retail development is the ferry service into Boston."

"It is critical to our regional development that the state look at the ferry services not solely from a perspective of current dollars and ridership but in the context of the region's planned growth over the next decade," Forman said.

The MBTA plans a series of public hearings in the coming weeks to review proposals to realign its services and fare structure.

MBTA Fare Hike, Service Reductions Public Meeting Feb. 15

The MBTA's proposal to raise fares and reduce services including the possibility of eliminating ferry service from Quincy to Boston and all other ferry services, will be subject of a public meeting Wednesday, Feb. 15 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Public comments can also be sent via e-mail:

fareproposal@mbta.com or mailed to Fare Proposal, 10 Park Plaza, Suite 3910, Boston, MA 02116.

The T has proposed the fare hike and service reductions to deal with a $185 million budget shortfall in operating expenses.

Help Someone This MLK, Jr. Day

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Monday, Jan. 16 is Martin Luther King, Jr. Day — a national holiday. To some, the day means more than an observance of the birthday of the civil rights leader. It is also a day to be of service to others.

The MLK Day of Service is a part of United We Serve, the President's national call to service initiative. It calls for Americans from all walks of life to work together to provide solutions to our most pressing national problems.

A great way to be of service to others is to help someone you know who may need assistance applying for Social Security, Medicare, or Extra Help with Medicare prescription drug costs. Each of these is easy to do at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Some people who need these benefits may not be comfortable with computers or may not even know applying online is an option. But now it's easier than ever to apply for such benefits from the convenience of a home computer at www.socialsecurity.gov.

For example, it's easy to apply for retirement benefits at www.socialsecurity.gov/applyonline. It can take as little as 15 minutes from start to finish, and once the application is electronically submitted, in most cases, there is nothing more to do.

It's even easier to apply for Medicare, for people who do not plan to begin their Social Security retirement payments yet but who do want Medicare coverage. The application takes about 10 minutes and can be found at www.socialsecurity.gov/medicareonly.

People who already have Medicare coverage, but who have trouble meeting prescription drug costs, can apply for Extra Help online at www.socialsecurity.gov/extrahelp.

This holiday, you may want to make a trip to see the new Martin Luther King, Jr. memorial in Washington D.C. or listen to a recording of a memorable speech. You can also make your Martin Luther King Day a day of service to someone who can use your help. Lead them to www.socialsecurity.gov. It may be easy for you, but it may be a dream come true for the person you help.

Former Mayor McCauley Supports Gov. Romney Will The Republicans Snatch Defeat From The Jaws Of Victory AGAIN?

By FRANCIS
X. MCCAULEY

The results are in from the Iowa Caucuses and the result was inconclusive.

Governor Mitt Romney's eight-vote victory will be termed a defeat in the minds of many and was overshadowed by the surprising finish by former Sen. Rick Santorum who tailored his campaign's message to that band of social conservatives on the right.

The major problem for the Republican Party is that its primary voters tend to nominate candidates for the presidency who cannot prevail in the final election. Recent examples Bob Dole in 1996 and John McCain in 2008. Both of these candidates were fine men who served their country well during war time, however, they were unpalatable to the great mass of independent voters in the November presidential elections.

The mainstream media will damn Romney with "faint praise" by calling him a "moderate," a term which is an anathema to many conservative Republican voters.

After Tuesday's Republican contest in New Hampshire, other GOP primaries were scheduled in South Carolina on Jan. 24th and Florida on Jan. 31st. After a quiet month of February, Super Tuesday, March 6th, will feature a number of primaries around the country, including Massachusetts.

Republican primary voters in these upcoming primaries should forget about their personal hang-ups (such as abortion, same sex marriage, religion) and concentrate on nominating a candidate who can win in November.

President Obama may be a bust-up as a president but should not be taken lightly. It has been said that any of the candidates on the Republican side would make a better president than President Obama. While that may be true, not all Republican presidential candidates are electable.

My candidate for the Republican nomination for President of the United States is former Governor

Mitt Romney who served as Massachusetts governor from 2003 through 2006. Mitt Romney set his sights on the presidency during his term as governor and chose to step down after a single term as governor to devote his time to pursuit of the presidency.

I was proud to work in both of his political campaigns; an unsuccessful run for senator in 1994 as well as his successful run for governor in 2002. His business experience combined with his governmental experience put him head and shoulders above the other Republican candidates in the field.

It has been said that the national election of 2012 will be the most important in the recent history of our country. Let's hope Republican and Independent voters who vote in Republican primaries focus on the one candidate who can win in November.

I believe that candidate to be Governor Mitt Romney.

PRACTICAL ADVICE

For any woman looking to get the most sparkle out of her diamond solitaire ring, a prong setting is the best choice for prominently displaying the gemstone and exposing it to maximum light. However, for the active woman, the more practical "bezel setting" may be a wiser choice. A bezel setting consists of a metal rim (or collar) that encapsulates the entire circumference of a diamond to hold it in place. The bezel protects the edge of the stone and provides a secure setting for stones that are likely to be part of an active lifestyle. Whichever setting is chosen, the diamond can be afforded added protection by turning the gemstone inward against your palm to temporarily avoid hazardous exposure.

Diamonds are a girl's best friend. Our professional and knowledgeable staff will work with you to make sure you have the best buying experience possible. You are cordially invited to 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to discover the diamond that you will be happy with for life. Koch MBTA Board Chairman

Mayor Thomas Koch has accepted an appointment as chairman of the 175-member MBTA Advisory Board.

The mayor said he will use the position to advocate for customers and communities that count on the T on a daily basis.

The MBTA Advisory Board does not control T spending or have the authority to veto any fare increases or service changes, but plays a major oversight and advisory role as the primary sounding board and advocacy wing for the 175 cities and towns serviced by the MBTA.

Koch was appointed in a vote by Advisory Board on Monday morning. A nominating committee had contacted the Mayor prior to the meeting, at which time he said he would accept the appointment if nominated.

"These are without question some of the most challenging times facing the MBTA, and I am looking forward to being a strong voice on behalf of Quincy and all the T communities," Koch said. "Public transportation is an absolutely vital service that so many people count on a daily basis, and the next several months will be critical toward determining its long-term future in the Commonwealth."

"It's the Advisory Board's role to be the voice of the cities and towns, and that voice is going to be extremely important in the coming weeks," he said.

Koch noted that Quincy is one of a few cities to host every mode of transportation offered by the MBTA — bus, subway, commuter rail, and ferry — putting it in a unique position to help shape its future.

After Koch formally took the gavel of the Advisory Board, MBTA administrators provided the board with an outline of the proposed fare increases and service reductions that would have a dramatic effect across the T system.

Koch said he would be working in the coming months with other Advisory Board members on the board's position on the T's proposal, scheduling meetings in the coming months after the T hosts a number of public meetings on its own relative to its financial plans.

Proposed Nursing Home Draws Support, Concerns

and come into our property. Trust me when I say it's a lake."

Ed Fleming, the attorney representing South Cove during the review process, assured DiCesare that those concerns would be looked at during an independent examination of the proposal. "That's one aspect that will probably be looked at closer than anything else," he said.

Traffic on Washington Street was another hot topic at the meeting. "You've got people barreling [through] from Hingham and Weymouth, they're coming up here just trying to get through," said Steve Perdios of Ruggles Street. "They don't care how fast they have to go because it's not their neighborhood — this our neighborhood."

Both Perdios and John Hassan, who owns the dealership, suggested marking Washington Street as one-lane in the area to help slow down traffic. "If you put the white line there so that you make it a one-lane road, parking on the street would be an asset rather than a detriment because you'd slow everything down," Hassan said. "I would encourage parking on the street because [traffic] slows down when you've got cars parked."

In response to concerns over traffic, Fleming said the nursing home would draw fewer vehicles than other businesses that could move there. "A majority of the site is business 'B' zoning which allows lots of commercial-type uses," he said. "I think the nursing home use is actually the lowest impact on traffic."

Another concern mentioned was South Cove's non-profit status. Because it is a non-profit, it would be exempt from paying the property taxes Hassan Motors currently pays. But Laforest said the value of having the nursing would make-up for losing those taxes.

"It does take the facility off of the tax roles," Laforest said at the meeting. "But I believe the investment value they're bringing into the city should be calculated too. What we've found, if you look upon the Southern Artery corridor, is if one business starts making improvements it's like a domino effect."

She also noted that Quincy Medical Center is going onto the tax roles after being bought by a for-profit company. "It's pretty cyclical what's in and what's off [the tax role]," Laforest said. "These are services that the community needs, and that's the value they give."

In addition, South Cove could volunteer to pay a set amount to the city each year under the Payment In Lieu of Taxes (PILOT) program. The MWRA, for example, already pays the city under the PILOT program according to Laforest.

The city's planning board will hear the proposal at their Wednesday meeting. South Cove will also need approval from the state before moving ahead with construction, which they hope to commence by year's end.

or not they will renew their membership.

"Many businesses are looking at what the return will be on their investment. We are trying to add to that return," said Rizzo. "We want to ensure that there is no question when they come to renew."

The retention rate since they formed is around 85 percent, said Vice President and Director of Tourism Donna Mavromates.

"We have been getting better in our retention rate, because we have been more aggressive with the follow-up," Mavromates said. "We want to make sure the benefits of renewing (the membership) outweigh not renewing."

The main reasons for businesses not renewing their membership is because the business closed, they moved, or cut-backs due to the economy. When a business leaves because of cut backs, the chamber finds the business returning the following year.

Mavromates said that the chamber welcomes all businesses, even those located outside Quincy.

"We welcome outside businesses," said Mavromates. "We have businesses that want to take advantage of the Quincy market."

Quincy Chamber of Commerce teamed up with the Milton Chamber last year for a number of reasons to benefit them both.

"Milton's chambers is all volunteers," said Mavromates. "From a marketing and administrative standpoint it was a good collaboration. It has been pretty equitable between the two chambers."

Rizzo added that many residents of Quincy, and Milton, are unaware of the dividing line between the two, and that the collaboration has allowed both chambers to gain more knowledge on different areas.

The chamber also offers affiliated programs membership opportunities, which are available for an additional fee, to businesses that fall into two categories: restaurants, and health, beauty and wellness.

"We found that there were two industries that stuck out with high numbers," said

Mavromates. "So we designed to memberships in a way of bringing them together."

The Quincy Restaurant League Membership provides a forum for businesses in the food industry. It offers the business to promote and advertise through multiple venues such as the Dine & Save program, the Quincy Catering Guide, tastequincy.com, ad through a restaurant week held each year.

The Quincy Health, Beauty & Wellness league creates more visibility for businesses that are in the health, beauty, and wellness industry. The membership allows businesses to go to a separate website to promote and discuss with other business owners in the same category. They also hold a healthy work place challenge each year.

In addition to working with the businesses of Quincy the chambers also work in other partnerships with Quincy, and they also continue to work with Quincy 2000 and Discover Quincy.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Jan. 2, at approximately 7 p.m., Quincy Police Drug Unit Detectives were in the area of Dunkin' Donuts on Centre Street, conducting surveillance due to the high number of arrests for both the possession and distribution of drugs in the area.

At this time, Detective Barkas observed a vehicle traveling southbound on Liberty Street drive around the block and end up on Columbia Road. The detectives knew from training and experience that drug dealers will often conduct counter-surveillance prior to consummating a drug deal.

LT. DAN MINTON

The vehicle turned right into the rear parking lot of a multi-unit apartment building on Centre Street, which is known for past drug related arrests and seizures of drugs. The male driver (suspect #1) and sole occupant of the vehicle parked and shut off the headlights. Within a few minutes, Detective O'Brien observed another male (suspect #2) enter the front passenger seat and exit within 30 seconds. Detective O'Brien observed suspect #2 enter the rear door of the apartment complex and go into apartment #b. Suspect #1 then drove off, followed by the Detectives, who awaited word from Detective O'Brien as he looked for suspect #2 in the apartment complex.

Detective Duran joined Detective O'Brien inside the building, where they knocked on suspect #2's door. When the suspect opened the door, the Detectives identified themselves and asked to come inside the apartment. Suspect #2 allowed them to come in. Detective O'Brien advised suspect #2 of his Miranda rights to which he stated he understood and was willing to answer questions.

Detective O'Brien informed suspect #2 of their observations and asked him where the drugs were. The suspect reached into his shirt pocket and hand Detective O'Brien a plastic corner bag containing a white powder substance believed to be cocaine. The suspect admitted that the substance was cocaine and stated that he just purchased it from a male in a vehicle. At this time, Detective O'Brien contacted the other Detectives who were following suspect #1 to confirm that a drug deal had occurred.

The suspect said he paid $40 for the bag of cocaine and had been buying from the same dealer for approximately 3 months by calling him at a specified telephone number. Suspect #2 said that suspect #1 carries the drugs in his mouth and removes it at the time of the sale. Suspect #2, due to his cooperation, was told that he would not be arrested but could still face criminal complaints. Detectives Barkas, Keenan, Ryan and Coen stopped suspect #1 in his vehicle on Copeland Street. As they approached the vehicle, they could see suspect #1 making swallowing actions with his mouth closed.

Detective Coen entered the vehicle and attempted to prevent the suspect from destroying evidence and/or causing harm to himself. When instructed to open his mouth, the suspect refused and continued to make swallowing motions and then eventually opened his mouth and stuck out his tongue. Detectives Keenan and Ryan led suspect #1 from the vehicle and placed him in handcuffs. Suspect #1, a 61 year old Quincy resident, was under arrest for Distribution Class B (cocaine).

Inside the suspect vehicle, Detective Barkas located $180 U.S. currency in the middle console. This money was separated into two folds of $140 and $40. Three cellular phones were located inside the vehicle. A total of $212 U.S. currency, three cellular phones and the Honda Accord have been seized pending civil forfeiture. One of the cell phones had suspect #2's phone number in it. The cell phones were submitted into evidence and the vehicle towed.

While writing his report, Detective Coen noted that suspect #1's cell phone continued to receive calls. The Detective answered one call and spoke with a female who identified herself and asked, "Are you still open for business?" When told he was, the female asked if she could get "2 white," referring to two bags of cocaine. She said she had $80 and wanted to meet, so the detective told her to meet him an hour later at a local supermarket, adding that his vehicle was broken down so he would be on foot.

Soon after, the female arrived with a male and approached Detective Duran's undercover vehicle that had the hood in the up position as if the vehicle was broken down. Detective Duran was seated in the

Gen. Sellars Conway's Citizen Of The Year

Brigadier General
THOMAS J. SELLARS

Brigadier General Thomas J. Sellars, Commander of the Massachusetts Army National Guard, was given a daunting task from 2007 to 2011 – to prepare his troops for the battlefields of Iraq. His mission was successful, and he retired from his post on Sept. 11, shortly before the last U.S. soldier returned from the war.

Jack Conway, Realtor has selected General Sellars and the troops he commanded as its 2011 Conway Country Citizen of the Year.

The award will be presented at the firm's annual convention to be held at the Quincy Marriott Hotel Feb. 3.

Chairman Jack Conway, a WWII U.S. Navy Veteran, will recognize Gen. Sellars on a podium flanked by the Brigadier General's personal military flag and a flag that was flown by Captain C.J. Stevens, son of Conway Relocation Director Dawn Stevens, on his Chinook helicopter during battle in Afghanistan.

"The war in Iraq is over, and many members of our Massachusetts National Guard are among the 4,500 U.S. soldiers who will not return home," said Conway in announcing his selection of Gen. Sellars as Citizen of the Year. "We owe a huge debt of gratitude to General Tom Sellars and his troops for their support of our state and our nation."

A Brockton native and graduate of the Stoughton

Public Schools, Tom Sellars joined the National Guard on his 17th birthday in 1974. He was promoted through the enlisted ranks to sergeant and later rose as an officer from second lieutenant to brigadier general. He served as commander of the Joint Force Headquarters of the Massachusetts Army National Guard where he was responsible for more than 8,000 soldiers and airmen.

"I am privileged and honored to have served with the great men and women of the Massachusetts Army National Guard for the last 37 years," said Gen. Sellars at his recent retirement ceremony held on Salem Common. "It is through their dedication and sacrifice that I found the example of selfless service."

Radiator Woes

Q: I've got an old hot-water heating system that pumps water from the boiler to the radiators around my house. I've noticed that some of the radiators heat only halfway: The bottom part heats, but the top part doesn't. Any reason for this? – Jerry in Randolph, Mass.

A: Radiators that don't heat up completely or that feel cooler toward the top may have air trapped in them, a problem that can be resolved pretty quickly by bleeding the air out.

First turn off the thermostat (you don't want the system running while you do this) and let the system cool down for a few minutes. Then start with the radiator that's closest to the boiler. Locate the air vent near the top of the radiator. Being careful to protect your hands from the hot water, open the air vent just one turn using a screwdriver or a radiator key. You should hear air hissing out. As soon as water starts to appear at the vent, close it up. Move to the next affected radiator and repeat the process.

Because so many radiators are showing trapped-air problems, you may have a bigger issue with the heating system. If the problem returns after you bleed the radiators, contact a professional to check out the entire system. Trapped air can cause corrosion inside the pipes, leading to other problems.

HOME TIP: Is your older heating system's pump and motor self-lubricating? Find out – if not, you'll need to add a little oil where the manufacturer's guide indicates. Do this twice a year, in the fall and spring.

scholarship to Boston College. As a freshman at BC he had a two-page photo-spread in Sports Illustrated, two pages ahead of current Celtic and ten-time All Star Ray Allen, whose photo was used for the same article.

But Herren started using drugs that same year. During Friday's assembly Herren told students about his first time using cocaine; he recalled walking into his dorm room and seeing his roommate and a girl using the drug.

"When I saw cocaine I thought of Lenny Bias," Herren said, referring to former Celtic draft pick Len Bias, who overdosed on cocaine the night after Boston selected him with second overall pick in the 1986 draft. "I immediately turned around and I started walking out of my room, and all of a sudden I heard that little voice, that girl that was sitting at my desk say 'Chris, where you going? Come back, it's not going to hurt you.' So I looked at it, I said 'of course it's not going to hurt me.' I walked into the room, grabbed a dollar bill and snorted my first line of cocaine at 18-years old. Three weeks earlier I sat in an assembly listening to a [former NFL player] talk about cocaine and I goofed on him. The next day I got called into the training room to take a drug test which I failed."

Within four months, Herren failed two more tests and was kicked out of school. He played his next three seasons at Fresno State in California. During his junior season with the team, he was sent to rehab after failing a drug test. He could've stopped the drug use then, but he told students he blew that chance.

"For 28 days I had an opportunity to turn my life around," Herren said. "Instead I sat in this facility and looked at people 35, 40-years old talking about their kids, talking about losing all their money, talking about their problems. And I said 'these poor people, I'll never be like that, I have no business being here, get me on the next flight.' I sat there for 28 days, kept my mouth shut. I wasted my time."

Herren spoke for over an hour, pacing back and forth on the stage by himself the entire time. He detailed his career as a professional player — he spent his rookie year in the NBA with the Denver Nuggets, and said he stayed clean because the team's leaders looked out for him. He was then traded to the Celtics, and told the crowd he was on oxycontin during his first start with the team.

He then played overseas after walking away from the Dallas Mavericks' summer league squad. "Every country I went to, I got high in," Herren admitted in front of the students.

Herren was eventually kicked off a Polish team he was on, and flew to Fresno. While there he said he partied and took drugs for days, and wound up being arrested after running into traffic in a failed suicide attempt. He decided then to leave his family and go homeless, but wound-up calling his wife at the urging of an older homeless man.

Herren's story was featured in the ESPN documentary "Unguarded." But he then told the students a story that didn't appear in the film, about how saying "no" to drugs for the first time saved his life.

On the same night he almost went homeless, the football player Herren took drugs with before called and asked if he wanted to do more. "The word no came out of my mouth for the first time in my life and I hung up the phone," Herren said. Hours later the player's wife called, and Herren learned his friend was shot and killed overnight.

Herren continued to use drugs and it wasn't until 2008 that he was able to finally quit, when NBA Hall of Fame guard Chris Mullin paid for his rehab.

Herren's talk brought many in the audience to tears. Paul Bregoli, a new member of the school committee and coach at North Quincy, attended the assemblies at both QHS and NQHS. He said he and others were touched by Herren's story.

"I watched my players at North today," Bregoli said in an interview Friday. "I know at least one of them was wiping back some tears. I asked her afterwards and she said 'yes' and I said 'good for you,' because it made me emotional as well."

Herren also said that parents need to be more proactive when raising their children.

"When you let kids be kids, they can turn out to be me," Herren said after a student asked the former player about his own children. "We had this parent that had this philosophy that as long as they knew where we were, we were good. So we had this little basement, and in this little basement we called it the speakeasy. We'd bring everyone down and we'd party all-night, and the mother would be like 'no one leave, you guys are good here, you're safe here.' All that did for me, and all that did for my friend was give us more opportunity to get wasted. Thinking back to those speakeasy kids, there were five heroin addicts and three alcoholics; of those eight four are sober."

Bregoli said parents are sometimes hesitant to reach-out to their children. "Parents are often afraid to confront. They don't like conflict with their kids," he said, "and to admit that your kid is doing that is probably a pretty scary thing. [Herren] said something at Quincy High that 'kids will be kids,' well left to their own devices kids will be kids and they make bad choices. It's incumbent upon parents to try and help their kids make good choices. It's not an indictment of parents it's just a fact of life."

Young Q/NQ Girls Team Improving Daily;
Lost To Weymouth, 3-1 Last Thursday

Q/NQ Hockey Skating Forward On The Ice

By CHRIS McDANIEL

Despite a 3-1 loss to Weymouth last Thursday at the Quincy Youth Arena, the Quincy/North Quincy girls hockey team continued to show improvement with several players shining bright.

One of those bright spots was sophomore first-year goalie Natalie O'Donovan (Quincy). O'Donovan was a forward to start the season but made the change to goaltender when the team needed someone to play between the pipes. The position isn't completely unfamiliar to O'Donovan - she also is a soccer goalie for the Presidents.

When asked what improvements she could make at the position, O'Donovan responded, "Using my stick right and going down more on my pads."

"It's natural for her not to use the stick and use her legs instead," Quincy/North Quincy head coach Dan McLean said about O'Donovan.

O'Donovan's brightest moment against Weymouth was midway through the second period during Q/NQ's first penalty kill. A few glove saves, some smart coverage of the puck and breaking up centering passes by her allowed Q/NQ to successfully kill a penalty and stay in the game.

"She just needs more time to improve," said a supportive McLean.

O'Donovan is not on the level of an all-league goalie quite yet, but she did make some nice saves, especially with her glove and pads and every period her play improved. She allowed two goals in the first, one in the second and none in the third.

"Natalie did a fine job out there, and she's a good athlete," continued McLean before citing her quietness as something O'Donovan needs to improve on before adding, "She's learning to be a better communicator."

O'Donovan also pointed out that it's important for her to communicate to her teammates about the positions of opponents' forwards and other situations like icing.

Before the start of the game, McLean noted that the contest was rematch of an earlier 6-2 loss to the Wildcats played on Dec. 15. He had hoped that Weymouth would come out flat with the big key of the game being that Q/NQ needed to jump out to a fast start.

The fast start didn't happen.

Q/NQ fell down 2-0 in the first ten minutes of the game but never threw in the towel. Both of Weymouth's first two goals came off Q/NQ turnovers that led to point blank shots, which gave their inexperienced goaltender little chance to stop the puck.

"What we lack in talent, we need to make up for with our intelligence," said McLean.

Freshman defenseman Madison Halley (North Quincy) responded in the second period by scoring Q/NQ's first and only goal of the game three minutes and 24 seconds into the frame. It came off a face-off win, which was the one of the advantages Q/NQ had over Weymouth in the game. But the Wildcats answered later in the period with a goal to make the score 3-1.

Q/NQ appeared to make it 3-2 with less than six minutes left in the game with a tip-in goal in front of a crowded Weymouth net, but the goal was called off due to an early whistle. It was the third early whistle of the game, the first two favoring Q/NQ. Both of those whistles came on attempted cover-ups by O'Donovan and both times, right as the whistle blew, it was clear that the puck was still in play.

Q/NQ battled until the final seconds after killing another power play and senior forward Christina Walsh (Quincy) was impressive with her effort and aggressiveness in the closing seconds.

"I liked Walsh's aggressiveness on the last penalty kill," said McLean.

"I think the game can be overwhelming at times," continued McLean. "Every shift is a new game. We can't be sporadic with our effort. It's okay to go all-out for 30-40 seconds then sit and rest."

SOPHOMORE GOALIE NATALIE O'DONOVAN gets ready to make a save during last week's game versus Weymouth at the Quincy Youth Arena. O'Donovan and Q/NQ lost 3-2, but the team is improving each day. The Q/NQ roster consists of players from both Quincy High and North Quincy High. Dan McLean coaches the team.

In the loss, Q/NQ looked strong on two penalty kills and showed they have plenty of talented defensemen. Senior defender Presley McLaughlin (North Quincy) skated extremely well with the puck and showed a great arsenal of shifty moves that opened her up for a few good shots at the net.

"We have a lot of work to do, but it's still early," said McLean.

Team Overview

The Quincy-North Quincy team is a 19-player roster. McLean has his pick of skaters from all four classes, combining talent from Quincy and North Quincy High.

Presley McLaughlin of North Quincy leads the senior class. McLaughlin is the team's top defender and currently leads Q/

NQ with three points (two goals, assist). Joining her are senior forwards Colleen Cox (North Quincy), Caroline Kiley (North Quincy), Christina Walsh (Quincy) and Julia Regan (Quincy).

Junior forward Danielle Mullaney (North Quincy) has produced a goal and two assists while forward Kennedy Harding (North Quincy) has already potted two goals. Forward Brianna Mullaney (North Quincy) has added one goal.

Forwards Loren Miller (North Quincy) and Leah Ryan (North Quincy) and defensemen Megan White (North Quincy) and Katie White (North Quincy) round out the junior class.

Sophomore Natalie O'Donovan (Quincy) has settled in as the team's primary goaltender while defenseman Erin McDonough (North Quincy) has given Q/NQ scoring from the back end with one goal.

The freshman class is headed by defenseman Madison Halley (North Quincy). Defensemen Kellie Donahue (Quincy) and Rebecca Mahan (Quincy) give Q/NQ a strong core moving forward in front of O'Donovan. Forward Julia Donovan provides depth up front.

Q/NQ played at Westwood on Saturday and hosted Patriot League foe Scituate on Wednesday. On Jan. 16, the team is scheduled to play Sandwich at 11:40 a.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Scituate Dominates Quincy In Clash Of Patriot League Powers; Rematch Set For Feb. 7

Presidents Sunk By Sailors, 61-26

By SEAN BRENNAN

The pre-game build up before last Friday's Quincy and Scituate girls basketball game felt like that of a tournament game. The Presidents and Sailors had begun the day as the two best teams in the Patriot League this season and the excitement in the Munroe McLean gymnasium at Quincy High reflected that as a large home crowd came out to watch the Presidents try to improve to a impressive 7-1 overall.

But when the final whistle blew, it was Scituate who had staked its claim, authoritatively, as the team to beat this winter.

By using their significant height advantage and an aggressive approach on offense, the Sailors routed the Presidents 61-26 and, in the process sent a message to the rest of the Patriot League that winning a league championship will now be going straight through Sailor country.

Scituate benefited greatly from a difficult shooting night by Quincy. In the first half, the Presidents had equal opportunity to keep things close, but missed layups, jumpers and free throws hurt them. The only silver lining in the game's first sixteen minutes was the tenacious defense supplied by senior forwards Kiley McDonald and Caity Lowry.

It just wasn't enough.

The Sailors led 14-6 after one, 27-11 at halftime and 47-26 after three quarters. Take a close look at the final score (61-26): Quincy was held scoreless in the game's final eight minutes.

Scituate improved to 5-0 overall with the surprising blowout win.

"(Scituate) is a good defensive team and they consistently come at you on offense," said Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch. "We tried to battle them early but we had a really hard time making shots tonight."

"We didn't make a lot of turnovers, which was something we were nervous about going in," Bretsch continued, "but we were just awful from the field. We couldn't buy a bucket."

Scituate dictated pace, quickly. The Sailors roared out to an 11-4 first quarter lead after senior Megan Otto (13 points, eight rebounds) converted on a driving layup through the paint. Quincy's McDonald (12 points) sliced it back to 11-6 with a minute remaining but Scituate's Kelly Martin (16 points, six assists), working in transition, got to the bucket, converted and was fouled. Her free throw pushed the lead to 14-6 after one.

The Sailors expanded the lead in the second. McDonald's short jumper brought Quincy to within six points - the closest they would get the rest of the way - at 14-8 but Otto and senior center Shannon Brady (11 points, 16 boards) put the Sailors back up 20-8. McDonald scored three more points in the quarter but the score at halftime was 27-11.

"I was happy with the defense in the first half," said Bretsch about his team's ability to keep things relatively close despite a lack of offense. "I thought Caity Lowry was amazing defensively tonight and that is hard when you are guarding a player like Otto. If we could have made some baskets we could have had some fun. That was a tough way to start the second half."

Things did not get any better in the third quarter. Baskets from Sarah Hoffman and Brady expanded the Scituate lead to 31-11 before Lowry (three points) finally found open space amongst the Sailors' frontcourt for a bucket (31-13). A three-point play by McDonald breathed some life into the gymnasium and when senior Juli Tomer (three points) buried a deep 3-pointer to get Quincy to within 35-21 the home crowd erupted.

The good times were short-lived. Martin exploded for nine late third quarter points to silence the crowd and end any chance the Presidents had at a comeback.

"That was a big shot by Juli," Bretsch said about his senior guard's 3-pointer before adding, "but Martin is relentless. She is a great player and you could see her come to life in the second half by pushing the tempo and turning it up defensively. She is the heart and soul over there."

Otto began the final period with a beautiful elbow jumper

Scituate outscored Quincy 14-0 during the game's final eight minutes.

The loss was disappointing for Quincy. But the early returns have been mainly positive. If anything, this type of loss should give the Presidents extra motivation to work on what needs fixing.

"We knew that this was going to be a tough one," Bretsch noted. "We are certainly looking forward to having another shot at them. But we have some work to do."

Quincy (6-2 overall) travels to Scituate on Feb. 7. The Presidents got back into Patriot League action on Tuesday when the team traveled to Whitman-Hanson. A road game at Pembroke is scheduled for Friday. After that game, Quincy gets a week off to prepare for Hingham at home on Jan. 20.

Coaches vs. Cancer Night

The final result was not what Quincy was hoping for but there was a ray of positivity at Quincy High despite the loss.

Both Quincy and Scituate took part in the Coaches vs. Cancer fundraiser with money raised at the game through raffles and donations going to benefit the American Cancer Society's work to save lives from the deadly disease.

The teams wore pink shoelaces, pink headbands and pink warm-up shirts in a sign of solidarity.

Local High School Roundup

The North Quincy boys' basketball team continued its hot start to the 2012 season with a 67-50 victory over Patriot League foe Hingham High last Friday at NQHS.

High-scorer Marquis McClendon led the Red Raiders. The junior small forward finished with 15 points and along with junior off-guard Dan Gould (14 points) helped North Quincy jump out to a 24-17 first quarter lead.

Senior power forward Paul Cuniff added 13 points and junior point guard Pat Gould made eight-of-nine free throws down the stretch to keep the Harbor-men at bay. Senior forward Ryan Evans chipped in four points.

The win pushes North Quincy's overall record to 6-1. The Red Raiders got back into league play on Tuesday at Middleboro. On Friday, the team hosts Duxbury High at 6:30 p.m. in a clash between two of the best teams in the Patriot League (read Chris McDaniels' game story in next week's Quincy Sun).

Monday to play a 1:30 p.m. matinee.

Quincy Hockey

The young Presidents continue to work hard on the ice, and despite the wins not adding up, the program is making progress.

On Monday, Quincy battled nonleague Brookline tooth-and-nail, outshooting the Warriors 52-15. However, somehow Quincy ended up losing, 2-1. The Warriors scored their first goal on the man advantage and their second on a 5-on-3 power play.

Freshman sniper Pat Freeman had bad luck as he rung a blast off the post on a 5-on-3 and also was robbed on a breakaway.

Quincy lost to Patriot League opponent Whitman-Hanson, 3-1, on Saturday.

The Presidents take a 1-7 record into today's game at Scituate. Quincy hosts Pembroke on Saturday at the QYA at 7:50 p.m.

On a positive note, the Quincy jayvee team has nailed off two wins in its last three games. The jayvees defeated Norwell 6-1 and Whitman-Hanson 5-1. The future looks bright.

Bob Giordano Joins 200-Win Club

By SEAN BRENNAN

If asked, any successful coach will tell you that winning games is the direct result of having players who are not just talented but who are also willing to listen and do whatever it takes to improve incrementally on a daily basis.

Because, coaches who thrust themselves into the spotlight, are usually the ones who end up losing not only games but also the team and the players they are expected to teach.

Bob Giordano, head coach for The Woodward School for Girls basketball program, is the type of coach who understands that concept.

The Squantum native, who holds the title of head coach of The Woodward School for Girls' soccer, basketball and softball teams, as well as being the school's Athletic Director and Dean of Students, won his 200th career game behind the bench for the Wildcats' basketball team on Monday following a 45-5 victory over the Cambridge School of Weston at the Quincy Armory.

He accomplished the feat in his 16th year. But he knows as well as anyone that the credit for this achievement goes to every player who has ever donned a Woodward uniform.

"It is not about me (reaching 200 wins)," he said. "It is about the kids. They have a certain responsibility at this school and they know through the culture that they represent the school. These girls go over and above and they play for pride. Once a coach learns it is about the kids, they become a better coach."

"I learned years ago that I am not the show," he continued. "Let's face it, longevity is a big thing to get that number of wins and you have to at least have some talented players, but you need to have cohesive players as well. To never have a losing season in 15 years means that everybody has to buy into the team theory."

For 15 years Giordano's teams have done just that. Woodward has never had a losing season during his tenure. The Wildcats have been remarkably consistent and have captured eight Independent Girls Conference (IGC) championships while finishing undefeated twice.

"We've had great success here and we have never had a losing season. The glass is half full; we have always had a winning season," Giordano noted.

The successful run began when Giordano was asked to come in and takeover the underachieving basketball and softball programs following years of coaching at North Quincy. It was a personal decision that has changed the course of not only his coaching career but his personal life as well.

"I was coaching varsity softball at North Quincy High School and I was also coaching outside basketball programs," he said. "When I left North Quincy, Woodward asked if I would come over and coach basketball and softball because they were hurting. My second year they asked if I'd be the Athletic Director, so I went from coaching two sports to AD to the Dean of Discipline and now to the Dean of Students."

"I am still the AD and I am still coaching the three sports," he added.

The decision to join the Woodward family has been more than he could have ever expected.

"It has been great here," Giordano said about his time at the all-girls private school in Quincy Center. "I believe in the school, I love the school. It is like a family here. The best part about coaching is that the girls know that they have a certain responsibility at this school. The athletes are representing their school and Woodward's remarkable history and tradition."

Before the season is over, this year's Wildcats team should continue to add to Giordano's career win total. Woodward is off to an impressive 8-0 start, which includes victories over Brimmer & May (49-23), Falmouth Academy (49-44), Wheeler (47-31), Cambridge School of Weston (37-7), Chapel Hill (44-17), Landmark (43-26), Gann (45-35) and Cambridge School of Weston, again (45-5).

At press time, the Wildcats were tied for first-place with the Montrose School in the IGC and had their sights set on making some noise in the upcoming IGC tournament with a strong shot of advancing into the New England Class E (Small School) Championships.

Leading the way has been sophomore forward Ava Small. Small scored 31 points and pulled down 15 rebounds against Gann. She has already scored 874 points for her career. Other starters include seniors Bryn Coulsey, Delilah Goncalves, Antoinette Jean-Louis and Quincy native Mariana Veneris.

"Ava started for me as a seventh grader and she is our best offensive rebounder with a great nose for the ball," said Giordano about his young star.

"Bryn is an impact player while Toni (Jean-Louis) is among the league leaders in rebounding. We have a good nucleus with four seniors and a sophomore starting," explained Giordano. "The team strength is that the seniors have good mental makeup and they all want to win this year. Their leadership and their ability to blend with the younger kids have helped the development of this team."

The junior class includes Imani Graham, Andreyanua Jean-Louis and Queenette Odum while the sophomore core includes Small as well as Andrea Barros, Traci Litthcut and Tatiana Rivera.

Eighth-grader Cassie Wesner, seventh-grader Meagan Donovan and sixth-grader Cheyenne Taylor represent the new wave of talent coming up the ranks.

"My job (as head coach) is to make the soup good," Giordano noted about the mix of young and old on his current roster. "I have to get the most out of every kid."

A 200-64 overall record proves that Bob Giordano knows his way around the (basketball) kitchen.

Girls Swimming Sweep Cohasset and Scituate

The Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving team defeated visiting Cohasset, 54-37, and Scituate, 55-46, in a tri-meet at the Lincoln Hancock Pool on Tuesday, Jan. 3. After closing to within four points with one race to go, the QNQ boys fell by a score of 43-36 to Cohasset and 56-33 to Scituate.

Seven points separated QNQ and Scituate girls entering the final event which saw the QNQ 400-yard freestyle relay unit of freshman Sabrina Rauch (QHS), sophomore Lauren Thorne (NQ), freshman Evelyn Scuzzarella (NQ), and junior Kat O'Connor (NQ) clinch the dual meet victory with a time of 4:22.97, nearly five seconds better than the nearest competitors.

Kat O'Connor and Sabrina Rauch each notched a pair of individual wins in addition to one other relay victory. O'Connor swam 2:18.65 in the 200-yard freestyle and finished at 1:01.03 in half the distance. Rauch clocked 2:32.10 and 1:07.97 in the 200-yard individual medley and 100-yard butterfly events, respectively.

Sophomore Sarah Tran (NQ) completed a solid performance by contributing to the meet-winning 200-yard freestyle relay and with her own second place time of 29.60, bolstering Olivia Goldson's (QHS) meet best 50-yard freestyle effort. Senior captain Taryn Urbanus (QHS) won the one-meter diving event amassing 256.3 points.

Down by as many as 12 points, the QNQ boys decreased the deficit to four after senior Sean Lerkvikarn (NQ) and senior captain Phil Zeng (NQ) finished first (1:22.62) and second (1:31.12), respectively in the 100-yard breaststroke. But Cohasset was not done as the visitors punctuated the competition with its meet-winning effort of 4:45.16 in the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Sophomore Elio Daci touched the wall first in the 100-yard backstroke with his effort of 1:09.72, only two seconds off the Quincy record for that event. The captain also prevailed in the 200-yard freestyle clocking 2:18.75. Fellow underclassman, Mike Mullaney, a freshman, had impressive swims in the 50-yard freestyle (31.62) and 100-yard freestyle (1:13.66).

Senior Cyril Caparanga (NQ) earned special recognition from his coach after completing the grueling 500-yard freestyle event (9:14.52).

QNG Girls Down Pembroke, 93-74

The Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving team earned the top spot in 11 of 12 events en route to a 93-74 victory over visiting Pembroke, Thursday, Jan. 5 at the Lincoln Hancock Pool.

The QNQ boys fell 73-50 to the Titans.

In three events, including the 200-yard freestyle, 200-yard individual medley, and 100-yard backstroke, the QNQ girls finished one-two-three. In the 200 free, senior captain Samantha Enbar-Salo (NQ), sophomore Lauren Thorne (NQ), and freshman Meg Caggiano (QHS) clocked 2:37.50, 2:43.94, and 3:02.85, respectively.

Tran (NQ) swam 2:47.84, 2:54.09, and 3:01.91, respectively to complete QNQ's dominance.

Tran placed second in the 100-yard backstroke (1:26.12) while Carolyn Schwartz was first with a time of 1:23.88, and junior Rose Bennett finished the QNQ sweep clocking 1:27.22. Freshman Sabrina Rauch garnered gold in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle events, swimming 27.94 and 1:00.40, respectively. Enbar-Salo also won the 500-yard freestyle (7:23.59) while fellow senior captain Taryn Urbanus earned the one-meter diving win with 205.80 points.

For the boys, sophomore captain Elio Daci picked up a pair of victories, winning the 200-yard freestyle (2:21.06) and 100-yard backstroke (1:07.91).

NQHS Honor Society Offering Free Snow Shoveling

30 Students Ready To Help When (If?)... It Snows

By EMILY TAFT

North Quincy High School's National Honor Society students are hoping for snow. The 30-student group is offering free snow shoveling to anyone who needs it this winter season.

"It feels good when we are giving service to others," said Philip Zeng, president of North Quincy National Honor Society. "If it doesn't snow then we at least extended the opportunity to the community, and Quincy needs that support right now."

National Honor Society is an organization that recognizes outstanding high school and middle school students. They honor those students who have demonstrated excellence in the areas of scholarship, leadership, service, and character.

National Honor Society students are required not only to do service as a group, but also as individuals. Seniors are required to put in 25 volunteer hours on their own, and in the summer of their junior year going into their senior year, they are required to put in 30 hours. Along with the volunteer requirements the students who are selected to be in NHS also have to meet the academic requirements to participate.

"Everyone has a different experience when they volunteer," said Zeng. "You have to stay participating in the community and keep up with your grades, it's sometimes a difficult thing."

The group meets every two weeks to discuss ideas for their next projects that will help the Quincy community. So far as a group they have done caroling during the holidays, a food drive, and volunteered at the Quincy Crisis Center. They will continue to come up with ideas and volunteer up until the seniors graduate.

The National Honor Society does an average of two to three service projects throughout the school year. This year's group of students, according to the North Quincy High School's National Honor Society Advisor Cara Pekarcik, is going above and beyond what is required of them.

"These kids are doing a great job with the community service part of it," said Pekarcik. "They understand the value of helping and recognize that those who don't have everything are the ones that need the most help."

Pekarcik, who has been an advisor for four years, said that this is the first time

AT YOUR (SNOW) SERVICE - The 30 members of the National Honor Society at North Quincy High School are hoping for snow this winter to put their free shoveling services to good use. The 30 members include; Omar Abo-Sido, Neil Banoey, Anna Canavan, Michael Chan, Anthony Chen, Jonathan Chin, Debby Chiu, Christina Do, Samantha Enbar-Salo, Ryan Evans, Jia Min (Amy) Gao, Tammy Huang, Xiuwen (Wendy) a group has come up with the snow shoveling idea.

"Every year I encourage the group to come up with different service project ideas," said Pekarcik. "I think it is ironic that we have yet to get any snow, but it is something great they are offering the community."

Zeng said that they are just now starting to get the word out that they are offering free snow shoveling services, and they are still trying to work out the kinks when it comes to how many people they are going to be able to help. Zeng said that they hope to work from morning until night on school snow days and if school isn't cancelled, he said the group plans on shoveling after school if it is needed.

On top of hoping for snow so they can help the

Quincy community, Zeng said they have also started a book drive at the school. The drive, which runs now through the beginning of February, was something that another member suggested after volunteering at Horizons for Homeless Children this past summer.

"We just want to see how many books we can raise until the beginning of February," said Zeng. "I believe that when you find something you want to be a part of you leave it better than the way you found it. That's what we hope to do with this book drive."

According to Pekarcik the NHS held a book drive for a statewide facility, but this years group took it upon themselves to find a local organization that they could benefit.

Zeng said they hope to get the free snow-shoveling going as soon as the first snowflake hits the ground.

For more information on free snow shoveling, or to donate books, contact Philip Zeng at ph_zeng7@gmail.com or by phone 857-526-6654.

in local school buildings, including North Quincy High School.

Tuesdays - when they fall on Election Day - are early dismissal days at all the city's schools. The shortened school day (morning dismissal) eases some of the potential foot and traffic "congestion" of voters heading to the polls and students leaving school in the afternoon.

As a result, officials are expected to re-examine the school calendar in light of the Sept. 6 primary.

School Committee Vice

Chair Barbara Isola said the calendar for next school year would be introduced at Wednesday's committee meeting at Broad Meadows. From there it will go to the policy subcommittee, where any possible changes would be made.

Isola said she hasn't taken position on the issue yet. "I really want to take a look, use the process to gather information," she said in a phone interview.

Having polling places at schools has always been an issue for some parents, according to City Clerk Joe Shea, Quincy's top election official. "It's a touchy subject. Some parents don't want them there," he said.

Isola also noted that the school committee has discussed the issue in past meetings. "That's always been something we've looked at," she said.

Shea plans on announcing some changes to polling places in the coming weeks, but said it wouldn't be feasible to leave all the schools. "It would be very hard to leave the schools," he said. "It's a tradition, some people are used to voting at schools."

Shea wasn't thrilled with the move to Sept. 6 because he and other clerks weren't told about the switch until it was too late. But since it's a state decision, Shea's hands are tied.

"By the time the clerks association found out it was practically on the governor's desk," Shea said. "We'll make it work, but the clerks association opposed this."

Turnout for the primary in September could reach 50 percent depending on how competitive the state races are, according to Shea. He also said turnout for November's general election could surpass 70 percent because of the Presidential race.

New Year's Resolution: Lose Weight, Not Money

Questions To Ask Before Joining A Gym

Losing weight is one of the most common New Year's resolutions after the gluttony of the holiday season.

If you're pledging to lose some pounds this year by joining a gym, Better Business Bureau recommends asking 10 questions before signing on the dotted line.

Each New Year millions of consumers crowd into gyms armed with willpower and personal goals toward healthier, more active lifestyles. While it's exciting to gear up towards a goal, it's also important to treat this decision like any other major purchase. To date, BBB has received more than 6,600 complaints against gyms ranging everywhere from billing and collection issues to overall contract issues.

Joining a health club can be a major purchase, so first check out www.bbb.org/search to see how your club rates. BBB also recommends asking the gym and yourself the following questions before signing up for a membership:

Five questions to ask the gym:

What are the terms of

Prevent The Spread Of Flu

Cleaning experts at The Maids recommend the following 10 tips to stop the flu virus from invading homes:

1. Wash hands regularly in warm soapy water. For quick clean-up, use antibacterial hand sanitizer. Make an effort not to touch your mouth or nose without first washing your hands.

2. Wear rubber gloves when cleaning household items to protect yourself. By wearing gloves, you will be less likely to touch your eyes, nose or mouth, which are havens for the flu virus.

3. Spray disinfecting spray on a cloth, wipe toys, doorknobs, appliance handles, keyboards, remote controls, light switches, phones and facial tissue box covers. Viruses can live up to 48 hours on hard surfaces.

4. Wash items like towels and bedding in hot water with soap if someone has been sick in the home. Be sure not to share these items until they are thoroughly cleaned.

5. Change vacuum bags any introductory offers? Gyms often use special introductory offers to lure in new members. Just make sure you understand the terms and what the price will be once the introductory period is over.

Will my membership renew automatically? Many times people who joined a gym didn't realize that their contract would renew automatically and that they would have to take specific steps to cancel their contract.

How can I get out of my contract? Getting out of a gym contract isn't always as easy as getting into one, so make sure you understand what steps you would need to take to cancel your membership.

What happens if I move? Gyms have any number of different policies when it comes to how moving will affect your membership. It might depend on how far away you're moving and if they have other locations nearby.

What happens if you go out of business? Ask the gym to explain what will happen to your money if they suddenly go out of business.

Five questions to ask yourself when looking at potential gyms/health clubs:

What are my fitness goals? Determining your fitness goals in advance will help you select a facility that is most appropriate for you. If you have a serious health condition, consult with a medical professional when setting your fitness goals.

Is this location convenient? If the gym is across town, you'll be less likely to work out. Choose a fitness club that is convenient to work or home so the location is not a deterrent to getting exercise.

Can I really afford this every month? Monthly gym fees add up and, after any introductory periods are over, the price could jump higher than your budget can handle. Do the math before you join and make sure you can afford a gym membership.

Am I feeling pressured to join? Do not give in to high-pressure sales tactics to join right away. A reputable gym will give you enough time to read the contract thoroughly, tour the facilities, and make an informed decision.

Did I get everything in writing? Read the contract carefully and make sure that all verbal promises made by the salesperson are in writing. What matters is the document you sign, so don't just take a salesperson's word for it.

Study: How To Stick To Weight Loss Resolutions

Could a string around your finger help with weight loss?

For those searching for a better way to stick to 2012 weight loss resolutions, the answer may be simple... tie a string around your finger.

The better your memory and other thinking skills, the better your chances of losing weight and keeping it off.

According to a new study led by Dr. John Gunstad, associate professor of psychology at Kent State University, memory and other mental abilities clearly influence the amount of weight people lose.

"The results of our latest study* indicate that better performance on tests of memory and executive function is linked to greater weight loss in persons who have weight loss surgery," said Dr. Gunstad. "We believe this effect comes from a better ability to stick to the diet and exercise habits that promote weight loss. But, these findings should not be misinterpreted to indicate that cognitive impairment automatically leads to negative outcomes. Instead, it might encourage cognitive screening to help identify those people who might benefit from additional support to help them reach their weight loss goals."

In short, if you plan to lose weight and keep the pounds at bay, you need a plan and helpful reminders to stay on track. After talking with your doctor to identify the best weight loss plan for you, using strategies such as planning your meals well in advance or using alerts on your smartphone might make a big difference.

"Some people appear to have a better ability than others to keep themselves on task," said Dr. Gunstad, "fortunately, a little planning can help those of us that have a harder time doing so still achieve our weight loss goals."

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ARE YOU AMONG THE MISSING?

It is estimated that about 46 percent of Americans over the age of 65 are missing six or more teeth. This is a problem because, aside from leaving unsightly gaps, missing teeth compromise chewing ability. Equally important, missing teeth tend to throw the bite off balance, which leads to malocclusion ("bad bite") and increased likelihood of damage occurring to the remaining teeth. Malocclusion also increases the prospect of gum disease and may be a contributing factor to temporomandibular joint (TMJ) syndrome. Beyond these effects, there is a serious potential for misalignments or remaining teeth due to lack of support and restraint from missing teeth. These are all good reasons to see the dentist immediately after losing a tooth.

Today's column has been brought to you as a public service. We deliver a high level of quality dental care. Our recommendations for dental treatment are always in the best interest of the patient. Chiropractor

Much of the bodywork performed by the chiropractor centers around an "adjustment" (or "spinal manipulation"), which involves moving a joint back into its usual range of motion but not beyond the point that the joint was anatomically designed to move. To pinpoint the exact place in the vertebrae needing adjustment, the chiropractor uses examining procedures such as motion palpation (diagnostic touch) to detect misalignments of spinal bones. Unless corrected, this abnormal positioning or functioning of the spinal joints may lead to irritated nerves and related problems. To relieve stress on irritated nerves, the chiropractor treats the patient with vertebral adjustments in an effort to put misplaced areas of the spine back into alignment to restore the flow of nerve energy.

At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are committed to health and want to eliminate sickness, pain and suffering through a healthy balanced lifestyle, wellness education, and natural alternative health care. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Chiropractic treatment is predicated on the belief that a body in balance and without internal interference has the inherent ability to heal itself.

Are Your Medications Right For You?

Are you taking a PIM? That's a Potentially Inappropriate Medication. New research at Cornell University revealed that 38 percent of seniors getting home health care are taking medications that aren't effective or safe, or aren't appropriate for seniors.

The study, reported in the Journal of General Internal Medicine, says that those who receive home care are three times more likely to be prescribed an inappropriate medication. Being in a nursing home can result in 50 percent of patients getting at least one PIM.

Many of us take multiple medications (the average is 11) prescribed by a number of doctors, and therein can lie the problem if someone isn't keeping an eye on possible drug interactions. If a patient is taking 15 or more different medications, the risk is five times higher that one of those is inappropriate.

The risk seems to drop the most for those who actually go in to see the doctor.

The suggested resolution to the problem is to add a "safety mechanism" in the form of having a medical professional actually come in to check all the medications. (There are 77 medications we shouldn't take, according to the study.)

All of this is a bit mind-boggling. At my local pharmacy, the prescriptions come with a leaflet that tells about possible drug interactions, but before it even gets to the point where patients are handed the bag with their prescription, the pharmacist himself would have piped up and said something. I've even seen him place a call to the doctor's office to verify and warn them of a possible problem.

If you're given a new prescription, ASK about potential interactions with other drugs you take.

Plight Of Education Focus Of Film At Temple Shalom

"Films that Reflect Society's Ills" is the theme of this season's Winter Movie Series of Temple Shalom of Milton, co-sponsored this year by First Congregational Church, 495 Canton Ave., Milton.

The second feature film is "Waiting for Superman" Saturday, Jan. 21st at 7 p.m. The film will be screened in the Great Hall of the church, 495 Canton Ave. (entry at the rear door.)

The public is invited. The building is handicapped accessible.

Public education is under increasing scrutiny, with a drive for metrics and tests to show learning outcomes. Filmmaker Davis Guggenheim reminds us that education "statistics" have names: Anthony, Francisco, Bianca, Daisy, and Emily, whose stories make up the engrossing foundation of "Waiting for Superman."

As he follows a handful of promising kids through a system that inhibits, rather than encourages, academic growth, Guggenheim undertakes an exhaustive review of public education, surveying "drop-out factories" and "academic sinkholes," methodically dissecting the system and its seemingly intractable problems.

Donation for admission is $3 per person, or two for $5. Advance reservations get a free popcorn or bottle of water.

The next film is scheduled Feb. 11.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Our best lessons are sometimes taught to us by our failures. The best opportunities frequently come to us not in the sunny days of success but after fate has given us what first appears to be some very heavy chastisement. Yes, failure can be the most stimulating of all teachers, provided that we are willing to learn.

We like this quotation by Wilferd A. Peterson: "He who hopes to avoid all failure and misfortune is trying to live in a fairyland; the wise man realistically accepts failures as a part of life and builds a philosophy to meet them and make the most of them. . . He learns from the scientist who said, "At best, research is 99% failure and 1% success and the 1% is the only that counts."

Remember, everybody, but everybody, makes mistakes. In order to master your own, put them behind after having learned from them . . .

your goal. Use this time to re-examine your plans and see where you might need to make some significant changes.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some missteps are revealed as the cause of current problems in a personal or professional partnership. Make the necessary adjustments and then move on.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some recently acquired information helps open up a dark part of the past. Resolve to put what you've learned to good use. Travel plans continue to be favored.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Act on your own keen instincts. Your strong Piscean backbone will support you as someone attempts to pressure you into a decision you're not ready to make.

The female uttered, "I'm just here to buy Adderall."

Detective Duran advised her that she was speaking with a Narcotics Detective for the past 45 minutes as she arranged to buy two bags of cocaine. She then admitted that she was there to buy two bags of cocaine from a Hispanic male that she contacts regularly. These two suspects were advised and sent on their way. The significance of this ruse was to further establish that suspect #1 was a drug dealer for court purposes.

MLK, Jr. Breakfast Reflects On His Dream, Vision As A Nation

By SCOTT JACKSON

At the 16th annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast Monday, keynote speaker Vivian Leonard urged the approximately 350 people in attendance to take time to reflect on, in addition to remembering, King.

"In my humble opinion I would suggest to you that we reflect for a moment on the dream and vision Dr.

King had for us as a nation," Leonard, Boston's director of human resources, said.

"A dream about America and all of her greatness and glory and who she could become if we dare to dream as one nation where there's an existence of liberty and justice, whether it be social or economic, for all."

Leonard asked the audience to consider how people are currently working to further the vision of King, who would have been 83 years old Sunday.

"I would like you to reflect on the following question," she said what are we doing as a country, leaders and individuals, to keep the dream alive?"

To answer her question, Leonard looked at King's

"To everything there is a season, a time to be born and a time to die, a time to mourn and a time to dance," said Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, of the United First Parish Church, in his opening words to family and friends of Arthur W. Ducharme. "We must remember how very precious the gift of life is."

Friends, family, and co-workers gathered Jan. 14 at the church, also known as "The Church of the Presidents," to celebrate the life of Mr. Ducharme. He died Jan. 10 (obituary on Page 22.)

Mr. Ducharme was remembered as a great father and loving man at the service held in the church that he revered. He was the loving husband of Alma (Cammall) Ducharme, and father of five children, Cheryl Kent, Linda Preciado, Bill Ducharme, Jed John Ducharme, and Laura Hermanson.

For the past 15 years, Mr. Ducharme served as the director of the Historic Interpretive Program at the United First Parish Church. The church was established in 1639, and the building was completed in 1828. It is the only church in the United States where two U.S. Presidents are buried side by side with their wives: President John Adams and John Quincy Adams and First Ladies Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams.

The church now holds wreath-laying ceremonies on each of their birthdays, which Mr. Ducharme would organize. The wreaths are ordered by the President of the United States to lay on each of the Presidents' tombs located in the crypt of the church.

At Mr. Ducharme's funeral service, many spoke of the love he had for his family and friends, and the passion he had for the his-

Providing Hope And Education For Families

Learn To Cope, Impact Quincy Coalition Start New Local Chapter

By JOANNE PETERSON

We are pleased at Learn to Cope (LTC) to be working together with Impact Quincy by starting a chapter in the city. Since 2004 LTC has been holding weekly meetings for family members of those who suffer from addiction, mainly due to the opiate crisis such as prescription drugs and heroin.

In the course of eight years, LTC has grown to 6 chapters and has a website with over 2,500 registered families across the state and nationally which offers peer-led support seven days a week.

I commend the City of Quincy for acknowledging the issue and welcoming us to support families in the area. Not only will the families benefit, but the general public will as well. Addiction not only affects families it affects entire communities in many ways.

With addiction education, families can quickly learn how to recognize the problem, motivate their loved ones to treatment, and therefore, increase the chances of their recovery.

Parents get real-time, peer-driven support at our meetings. We provide many guest speakers such as professionals in the field to help educate us on motivating treatment and overdose revival training. Also, we are always happy to have those in long term recovery come to speak and offer us hope.

Working with Impact Quincy, family trainings will be held weekly. LTC has many trained and certified facilitators, and through the Department of Public Health, LTC has access to Narcan, the medication which reverses an opioid overdose, crucial to use until EMTs arrive.

Just last month two sets of parents saved their sons and daughters lives and subsequently their children moved into the treatment process. Because they lived, they now have the chance to get their lives back in order which takes a lot of work, strength, and support from their family.

I have worked closely over the years with the Impact Quincy Coalition and others across the state to be sure Narcan is available for families. Families are first responders. Many of them have saved the lives of their loved ones who have moved on to treatment and are now healthy and functioning tax-paying, working citizens. There is hope, we do see a lot of people finding recovery but it's a process for them and for the family.

The Impact Quincy Coalition has been extremely proactive over the years with prevention and awareness efforts in the city. I am proud to be part of the Coalition Advisory Board and work alongside them to provide hope and education for families.

80 Family, Friends Attend First Learn To Cope Quincy Meeting

By EMILY TAFT

Eighty family members and friends of addicts attended the first Learn to Cope meeting, held at Quincy's Eastern Nazarene College on Jan. 10, looking for guidance and ways to cope through difficult times.

"To see that many people show up on the first night left me speechless," said Impact Quincy Program Coordinator Arlene Goldstein. "Some people had to stand against the walls just to be a part of the meeting. There was no room left in the room."

The meetings, held every Tuesday from 7 to 8:30 p.m., show family members of addicts they are not alone in the fight against drug addiction.

"There is such a need, abuse of this kind is at an epidemic proportion," said Goldstein. "It was quite an experience, very powerful, and very moving to be there."

The number of people who attended the first meeting didn't surprise founder Joanne Peterson.

"It was a great meeting," said Peterson. "It's actually common for our meetings to be that large, sadly. I knew this was going to be a large turnout because the need is so great."

Peterson said many people in Quincy and surrounding areas have asked for Learn to Cope meetings to be held locally for a long time now. Meetings in other areas have grown from 80 to 100 people, and Peterson said she could see the Quincy meetings growing in size with each meeting.

"We have people coming from all around the area," said Peterson. "Usually people start to hear about the meetings from other people, so it could continue to grow in size. The meetings could vary in attendance. There is no way of knowing."

The first meeting is more of an informational meeting, according to Peterson, but it didn't stop those in attendance from opening up and feeling comfortable.

"We want to make people feel comfortable, feel hope," said Peterson. "People are very open because they feel safe. The minute they walk in that room they feel support and then the healing begins."

With the need and waiting list growing, Peterson said that they wouldn't be able to add additional meeting times or dates. However, starting in March, the meetings will be held in a larger room that will accommodate up to 100 people.

Learn to Cope also offers a website that allows those who are unable to make meetings, and those who can, a chance to talk and receive support each day.

Meetings are also held in Brockton, Gloucester, Lowell, and Salem. Those looking to attend don't have to sign up and don't have to be a part of the community where the meetings are held. They offer knowledge, respect, compassion, and support for the many families who are battling the disease of addiction.

For more information on meetings or to talk with other families, visit the Learn to Cope website:

New Council President Says Municipal Government Should Run 'Effectively, Efficiently And Within The Resources Available To Us'

McFarland: Council Will Review, Provide Oversight To City Projects

Making his first public remarks since he was elected the new president of the Quincy City Council, Councillor Michael McFarland called on his colleagues to work together to ensure municipal government runs "effectively, efficiently and within the resources available to us."

McFarland was elected city council president unanimously at the city's inauguration Jan. 3. But he was unable to attend the ceremonies because he was being treated for flu-like symptoms. He was admitted to the hospital and remained there for several days before being released.

At Tuesday's City Council meeting, the council presidency gavel was passed to McFarland. He succeeded Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin who served the customary two one-year terms as council president.

"Thank you for this honor and I look forward to working with all of you," McFarland said after his swearing in. "Congratulations to Mayor (Thomas) Koch, members of the School Committee and my fellow councillors."

In his remarks, the new council president said the

MICHAEL MCFARLAND

"Mayor Koch and his administration have laid out an aggressive agenda for the next two years: economic development and job growth, quality education, upgrading our police and fire departments and meeting our environment challenges."

"The role of the City Council," McFarland told his colleagues, "is to provide review and oversight of these projects. We must continually review our expense and revenue budgets, debt service and overall tax structure to insure the taxpayers that we are operating within our means."

"The current capital projects we have in the pipeline are affordable, but we must be cautious. We are currently on solid financial footing; however, we must constantly reassess this delicate balance."

McFarland also said the City Council will continue to work on zoning and on monitoring the Land Disposition Agreement (LDA) which is the nucleus of the $1.6 billion Quincy Center revitalization project along with keeping residents informed through neighborhood meetings, newsletters, websites and other media.

The new city council president - who was elected to his fourth councillor-at-large term last November - also said it is incumbent upon that body to work together to ensure an effective and efficient municipal government.

"The Quincy City Council looks forward to working with the residents of the City of Quincy during the next two years to assure that your municipal government is run effectively, efficiently and within the resources available to us."

"We owe it to you, the residents of our great City to continue to make Quincy a great place to live, to work and to raise our families while protecting our property values."

McFarland thanked city workers, volunteers and other elected officials for their dedication to public service.

But he first thanked the first responders who provided medical attention when he became ill on New Year's Day.

"Thanks to the Quincy Fire Department, Fallon Ambulance and staff at Quincy Medical Center. Their quick response allowed me to be here this evening."

This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 15-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750. Or apply at colonialfed.com - click the Loans tab. Ron Della Chiesa: Radio His Way Legendary Boston radio personality Ron Della Chiesa has enjoyed a stellar career behind a mike for nearly 60 years.

But it was a local radio station that played a pivotal role turning Della Chiesa's boyhood dream into a life-long passion.

Born and raised in Quincy, Della Chiesa was only 10 years old when he knew he wanted to go into radio. But he was struggling trying to find his voice.

"I couldn't hear what I sounded like," Della Chiesa recalls. "I had this little radio station that I had built in my room with a little turntable and I wrote my own commercials. I had a microphone that I made out of cardboard."

"I'd talk to myself but until I got my tape recorder, I didn't know how bad I was."

He had a typical Boston accent and didn't pronounce his "r's."

"Ma, open the doowah (door). Get the cah," he said mimicking the Boston accent.

Della Chiesa persuaded his parents to get him a Voice to Music reel-to-reel tape recorder. He was not impressed with his first recordings.

"I started recording myself. I said 'this doesn't sound right.' I'd listen to the radio announcers on the air and they all had perfect voices. Their diction was flawless. They always pronounced their 'r's' - car, bar, later," he says, emphasizing the "r" sound.

Ron realized he needed a professional's opinion. So he asked his father, Aldo, who was the brother of the city's mayor at the time, Amelio Della Chiesa, if he could set up an audition with James Asher, founder of WJDA radio at the station on Brackett Street.

"This was the first tape I had heard before correcting my accent," Della Chiesa says. "It had me talking as a kid without any knowledge of correcting my accent."

Ron remembers being scared on a sweltering September day in 1947. But the undaunted 10-year-old was ready for his first professional critique.

"Mr. Asher hits the play button and there it goes. 'Hi, I'm Ron Della Chiesa. I want to be a radio announcer. This cah I bought from Ford Motah Company.'"

Asher hit the stop button.

"You have a real diction problem," he tells him. "You have a problem with your accent. There's no 'r.' You have a lot of work to do. Make another tape and come back later."

Della Chiesa said he was inspired to do a second tape.

He wanted to sound like all the professional radio announcers he had heard listening to the Lone Ranger, Jack Benny and Frank Allen during radio's Golden Age.

"I took all those words - hundreds and hundreds of them - and said them the way I would normally say them and then said them correctly like the announcers said them. Just by doing that over and over I was able to beat that accent."

Now, decades later, Della Chiesa looks back at that experience as a watershed moment.

"It was a turning point in my career. My voice was nowhere near on-air quality. I was crushed but yet when I went back and I listened again to what the pros were doing, I realized I had a lot of work to do. And I worked really, really hard."

This story and so many others are brilliantly told in a delightful and insightful way in Della Chiesa's new book entitled "Radio My Way." The book, written with Erica Ferencik, features other stories of Ron's youth as well as celebrity profiles from jazz, opera and the American Songbook.

The book also chronicles Della Chiesa's more than five decades on the air. He has worked at WGBH (which stands for Great Blue Hill) full-time since 1968 and today hosts the Boston Symphony Orchestra's broadcast live on Saturday evenings and rebroadcast Sundays at 1 p.m. on WCRB 99.5 FM.

This summer he'll mark his 20th anniversary hosting the BSO at Tanglewood.

Radio listeners can also find his popular "Strictly Sinatra" program Sunday evenings 7 p.m. to midnight followed by Music America featuring songs from the American Songbook midnight to 2 a.m. on WPLM 99.1 FM.

Fans may be surprised to learn that Della Chiesa isn't at the radio station during his time on the air.

"I record all the tracks at home making and e-mailing digital files. The producer puts them all together so I'm not there. That's the way radio has become - files. Even these big satellite shows are produced using files. Only a few are live."

He says he prefers being in the studio.

"I would rather be listening to the songs on a headset. It's a little more difficult to try to create that with my Sinatra show because most people think I'm there. I think in the 15 years there, I only did the show live once. But I've heard so much Sinatra - hundreds of times - that I can hear his voice in my head. I think I have achieved that goal."

At one point, Della Chiesa was on the radio opposite himself. "I was doing Symphony Saturday night and Frank was on Saturday night (before moving to Sunday earlier this month). They are close on the dial - 99.5 and 99.1. One or two people picked up on it but not many."

Della Chiesa says his radio career was driven by standards from the Great American Songbook. Those are tunes from the turn of the 20th century up through the 1930s, 1940s, 1950s and 1960s. He's also fond of music from Broadway shows and hit movies.

"A lot of our best music came out of the Great Depression - when this country was tough. The songs brought people together. A lot of great music came from the movies of that era, too."

Among Della Chiesa's favorite performers are Tony Bennett and Frank Sinatra. But he also enjoys a host of today's singers like Michael Buble, Diana Krall, Sting and Lady Gaga.

"A lot of these artists are starting to sing standards now. Tony Bennett is talking about recording an album with Lady Gaga of all standards," he says.

But Della Chiesa also describes a lot of today's music as forgettable.

"I watched a recent video on the history of the Academy Awards from 1971. It went through some of the songs that were hits then and I can't remember one of them. They're all forgettable. It's almost like they were written for throw-away society. They're written because we're living in an era of sound-bites and the music is that way."

"It's written and it becomes a hit; it's a hit but there are so many thousands of hits that follow it. It gets buried away and gets lost unlike the music of my generation or the generation of the Great Depression. It's like going into a museum and looking at Renaissance masterpieces. There's a quality about them that is so lasting and so permanent because it is great art."

"A lot of this stuff is kind of a moaning, whining, rubbish at times. I hear a lament in a lot of it. There's a down feeling. It's not very euphoric at times."

He doubts he would have embarked on a radio career growing up with today's music.

"There's not as much sentiment in the lyrics I hear today that there was years ago. Maybe it was because people were torn apart. World War II tore them part. Families were separated. People were killed; they didn't come back."

"Those songs were poetic. If you read the lyrics you don't even have to have the music and it will mean something to you."

He adds: "A lot of what drove me into radio was the fact that I wanted to perpetuate music from the Great American Songbook. So I don't know if I would feel the same way today. I turn to these radio stations and they don't have any identity. They just seem to be playing the same kind of music."

"The music that I play it all has an identity."

Music has been the center of Della Chiesa's profession.

But the support of his parents - the late Aldo and Florence Della Chiesa - was indispensable.

"I feel blessed that I have had this kind of life. I was an only child and I had parents who really supported me. I encourage other parents to do the same with their kids. Stand behind them in every way you can and give them that kind of encouragement."

He also says it's important for youngsters to not be intimidated by great artists like Mozart, Michaelangelo and George Gershwin.

"Take them out and expose them to other things like great films, great movies, great Broadway shows, great concerts. Expose them to jazz, classical music, opera, great museums, masterpieces."

"I encourage every parent, every person who has any influence on any children at all to bring them into that world because there's a lot more out there and once they find it, they'll go with it."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 100 year-old scenic Quincy postcard is a view of Adams Street looking west as it rises to meet the foot of Whitwell Street. On the right is the driveway to the old Crane estate that was next to the site of today's Eventide Nursing Home. From the earliest colonial days, for over 150 years, this was part of the only road that connected Plymouth and the South Shore to Boston. A mile marker indicating nine miles to Boston, placed here in 1730, is still up the road on the left on the corner of Old Coach Road. Once owned by John Adams, most of this desirable land became home to the estates of Quincy's leading businessmen in the 19th and early 20th centuries. It remains one of the choicest neighborhoods of Quincy. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net. From the Collection of City Historian Tom Galvin

Special Permit Application For Boston's Moon Island Wind Turbine Project

Beals + Thomas, a multi-disciplinary environmental engineering/design consultancy, is assisting Quincy's Planning Department with the review of Boston's Special Permit Application. Boston who owns Moon Island, a portion of which is in the City of Quincy, wants to build a wind turbine on the Island.

Boston like any other property owner who wants to do something on their property within the city limits has to comply with the Zoning Ordinances of the City of Quincy.

On the evening of, Wednesday, Jan. 11th Beal + Thomas reviewed for the Quincy Planning Board the adequacy and confirmed documentation of the Special Permit submitted by the City of Boston. No notable deficiencies with the permit were identified by Beal + Thomas. They acknowledged there needed to be a better understanding of construction time frames, where the turbine would gain access to the electrical grid, and the extent of traffic impacts related to site preparation and construction.

There were also concerns about the representational accuracy of renderings that depicted the height of the Wind Turbine. How much advocacy (photo shopping) went into the photo simulations of the Turbine?

It was not the role of the planning board to evaluate the merits of the proposal beyond their narrow charter. The Planning Board focused strictly on the Special Permit Application and whether it was in compliance with Quincy's Zoning Ordinance.

No one has articulated, in depth, why this wind turbine is good for Quincy - environmental, economic, or otherwise - appears good for Boston, but not Quincy.

I am concerned that the permitting of the Wind Turbine needs further public input. In short, someone needs to tell us what we get in exchange for allowing this wind turbine to go on top of a pristine harbor island.

This object will dominate the land and skyline for years to come. If one includes the elevation of Moon Island and the turbine we have a height of nearly 500 feet. This is the equivalent of the height of the Custom House in Boston.

In addition to the real aesthetic concerns raised by such a large structure weigh the interest in clean energy against the goals of environment protection and preservation. Interests once at harmony are now on a collision course. Open space advocates argue such projects destroy natural vistas we should all try to preserve. Naturalists such as John Flicker, former President of the Audubon Society acknowledges modern wind turbines kill fewer birds and are not as deadly as earlier ones. He still acknowledges they are "...hazardous and can fragment critical (bird) habitat." Therefore, I think it is relevant to ask if this is the object we want at what is arguably the gateway to the Neponset River bird estuary?

In light of Boston's over utilization of our roadways and the total lack of regard for the residents of Squantum by their use of Moon and Long Island, I believe the benefits to Ward 6 and the City of Quincy need to be better articulated.

I look forward to that articulation.

Brian McNamee
Ward 6 City Councillor

Bills Seek Partisan Elections, Bigger Council

Bills were filed in the State Legislature that would permit Quincy to hold partisan municipal elections and increase the City Council to 17 members, two from each ward and five elected at-large.

Neil McDonald, chairman of the Republican City Committee, filed the partisan election bill with the explanation:

"By requiring party nomination all subsequent actions could be attributed to a political party instead of a small group whose activities are only responsible to their own particular clique."

The bill for a larger Council, filed by a group of citizens, was seen headed for a clash with another move afoot that would establish a seventh ward in the northern section of the city.

MAYOR'S ECONOMY MOVE

Mayor Thomas J. McGrath, in his first economy move of the New Year, directed that some 200 laborers in the water, sewer and sanitation departments be placed on a four-day week.

"The city is faced with a situation that demands drastic action," said the mayor. "I have an alternative but to enforce this measure of economy now."

Meanwhile, the School Committee was considering a wage cut for its employees that would enable the schools to achieve a financial condition to build an addition to North Quincy High School.

Quincy Native And Boston Radio Icon Publishes New Book 'Radio My Way' A Sure Hit For Ron Della Chiesa Fans

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Legions of radio listeners know Boston radio personality Ron Della Chiesa for his great taste in music and his wonderfully distinctive voice.

And if you're among his devoted fans who have longed for a Della Chiesa autobiography, the wait is over.

Published by Pearson, Della Chiesa's recently released book is entitled "Radio My Way - Featuring Celebrity Profiles from Jazz, Opera, the American Songbook and More." The book, written with Erica Ferencik, is available in hardcover and paperback. Copies can be found at Barnes and Noble and Amazon.com.

Della Chiesa, an expert in classical, jazz, opera and popular music, has deep Quincy roots. He was born and raised in Quincy. His father, Aldo, was a Ward 3 city councillor and his uncle, Amelio, served as mayor. His father and his mother, Florence, offered strong support and inspiration for his decision to pursue a career in radio after he "caught the radio bug" when he was just a skinny lad growing up in Quincy and enjoying sandlot baseball with his pals.

Since the book's release, Della Chiesa, who is 73, has been making book appearances, including some in Boston.

RON DELLA CHIESA

Local fans take note: The Quincy Historical Society is planning a book signing with Della Chiesa at the Adams Academy in the spring.

"Radio My Way" chronicles Della Chiesa's brilliant career and defining moments along the way. The popular radio host and renowned voice of the Boston Symphony also profiles musical geniuses from interviews during his illustrious near 60-year career.

Besides shedding light on these musical personalities, Della Chiesa offers suggested recordings of their music and some surprising peeks at what didn't make it on the air.

The book also has a distinct Quincy flavor as Della Chiesa reminisces about growing up in the City of Presidents. His trip down memory lane conjures up sounds of steam trains and shipyard work that were music to his ears when he just a boy.

"We lived up on High Street and the (train) tracks were below us where the T now runs behind Independence Avenue. You could hear the sounds of the stream trains in the night. It was a wonderful sound," he recalled in a recent interview at The Quincy Sun.

"We'd go to the bottom of the hill by Independence Avenue and I used to hang around with Charlie Ross and John Ross whose grandfather was mayor and we used to go to the warehouse which was right next to the railroad tracks. We'd watch those New Haven trains come by going to Boston."

The bustling Fore River shipyard during World War II also stands out.

"When my father was off to World War II, I remember at night hearing the sounds of the yard going 24 hours a day. Heavy pounding, heavy ships being built, sounds of the night of ships being built and the glow in the sky. We lived at least two miles from the shipyard but you could look back and the sky was like a red glow from a factory."

Other memories include seeing stars in the windows of homes of servicemen and women fighting in the war and experiencing black outs.

"You had to shut off all the lights at a certain time. They'd sound a siren and then an all clear."

He's also nostalgic for the supermarkets and movie houses back in the day.

"When I was a kid, supermarkets were like toy shops. Walking in and seeing walls of cereal and walls of Ovaltine and walls of all these products."

One day at McKay's Variety store on Independence Ave, Della Chiesa met Red Sox legend Jimmie Foxx who was promoting Wonderbread. "He signed my autograph book," he smiles broadly.

At one point during his childhood, there were at least six movie houses in Quincy: the Art (Alhambra), Strand, Capitol and Adams Theatres in Quincy Center; the Lincoln Theatre in Quincy Point and the Wollaston Theatre in Wollaston Center.

Landmarks are also etched in his memory, including: Kippy's Candlepins, dairy and pig farms on Penn's Hill and the Alpine Restaurant famous for its pizza. He watched early TV shows at the Alpine like Howdy Doody, Burns and Allen and Red Sox games.

Born in 1938 at Quincy Hospital, Della Chiesa graduated from Quincy High School in 1955 and the Boston University School of Communications in 1959. Classmates at BU included the late John Henning, a legendary Boston TV newsman. Henning, it would turn out, opened a career door that's never closed for Della Chiesa.

"We both worked at the same radio station - WBOS - and John was responsible for getting me into WGBH. He worked at WGBH as an intern and John migrated to television. He had an opportunity to go to Channel 7 and he said 'my job is there if you want it.'

"That's how I started at WGBH in 1967 part-time and then full-time in 1968. I'm still there."

Della Chiesa is the host of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which is aired live every Saturday night from Symphony Hall and rebroadcast Sunday afternoons at 1 p.m. on WCRB, 99.5FM.

This summer he'll mark his 20th year hosting the BSO at Tanglewood. This will also be the 75th anniversary of Tanglewood this summer. "John Williams will be there, Yo-Yo Ma, James Taylor... they'll all come out," he says, noting broadcasts on Friday and Saturday night and Sunday afternoon are all live.

Kathy Jones And Edward Mathers Marry On New Year's Day

She knew it was love when they shared desserts of cheesecake and apple crisp on their first date at the Piccadilly Pub in Foxboro.

Soon thereafter, Kathy Jones, 51, a Quincy resident and Edward P. Mathers, 58, an Attleboro resident, became perhaps the first newlyweds of the New Year when they tied the knot on Jan. 1, at 2 p.m. at First Baptist Church in Hingham. More than 100 were in attendance.

The wedding, the second for both the bride and the groom, was a family affair and included the daughter of the bride, Kimberly P. Jones as the maid of honor and Kathy's brother William Long walked her down the aisle.

Other participating family included grandson Gabriel Jones, 4, who served as the ring bearer; niece Brianna Killcommons, 5, as flower girl; niece Mary Lou Long assisted with a reading and son Mathew Jones served as an usher. Best man was Ron Stokes, a long-time friend of the groom.

The bride wore a bright red gown which she noted represents "a second chance at love."

The couple met through eLove, an office-based dating service.

"The dating service was wonderful," Kathy said. "They were very responsive and offered great tips and advice to make me more comfortable on my dates. Bless them. I would have never met Edward without their help."

"They really matched us well," she continued. "We have so much in common including a love for outdoor sports - kayaking and biking. We even went on our first camping trip with my family in July. Sometimes we just stay in and get cozy watching movies. Just spending time together is a pleasure."

Kathy added, "We are very open about meeting through a dating service."

In fact, the massage therapist who I saw prior to the wedding ceremony was also married off by eLove. And Ed's tuxedo rental clerk also met his wife through eLove. We took these as very good signs."

The couple honeymooned in Portsmouth and North Conway, NH prior to settling in Attleboro.

Will The Democrats Snatch Victory From The Jaws Of Defeat?

As a Reagan Democrat, I view with trepidation, the ongoing saga of the Republican nomination race. This year our incumbent President Barack Hussein Obama (I always like throwing that middle name in just for fun) should have been easy pickings for the Republicans but as usual GOP candidates hell-bent on going up against Obama by nuking each other.

Former Mayor Frank McCauley makes a great case for Republicans to nominate and following it up by voting for former Gov. Mitt Romney who he believes is the strongest Republican who can actually win in November. Like many Republicans who have been able to get elected in this "blue" state of ours, McCauley believes in the William F. Buckley Jr. mantra thrown out to Republicans decades ago to nominate presidential hopefuls who are the most conservative, electable candidates running for office in a particular year.

McCauley supports Romney certainly on being the most conservative and electable opponent to fact Obama on Election Day this coming November. Everything is relative.

Other candidates running like Rick Perry, Newt Gingrich and Rick Santorum are far more conservative than Romney but can they sway over Democrats and Independents one on one with the president this fall?

As a Reagan Democrat since 1976 when Reagan took on Gerry Ford in a losing primary campaign, I have seen to many unelected GOP candidates seeking my votes. In 1970, here in Massachusetts, I voted to elect Frank Sargent to a full term as governor and he remains to this day, the only Republican I ever voted for in a governor's race. However, for president in 1992, I voted for Ross Perot, then in 1976, I went with Eugene McCarthy and I have always been a fan of Pat Buchanan.

This coming November, I do not plan to vote Obama back into a second term since he already has done so much damage in just three years. On this both Frank and I agree. However, I didn't vote for Romney back in 1994 when he ran for the US Senate as "Ted Kennedy-lite" and I did not vote for him for governor against Shannon O'Brien. I still do not see myself voting for the latest re-incarnation of Mitt the Candidate. Eighteen years ago he told voters I am not "Reagan-Bush." This year he is running like he was Reagan's first cousin. I can't trust him and his seemingly transit core values.

I personally believe he along with Bob Dole and John McCain will be best remembered as "Dead Men Waking; the Trilogy." Unlike McCauley, I can't settle for a candidate whose only core value is winning. Run to the left of Ted Kennedy. Run to the right of Barack Obama. I do however confirm that I did vote for Frank McCauley the two chances I had to do so because he, unlike Romney, was indeed the most conservative, electable mayoral candidate on the ballot. I believed in McCauley.

As someone who has been a Democrat most of my life except for a few flings with the GOP, I acknowledge flirting with the Republican Party both in Quincy and Charlestown too. I, however, vote like a Democrat. I must fall in love with a Republican candidacy before falling in line behind the last Republican standing.

Republicans need dissatisfied Democrats, Independents and people like me who proudly call themselves "Reagan Democrats" in order to put today a winning majority over perhaps the worse Democrat in the White House since Jimmy Carter. Otherwise, Democrats will once again snatch victory from the jaws of defeat.

Many Citizens Eager To Save Winfield Elm Tree

The garden club and the newly formed "Friends of the Winfield Elm" are excited by the positive response from Quincy residents regarding the prospect of saving the century old Winfield Elm from destruction.

During the holidays a petition campaign was begun; the response to it has been really exciting. For this reason there will be an extension on the time for signature gathering (to a Feb. 10th deadline) and an all-out effort to get as many signatures as possible within this time frame.

It seems many citizens now realize this heritage elm tree, threatened with razing to construct a new Central Middle School parking lot, is not a diseased tree, but an old tree that with proper care and maintenance could live for another hundred plus years.

The UMASS Extension Diagnostic Lab recommended mulching, better irrigation during dry months and a proper pruning for keeping this elm tree healthy. Its current raised position within the Winfield House foundation would be just the permanent location it needs, with a few amendments.

Copies of the "Save the Winfield Elm" petition can be found at <http://wollaston-gardenclub.com/projects/conservation/save-the-winfield-elm-petition/>. Ninety-nine percent of the people who have already registered their support and signed the petition live in the City of Quincy.

People have been eager to sign; we now need to get the petition out to the community. Civic, community and neighborhood groups, church groups, senior centers, youth and scout groups, schools and classrooms, colleges, businesses, restaurants are all great places to bring this issue to the people of Quincy.

It is our hope to appeal to the good sense and fairness of Mayor Koch to change his mind and protect this tree. The garden club is hoping to take more cuttings of this tree in early March and work with the Arnold Arboretum and Norfolk County Agricultural School to do some grafting for propagation purposes. The Winfield Elm survived Dutch Elm disease and certified arborists and tree experts have told us that this tree is a very special specimen of elm tree.

The Wollaston Garden Club intends to present the petitions we have received so far to Mayor Koch, as well as Kirsten Hughes, the Ward 5 Councilor, hoping to have some dialogue and convince them that this issue has widespread grassroots support. Many, many people in Quincy want the Winfield Elm protected, not destroyed.

Gutro Calls For Strong Council Oversight Of Downtown Plans

Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the City Council Downtown and Economic Development Committee, is seeking to ensure the City Council continues to have a strong oversight role in the redevelopment of Quincy City Center.

Gutro, who has served as chairman of the downtown committee since 2010, and who represented the downtown as Ward 5 councillor for 10 years, introduced a measure at Tuesday's City Council meeting seeking an comprehensive update from the Koch Administration and StreetWorks LLC relative to their respective efforts to comply with the 2010 Land Disposition Agreement.

On Dec. 20, 2010, the City Council after a comprehensive review that included hiring an independent attorney authorized the Mayor Koch to enter into a Land Disposition Agreement (LDA) with Street Works.

"There are a lot of moving parts and dozens of entities that will participate in the full build out of this project. The City Council has a responsibility to our residents and taxpayers to provide a transparent, periodic, and public review of every facet of this massive and historic redevelopment of our city center," Gutro noted.

"I think it is important to begin the year with a full update. I also believe quarterly updates to the City Council will help inform our citizens and ensure greater accountability by the City of Quincy, StreetWorks, and other development partners involved in this project."

Gutro Seeks Honeywell Energy, Water Use Data

- A list of buildings where equipment acquired under the contract was installed, along with the type of equipment installed in each building;

- Baseline water use, energy use and associated cost data from each building that preceded equipment installation;

- Four years of actual energy use and water use data by month, and year for each building subsequent to the Honeywell equipment installations;

- A report quantifying energy, water, and financial savings on an annual basis and over the life of the contract for each building, and a report speaking to the cumulative energy, water, and financial savings under the contract as a whole; and

- The Administration's plan for long term maintenance that will guarantee performance of equipment installed under this contract and projected cost to the city for such maintenance.

- In 2007, the City of Quincy entered into a $32.8 million energy performance contract with Honeywell International, whereby Honeywell guarantees energy and water savings as a result of equipment installation in schools and city buildings. Prior to the installation of this equipment, baseline energy and water use data for each building was input into a software package known as Portfolio Manager. This software is used nationally as part of the EnergyStar program to help municipalities accurately measure energy and water savings achieved through capital investments.

Each year since the equipment installation, Gutro said he has asked city officials for energy and water use data in buildings where Honeywell installed equipment. To date, no data or analysis has been provided to the City Council.

"This is really bordering on the absurd," said Gutro about the Administration's inability to provide energy and water data from buildings where Honeywell, International Inc. installed equipment as part of the 2007 contract.

"Any homeowner who replaces their boiler, refrigerator or oven would have a pretty good sense of their savings simply by looking at the next month's electric bill," Gutro said. "We bill residential homes quarterly for water consumption, and here we are four years later, and we don't have water consumption information for these schools and public buildings?"

Gutro added: "We have an obligation to review the efficacy of this contract and know with certainty whether the equipment installed, achieved the measureable benefits we were promised."

'Radio My Way' A Sure Hit For Ron Della Chiesa Fans

does three consecutive live broadcasts of symphonic music for 20 years," he notes while singing the praises of producer Brian Bell (who writes his scripts) and engineer Jim Donahue (who mikes 100 musicians.)

"We've been together for 20 years so we're like a ball team," he adds.

Della Chiesa also keeps busy doing guest appearances on other radio shows and touring.

"I do host tours like learning tours to Italy, opera tours, classical music tours, culinary tours. I've hosted tours to Sante Fe, New Mexico. We did an L.A. arts tour incorporating movies. I'm doing another one in September - we're going to Venice and Verona on an opera tour."

He's met many famous people during his career including Luciano Pavarotti, Rosemary Clooney and Robert Merrill considered America's greatest baritone.

Only one celebrity has made him tongue-tied - Milton Cross.

"Milton was one of the voices I aspired to be," Della Chiesa says. "He voice was almost god-like. When he announced the Metropolitan Opera broadcast and I was a young kid listening, he would tell stories in such a way that he would bring the story right into the home."

He'd also describe the action of the singing on stage at The Met in New York.

"There was something very special about hearing those big voices coming out of that small radio as a kid. I heard his voice every Saturday afternoon. I started listening when I was six or seven years old."

Then, one day, Mr. Cross was doing a broadcast of The Met in Boston.

"I was already in broadcasting. I was at WGBH. I saw him there and I almost couldn't go up and talk to him. I finally did and I introduced myself. He was very nice. I said, 'Mr. Cross, I've been an admirer of yours for many years and I would like the privilege of interviewing you. He said 'that's fine. I won't be able to do it right now but maybe after the Met season if you write to me.'"

Della Chiesa followed through with a letter that he still has today. But Mr. Cross died a few months later so he never had the opportunity to interview him.

Frank Sinatra and Tony Bennett are among his favorite performers but each for their distinctively different styles.

"Sinatra's music is more swinging, upbeat - although he can sing many ballads and make you cry. Tony is more of an operatic singer with a tear in his voice. There's genuine emotion that comes from the heart with Tony.

"With Frank it's a kind of a joyful celebration. But I would say Tony Bennett is my favorite because of what he's doing at 85 years old. He is still going strong."

Bennett, whom Della Chiesa calls a dear friend, recently released his second Duets album featuring modern day singers including Carrie Underwood and Lady Gaga.

"I can't stop listening to it. It's beautiful music. That's why Tony has the longest chapter in my book. There's no one else who has that extensive career."

Pavarotti, the Italian operatic tenor, ranks first among Della Chiesa's opera singers. "He had this big, jovial, larger than life personality. He was friendly, he always signed autographs. A lot of people were intimidated by opera but he made it real."

Narrowing his list of favorite songs is not easy.

"Stardust is one of them because it's the greatest American standard by Hoagy Carmichael. It's lyrics and everything come together for me."

He rattles off some more including "It Had to Be You" by Gus Kahn and "My Melancholy Baby" sung by a myriad of performers including William Frawley (Fred Mertz in the "I Love Lucy" TV show; Charlie Parker, Judy Garland and Barbara Streisand.

"If it's sung right," Della

Chiesa says, "'Melancholy Baby' can bring tears to your eyes."

Della Chiesa's next venture is a documentary on Nantasket Beach featuring Paragon Park and the era of the great hotels. He's collaborating with friend and videographer Jay Rooney.

"I've got this group of people I hang around with down at Nantasket Beach that I call the Nantasket Pack Rat. They all have stories. I envision it will be a story about what the beach used to be like and what it's like today and how it changes in the seasons."

"We're in the process of putting that together now with footage and getting interviews with some of the characters down."

There's also some thought of creating an audio version of "Radio My Way."

So you can add accomplished author to the list of milestones in Della Chiesa's career.

Looking back, he says he has no regrets.

"Anything I had to do over I probably do it just the same. I wouldn't change a thing."

Summing up his career, he quickly quotes a song composed by Cy Coleman and recorded in 1964 by Frank Sinatra.

"The best is yet to come."

What Della Chiesa's done to date, as "Radio My Way" can attest, is pretty remarkable, too.

All About Retirement

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Social Security is as American as baseball and apple pie. Not everyone likes apples or baseball games, but almost every American who reaches retirement age will receive Social Security retirement benefits. In fact, 96 percent of Americans are covered by Social Security.

If you're ready to retire in the near future, this article is for you. We'd like to share with you a few important items about Social Security retirement benefits and how to apply for them.

When you work and pay Social Security taxes, you earn "credits" toward Social Security benefits. If you were born in 1929 or later, you need 40 credits (10 years of work) to qualify for retirement benefits.

To qualify for retirement benefits, 10 years is the minimum. However, the amount of your benefit is determined by how long you work and how much you earn. Higher lifetime earnings result in higher benefits. If there were some years when you did not work or had low earnings, your benefit amount may be lower than if you had worked steadily or earned more.

Also, your age when you retire makes a difference in your benefit amount. The full retirement age (the age at which full retirement benefits are payable) has been gradually rising from age 65 to age 67. You can retire as early as age 62, but if benefits start before you reach your full retirement age, your monthly payment is reduced. Find out what your full retirement age is by referring to the convenient chart in our publication, Retirement Benefits, at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10035.html. It's in the second section.

Just as you can choose an early retirement and get a reduced payment, you also can choose to keep working beyond your full retirement age to take advantage of a larger payment. Your benefit will increase automatically by a certain percentage from the time you reach your full retirement age until you start receiving your benefits or until you reach age 70.

The decision of when to retire is an individual one and depends on a number of personal factors. To help you weigh the factors, we suggest you read our online fact sheet, When To Start Receiving Retirement Benefits, available at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10147.html.

You may want to consider your options by using our Retirement Estimator to get instant, personalized estimates of future benefits. You can plug in different retirement ages and scenarios to help you make a more informed retirement decision. Try it out at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

When you decide to retire, the easiest and most convenient way to do it is right from the comfort of your home or office computer. Go to www.socialsecurity.gov where you can apply for retirement benefits in as little as 15 minutes. In most cases, there are no forms to sign or documents to send; once you submit your electronic application, that's it!

In addition to using our award-winning website, you can call us toll-free at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY, 1-800-325-0778) or visit the Social Security office nearest you.

Either way you choose to apply, be sure to have your bank account information handy so we can set up your payments to be deposited directly into your account.

To learn more, read our publication, Retirement Benefits, at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10035.html.

THE PLAY OF LIGHT AND SHADOW

Contrast is essential to any work of art that wants to use tension to draw the viewer's eye. In terms of jewelry design, there are myriad ways to play textures and colors against one another to achieve powerfully dramatic effects. One of the more popular trends in this regard involves contrasting dark gemstones such as black diamond, onyx, and oxidized silver with bright yellow gold and colorless diamonds. The resultant yin-yang effect is striking. The contrast creates an elegant look that is most at home in the shimmering light of a candlelit table for two or an evening at the theatre. There are times when a woman wants drama in her life, and this is the jewelry to wear for the occasion.

Putting items with contrasting textures as well as contrasting colors creates a unique piece of jewelry. We want to offer you something important and exciting for your next jewelry purchase. You are cordially invited to 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to behold these exquisite pieces. Call us at 617-773-3636, and allow us to assist you with your next jewelry purchase.

Petition Drive On To Save Winfield Elm Tree

are people who will say 'why are you bothering with this? The mayor's made up his mind' - that's the only negative we've heard," she said.

Artis said her group has set a Feb. 10 deadline for residents to sign the petition. She plans on presenting it at City Hall after that.

Artis also shared the results of a study of the tree conducted by a forestry lab at UMass. The study, dated Dec. 7, found a sample taken from the tree to be in good condition.

"Mature American elm has some dead branches but also major limbs are quite viable with the bark on trunk and most limbs in good condition," the report stated.

The lab also tested for Dutch elm disease and branch canker pathogens. Both of those tests were negative, but other problems were found.

"An unknown agent damaged water-conducting tissues in some of the branches on the American elm, which disrupted water and mineral transport beyond that point and caused those branches to dieback," the report stated. "However, as long as about 70% of the branches in the crown of the elm leaf out, the tree has enough leaf area to photosynthesize the carbohydrates needed to survive."

A study done on behalf of the city found heart rot in the tree. The fungal disease rots away at the center of the tree, though it did say heart rot is survivable.

"The tree can survive heart rot as the majority of the vascular movement of food and water is in the exterior of a tree," it said. "The main concerns with heart rot are decay in the branches and trunk making the tree structurally unsound."

That same study found that about 38 feet of the tree's canopy would need to be cut-down because the tree is close to the proposed new building. In addition, 21 feet of its roots would be under the school.

"The odds of the tree surviving the impact on the root zone and the removal of the canopy would be minimal," it said.

The report also shot-down a possible relocation of the tree. It said a 60-foot diameter, 4 to 5-foot deep rootball would need to be taken out of the ground.

"Relocating a tree of this size would be extremely expensive," it said. "Considering the current stress the tree is under, there is minimal success of relocation."

City Awarded $1M State Grant For Adams Green Project

The city has been awarded a $1 million state grant earmarked for the Quincy Center Adams Green project.

The city was among 25 communities sharing in $14 million in grants to enhance parks and recreational facilities, state Lt. Governor Timothy Murray announced Tuesday.

The $1 million grant will fund the design and construction documents necessary to build the Adams Green, planned as a centerpiece of the $1.6 billion Quincy Center revitalization project.

The planned park will be a new civic open space featuring a unifying town green and promenade in the area near Quincy City Hall and McIntyre Mall.

Quincy's $1 million grant derives from the state's Energy and Environmental Affairs' Gateway Cities Park Program.

Gateway City Parks is a flexible program, providing municipal officials with a menu of funding options for all phases of park development. Quincy is one of 24 cities eligible for the program. Funding can be used for parking planning and recreational needs assessments.

Lebo To Chair New Teaching, Learning School Subcommittee

By EMILY TAFT

School committee Vice Chairwomen Barbara Isola announced at the Jan. 11 meeting that moving forward the agenda would include information from the new subcommittee on teaching and learning.

School Committee member Emily Lebo, who is the chairwoman of the new subcommittee, will report to the school committee with any new information.

"She was the one who suggested making the subcommittee," said Isola. "She comes to the table with a lot of experience, and I think she will do a great job."

Lebo, a former Quincy school administrator and current director of Career and Technical Education for the Boston Public Schools, was the logical choice to chair the new subcommittee.

"We could sit at the

school committee meetings for over three hours and never talk about teaching and learning, it can be very frustrating," said Lebo. "Our main goal in the school system is teaching and learning, so I suggested a subcommittee on it and Barbra Isola asked me to run it."

The new subcommittee will focus on attendance rates, MCAS scores, SAT scores, graduate follow-up, professional development and really take a look at the data aspect of learning and teaching. Lebo said they would look to see if scores and numbers are slipping in some areas and then set goals to fix them. Part of the new teacher evaluations is looking at the data, according to Lebo, so they will be focusing on those areas as well. The new subcommittee will also help with choosing the new curriculum for the schools.

"This is a place where we can get into the nuts and bolts of different areas," said Isola. "Not that we didn't look at those areas in the school committee but this will just give us the time to go into those subjects in greater depth."

The new subcommittee will consist of Isola, Lebo and new school committee member Kathy Hubley.

No specific dates and times for the committee to meet have been set yet but Isola said that information will be posted as soon as it is decided.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, Jan. 7, at approximately 12:20 p.m., Officer Tim Kaes was dispatched to the area of Chickatabot Road and Sea Street on a report of a suspicious male wearing a black coat and baseball hat hiding in the yard.

The officer said that she spotted the suspect and thought it was odd so she called the police. Officers Mark Smith, Chris McDermott, John Leuchte and John McGowan also responded.

Upon arrival, the suspect, seeing the cruisers, jumped the fence and ran to Sea Street toward the DB Mart, where Officer McDermott caught up to him and placed him in handcuffs until it could be determined what was happening. When asked his name and date of birth, the male suspect repeatedly gave false information to the officers.

A check of parked cars in the area revealed the suspect's actual name. The suspect granted permission to the officers to retrieve his driver's license from the car. When asked what he was doing, the suspect stated he was going to see his ex-girlfriend who lives in the area.

The suspect provided the officers with the telephone number of his "ex-girlfriend." The dispatcher called the number and the person who answered stated that he did not know anyone by the suspect's name. The suspect then provided several stories but none seemed to make sense.

Finally, the suspect said that there was a "girl that was a friend of his friend" and he was trying to locate her in order to ask "if he could get with her."

Sgt. Joseph Lencki arrived on scene and he and officer Kaes brought the suspect back to the location he was originally seen and knocked on the door. A female answered the door and the officers explained the situation and asked the female to see if she recognized the suspect.

The suspect was illuminated by flashlight while sitting in the back of the cruiser. The female immediately recognized him as a frequent customer at a Sunoco gas station in Dorchester where she works. She became emotional and said that he has been a regular customer for about two years.

She said that the suspect would constantly try to engage her in conversation and then asked her out, but she made it clear to him that she was not interested, adding that she refused him as a friend on Facebook.

The victim said that she has never seen the suspect anywhere other than at work and had no idea how he found out where she lived.

The suspect, a 28-year-old Dorchester resident, was placed under arrest for the charges of "misleading a police officer, disorderly person, peeping Tom and criminal harassment."

The Clerk Magistrate refused bail on the suspect due to the dangerous nature of these charges until a court appearance the next day.

Nice work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE – On Thursday, Jan. 5, at approximately 9:20 a.m., Officers Mark Millane and Scott Smith were dispatched to a business on Hancock Street in Quincy Square on a report from an employee who believed that a person on scene matched the description of a suspect who broke into their office Dec. 27.

Upon arrival, Officer Millane met with a security officer for the company, who said the suspect was on the second floor. As Officer Millane and the security officer approached the suspect, he suddenly ran down the hallway, down the steps and out the rear door leading to the parking garage. As Officer Millane gave chase, he radioed a description and direction of travel.

Officers Smith, John Leuchte and Kristen Bowes quickly responded to the area and were able to corner the suspect at Cliveden and Hancock Streets. The suspect was handcuffed and detained while Officer Millane examined the surveillance photos taken from the video and confirmed that this was the same male involved in the break into the building.

In the photos, the suspect appeared to be wearing the same jacket in the photo as he was wearing now. In addition, the suspect wearing a pair of bright colored earrings, looked exactly like the ones in the video/photos.

Based on the information available, Officer Millane placed the suspect, a 17-year-old Braintree resident, under arrest for breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony, larceny from a building and larceny over $250.

The jacket and earrings were confiscated and placed into evidence for court purposes.

Nice work!

Real Estate

Would Require Banks To Publicly Disclose
Who Owns A Residential Mortgage

Keenan Files Mandatory Mortgage Filing Bill

Banks and mortgage lenders would be prohibited from secretly selling or reassigning mortgages under legislation filed by Sen. John F. Keenan.

The bill would require banks and mortgage lenders to record every residential mortgage transaction with the local Registry of Deeds so that homeowners can quickly find out who actually holds the mortgage to their house.

The legislation is in response to recent disclosures that many of the nation's largest mortgage holders ignored the long-standing practice of publicly recording mortgage transactions, and instead used a private electronic recording service that often would not contain the most up-to-date information. Many major mortgage holders hire secondary service companies to bill and collect payments, further obfuscating the ownership chain.

"Under no circumstance should homeowners not be able to quickly find out who owns the note to what is often times their most valuable asset," said Sen. Keenan. "The time and cost it takes to file a simple document at the local Registry of Deeds is inconsequential compared to the amount of money these financial institutions make selling and servicing these loans."

Sen. Keenan filed the legislation at the request of Norfolk County Registrar of Deeds, William O'Donnell, who recently conducted a study of all foreclosure proceedings and found that only in 24% of cases did the company conducting the foreclosure match the owner of the mortgage on record at the Registry.

"This legislation would try to address, what are at best, sloppy business practices that many lending institutions, especially the large lending institutions, have exhibited when it comes to filing assignments of mortgages," O'Donnell said. "This legislation will help clarify the real estate title issues that have recently developed which can only help the homeowner."

Sen. Keenan said homeowners looking to refinance their mortgage or short-sell their home have experienced significant delays while banks untangle the mortgage assignment trail in an effort to clear a title. Municipalities and neighbors can sometimes also have difficulty determining who to contact to report a foreclosed, vacant property that has fallen into disrepair.

Massachusetts Attorney General Martha Coakley in November announced she was suing five of the nation's largest banks for illegally foreclosing on residential mortgages as well as deceptive loan servicing. Among the issues raised by Attorney General Coakley in her lawsuit was the use of a private electronic mortgage registration system, which, she said, has "undermined our public land record system."

Under current Massachusetts state law, most residential mortgages or mortgage assignments are not required to be filed with the local Registry of Deeds, although failure to do so can negatively impact the mortgage holders legal standing in any future court action. Only mortgages affecting so-called "registered land" or land that has been previously adjudicated in land court, are required by law to be filed at the registry. Registered land accounts for approximately 20% of all properties in Massachusetts. The long-standing tradition in Massachusetts, however, dating back to the late 18th century, has been to record all property-related instruments — such as deeds, titles, and mortgages — in order to properly and publicly document all interests in property.

Arthur Ducharme Loved Family, Adams History

tory of the church and the Adams family who have worshipped there.

"This is a very sad day, to say goodbye to a wonderful friend to my family. There are no words to describe the loss the world has had today," said Jarrett McKay Adams. "Arthur was a very happy man, and he had great pride in showing the crypt of my forefathers. I am certain he is up there having a cup of tea with them right now."

Adams also noted a story of when his father and Ducharme would visit the crypt and leave their hats on them as a sign of respect. After going back to retrieve their hats, they would find money in them because people had thought they were collection plates.

Those who spoke at the service asked that the memories of Mr. Ducharme never be forgotten. Family friend Virginia Gaffey spoke of meeting Ducharme and his wife in school and the memories that followed.

"Our friendship started many years ago, when I had moved to Milton and started at a new school, and it has been a family, a beautiful family over the years," said Gaffey. "I would come, later in our friendship, to the laying of the wreath and see Art in his very best performance."

MEMORIAL WREATH - similar to the Presidential wreaths that commemorate the birthday anniversaries of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams - adorns the inside foyer of the United First Parish Church in memory of Mr. Arthur Ducharme, the longtime director of the Historic Interpretive Program at the church. The wreath, set up on the same stand as the Presidential wreaths during Mr. Ducharme's funeral service, was an expression of sympathy from friends of the Historic Interpretive Program.

Gaffey added that it is the memories Mr. Ducharme left with his family and friends that need to be remembered most.

"The best thing that anyone owns is their memories," said Gaffey. "When you lose your memory you have lost everything. We always have to remember what Art left with us."

Gaffey said she was inspired by the devotion Mr. Ducharme's children showed to him during his final days and hopes that they find peace quickly.

Natalie Ducharme, wife of Arthur's third son Bill, read a touching letter that Ducharme's five children had written shortly after he died. In the letter, the children recalled their memories of their father, and reflected on their lives with him the Monday before his death.

"We were fortunate to have such a strong father figure in our lives," read Natalie. "We are proud of your accomplishments, and how calm and genuine you were with your grandchildren. We could go on and on with our found memories of you."

In the letter, the children talk of ordering Chinese food the night before Jan. 10, and picking out fortune cookies. Alma, Arthur's wife, picked an extra one out for him. The fortune inside read something that made the whole room that night go silent, along with the whole church Saturday morning.

"No one is standing in your way anymore, time to move forward," read Natalie. "When mom read the fortune we all knew you were beginning your new journey."

Other memories they listed off were of Mr. Ducharme's love of Moxie, rootbeer popsicles, coffee ice cream, and Saturday Night Live among others. They wrote of their father's loving touch as he took their faces in his hands, and the time he taught them all to dance, noting that some of them weren't very good.

Rev. Elizabeth Wheatley-Dyson, from St. Andrews Episcopal Church in Hanover, spoke of Mr. Ducharme saying that he always made everyone he met feel special. Mr. Ducharme also filmed a documentary of the rebuilding of St. Andrews. Rev. Wheatley-Dyson said it was something that meant a lot to not only the church but also future generations.

"Arthur always believed it was so important to teach the future generations," said Rev. Wheatley-Dyson. "It was remarkable how he was able to get the youth engaged in events, such as the wreath laying."

She also read a letter that was delivered to Mr. Ducharme and his wife a few days before his death. The letter spoke of how inspiring Ducharme was with his love of Quincy's two U.S. Presidents, and how caring of a man he was to everyone he met.

"I was impressed with the expansion of the birthday celebration throughout the year," read Rev. Wheatley-Dyson. "The Adams crypt brought us together professionally, and I loved how your eyes sparkled with animation as you told the stories of our presidents."

For Rev. Bennett, Mr. Ducharme was the man that made each wreath laying event at the church a special one.

"He told the stories of the Presidents with a special passion," Rev. Bennett said. "What had been a short ceremony years ago has now developed into a major civic event. Each year he would include yet another speaker. He was deeply devoted right to his very last day."

Bennett spoke of Mr. Ducharme's devotion to the two First Ladies and how he told their stories with a special enthusiasm saying you can never forget the ladies.

"Arthur loved meeting people, and people loved Arthur," Rev. Bennett said. "We have letters from those who came to visit saying how much they enjoyed their trip here, and telling stories of Arthur."

Although he was very active in the church, and the history of John and John Quincy Adams, Mr. Ducharme was celebrated for the memories he left behind. To many, he will be missed.

"Hold Arthur's memory in your hearts and minds," Rev. Bennett said at the conclusion of the service. "Hold the worth of his smile, the twinkle in his face, his laughter with you. Celebrate his living and cherish his memory, he will be missed."

famous 1963 "I Have a Dream" speech. "It still rings true today in terms of some of those messages as to how we need to conduct ourselves as a country," she said of the speech.

Leonard, who has an undergraduate degree from Northeastern and law degree from Suffolk, said students shouldn't need to worry about the cost of higher education.

"Our children should be able to receive the best education regardless of where they come from or their economic status," she said. "Especially in a state like Massachusetts where we are the Mecca of colleges, I would suggest to you that no child who wants to go to college should ever have to worry about 'my family does not have the money.'"

Leonard also said the country needs to find a way to get jobs for those who want them.

"Americans, regardless of their status, should be provided with opportunity that would allow them to have good jobs and therefore the ability to have a roof over their heads and food on the table without worry about how they're going to make it to today let alone tomorrow," Leonard said. "In this great country of ours, with all of these brilliant minds, I can't believe that we as a nation cannot figure out how to make this work."

Congressman Stephen Lynch of South Boston, whose district will include Quincy starting next year, also said King's words ring true today. "In this difficult time," he said, "a lot of [King's] messages provide guidance, especially today with the struggles we're

Lynch also praised community groups for their work. "I know many of the groups that are represented here today," he said, "from the health centers to the YMCA, the Germantown Neighborhood Association, all of the groups here today are spending their lives and their time in a meaningful cause, much as Dr. King asked."

Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey emceed the breakfast. Other officials in attendance included state Sen. John Keenan, state Rep. Tacky Chan, City Councillors Doug Gutro, Kevin Coughlin, Brad Croall, and Kirsten Hughes, School Committee members Anne Mahoney, Emily Lebo and Dave McCarthy, and Police Chief Paul Keenan and several other police officers.

Germantown afterschool students in grades 1 and 2 performed a song about King set to the tune of "Frère Jacques."

Students in grades 3, 4, and 5 sang "He's had the Whole World in his Dream" and "Together," the latter written by their teacher Emmanuel Janvier. High school student William Young read Langston Hughes' poem "A Dream Deferred," and high school students Adam Szeto, Jennifer Leung, and Jennifer Nguyen performed a Hip Hop dance. John Ireland, vice president of operations for the South Shore YMCA, was the first to speak at the event. He said it was appropriate King's birthday is celebrated at the beginning of the year.

"It's fitting the Dr. King holiday is really the first holiday of the year," Ireland said. "Many of our national holidays have to do with celebrations, and certainly Dr. King's birthday is reason for celebration, but much more important than that it's a call to action. It's appropriate at this time of year that we're all reminded of the work that needs to be done in the area of social justice."

South Shore YMCA CEO Paul Gorman thanked representatives from community groups who were there, quoting King.

"As I was researching some Martin Luther King, Jr.'s many famous quotes," Gorman said, "I came upon one that would be appropriate with our crowd today: 'an individual has not started living until he can rise above the narrow confines of his individual concerns to the broader concerns of all humanity.'"

"That really says a lot to everyone that's in this room today."

Quincy Woman Struck, Killed By Car On Sea St.

By EMILY TAFT

An 80-year-old resident of Merrymount was struck and killed by a car driving on Sea Street Sunday afternoon.

Prena Percovic, age 80, of 157 Albatross Rd., was hit and killed by a car in front of 485 Sea St. Sunday at 5:11 p.m., according to Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan.

Joseph Shuman, 55, of 71 Lind St., Quincy, was taking a left turn onto Sea Street when witnesses say Percovic came into the crosswalk in a hurry, Dougan said. Percovic was hit on the side of the road. Two witnesses said that Shuman did not appear to be speeding at the time.

Dougan said that Shuman stated he noticed a vehicle behind him but was not aware of the woman in the crosswalk. Shuman pulled over at the time of the accident.

Percovic was taken to Quincy Medical Center and later transferred to Boston Medical Center where she was pronounced dead, according to Dougan.

According to police, Shuman was issued a citation for motor vehicle homicide, negligent operation of a motor vehicle and failure to yield to a pedestrian in a crosswalk.

The accident is still under investigation by the accident reconstruction team, Dougan said.

Bellotti: Programs Can Help End Crime Cycle

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti has introduced two new programs designed to compel inmates to be more responsible for themselves and their families.

The programs are part of the sheriff's overall mission of reducing crime by preventing inmates from reoffending after they finish serving their jail sentences.

Starting in February, the two new programs will address the topics of proper parenting and responsible money management.

"Many inmates at the jail come from dysfunctional homes where they did not have role models on how to be a good parent or how to manage finances in a way that benefits an entire family," Bellotti said. "It's unfortunate but true that a lot of these men simply do not have the fundamental skills that most of us take for granted.

"While these inmates must always bear the responsibility for their criminal actions, we have the opportunity to change them while they are incarcerated. By giving them some basic tools, we can stop the cycle of crime so that the next generation of kids grows up with a better chance to succeed," he added.

The parenting program will address issues such as reunification with family and age-appropriate discipline. The money management program will cover topics as basic as establishing and managing a checking account and how to deal with debts and fees accumulated during incarceration.

"Our guiding philosophy is that these programs must benefit the larger law-abiding community. Otherwise, we would not put them in place," Sheriff Bellotti said. "When we stop offenders from reoffending and when we stop criminal tendencies from being passed along to a new generation, everyone wins."

BBB Names Top Ten Scams Of 2011

Better Business Bureau investigates thousands of scams every year, from the latest gimmicks to schemes as old as the hills.

Its new Scam Source (bbb.org/scam) is a comprehensive resource on scam investigations from BBBs around the country, with tips from BBB, law enforcement and others. Sign up to receive Scam Alerts by email. Consumers can also be a scam detective by reporting scams they've discovered.

Scams have been divided into nine major categories. And the BB has also picked the top scam in each, plus the Scam of the Year.

Top Job Scam

BBB sees lots of secret shopper schemes, work-from-home scams, and other phony job offers, but the worst job-related scam can dash your hopes and steal your identity. Emails, websites and online applications all look very professional, and the candidate is even interviewed for the job (usually over the phone) and then receives an offer.

In order to start the job, however, the candidate has to fill out a "credit report" or provide bank information for direct deposit of their "paychecks."

The online forms are nothing more than a way to capture sensitive personal data – Social Security number, bank accounts, etc. – that can easily be used for identity theft. And, of course, there is no job, either.

Top Sweepstakes and Lottery Scam

Sweepstakes and lottery scams come in all shapes and sizes, but the bottom line is almost always this: You've won a whole lot of money, and in order to claim it you have to send us a smaller amount of money. Oh, and keep this confidential until we're ready to announce your big winnings.

This year's top sweepstakes scam was undoubtedly the email claiming to be from Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg announcing that the recipient was the winner of $1 million from the popular social networking site. These kinds of scams often use celebrities or other famous names to make their offer seem more genuine.

If you aren't sure, don't click on the link but instead go directly to the homepage of the company mentioned. If they are really giving away $1 million, there will be some kind of announcement on their website. But don't waste too much time looking.

Top Social Media/Online Dating Scam

On the Internet, it's easy to pretend to be someone you are not.

Are you really friends with all of your "Friends" on Facebook? Do you have a lot of personal information on a dating site?

With so much information about us online, a scammer can sound like they know you.

There are tons of ways to use social media for scams, but one this year really stands out because it appeals to our natural curiosity... and it sounds like it's coming from a friend.

Viral videos claiming to show everything from grisly footage of Osama bin Laden's death to the latest celebrity hijinks have shown up on social media sites, often looking as if they have been shared by a friend.

When you click on the link, you are prompted to "upgrade your Flash player," but the file you end up downloading contains a worm that logs into your social media account, sends similar messages to your friends, and searches for your personal data.

The next time you see a sensational headline for the latest viral video, resist the urge to peek.

Top Home Improvement Scam

Always near the top of BBB complaint data are home improvement contractors who often leave your home worse than they found it.

They usually knock on your door with a story or a deal – the roofer who can spot some missing shingles on your roof, the paver with some leftover asphalt who can give you a great deal on driveway resealing.

Itinerant contractors move around, keeping a step ahead of the law...and angry consumers.

The worst are those who move in after a natural disaster, taking advantage of desperate homeowners who need immediate help and may not be as suspicious as they would be under normal circumstances.

A large percentage of BBB's Accredited Businesses are home contractors who want to make sure you know they are legitimate, trustworthy and dependable. Find one at bbb.org/search.

Top Check Cashing Scam

Two legitimate companies – Craig's List and Western Union – are used for an inordinate amount of scamming these days, and especially check cashing scams.

Here's how it works:

Someone contacts you via a Craig's List posting, maybe for a legitimate reason like buying your old couch or perhaps through a scam like hiring you as a secret shopper.

Either way, they send you a check for more than the amount they owe you, and they ask you to deposit it into your bank account and then send them the difference via Western Union.

A deposited check takes a couple of days to clear, whereas wired money is gone instantly. When the original check bounces, you are out whatever money you wired...and you're still stuck with the old couch.

Top Phishing Scam

"Phishing" is when you receive a suspicious phone call asking for personal information or an email that puts a virus on your computer to hunt for your data.

It's almost impossible to avoid them if you have a telephone or an email account. But the most pernicious phishing scam this year disguised itself as official communication from NACHA – the National Automated Clearing House Association – which facilitates the secure transfer of billions of electronic transactions every year.

The email claims one of your transactions did not go through, and it hopes you react quickly and click on the link before thinking it through. It may take you to a fake banking site "verify" your account information, or it may download malware to infiltrate your computer.

Top Identity Theft Scam

There are a million ways to steal someone's identity. This one has gotten so prevalent that many hotels are posting warnings in their lobby.

Here's how it works:

You get a call in your hotel room in the middle of the night. It's the front desk clerk, very apologetic, saying their computer has crashed and they need to get your credit card number again, or they must have gotten the number wrong because the transaction won't go through, and could you please read the number back so they can fix the problem?

Scammers are counting on you being too sleepy to catch on that the call isn't from the hotel at all, but from someone outside who knows the direct-dial numbers for the guest rooms. By the time morning rolls around and you are clear-headed, your credit card has been on a major shopping spree.

Top Financial Scam

In challenging economic times, many people are looking for help getting out of debt or hanging on to their home, and almost as many scammers appear to take advantage of desperate situations. Because the federal government announced or expanded several mortgage relief programs this year, all kinds of sound-alike websites have popped up to try to fool consumers into parting with their money. Some sound like a government agency, or even part of BBB or other nonprofit consumer organization. Most ask for an upfront fee to help you deal with your mortgage company or the government (services you could easily do yourself for free), and almost all leave you in more debt than when you started.

Top Sales Scam

Sales scams are as old as humanity, but the Internet has introduced a whole new way to rip people off. Penny auctions are very popular because it seems like you can get something useful – cameras, computers, etc. – for way below retail. But you pay a small fee for each bid (usually 50 cents to $1) and if you aren't the winner, you lose that bid money. Winners often are not even the top bidder, just the last bidder when time runs out. Although not all penny auction sites are scams, some are being investigated as online gambling. BBB recommends you treat them the same way you would legal gambling in a casino – know exactly how the bidding works, set a limit for yourself, and be prepared to walk away before you go over that limit.

Scam of the Year

Yep, it's us – the BBB phishing scam. Hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of people have gotten emails that very much look like an official notice from BBB.

The subject line says something like "Complaint Against Your Business," and the instructions tell the recipient to either click on a link or open an attachment to get the details. If the recipient does either, a malicious virus is launched on their computer...a virus that can steal banking information, passwords and other critical pieces of information needed for cyber-theft.

BBB is working with security consultants and federal law enforcement to track down the source of these emails, and has already shut down dozens of hijacked websites. Anyone who has opened an attachment or clicked on a link should run a complete system scan using reputable anti-virus software.

If your computer is networked with others, all machines on the network should be scanned, as well.

For more information on these and other scams, go to BBB Scam Source (www.bbb.org/scam).

The Most Successful Class In Presidents' History

Quincy's Six Seniors Leaving A Lasting Legacy

By SEAN BRENNAN

All the way back in 2007 six youngsters came together to develop their basketball skills while participants in the Lady Presidents Youth Basketball program.

Fast-forward five years, and these same six are now the foundation of Quincy High's girls' basketball team - a team that finished 2011 with a school record 17 wins.

Seniors Kiley McDonald, Caity Lowry, Nicole Lamie, Juli Tomer, Emily Nguyen and Maria Berberan are best friends on and off the court. They have been together through thick-and-thin, in good times and bad, and now, playing for a final time together these six have Quincy on track to match or even surpass last year's record.

In McDonald, Lowry and Berberan, the Presidents have three hard-nosed front court defenders who can light up the scoreboard with an arsenal of low post moves while rebounding with abandon. Nguyen, Tomer and Lamie pester opposing teams from the backcourt, supplied by high-energy defense and deadly accuracy from the outside.

It all adds up to the perfect storm for Head Coach Jeff Bretsch. How many high school coaches can say that they have been able to coach and develop six players, all with unique skills sets, from the moment that they step on the high school court?

"It is fun," Bretsch said when discussing the Quincy Six. "We have been talking about them since they were in the seventh grade. I have been coaching that whole time and we were always so excited about this group because they complimented each other even (back) then pretty well."

"You hear so much about chemistry and you are hoping for team chemistry and that is why we are so good," he continued. "We don't fill up the box score, we don't have a 1,600-point scorer right now, but what we have is a bunch of kids who really like playing together and who are all super unselfish and know how to play a role on the court; they relish that."

"(These six) enjoy being a team and I think it has been very easy to get them to play hard-nosed defense because they are committed to each other and have each other's backs. The Duxbury coach called us a five-headed monster and I got a kick out of that, but that is what we feel like out there. No matter what we are doing or who has the ball, we feel confident in their ability to do something productive."

A+ In Chemistry

When talking with the Quincy Six it is easy to feel the closeness that they have is real. It doesn't matter to any of them who scores the most points, plays the best defense or gets their name in the headlines. All that matters is winning. That is the secret ingredient.

"I just think the team chemistry is crazy," said Tomer. "We've known each other and have been playing with each other for years now. I think it's just a part of us, so when we are playing we know what we each are capable of. We all have our own specific role but I think we are all good at different things and that is our biggest weapon because each role is so critical."

Any team that has six experienced seniors on its roster would seem to present the possibility that someone in that group might feel like they deserve to be the top dog. That may happen some places. Just not at Quincy and not with this group of girls.

"Everyone of us is a leader and we all seem like captains," said McDonald who along with Lowry are team captains this season. "(These five) are all positive and help the younger kids, which is an important thing. We have six of us who have all played together but there are seven other players on the team and everyone is good about getting them involved and helping them when they need help."

No Pressure to Repeat

Last year's Quincy team surprised a lot of people with just how successful they ending up being. Coming into the season, McDonald and Tomer were the only players out of the six who had seen any varsity time. Tomer started as a freshman before missing most of her sophomore year due to injury and McDonald started ten games as a tenth-grader.

But their collective talent revealed itself from the start.

"Last year was a little surprise for all of us," said Bretsch about the team that reeled off 17 wins. "But these girls have an inner drive and an inner confidence and they work like crazy in the off-season. I expected them to be a very good team but I thought we would be a great team in February and not December, but we clicked in and I got the sense that we were capable of a lot after a couple of big early wins. At that point we all looked at each other and said this might be interesting. It was an exciting season."

It was also a season that ended in disappointment following a loss to Taunton High in the first round of the Division 1 South playoffs. However, in the big picture last season gave the Quincy Six some extra motivation for their last go-around this year.

"I don't think there is any pressure," said Lowry before adding, "I just think last year raised the bar and it gave us confidence. So now we just realize what we are capable of and how far we can go. I wouldn't say it is pressure but more motivation. That was a great record last year and it is encouraging; we know what we can accomplish."

There is an elephant in the room with this unique set of circumstances and that is that this season is it for these six as teammates. Talk about motivation.

"That is motivation for us because we all do realize that it is our last year together," McDonald noted. "We all love basketball so much and we are so close to each other that we want to (win) for each other. We all know we can go far and everyone finally believes that."

Lasting Legacy

Teams that win are always remembered. That is the nature of a legacy. Like it or not.

Although these six aren't losing any sleep over whether or not folks will remember them 20 years from now for what they are doing today, leaving a lasting legacy is important to them. You don't work so hard to be forgotten so quickly.

"(Leaving a legacy) is a huge part of us," said Tomer. "Basketball consumes so much time, willingly. It sounds so cliché, but basketball has been a huge part of all our lives. That is what we look for because in the summer we look for summer leagues and in the fall we look for a fall leagues. Then when the season comes we just can't wait; (basketball) is such a big part of all of us and I feel like we all feel that mutually, which is why we are so successful. This is something that we will always remember."

The legacy that these girls are leaving builds everyday.

Quincy is off to a 6-2 start (not including league games versus Whitman-Hanson and Pembroke played last week) with big wins already over Brockton (twice), North Quincy (twice), Wareham, and Duxbury. That's a 23-5 mark in the last 28 regular season games. But losses to Braintree and Scituate mean that work still needs to be done.

"I think we expected to be good," McDonald said. "Our (team) defense has been great and that was our main focus this year to get our defense to where it is supposed to be. We have a long way to go but everyone is excited about that."

"We have had a pretty tough early season schedule," added Bretsch. "So to be 6-2, I am happy with that. We know that there are some talented teams in the league but we feel good."

All Good Things Come To An End

This remarkable run is going to end sooner rather than later. The ultimate goal is to have it end with state title, but the talent in Division 1 could make that milestone difficult to achieve. It is not impossible; nothing is when you have the type of unspoken connection these six have.

Regardless of how the rest of the season plays out, the Quincy Six will be leaving the girls' basketball program at Quincy High on solid footing.

"I love coaching these girls," said Bretsch about his senior class. "How many teams can boast of their entire team being on the honor roll? All four of my senior starters (McDonald, Lamie, Lowry, Tomer) are in the National Honor Society. These girls are self-motivated and they have always made playing positive and fun. I have coached Juli for four years and the rest for three. That is a longtime to be a basketball family and we still get along, which is remarkable."

"I see our whole program developing," continued Bretsch who in eleven years has 120 wins. "We have put a lot of work into providing quality instruction in the program and our freshmen and jayvee teams are consistently winning and for years that wasn't the case. To see all three programs have success is a thrill."

"This (group of seniors) is the beginning. And they are a special group. This isn't you run-of-the-mill class."

She Said, She Said

During a roundtable interview with the Quincy High School senior class, the six seniors were given the opportunity to express their thoughts on one another. Space in the feature didn't allow for what was said, but I feel it appropriate to let the readers see what each girl did say about the other.

Pretty cool stuff. But not unexpected considering how close this group is on and off the basketball court.

Kiley McDonald on Juli Tomer: "On the court Juli is one of the most positive players and her hustle is like nothing I have ever seen. Her drive (to the hoop) is so good and it opens up so many things. But her defense is why we win games. I know a lot of people will ask how many points did you get and, that's important, but I feel like defense is so much more important and her defense is where we get our center."

Juli Tomer on Maria Berberan: "Maria is relentless. She is the best-shot blocker any of us have ever seen. The fact that she is always motivated and how much of a team player she is, is awesome for the team."

Maria Berberan on Nicole Lamie: "Lamie is phenomenal. That North Quincy game (the Dec. 23 game in which Lamie banked in the game-winner as time expired) is a game that I will remember for the rest of my life. Nicole always keeps her head up and she brings it every game."

Nicole Lamie on Emily Nguyen: "Emily comes off the bench, but when she comes in it is never a letdown. She is so fast and can cover anyone. Emily is relentless. She is always smiling and laughing and that keeps us all together. I love it."

Emily Nguyen on Caity Lowry: "Caity and I go way back. She is really aggressive on the court and she gives (me) the motivation to be aggressive. Caity is tremendously amazing at defense and this year she has changed up her game. She is just a really good player."

Caity Lowry on Kiley McDonald: "Kiley is the nicest person ever. She doesn't yell, but she is a structured, silent team captain that does things by example. Kiley is one of the best rebounders I have ever seen. And she is an all-around great person."

North Quincy Red Raiders Ice Scituate 3-0 In Boys Hockey

Dunn Earns First Shutout; Grady Gets Hat Trick

By ALAN McCALL

Prior to last Saturday's game against North Quincy, Scituate High head hockey coach Mike Breen was curious if the Red Raiders goaltender was the same one his team faced last season. Unfortunately for him and his Sailors, it was the same James Dunn between the pipes for North Quincy, who turned away all 28 Scituate shots leading his team to a key 3-0 win over the first place Sailors at Hobomock Arena.

It was Scituate's first league loss of the season.

"He (Dunn) saw the puck really well tonight and did a great job staying tight in his crease and not allowing second opportunities for them," said North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons, whose team improved to 4-4-2 this season and 3-1-1 in the Patriot League.

On the offensive side, the Red Raiders were led by junior forward Shawn Grady, who tallied all three goals, accomplishing a natural hat trick in the process.

After both teams spent the first period kicking the tires, Grady broke the ice at the 9:51 mark of the second stanza with a goal fueled by pure hustle. Grady's first chance between the circles was kicked out by Scituate goaltender Mike Soucey and steered behind the goal, however Grady followed his shot, stole the puck from a defender and spun back in front of the goal and caught the top left corner of the cage with a perfect snipe. Nick Furey and Andrew Currie were credited with assists.

The Sailors (7-2-1, 5-1-1) had ample opportunities to get the equalizer, as half of their total shots on goal for the game came in the second period. However, Dunn was equal to the task, including twice robbing Alex Way from point blank range. Grady doubled the lead with 1:53 to play in the period, again using his hustle to his advantage. After a Red Raiders flurry on goal was finally controlled by Scituate, Grady stole the puck from behind, turned on goal and ripped a perfect wrist shot under the cross bar. Nick McGaughey earned an assist on the play.

"Both of his first two goals were a result of hustle," said Gibbons. "He does the extra things you need to do to make plays, and those two goals were a result of that."

The Sailors attacked the NQ goal in the third period, and were unlucky early in the period, twice hitting the goal post. They also had a goal called back, as the officials ruled that a rebound attempt was hit out of the air too high, thus nullifying the goal. Their best chance came midway through the period as two NQ penalties 26 seconds apart gave Scituate a 5-on-3 advantage for 1:04. However North Quincy's triangle defense kept Scituate out on the perimeter and minimized their scoring opportunities.

Scituate pulled the goaltender in the final two minutes in favor of an extra skater, bit a cross checking penalty on the Sailors cancelled that advantage and Grady responded with his third goal off a loose puck with 17 seconds remaining in the game.

"This is a huge two points for us and positions us to make a run at the league title. We knew we had to come out with our best effort and we did. Being able to shut them down on that two-man advantage was very big, our kids played with great discipline in that situation," said Gibbons.

Breen was impressed with the effort of North Quincy also. "They (NQ) always give us a good battle and they outplayed us today," said Breen. "They beat us along the boards most of the game and we came out flat and there was just no catching up. Their goalie had an outstanding game."

Game notes: It was Shawn Grady's first game back skating a regular shift for North Quincy after suffering a hip injury in the first week of the season... This was the first time this season that Scituate has not scored on the power play, they had five chances on Saturday... The shutout was James Dunn's first of the season... The penalty box was a busy place as 11 penalties were called, six for Scituate and five for North Quincy... Both teams, along with Pembroke tied for the league championship last season.

ImPACT Testing Will Show Signs of Potential Head Injuries School Committee Learns About Concussions

By EMILY TAFT

School committee members learned the value of concussion testing in athletes during their Jan. 11 meeting.

The committee heard from Athletic Director Jim Rendle, Director of Student Support Services Maura Papile, Coordinator of Health Services Jane Kisieli, and special guest Dr. Patrick Carroll from Crown Colony Medical Center. The four spoke with the committee about the importance of ImPACT testing with all student athletes, and training that has been done throughout both high schools.

ImPACT provides computerized neurocognitive assessment tools and services that are used by medical doctors, psychologists, athletic trainers, and other licensed healthcare professionals to assist them in determining an athlete's ability to return to play after suffering a concussion. According to the ImPACT website the test is the most widely used computer-based program in the world and is implemented effectively across high school, collegiate, and professional levels of sport participation.

"This is a significant public health issues in our schools today," said Dr. Carroll. "There are 62,000 concussions reported each year. It is important to make the proper decision when letting an athlete return to play after a concussion."

The 35-minute computer program tests how well an athlete can remember things, their reaction time, and provides reliable baseline test information. The test results are then used to evaluate an athlete that sustains a head injury to determine if they are able to return to the sport.

A base line test has been done on most Quincy public school athletes according to Rendle.

"Over 400 athletes at the high schools have been tested already. We are taking the guess work out of the health issue," said Rendle. "We have spoken to the coaches to inform them about signs and symptoms to look for."

Rendle added that they have also trained middle school students on concussions by putting courses in their health classes, and in the high schools an information sheet has been given out to every athlete.

Health teachers, nurses, gym teachers, and coaches have all been trained on what to look for if a concussion occurs, and how to proceed from that point on with the effected athlete. ImPACT online offers a training course that coaches and other faculty members are able to take.

According to Papile, Dick's Sporting Goods gave Quincy Public Schools a grant for the cost of the first year to have ImPACT testing in the schools. The cost for the school system after the grant expires will be no more than $1,000 according to Dr. Carroll.

As of right now ImPACT testing is not a requirement to participate in sports in Quincy Public Schools, but the hope is to have a policy made for testing to become a requirement. Those student athletes who have a suspected head injury are required to get medical clearance before they return to their sport. Students and their parents are required to sign an athletic permit card before participating in a sport; a revised copy of that card is now being handed out to include information about concussions and policy's that follow.

The school committee voted to move the proposed policy into the policy sub-committee for review and approval.

Tim Liuzzo Scored 19, Grabbed 14 Boards Red Raiders Rally Past Duxbury, 57-53

By CHRIS McDANIEL

Making a statement to the rest of the Patriot League's Keenan Division that the debate about which team should be considered the program to beat this winter, the North Quincy boys basketball team got a key divisional win against Duxbury last Friday night, winning 57-53 behind a great game from senior captain Tim Liuzzo.

Liuzzo had a double-double, finishing with 19 points and 14 rebounds. Liuzzo also had eight of the Red Raiders' 21 first-half points.

North Quincy coach Kevin Barrett described Liuzzo's game as "enormous," while also saying, "That's what a three-year starter and two-time captain does."

Liuzzo's best quarter coincided with his team's best quarter, which was in the third. The Red Raiders entered the second-half trailing 28-21 but outscored the Dragons 20-10 in the first eight minutes of the second half. In the third quarter, the senior forward put up nine points, one less than the whole Duxbury team, in a manner that didn't have Liuzzo dominating the ball and just four teammates watching.

Liuzzo found many of his baskets on tough second-chance put backs. He also showed dynamic post-up and drive moves. In the second quarter Liuzzo got the ball at the corner of the free-throw line and drove to the hoop and finished with a spin move, lay-in that looked to be unguardable.

As unstoppable as Liuzzo was for North Quincy, Curtis Owen was just as good for Duxbury. Owen finished the game with 25 points, 10 of which came in the fourth quarter. Owen hit an array of jump shots coming off screens.

"Sometimes you just have to tip your hat to a kid like that," said Barrett. "It's not like he was getting easy shots, they were tough shots he was making."

Despite Owen's big game,

Red Raider junior Marquis McClendon did a solid job trying to contain him all game as Owen had McClendon running all over the floor and fighting through screens. Another disadvantage McClendon had was that Owen is 6'3", while McClendon is 5'10", with a high release and good ball-handling skills.

The Red Raiders got off to a slow start and fell down 9-2 to start the game. North Quincy didn't have their first lead until near the end of the third quarter. During the end of the third and start of the fourth quarter, North went on a 10-0 run that gave them their first lead, one they wouldn't give back.

Red Raider sophomore Kyle Richardson made some key contributions off the bench. In a first half where North Quincy seemed out of control and inefficient, a huge lift was given to them by the 5'6" Richardson.

On back-to-back possessions, Richardson finished two tough fast-break lay-ins. The first was set up with a steal by Daniel Gould. One of the Richardson's lay-ups looked like it was almost stolen by a Duxbury player or could have been a jump ball, but Richardson had the strength to rip the ball out from being tied up and make the tough lay-in and get the foul call.

"For a sophomore, he continues to impress," said Barrett. "I think in the first half he changed the momentum on difficult shots." Barrett also pointed out that Richardson gave some tough, high pressure, on-ball defense in the fourth quarter.

Another key player in North's second half comeback was senior captain Paul Cunniff. Cunniff had seven second half points. In the third quarter he got two of his points off an offensive rebound despite Duxbury's massive height advantage. Duxbury had three guards listed taller than North Quincy's tallest player. Cunniff is listed at 5'11" and Duxbury had nine players listed as taller than him.

Cunniff also added a great drive and a lefty lay-in to his third quarter point total. All of Cunniff's fourth quarter points came off free throws, including his last one to ice the game. With North leading 56-53 with under 5 seconds remaining, Cunniff hit one of two free throws to secure the victory for the Red Raiders.

The Goulds also had big games for the Red Raiders. Daniel had 10 points and Patrick had 11, most of which came in the second half. Patrick had six of his eleven points come in a tight fourth quarter.

Patrick Gould's best shot came to start the fourth quarter. The score was 41-38 North Quincy who was in the middle of a run. Patrick hit a tough floater that banked in.

North Quincy won the game because of a dominant second half after a poor first half. Basketball discipline was the difference between the halves. In the first half, the Red Raiders turned the ball over eight times. In the second half they turned it over twice and drew 16 Dragon fouls. "We weren't physical enough in the first half," said Barrett.

Planning Board, Conservation Commission Approve Project S.S. YMCA Expected To Break Ground On 118,000-Square Foot Facility This Year

The South Shore YMCA announces it has passed another milestone in their effort to build a new state-of-the-art YMCA in Quincy to better serve the community.

After an extensive work shop and public review process the Quincy Planning Board and the Quincy Conservation Commission granted the YMCA approval to proceed with the project.

The project is being built to meet the increased demand from the community for critical YMCA programs and quality facilities, YMCA officials said.

The new Y will serve an additional 5,000 children and families in the area, and will include a new aquatic center, a larger gym, a synthetic-turf field for indoor sports, expanded health and wellness areas and a 200-meter indoor track. The project is expected to be complete in 2013.

"We are pleased with our continued progress with this project," said South Shore YMCA President and CEO Paul Gorman. "The South Shore Y is dedicated to strengthening the Quincy community, and we know that this new complex will allow us to do so much more for the thousands of individuals we serve on a daily basis."

The new building, which will be located next to the current facility on Coddington Street, will be 118,000 square feet. It will offer the 20,000 adults and children who are active with the Quincy branch of South Shore Y more than twice the usable space offered by the current facility. Escalating repair and maintenance costs have made the current location, which was built in the early 1950's, financially unsustainable and no longer adequate for the increased demands of the growing community.

Once complete, the new facility will house the largest swimming pool and indoor track available to the public in the region. In addition to the athletic amenities, it will house an expanded Early Learning Center, with eight classrooms and an outdoor playground. There will be additional space for the arts, wellness and leadership programs that have become a leading focus of today's YMCA. The new building will also allow the Y to enhance its unique focus on those individuals in the region with developmental and physical disabilities, something the current facility has been unable to fully accommodate.

The new Quincy facility will support the South Shore YMCA's extensive efforts in Germantown, which include a food pantry, GED programs and a Teens at Risk project.

The new facility will illustrate how the Y has evolved over the past several decades, according to Chairman of the Board of Directors Dan DeMarco.

"Most people think of the Y as somewhere to go and work out or take a dip in the pool, but we are so much more than that today," DeMarco said. "We are working to inspire and educate different generations about how to live a healthier life, giving individuals with disabilities an opportunity for more recreational activities, and helping parents and seniors learn more about how to live a healthier lifestyle."

In addition to announcing formal approval of the engineering plan from the city, the South Shore Y also announced that Callahan, Inc. of Bridgewater, MA will be the general contractor for the project. Callahan is a privately held, full service construction firm specializing in Construction Management, Preconstruction and General Contracting services. The company has successfully completed numerous projects throughout the Northeast. Among their many regional projects, Callahan recently served as the general contractor for the new Hanover High School and Athletic Facilities in Hanover, MA. The high school was completed ahead of schedule and came in significantly under budget. The company will be accepting bids for the YMCA project from all interested trade sub-contractors in the very near future.

The new facility will be funded directly by the South Shore Y and private donors. The South Shore Y has already secured close to a third of the cost of the project in the early stages of its Capital Campaign.

"We are making progress towards our ultimate goal — a state-of-the-art facility that can fully meet the needs of the community far into the future," DeMarco said.

Avoiding Hospital Readmissions

Question: What's worse than being admitted to the hospital? Answer: Being readmitted quickly after being released. Far too often, just when we're out of the hospital, something happens and we're right back where we started.

It's expensive, and those who study these things have looked at the reasons for frequent hospital readmissions.

Here are some of the statistics from the Center for Studying Health System Change:

—About 8 percent of adults go back into the hospital within a month, and one-third within a year.

—One-third of us don't see a doctor, nurse or anyone else within a month of being released from the hospital. After 90 days, 17 percent of us still haven't seen a doctor.

—Those of us who don't see a doctor are at a higher risk for going back into the hospital, especially those who also have other medical conditions. The sicker the patient, the higher the rate of return.

It doesn't matter what kind of insurance we have.

Researchers say new ways must be found to bridge the gap between the doctors and hospitals. At this point, even where there are programs and coordinators to manage the discharge process, it hasn't changed the rate of readmissions.

There's one additional, potentially serious glitch: One-third of doctors did not have the final hospital report on patients who did come in. And if they did have them, the reports were incomplete, and new medications might not be listed.

Here's a suggestion to keep from being readmitted: When you leave the hospital, make a nurse write down your prescriptions and instructions for aftercare. The minute you get home, call your doctor. Make the earliest appointment possible, and take your instructions.

To Your Good Health Inner Ear Often Cause of Dizziness

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 82 and in pretty good health except for a recent problem. During the day everything is fine, but when I lie down to go to sleep, the room starts to spin. It lasts about 10 seconds. Then if I turn my head to look at the clock, the dizziness returns. In the morning when I wake and turn my head again, the room spins.

Do I have an inner-ear infection? How can this problem be fixed? — J.C.

ANSWER: Although I can't give you 100 percent assurance, I can say on solid ground that you have benign positional vertigo, BPH. Vertigo is dizziness. BPH is not an inner-ear infection. It comes on just as you have written, with a change in the position of the head — lying down, turning to the side or looking up to a cupboard shelf. The attacks are brief but disrupting.

Crystals normally found in one part of the inner ear have migrated to another part. Moving the head activates the displaced crystals, and they send a message to the brain that brings on dizziness. The inner ear is not only for hearing; it's also for balance.

You can bring the crystals back to their original site through a series of movements called the Epley repositioning maneuvers. Sit on the side of a bed and bend your head to the shoulder on the side that triggers dizziness. Let's make it the right side, so you can follow the instructions. If it's the left, just change the direction.

With the head turned to the right, lie down so your head projects off the other side of the bed. When dizziness stops, turn the head to the left side, with the left ear facing down. Next, roll over on your left side so the head faces down for 10 to 15 seconds. Finally, return to the sitting position with your head bent slightly down in front. You might have to repeat the procedure more than twice. If this is too confusing, have your family doctor or an ENT doctor put you through the motions.

The booklet on vertigo explains the common causes of it and their treatment. To obtain a copy, write: Dr. Donohue — No. 801W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Why doesn't the heart ever get cancer? I've never seen this question asked or talked about on TV. Blood feeds tumors, so it makes sense that the heart would be a target. — C.V.

ANSWER: Tumors do arise in the heart. A somewhat-common benign tumor is a myxoma. It can disrupt the flow of blood through the heart. Malignant cancers, ones that spread and grow rapidly, also arise in the heart. They are quite rare. A rhabdomyosarcoma is a malignant tumor of heart muscle. The blood contained in the heart doesn't feed heart muscle. If it did, we'd never have heart attacks. Heart muscle is nourished by its own arteries. So are heart tumors.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

A SENSIBLE APPROACH

If you are plagued by back pain, wouldn't you rather treat the cause of your problem instead of masking its symptoms with drugs? If you are considering surgery, you certainly owe it to yourself to exhaust other proven, non-invasive forms of treatment before embarking on a far more complex and costly approach. When chiropractic treatment is combined with cardiovascular and strengthening exercises, circulation and muscle tone improve, which may help eliminate factors that lead to back pain. Aside from providing hands-on treatment, the chiropractor can suggest exercises that specifically strengthen pelvic-stabilizing muscles (trunk muscles); stretch the hamstrings, adductors, and other overly short or tight postural muscles; and develop better balance. Chiropractic helps the body function the way nature intended. Listen to your body and stop doing things that cause pain in your back. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe modern health care is undergoing an incredible revolution today. For safe and gentle chiropractic care, we invite you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

LET'S DEVELOPEMPATHY. "Empathy" is the ability to put ourselves in the other person's place and have some understanding of their situation.

A little girl was late returning from school. Her mother asked the reason for her delay. This little explained that a playmate had broken her doll and she had stopped to help her. The mother, wondering how her daughter could fix the little girl's doll, asked how she helped and her daughter replied, "I sat down and helped her cry."

As we go through life many of us have been placed in situations where we could find no words to express comfort and encouragement. All we could do is to help them cry.

In this needy world, wouldn't today be a good day to show empathy toward those who are less fortunate?

It is a mistaken idea that everyone has an equal chance in this life and if they do not make it, it is their own fault. . . The person who will reach out to someone else will discover a satisfaction that only empathy can bring . . .

John Hancock Polar Plunge Saturday At Wollaston Beach

Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission will hold its sixth annual John Hancock Birthday Polar Plunge Saturday, Jan. 21 at 10:30 a.m. at Wollaston Beach in Quincy.

This event is sponsored by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, Friends of Wollaston Beach and The Department of Conservation and Recreation.

"This is a great way to remember an unsung hero and to help local families," said Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission member Chickie Abdallah.

"John Hancock is our hometown founding father. Our Commission feels that asking people to raise money for underprivileged families is a great way to honor his legacy, and well, it is just a lot of fun to watch people jump into freezing cold water in January. At least they can run back to a heated bathhouse after they come out of the water, thanks to the Department of Conservation and Recreation."

All plunge participants or "Plungers" are invited to gather pledges from their friends and family to support Interfaith Social Services, the South Shore's multiservice center for families in need. Interfaith offers food, clothing, counseling, and assistance to impoverished South Shore residents. Last year their food pantry distributed over 28,000 bags of groceries to hungry families.

To participate in the Plunge, download a registration form at: www.InterfaithSocialServices.org.

ISS Executive Director Rick Doane said the winter months are when impoverished individuals need help the most.

"Local parents are being forced to choose between heating their homes and feeding their children. The funds raised by the John Hancock Plungers allows our programs to alleviate the suffering for many local families and children."

"You don't even have to go into the water to gather pledges," Abdallah said. "We want everyone to be able to join in so participation categories include: Full Plunger, Waist Wader, Knee Higher, Dunking Toe-Nut, and Geez - I Would If I Could."

"This is so much fun; we even have prizes for the oldest and youngest participants, person or group bringing in the largest amount of donations, and the best costume."

"Once again I am reminded why we need a hospital in our City. The care was timely, professional and compassionate."

"I wish to thank the elected officials, staff and residents of the City for their cards, prayers and well wishes. I am very fortunate to call Quincy home."

McFarland said he was honored to serve as city council president. The new president of Colonial Federal Savings Bank has also served as vice chairman of the school committee, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets and as city auditor.

"I am both honored and humbled to be here this evening in this capacity. I appreciate the support and confidence of the City Council."

"Councillor Coughlin, thank you for your very generous words of nomination last week and Councillor (Joseph) Finn, thank you for your second. I would like to thank the entire membership of the Quincy City Council for my election as City Council president."

He also extended congratulations to two new freshmen councillors: Brad Croall in Ward 2 and Kirsten Hughes in Ward 5; and to new Councillor-at-Large Doug Gutro for his "impressive city-wide campaign and victory."

McFarland also congratulated the other councillors for their victories last November: Margaret Laforest (Ward 1), Coughlin (Ward 3), Brian Palmucci (Ward 4), Brian McNamee (Ward 6) and Joe Finn (at-large).

"This is an energetic and enthusiastic City Council and I look forward to working with you and moving the city forward over the next two years."

He also praised former councillors John Keenan and Dan Raymondi for their service on the council. Keenan serves as a state senator and Raymondi was appointed Department of Public Works commissioner.

"John brought a high level of financial expertise to the City Council and Dan raised the bar on constituent service. We wish them well in their new roles," McFarland said.

McFarland recognized city employees for their dedication as well as the many volunteers who perform essential functions in municipal government.

"Over the last several years working with our employees we have saved the taxpayers millions of dollars by joining the state health-care system. I want to take this opportunity to thank all the hard working employees of the City for their dedication."

"Quite a bit of the work of the City Council involves working with our volunteer boards and commissions. I would like to thank the countless citizens who lend their expertise to the Planning Board, Zoning Board of Appeals, Conservation Commission, Park and Recreation Board, Council on Aging, Historic District Commission and numerous other volunteer opportunities in the City."

"It is important to both the elected officials and to the residents of the City," he added.

While the dissemination of news and information has been revolutionized through social media, McFarland told his colleagues "we need to take our time and thoroughly listen and access all points of view. The need for quick responses should not outweigh the time we need to deliberate."

"The decisions that we make affect the quality of life in the City of Quincy for the next 50 to 100 years. We have been blessed in Quincy with excellent leadership over the years and we will strive to earn the continued trust of the residents of Quincy."

Gutro Seeks Funding Info For Old City Hall Restoration

Councillor Doug Gutro is seeking an update from the Koch Administration relative to restoration, employee relocation, and long-term rehabilitation of Old City Hall (James R. McIntyre Government Center.)

In February 2011, the administration provided the City Council with a report citing the conditions and needs of Old City Hall. In June 2011, the City Council approved a request for $200,000 from the Community Preservation Act's historic reserve account.

However, those funds were not used in 2011, Gutro said.

Since June, city departments and employees have been relocated from Old City Hall, a private lease has been signed, and monies have been spent, the councillor said.

"While I understand the compelling need for these actions, I don't recall seeing a funding source in the 2012 budget," Gutro said.

"The Council deserves an explanation on the source of funding and legal authorities necessary to execute the work that has taken place to date."

Gutro has also asked for a presentation on the Administration's long-term plans for Old City Hall."

Gutro introduced a resolution at Tuesday's night Council meeting relative to the restoration project. The meeting was held after The Sun went to press.

$285M Fore River Vertical Lift Bridge Proposed By State

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation is proposing a $285 million vertical lift permanent bridge over the Fore River connecting Quincy Point to North Weymouth on Route 3A.

The design of the new, movable span bridge calls for two travel lanes in each direction (or four lanes wide). There would also be a sidewalk and a shoulder to accommodate bicycles in each travel direction.

The MassDOT plan says

the new bridge will meet the needs of all users - including motorists, cyclists, pedestrians and maritime users - for the next 75 years. The new handicapped accessible structure will also be fully compliant with the Ameri-

Illegal Immigrant Arraigned For Trafficking Oxycodone

By EMILY TAFT

A 24-year-old man from Beverly pleaded innocent to charges of drug trafficking at his arraignment at Quincy District Court Tuesday.

Starling Toribio was held on $500,000 cash bail and is scheduled to appear back in court Feb. 22 for a probable cause hearing.

Toribio, who is in the country illegally, has no defaults or probations on his record, according to statements made at his arraignment.

Toribio's attorney stated that there is no evidence showing he was trafficking the drug, and the only charge he can be held with is possession. The attorney asked for a lower set bail, and to be released into the custody of his parents, but Judge Diane Moriarty denied his request.

The DEA and Quincy Police Drug Unit officers arrested Toribio Monday at 4:30 p.m. on Densmore Street in North Quincy. Officers found seven small plastic bags filled with blue pills that were later determined to be oxycodone.

According to court records, it is believed that Toribio had been distributing thousands of pills a week.

Police officers seized approximately 800 oxycodone pills with a street value of $16,000.

The pills are commonly referred to as "Perc 30's." They are one of the most commonly sought after pills on the street today, police said.

An investigation on Toribio has been on going for the past three weeks, according to Quincy Detective Lieutenant Patrick Glynn. Additional arrests and suspects are expected to be arrested in an on going investigation between the DEA and the Quincy Police Drug Unit.

Glynn called the seizure "significant in the fact that it removed the potential profit and supply from the distributor, definitely a set back."

Police encourage anyone with drug information to call the anonymous tip line at 617-328-4527 or online at quincyma.gov.

Begins 17th Term As Clerk Of Committees Jeanne Reardon Hailed As City Council's 'Lighthouse'

By SCOTT JACKSON

Jeanne Reardon earned high praise as she was sworn in for her 17th two-year term as the City Council's Clerk of Committees.

During last Tuesday's meeting, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest lauded Reardon in her nomination statement.

"She's a tremendous asset to us here at the City Council," Laforest said. "Jeanne does so much behind the scenes that makes everything run efficiently and we're lucky to have her, so it's my privilege and honor to nominate Jeanne Reardon."

Councillor-at-Large Doug Gutro seconded the nomination. He hailed Reardon for her work last year after her husband Bill's death in February — the couple would've celebrated their 50th anniversary this April.

"Throughout my 10 years on the city council, Jeanne Reardon has really been the council's lighthouse in helping councillors navigate city government and our responsibilities," Gutro said. "And even under what was undoubtedly —undoubtedly —her most challenging year of her life, at a time when Jeanne needed her own lighthouse, she served this council and this city, with this same honor, professionalism, and dignity that she has for the past 32 years and she is indeed our guiding light."

Reardon was offered a chance to speak at the meeting, but she declined. The day after the meeting, however, she thanked the council for letting her work with them for more than three decades.

"It's really a privilege to work with them all these years," Reardon said over the phone. "The council accomplishes a lot and I'm in the background — even more so now with the big computer in front of me."

Reardon's job involves helping to prepare the agenda for each meeting. She is also responsible for making sure council items are ready in case they're needed.

Reardon estimated that she's worked with 30 different councillors during her tenure — she's also worked with five different mayoral administrations.

She was also thankful for the council's help her after her husband's passing. "They were all so wonderful to me," she said.

Petition Filed To Create 'Ward 2 Precinct 3A'

Quincy officials are working to ensure that all 1000 Southern Artery voters can cast ballots within the senior citizen complex.

During redistricting last year, the dividing line between Precinct 2 and Precinct 3 in Ward 2 was set at South Street. South Street also divides 1000 Southern Artery's North Tower from the other buildings in the complex. As result, residents of the North Tower would have been forced to vote at the Martensen Street housing project, about a half mile away.

To remedy this, the City Council has filed a home-rule petition which makes the North Tower its own special precinct, which will be formally known as Ward 2 Precinct 3A. This will allow residents of the tower to continue voting on site.

City Clerk Joe Shea said his office first realized the Southern Artery were separated last week when a resident of the North Tower came in to register to vote.

"A gentleman came in and registered to vote in 1000 Southern Artery and [the computer] said your voting precinct is Ward 2 Precinct 3 on Martensen Street and the people at the counter in my office caught it," Shea told the council. "When I got back [to my office] you can imagine what happened, and from there we went to the State House."

Shea said he visited with officials from Secretary of State Bill Galvin's office, and they recommended he file the home-rule petition; at least five other communities are seeking similar home-rule petitions and they will likely be bundled together and approved by the legislature within two weeks.

Shea said House Majority Leader Ron Mariano, whose legislative district includes the buildings, assured him of the petition's passage.

"Representative Mariano said... 'I can even file it as a stand-alone and it will be right out.' That's his term," Shea told city councillors.

New Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall thanked Shea for working to fix the situation.

"One thousand Southern Artery, being such a centerpiece of Ward 2 as well as the city of Quincy and to use [Shea's] wording, primarily a good-voting block of residents who really care about the city, the idea of having them have to move would be unsettling," Croall said. "I commend Joe on catching what could've been a drastic situation."

Because the buildings will be in different precincts, voting will take place in two separate but adjacent areas within the north building. Residents of the north building will vote in the library and residents of the two other buildings — and the rest of Precinct 2 — will continue to vote in the community room.

Bregoli On Park, Recreation Board

School Committee member Paul Bregoli has been appointed to the Quincy Park and Recreation Board.

Bregoli is a longtime coach at North Quincy High. Earlier this month, he was sworn in to a four-year term on the school committee.

The City Council appointed Bregoli to the parks board during their Jan. 17th meeting. He succeeds Dave McCarthy, who previously represented the School Committee on the board.

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes nominated

Bregoli at the meeting.

"Mr. Bregoli is a longtime Ward 5 resident who has been heavily involved in the city's parks and recreation department as well as a coach," she said, "and I am happy to put his name in nomination."

The council also re-appointed Josephine Shea and Jack Nigro to the board.

Councillor Doug Gutro nominated Shea.

"She's served for many years and does an admirable job on behalf of the city of Quincy," he said.

Nigro was nominated by Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest who cited Nigro's service to the city.

"He's been very active in this community as a former president of the Hough's Neck Community Council, and active in the parks board for many years, the beaches commission and also taken over as chairman of the Quincy Christmas Parade. He's very dedicated to our city," Laforest said.

All three were approved by an 8-0 vote.

New Polling Precinct At Adams Academy

By SCOTT JACKSON

Some Ward 5 voters will be going to new polling places this year.

At last Tuesday's meeting, the City Council approved moving Precinct 3's polling place from the Quincy Community United Methodist Church on Beale Street to Adams Academy on Adams Street. Precinct 2 voters will remain at the church.

City Clerk Joe Shea said moving to Adams Academy will solve some problems they've had at the church in the past.

"Presently Ward 5 Precinct 2 and Ward 5 Precinct 3 vote at the Methodist Church," Shea, the city's top elections official, told the council. "We have a 50-year relationship there, I don't want to sever the relationship, but it's awful crowded, it's awful hard to park there."

Shea also proposed moving Ward 5 Precinct 1's voting place from the Bernazzani School on Furnace Brook Parkway to the Quincy Career Center on Parkway. That move is on hold until the council's next meeting on Feb. 6 after Councillor-at-Large Doug Gutro asked if either the State Division of Career Services or the South Shore Workforce Investment Board (WIB) had authorized the city to put a polling place there.

"It's my understanding that while they may have heard conceptually there was a possibility of [the career center] being used for [a polling place], there was no presentation to the WIB...are there plans to do that," Gutro asked Shea. "Do you have anything from the Division of Career Services that suggests this is a permissible use?"

Shea said he had spoken to the building's Executive Director Kevin Madden about the proposal, but admitted that he contacted neither the WIB nor the Division of Career Services. He said he'd touch base with Madden on the issue.

The impetus behind leaving the Bernazzani School is a desire by some parents and school officials to move voting places out of schools, according to Shea.

"Three times in the last two years I've met informally with the school committee...that we're interested in encouraging the city to look for other places to vote," Shea said at the meeting.

"We vote in a great many schools, 17 of our precincts are in schools, there are some school folks and some parents that wish sometimes the voters weren't in the schools."

Later, Shea added that it would be impossible for voters to stop casting ballots at schools entirely.

"No clerk will ever be able to run elections without the Quincy School Department," Shea said. "We're doing the best we can to work with them. We've been able to get out of two schools in the last five years. But we're still in a lot of schools and I don't see a way out of it...I couldn't get along without the schools."

Because of last year's redistricting, other residents will also be changing polling places. Shea said anyone affected would receive three separate mailings telling them where to vote: one before the March presidential primary, one before the September state primary, and another before November's general election.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked if residents whose ward councillor or state representative would change because of redistricting would receive information on their new councillor or state representative in the mailing. Shea said that information wouldn't be included.

"I don't believe [the mailings are] office specific," Shea told Palmucci. "I have past ones in my office, I don't think it ever talks about congressman, state representatives, ward councillors because the language we are required to send to everyone is given to us by the state."

City Census Forms In Mail

Quincy's annual census is in the mail.

Some 51,669 forms were sent out Tuesday. They should arrive in residents' mailboxes by the end of the week, according to City Clerk Joe Shea.

Residents have 10 days to complete the census, sign it, and return it. It asks residents to include everyone in their household, and to list their occupation, date of birth, and whether they are a US veteran, a public safety employee who works in Quincy, or own dogs.

Those who don't reply will be removed from the active voter list and could be taken off the voter registration rolls. The form also gives proof of residence required to collect benefits for the elderly, veterans, and others. The information collected is used to compile a street-by-street listing of all residents and is also sent to the state jury commissioner.

Massachusetts law mandates that each city and town conduct a census annually.

The hometown jersey worked during the Stanley Cup finals last June when the statue was decked out in a #2 Bruins sweater.

Betty DeCristofaro: Quincy Point Has Always Been Home

For Betty DeCristofaro, Quincy Point has always been home.

And home has always been where her heart is.

She's never strayed from her Quincy Point roots.

And she's always been true serving her fellow citizens.

Betty has been selected as the 2011 recipient of the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award for outstanding community service. While her volunteerism stretches to all corners of the city, she's best known for lending a helping hand and giving comfort to her neighbors and friends in Quincy Point.

For 86 years, Betty DeCristofaro has been a blessing to Quincy Point.

Betty was born on Watson Terrace just off Chubbuck Street on Sept. 21, 1925, the fifth child of John and Nellie Petzoldt. It was her parents who instilled in her the values of serving your fellow citizens.

"My mother and father were volunteers. They always gave to other people. I started out volunteering in high school as a pink aide (candy striper) at Quincy City Hospital. I helped do errands, wash instruments, fill water pitchers."

Betty was also part of the nurse Cadet Program, a government sponsored program. "I was studying to become a nurse and working the hospital wards hoping to become a registered nurse."

"At that time, airplane stewardesses had to be a registered nurse so a lot of us went into (the nursing program) but I didn't have it in mind to become a stewardess."

Then, Betty got sick and was advised to drop out of the nursing program.

Soon after, she married Ted DeCristofaro after he returned home to Quincy Point after serving in the Navy during World War II.

"We drove to California on our honeymoon with his mother in the back seat," Betty recalls with a twinkle in

• On Feb. 3, 1780, in one of the most famous crimes of post-Revolution America, 20-year-old boarder Barnett Davenport commits a mass murder, killing a family of five at their home in rural Connecticut. Until then, crime was viewed as sinners losing their way. But Davenport's crime caused people to perceive criminals as evil and alien to the rest of society.

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

BETTY AND TED DeCristofaro at the dedication of "Ted DeCristofaro Park" at the corner of Washington Street and Baxter Avenue in November, 1994. Quincy Sun Photo/Tom Gorman her eye. "She was a wonderful lady. Spoiled me rotten."

"Ted was one of 10 kids in his family and he said to me, 'would you mind if we moved in with my mother just until she gets used to the idea that she's going to be by herself?'"

"I said, 'that's okay.'"

Angelica DeCristofaro lived with Ted and Betty for 26 years until she passed away.

"She never moved. She helped me bring up four kids. I never had to learn to cook because she did all the cooking. She was a wonderful lady," Betty remembers.

They were married for 56 years until Ted, who served as a Ward 2 city councillor for 14 years, passed away in June 2004. They raised four children: Ted, Jr., Ruthie, Richard and Don. All were baptized at Quincy Point Congregational Church — the same church where Betty was baptized.

She's always called Quincy Point home. Her addresses have included Graham Street, Murdock Avenue and now 1000 Southern Artery. It's a distinction she proudly shares.

"I've never moved more than two blocks away from where I live now at 1000 Southern Artery. It's a wonderful, wonderful place," she says smiling.

Betty attended the Pollard Elementary School in Quincy Point and Point Junior High School for a year before transferring to the Woodward School for Girls. She graduated Woodward in 1944.

Over the years, Betty has been more than a volunteer and caring neighbor. She's been an essential thread of community service fabric. If there's a need, Betty has been there to help without seeking any attention or limelight.

Among the groups that she's assisted: Interfaith Social Services, Quincy Point Congregational Church and 1000 Southern Artery. She's served on the Quincy Park and Recreation Board and presently sits as a director of the Council on Aging at the Kennedy Center.

She says her philosophy for helping others is simple. "It's helped people have a wonderful life. You're sharing and I'm very lucky because God's given me the strength. He's taken really good care of me."

During their marriage, Betty and Ted shared a love for Quincy Point and a passion for helping people. They were a dynamic duo during his tenure as Ward 2 councillor, attending community events and supporting worthy causes.

"Ted was a great guy. We shared a love for people that made it very easy. If I had to go someplace, I don't think he ever resented that I was going to do something. And I never resented him being on the Quincy City Council."

"I didn't always agree with him. I remember one day I said to him, 'You can vote for that.'"

"And he said, 'I can't. The people don't want it.'"

"That's how Ted ran his life. It wasn't what Ted wanted. It was what the people wanted."

And that's what prompted Ted to seek the Ward 2 seat in the first place: not political ambitions but serving people.

"Ted never had any desire to be a city councillor until one night, after Dan Raymondi announced he was leaving (the Ward 2 seat to run for mayor in 1981). Ted went to a meeting and he came home and said, 'what do you think if I ran for city councillor?'"

Betty offered a blunt reply.

"I said to him, 'where did you get such a stupid idea? What qualifications do you have to run for councillor?'"

"He said, 'at the meeting tonight they said it's because of my love for people.'"

Ted, in retrospect, was a natural to serve as a ward councillor. He was a staunch advocate for quality of life issues in the ward, especially Quincy Point. And, he had already taken it upon himself to appear at License Board meetings back in those days when issues involving Quincy Point were on the agenda.

At the time, he was a caretaker at the Adams National Historical Park in Quincy and he had Tuesdays off when the meetings were held.

"He used to go to every License Board meeting and they knew he was there," Betty recalls. "There wasn't one item that came up concerning Quincy Point that he didn't speak on."

"It was his love for the community. No one told him to do it. He was never paid to do it until he became a councillor."

"Ted," she says simply, "watched out for Quincy Point."

In appreciation of his dedication and love of Quincy Point, the city dedicated a park in his name at the corner of Washington Street and Baxter Avenue.

Betty is handed a black and white photo showing the two of them, her hand clutching his arm, on that momentous day.

"What a wonderful thing that he was able to be there," she says softly.

Ted visited the park frequently, giving the grounds some TLC.

"Even when he was sick, he'd say, 'how about going up to the park?'"

Quincy Point — a cultural melting point of many nationalities and religions — is the backdrop of so many cherished memories for Betty DeCristofaro. It's always been a source of comfort and she adds, the greatest place to live and bring up a family.

"We had every nationality there is. But we didn't know that. They were all friends; we were all neighbors."

"And everyone knew the meaning of a good neighbor. No matter what happened in your family, there were neighbors who cared."

"I'm very happy. I'm 86 years old and I've seen the best of the City of Quincy."

The best of Quincy includes people like Betty DeCristofaro.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1916 real photo postcard view from Summit Avenue in Wollaston looking to the east when many of the house lots on Wollaston Hill were still undeveloped. The street across the foreground is South Central Avenue; Belmont Street runs parallel just up the hill and across the top is Highland Avenue. Warren Avenue, never finished because of the steep incline, would have come down in the direction of the little garage in the lower right. This is where Summit Avenue would later begin. Wealthy businessmen bought the large lots on top of the hill where there were expansive views. The large house at the top left was the home of Frank Burgess who owned the Boston Gear Works in Norfolk Downs. Next to Burgess was the home of Charles Bailey who was president of the Boylston National Bank in Boston. On the lower right, South Central Avenue carved around the hill where the Patterson's Florist Shop had several large greenhouses facing the southerly sun and overlooking the Furnace Brook Golf Course. Today, trees and houses built on the many empty lots seen here block this bird's-eye view. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Over 10,000 Apply For Jobs At GD Shipyard

More than 10,500 men applied for work at the soon-to-be-reopened Fore River shipyard during a four-day application period at the State Division of Employment Security office at 160 Parkingway.

The Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics, the new owner of the shipyard, announced it would be hiring several hundred workers initially for the reopening of the yard which was expected in two weeks.

The Bethlehem Steel Co. ceased operating the shipyard on Dec. 31 and sold it to General Dynamics. Many of those in the employment line had worked at the yard before and expected improved conditions under the new owner.

"I hear it's a progressive company," said James Moses of Hyde Park, who had worked as a welder at the yard for 11 years before being laid off in December.

Meanwhile, the Fore River Metal Trades Council opened an office at 23 Chestnut St. in a drive to organize the workers, who had been represented by the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers under Bethlehem.

WORLD'S FAIR EXHIBIT

City Historian William C. Edwards was making a cost study of a proposal to sponsor a Quincy historical exhibit at the New York World's Fair which was scheduled to open in April.

The proposal was made by Rep. Joseph E. Brett and would include a replica of one of the cars that was used on the first commercial railroad in West Quincy.

RAPID TRANSIT OPPOSED

Felix C. Favorite, executive secretary of the Quincy Home and Property Owners Association, said his board of directors had voted to oppose an extension of the Boston rapid transit system to Quincy.

Reasonable estimates were that the MTA deficit would add at least $6 to the Quincy tax rate, he said, "and unjustified amount for homeowners to pay for the transportation of less than three percent of the population of Quincy."

City Councillors In Chili Cook-off Showdown

As city councillors, Kirsten Hughes, Margaret Laforest and Brian Palmucci are used to having to work hard for each and every vote.

This Saturday, however, the three ward councillors will square off against one another as they seek votes to determine who makes the best chili.

The 3rd Annual "Chili Bowl" Chili Cook-Off will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 28 in the church hall at Hough's Neck Congregational Church, located at 310 Manet Ave.

With categories for both restaurants and individual home chefs, the chili cook-off offers attendees the opportunity to sample and savor up to 20 different kinds of chili, with trophies and medals awarded to the champion chili winners as voted on by attendees.

Restaurants participating in this year's cook-off include The Common Market, The Four's, Wild Willy's Burgers and Coop's Bar and Grille, which took home the trophy at last year's Chili Bowl.

"In the past, we've had elected officials volunteer to help serve chili at the cook-off - but this is the first time we've had city councillors actually competing in the contest," said Jennifer Logue, one of the event's organizers. "The three councillors have been very good natured about competing against one another for chili votes!"

So much so, that Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci has even challenged his City Council colleagues to a friendly wager: The city councillor whose chili earns the most votes gets treated to dinner by the other councillors at a restaurant in the winning councillor's ward.

"If I win, Margaret and Kirsten have to take me to dinner at The Common Market," said Palmucci. "If Kirsten wins, we dine at Alba, and if Margaret wins we're going to Louis' Crossing."

As councillor for Ward 1 - where the contest is being held - Laforest acknowledged she may have a bit of a home court advantage.

"I'm counting on all my neighbors to come out and show their Ward 1 pride!" she said. Laforest and her husband enlisted the aid of their friend, Ward 1 native Kerry Byrne, Boston Herald food writer and publisher of ColdHardFootballFacts.com. They will prepare his smoky venison chili.

Ward 5 Councillor Hughes, meanwhile, said she is undeterred by her status as one of the City Council's newest members.

"I have a secret weapon," Hughes said. "My mom,

For Quincy Native, Appalachian Trail 'A Walk Of A Faith'

Courtney Lynne Mann Pens New Book 'Wide Sky, Narrow Path'

By EMILY TAFT

In 1998, former Quincy resident Courtney Lynne Mann decided to take a break from her life and walk over 2,000 miles across the Appalachian Trail for six months.

Two years ago, Mann started writing her memories down in hopes to form the stories into a book about her experience, and in November, 2011 her book titled "Wide Sky, Narrow Path" was published.

"What makes this book different is it is about the inside journey as much as the physical one. I started the trail at a low point in my life, discouraged about a lot of things. It felt like everything was crumbling before me," said Mann. "The journey redirected my focus; sleeping out on that trail, making the choice every day to get up and just keep walking changed my focus."

The Appalachian Trail takes the thru-hiker on a journey from Springer Mountain in Georgia to Mount Katahdin in Maine. Along the way the trail passes through 14 states including Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont, and Maine.

Around two to three million visitors walk a portion of the trail each year.

"Thru-hikers" are those who choose to walk the entire trail in a continuous journey, and 1 in 4 who attempt a thru-hike successfully complete it. An estimated 1,800 to 2,000 people attempt to thru-hike annually.

Mann grew up in Wollaston and attended the Woodward School and Quincy High School. She received her B.A. in English at Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston.

Mann never planned on writing a book about her experiences during that six-months. In fact, she wasn't even confident in her writing abilities, but she knew she wanted to write and it was something she dreamed of doing.

"I ended up working for Whole Foods after college, and around that same time I realized I wanted to write and illustrate children's books," said Mann. "I would get up an hour before work each day and just write. I learned that it was a struggle to become a writer."

After working for two years at Whole Foods, Mann decided she wanted a job that would allow her to focus more on her creative side and that's when she applied to work for a map publishing company in Harvard Square.

"I had the basic processing skills but nothing that would really get me the job," said Mann. "On my application I wrote that I had an inordinate love of maps, and that turned out to be the phrase that got me the job. It was then that I realized how powerful writing could be."

Two and a half years into working for the map company, Mann received a call from an old college friend asking her to join them on the six-month hike.

She wasn't an avid hiker, and had gone on no more than five hikes or camping trips in her life.

"At that point in my life I was ready for a change. I had gone through a rough couple of years. It was something I needed to do," said Mann. "The timing was perfect. It was a no brainer, and from the time I decided to go it was full-steam ahead!"

Mann didn't start out loving hiking. When she was younger, she was part of a youth group that took a trip in high school to the Alps.

"I was that kid in the back hating every step of the way when we went on hikes," said Mann. "When we got to the top and I saw the view, it just made me want to cry it was that beautiful. That made the trip up so worth it."

Before her six-month journey, Mann's longest hiking trip was for two-weeks in 1994 through parts of the Appalachian Trail in North Carolina and Tennessee, which hooked her on the sport. She hiked with her cousin, and during the hike she had vowed to herself to go back for at least a month to see more.

"It wasn't hard for me to get in to," said Mann. "I had a sense of loving it before I even did it."

The 2,000-mile hike took Mann on a journey of self-discovery and faith.

"If a journey of a 1,000 miles begins with one step, perhaps a journey of 2,167 begins with two," Mann wrote. "Stepping over the threshold of this new beginning seemed like some sort of a test: would I pass or would I fail?"

With her backpack filled to capacity with water, dehydrated food, a backpacking stove, first aid kit, change of clothes, a towel, guidebook, small notebook and pen, Swiss Army knife, and a camera, among many other necessities, Mann headed out her apartment door leaving her life behind her.

In the book, Mann describes passing a thrift store a block down the street and it was there that she received a sign.

As I passed the Salvation Army thrift store a block down the street, two cars parked bumper to bumper in front of the shop suddenly caught my gaze," wrote Mann. "The first car had Georgia license plates; and the second car: Maine

Fontbonne Academy Hosts Quincy Auditor, City Councillor

Fontbonne Academy in Milton recently hosted two guest speakers from Quincy's municipal government.

City Auditor, Susan O'Connor and Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest spoke to seniors at Fontbonne in a joint Social Studies and History class.

Both women are parents of two Fontbonne students. Susan O'Connor is the mother of Catherine (class of 2012) and Eileen (class of 2015), and Margaret Laforest is the mother of Kelsey (class of 2013) and Krista (class of 2015).

The civic leaders engaged the class by sharing how the Quincy government is organized, explaining their individual responsibilities, and demonstrating, through a mock resolution (texting and driving), how laws are made and changed at the municipal level.

There was much student participation and enthusiasm; the room was filled with questions and comments from the students. Susan and Margaret both urged the young women of Fontbonne to take an interest in politics, to register to vote when they turned 18, and not to miss an opportunity to get involved at any age or level.

"It was an honor to host such well spoken and enthusiastic women who are members of the Quincy Government," said Social Studies teacher, Bob Margarit of East Bridgewater. "They really engaged the students as role models, and were so encouraging."

Spicy Sun-Dried Tomato Soup

Doesn't a bowl of hot soup sound so delicious and satisfying on a cold day?

Most of the time, there's almost always some kind of soup in my refrigerator. My family actually likes soup any time of the year.

But today's recipe for soup is one my daughter Suzie, a nutritionist, made recently for us and it's such a hearty soup and one that I hope you will want to try.

SPICY SUN-DRIED TOMATO SOUP

3 tablespoons olive oil
4 garlic cloves (minced)
½ teaspoon red pepper flakes
1 medium shallot, chopped
2 carrots (chopped)
2 stalks of celery (chopped)
2 zucchini (chopped)
1 teaspoon fresh Rosemary (chopped)
5 cups water (or vegetable stock)
1 large can diced tomatoes (with their juice)

½ cup oil packed sun-dried tomatoes, drained and chopped fine.

1 can white beans, rinsed and drained
1 bunch kale de-stemmed and chopped finely

Handful of fresh basil

½ cup chopped fresh parsley

1 teaspoon sea salt

Heat the oil in a large pan over medium heat. Add the garlic and red pepper flakes, but do not let the garlic get browned. Cook a couple of minutes and add all the vegetables and the Rosemary except the can of tomatoes.

Cook until flavors are well blended. Add the broth or the water, the salt and all of the tomatoes, including the sun-dried ones. Now add the parsley and kale and simmer for 25 minutes covered.

Uncover and add the chopped basil, check for seasoning. Serve hot with Parmesan cheese sprinkled over the top.

WILD WILLY'S BURGERS owners Paul and Ruth Bennett display their restaurant's steak chili that will be available at Saturday's Chili Bowl cook-off at Hough's Neck Congregational Church.

Individuals, Restaurants To Compete For Coveted 'Chili Crown' At 3rd Annual Event

'Chili Bowl' Cook-Off Saturday At HN Church

By EMILY TAFT

Hough's Neck Congregational Church, 310 Main Ave., Quincy, is holding its 3rd Annual "Chili Bowl" Chili Cook-off Saturday, Jan. 28 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

"The event brings people and the community together," said cook-off coordinator Jennifer Logue. "What is a better way to bring people together than over food. It is good food and a good time."

Restaurants and individuals are encouraged to enter their best chili in hopes to win a medal and trophy for top prize. Restaurants who enter compete for a first place prize of a chili trophy, and individuals who enter compete for a first, second, and third prize.

Those who attend are the judges of the competition, getting to place one vote for each category. Voting will close around 4:30 p.m. and winners will be announced around 4:45 p.m.

Participants are asked to bring around three gallons of chili with them the day of, which totals to around two crock-pot's full. Each chili has its temperature tested to make sure it's up to regulations and meets the requirements.

According to Logue, the event has received more interest in the individual competition for all three years. Every year around 12-20 chili makers enter to compete.

"There are always a number of different types of chilies entered," said Logue. "No two chilies are alike, and it is surprising how many different kinds there are, from turkey to veggie, and one year we even had someone make a lobster chili."

Last year's restaurant winner Coop's Bar and Grille is returning this year to defend their title.

"Coop's brings a very unique and distinct tasting chili," said Logue. "The taste of their chili is a combination of spicy and sweet."

Owner of Coop's Mario Recupero said they decided to return to defend their title because of the cause.

"They put on such a great fundraiser," said Recupero. "What they are doing it for is a good reason to enter."

Recupero said that they are entering the same chili as in the past and he is confident in the recipe.

"It's not just a couple of ingredients involved in our chili," said Recupero. "There are a bunch of secret ingredients, and it is prepared fresh every day, there are no tricks, just great chili that we have sold for six years now."

New to the Chili Bowl this year is restaurant Wild Willy's Burgers, located on Washington St. in Quincy. The new entry brings a certified Angus beef based chili with a special Wild Willy's recipe.

"Many customers enjoy our chili. It's the world's most delicious chili," said co-owner of Wild Willy's Burgers Paul Bennett. "The chili is somewhere in between spicy and sweet. It has a nice taste to it."

Bennett said that the chili they offer is one that crosses generations, and is liked by those who enjoy a mild chili and those who like their chili more on the hot side. He added that they decided to participate in the 'Chili Bowl' because it is a great idea and should be fun.

"We are always looking for new restaurants and individuals to participate," said Logue. "This gives the restaurants an opportunity to show off their food, and allows them to bring in potential new customers that may have never been to the restaurant before."

Other participating restaurants include The Four's, The Common Market and Louis Crossing.

Logue said that she has found that many chili recipes come with a story behind how they were formed.

"You find out interesting stories and the history behind where some recipes came from," said Logue. "We had one individual participant that found a recipe from a World War II soldier."

Last year's 'Chili Bowl' brought in over 300 chili lovers to the church, and 15 different chili entries.

"We always welcome more people to come check it out," said Logue. "In the three years it's been going on we have always had a great turn out."

There is a $5 admission fee to cover all the chili you can eat. For an additional fee those in attendance can also enjoy hot dogs, soda, and chips provided by the Boy Scouts.

A bake sale and adult beverages are also served through out the event at an additional price.

"It's a nice family event," said Logue. "We find it is at the perfect time of year where nothing else is really going on and people are able to come and have fun while enjoying different home-made chili."

Those looking to participate in can enter up until Jan. 25. Contact Jennifer Logue at (617) 429-3080 or by email jnec@comcast.net for more information.

$285M Fore River Vertical Lift Bridge Proposed By State

cans with Disabilities Act.

The project also calls for dismantling the temporary vertical bridge that was erected after the draw bridge was rendered obsolete years ago.

Some residents of both Quincy and Weymouth have voiced their support for an alternate, bascule design (draw bridge) that would replicate the look of the old Fore River Bridge, which was built during the Great Depression and demolished in 2004.

A public hearing on the matter is scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 9 at 7 p.m. at the Abigail Adams Middle School, 89 Middle St., East Weymouth.

Written statements can also be submitted to Thomas F. Broderick, P.E., Acting Chief Engineer, MassDOT, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116.

House Majority Leader Ron Mariano said he will attend the Feb. 9th public hearing.

Mariano's legislative district includes the area in Quincy Point nearest the bridge and said he will support whichever design limits the amount of times the bridge needs to open.

"What's always been a problem for me and my constituents," Mariano said in a phone interview, "is the frequency of which they are opening the bridge."

Mariano noted that maritime traffic has priority over vehicle traffic, a precedent that dates back to English law. "Right now you need to open the bridge for every sailboat in the summer," he said.

Mariano said he's talked to engineers and others responsible for planning the bridge about his concerns and has also attended multiple public hearings on the issue.

Work on the new bridge will likely start this spring, when pilings and moorings are put in place, according to Mariano. The project is expected to be completed sometime in 2016, according to MassDOT's website dedicated to the project.

The Fore River Bridge replacement is part of Governor Deval Patrick's $3 billion accelerated bridge program. That program calls for the replacement or repair of more than 200 bridges statewide over an eight-year period.

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Samantha Sliwinski '11

Samantha Sliwinski of Weymouth is at Tufts University this year, studying PreMed with plans to pursue a career in pediatrics. While at Fontbonne, Samantha was a Varsity Swimmer and a National Merit Commended Scholar. She is a member of the Tufts University Swim Team.

"I see how fortunate I have been to attend such an incredible school as Fontbonne Academy. My teachers, like my parents, not only educated me, but also invested in my goals. My classmates became sisters to challenge me, to encourage me, and a shoulder for me to lean on when I was feeling overwhelmed. The motivation from my teachers and peers to succeed helped me to accomplish my goals. At Fontbonne I learned not only academic integrity, but also how to live out the core values of Fontbonne: respect, responsibility, reconciliation, and reverence. This community is unique as a Catholic school, because it instills a strong sense of faith and trust in each student, regardless of religion. It is a rare environment that welcomes all beliefs and at the same time offers a profound insight on the Catholic Church."

Quincy Youths Participate In Model UN Conference

Zachary Chen and Michael Lethin of Quincy, juniors at Boston College High School and members of the BC High Model United Nations Club, recently, along with 1200 other delegates from 55 Model UN clubs from all over the country, attended William and Mary's 26th annual High School Model UN Conference.

The conference was held on the historic campus of the College of William and Mary, the second oldest college in the United States in Williamsburg, VA.

Delegates debated issues affecting both the United States and the world today, ranging from the importance of narcotic drugs to the European debt crisis to recruitment regulations in the NCAA.

Additionally, students represented historical figures in the Second Punic War committee and the Chinese Communists Triple Crisis committee.

Both young men did an excellent job on their respective committees, Chen on the United Nations Human Rights Council and Lethin on the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs.

When not in committee, students were able to experience the historical buildings of Colonial Williamsburg, including a night of ghost tours and viewings of the House of Burgesses and the Governor's Mansion. Additionally, students traveled to the University of Richmond for a guided tour of the campus.

Volunteers Sought For 'Meals On Wheels' Program

Norfolk County RSVP is recruiting volunteer drivers for 'Meals on Wheels' program which provides a nutritious meal each day to homebound seniors. Volunteer drivers are needed in all towns.

"Most people are not aware that many Meals on Wheels programs are entirely dependent upon volunteers" said Acting RSVP Director Jeannie McLeish. "Meals on Wheels" simply would not exist in many towns if not for the volunteers who offer their time so that frail elders who are unable to shop or cook for themselves may receive a nutritious meal each day."

Meals on Wheels drivers pick up meals at nutrition sites in their towns and deliver meals to homebound seniors five times per week. Volunteers are needed approximately two to three hours per day, and while a volunteer who is available five days a week is ideal, two days or more would be appreciated. Drivers must have a reliable car for this position.

Norfolk County RSVP is sponsored by the Norfolk County Commissioners and is affiliated with the Federal Corporation for National and Community Service, one of the nation's largest volunteer agencies.

RSVP helps recruit and place volunteers who are 55+ years of age in service positions throughout Norfolk County. Programs include reading tutors, emergency preparedness, and other volunteer efforts intended to meet identified community needs.

President Tsaffaras: College 'Is On The Move' Quincy College: Focused On Teaching, Learning One Student At A Time

By PETER TSAFFARAS
President
Quincy College

As the new semester begins, Quincy College is on the move, both literally and figuratively.

The College is moving out of Temple Hall and Newport Hall and into President's Place in downtown Quincy (1250 Hancock Street), as well as continuing to expand our Plymouth campus. Beginning last week and continuing through the end of July, these changes will make additional space available for classrooms and labs in Saville Hall, which will now become home to the Academic Division of Natural & Health Sciences.

At the same time, we are working with the Street Works team to build a new facility for Quincy College in the new Quincy Center for occupancy in the summer or fall of 2016.

In addition, the Plymouth campus is continuously expanding to meet the needs of a growing student body in Plymouth County. We have coordinated with UMASS Boston to utilize space and classrooms at their campus in Cordage Park in Plymouth, which is contiguous to ours. Recently added facilities include new offices, bright classrooms, a state of the art science lab, and new nursing labs.

As important as these brick and mortar improvements are, and they are important, Quincy College is definitely on the move in a more figurative sense. As you may be aware, at Quincy College our motto is, "Focused on Teaching & Learning, One Student at a Time." As such, everything that we do is focused upon teaching and learning and the primacy of the teaching/learning relationship.

During the last year, we have oriented the entire institution in support of furthering this teaching and learning relationship. In these economic times, when many of our peer institutions are cutting labor costs, Quincy College has increased the size of the full-time faculty by approximately 20%.

At the same time, we have reached out to part-time faculty by increasing their salary to more competitive levels and incorporating them more fully into the academic divisions in which they teach.

We have dramatically upgraded the support and technology in the classroom, providing full-time faculty with new laptop computers to improve the teaching experience. Each of the four academic divisions is headed by a Dean who possesses an earned doctorate and all of whom spend time teaching in the classroom each week.

We have increased the size of the library staff by 50%, extended the hours that our libraries are open to our students, and built a totally new full-service library on the Plymouth campus.

In concentrating on teaching and learning, Quincy College's emphasis is our students. We have increased the technology available to our students on campus as well as from home.

We have implemented online registration, expanded international student services, reinstituted an athletics program, and increased student activities and support services. In addition, we have created a position of Director of Military and Veteran's Services to reach out to our veterans and their dependants.

None of these positive changes could occur without the support and cooperation of countless individuals both within the institution and in the community.

The Board of Governors, under the leadership of Chairman William S. Grindlay, is second to none in terms of their positive attitude and commitment to Quincy College.

Further, since the day I took office, Mayor Thomas Koch's sole concern has been how the city government can be of assistance to the College. The same goes for the members of the City Council who, both individually and as a group, have been very supportive of our efforts.

Enrollment is strong and continues to grow each semester. Today, we have approximately 4,600 students by headcount, which equals approximately 3,100 full time students.

As Quincy College continues to grow, we will remain focused on teaching and learning by updating our academic offerings, developing new academic programs, and increasing student engagement and retention.

I welcome you to take a class with our dedicated faculty and discover why students choose Quincy College for a high quality, affordable education.

Here at Quincy College people often hear me say, "Education is the passport that allows one to travel through and navigate our society." I am proud to say that now, more than ever, Quincy College is here to assist people in earning that passport.

- Peter H. Tsaffaras, J.D.,
President of Quincy College

Medicare: Enrollment And General Information

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Need Medicare Part B? If you're eligible, now is the time to sign up. The general enrollment period for Medicare Part B runs from Jan. 1 through April 2. Before you make a decision about general enrollment, let us fill you in on some general information.

Medicare is a medical insurance program for retired and disabled people. Some people are covered only by one type of Medicare; others opt to pay extra for more coverage. Understanding Medicare can save you money; here are the facts.

There are four parts to Medicare: Parts A, B, C and D. Part A helps pay for inpatient hospital care, skilled nursing care, hospice care, and other services. Part B helps pay for doctors' fees, outpatient hospital visits, and other medical services and supplies not covered by Part A. Part C allows you to choose to receive all of your health care services through a provider organization. These plans, known as Medicare Advantage Plans, may help lower your costs of receiving medical services, or you may get extra benefits for an additional monthly fee. You must have both Parts A and B to enroll in Part C. And Part D is the Medicare Prescription Drug Program.

Most people first become eligible for Medicare at age 65, and there is a monthly premium for Medicare Part B. In 2012, the standard premium is $99.90. Some high-income individuals pay more than the standard premium. Your Part B premium also can be higher if you do not enroll during your initial enrollment period, or when you first become eligible.

There are exceptions to this rule. For example, you can delay your Medicare Part B enrollment without having to pay higher premiums if you are covered under a group health plan based on your own current employment or the current employment of any family member. If this situation applies to you, you can sign up for Medicare Part B without paying higher premiums:

- Any month you are under a group health plan based on your own current employment or the current employment of any family member; or
- Within eight months after your employment or group health plan coverage ends, whichever comes first.

If you are disabled and working (or you have coverage from a working family member), the same rules apply.

Remember: Most people are automatically enrolled in Medicare Part B when they become eligible. If you don't enroll in Medicare Part B when you first become eligible to apply and you don't fit into one of the above categories, you'll have to wait until the general enrollment period, which is Jan. 1 through March 31 of each year. At that time, you may have to pay a higher Medicare Part B premium.

For more information about Medicare Parts A, B, C, and D, visit the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) website at www.medicare.gov. Or read our publication on Medicare at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10043.html.

Five Quincy Students Earn Honors At UMass Dartmouth

Five students from Quincy have earned academic honors for the fall semester at the University of Massachusetts in Dartmouth.

They are:

plates. The effect was no less profound than if I'd audibly heard, 'Here's what I have for you to do. Do it! The rest will be just as plainly revealed in time.'"

Mann said the thru-hike was a lot different than the shorter hikes she had been on.

"It was incredible, it is so different with a thru-hike. You're carrying everything on your back," said Mann. "There is something incredibly liberating, feeling that self-sufficient."

At the beginning of her journey, Mann picked up a tiny rock at Springer Mountain in Georgia. She left the same rock at the top of Mount Katahdin in Maine when she finished the hike.

Mann, for the most part, was always with a group of people during the hike. Many she didn't know when she first started out, but became friends with along the way. Her friend from college left the trail within the first couple of weeks of hiking, but by that time Mann said she was already hiking in a group.

"The thru-hike starts a bit like a marathon. A huge group that gradually thins out as people settle into their respective paces or leave the trail," said Mann. "I hiked with individuals and small groups the entire way, with the exception of two weeks in New England, when I wanted to have the experience of hiking/camping completely alone."

The book takes the reader along Mann's journey, describing the animals, the people, and the different terrains of the hike. Within the hike little side stories are described, about seeking shelter at hostiles, taking rides from strangers to get to those hostiles, and stores at the nearest towns.

Mann said she battled many fears throughout the hike, and believes because of the trail she has come out with a thicker skin.

"There were moments where I was terrified. At the beginning I was scared to sleep in a tent. There were a lot of circumstances that just freaked me out," said Mann. "There came a time when I faced certain fears that I would come to the conclusion that if it's going to happen, if I am going to die out here, it is out of my hands."

In the book, Mann writes about how she and a few other hikers hitched a ride from a man she believed was intoxicated, and coming to the conclusion there was nothing she could do. "I concluded that there was nothing to be done but to endure it, and hopefully survive."

It was not all silence and conversations during the hike. While hiking through Pennsylvania, Mann was able to borrow a Walkman from a friend and listened to mixed tapes as she walked along. She said she didn't miss TV but when she wasn't hiking with others, she missed her family and close friends.

Hiking the trail for the last two weeks alone in New England was Mann's way of facing her final fear.

"By the time I had reached New Hampshire, having been through some other scary and life-challenging circumstances on the trail, I guess I was ready for it because I was not afraid at all during those two weeks alone," said Mann. "I was, however, very lonely. It was great to meet up with others at the end of that time. I was all the more grateful for the fellowship."

After finishing the hike, Mann settled into a job right off the trail, care taking a retreat center. Now living in Northern Virginia, she is a graphic designer for an engineering company, and has written a children's book like she had wanted to many years ago. The new children's book, about a Starling who wants to become a musician, is written and waiting to be illustrated.

"Wide Sky, Narrow Path" is self-published, and is 145 pages long. Mann said it was originally 100 pages longer, adding that those 100 pages, she hopes, to put together for a separate book. At the beginning of each chapter there is a picture of different stops on the trail, and at chapter 10 there is a picture of Mann standing behind a sign on top of Mount Katahdin in Maine, the finish line.

Towards the end of the book, Mann included some journal entries from when she thru-hiked. They are little blurbs of what she went through on different days. It took over 12 years for Mann to finish writing and putting the pages together to make the completed version. In the first few pages of the book, Mann tells the reader how difficult it was to write and organize her thoughts on the trip.

"Recalling and writing of the trail was far less linear than walking it," wrote Mann.

The book, Mann hopes, has something for everyone and a different message for anyone who reads it.

"Learning to overcome discouragement by walking in the direction of hope. It was a walk of faith and re-awakening of belief that there is a higher power bringing us to a better place," said Mann. "Everyone is on a journey. Everyone is on a walk that is unique to them."

On Monday, March 5, Mann will be appearing in the community room of the Thomas Crane Library, Quincy, at 7 p.m. That day she also plans to stop by the Woodward School for Girls.

Real Estate Activity Seeing Signs Of Improvement

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reports real estate activity during 2011 showed signs of improvement.

"Real estate activity in Norfolk County for 2011 remained stable," O'Donnell said. "We are seeing some positive signs of improvement from what have been several difficult and economically challenging years both locally and nationally."

The total dollar volume of real estate sales as well as the average sale price within Norfolk County as hopeful indicators of an eventual economic recovery, he pointed out.

In his annual report, O'Donnell said total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the year settled at $4.5 billion. This figure, which encompasses both commercial and residential transfers, represents a slight rise from 2010's $4.4 billion figure.

The average sale price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) increased countywide by 5% from the previous year and 18% from 2009 to $597,190. This increase may be driven by the sale of commercial properties, he noted.

Other values present in Norfolk County's end of the year statistics suggest that the county's residents are exercising caution with respect to real estate. In 2011 a total number of 7539 deeds were recorded for consideration, a 3% decrease from 2010.

Despite historically low interest rates, the number of mortgages recorded on Norfolk County properties totaled 34,322 a 13% decrease from 2010. Total mortgage indebtedness this past year rang in at $16.8 billion, an 18% dip from 2010's total.

"It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity," O'Donnell said.

He highlighted the 19% spike in Homesteads declared this past year as evidence of Norfolk County homeowners' prudence. "In response to recent changes in Massachusetts's law and in recognition that their home is their most important asset Norfolk County residents filed over 11,000 Declarations this past year," O'Donnell said.

In addition to the long awaited changes to Massachusetts Homestead Law welcome news came in the form of a decrease in the amount of Norfolk County foreclosures.

In 2010, 753 foreclosure deeds were filed in Norfolk County. This past year 597 foreclosure deeds were filed representing a 21% falloff.

"Despite an overall decline in foreclosures some Norfolk County Communities are still being hit hard with foreclosures and obviously the effect on each individual facing the prospect of losing their home is devastating," O'Donnell said.

Termite Troubles

Q: What do I need to look for when checking around my house for termites? - Jason in Tampa, Fla.

A: Inspecting your home for termite infestation on a regular basis can make a big difference in the amount you'd have to pay to eradicate them, should there be a problem. Most homeowners aren't able to decisively confirm that a termite infestation exists, but there are telltale signs to watch for:

-Dirt tunnels on the house's masonry foundation and on pipes traveling through the foundation.

-Crumbly areas inside masonry cracks or holes.

-Small dirt-like formations inside cracks or holes. These could be termite nests.

-In wooden areas of the house, especially those close to the ground, look for rotten or decayed spots. Use a pocketknife to poke into the spot; if it penetrates a half-inch or more, you might have a termite problem.

If you notice any of these suspicious signs, contact an exterminator to do a more thorough inspection of your house and start treating for termites. Be sure to get a written estimate of the work to be done before allowing the exterminator to start treatment.

How do you prevent termites? In addition to scheduling a professional inspection and preventive treatment once per year, keep moisture from affecting the house - particularly at the foundation. Don't allow standing water near the foundation. If that's a problem after rains, improve drainage away from the area. Trim back hedges and plants to about 1 foot from the foundation so pests can't work their way into the house from them. Fill and seal cracks in outside masonry.

HOME TIP: If termites are a big problem in your area, talk to a contractor about installing a sand barrier around your home's foundation, a method that will discourage the pests from getting into your house.

Send your questions, tips or comments to ask@thisisahammer.com, or write This Is A Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. When in doubt as to whether you can safely or effectively complete a project, consult a professional contractor.

Bellotti Re-Elected President Of State Sheriffs' Association

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti has been reelected as president of the Massachusetts Sheriffs' Association and will serve in that capacity through the year 2013.

"It's a great privilege to be chosen by the other sheriffs to lead the Massachusetts Sheriffs' Association (MSA)," Sheriff Bellotti said. "The citizens of Massachusetts expect the very best in public safety, and we are here to provide it to them."

Among the tasks at the top his priority list is the Sheriffs Information Management System (SIMS) project, which will put all sheriffs throughout the state on the same computer information and data sharing system.

"The SIMS project will result in greater efficiency and cooperation when it comes to corrections administration," Sheriff Bellotti said.

Under his leadership, the MSA is providing more detailed and frequent reports to the legislature and executive agencies regarding fiscal, human resource and inmate overcrowding issues. Additionally, senior staff members from sheriff's offices throughout the state recently met in Dedham for a day-long conference featuring panel discussions on best-practice policies and how best to tackle the challenges facing correctional agencies today.

"Because virtually all of the inmates in the county correctional system ultimately return to our communities after serving their sentences, one of the biggest challenges we have is implementing inmate re-entry programs that reduce recidivism," Sheriff Bellotti said.

"The Massachusetts Sheriffs' Association has been serving the interests of the general public since 1983. We will continue to be responsive to the citizenry's desire for safe communities and secure administration of the county correctional system," he added.

Betty DeCristofaro Selected Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Citizen Award Recipient

The award – formerly the Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year – was renamed in memory of Quincy Sun founder and longtime publisher Henry Bosworth two years ago. Mr. Bosworth and Betty DeCristofaro were longtime friends who grew up together in their beloved Quincy Point.

"I am thrilled to receive this award," DeCristofaro said after being informed of her selection. "I was a great friend of Henry's. We both feel the same way about Quincy Point. It's the greatest place in the world."

"I love the idea I'm getting this award and I love The Quincy Sun. I hope I deserve it," she added.

On behalf of the selection committee, Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth congratulated DeCristofaro.

"Community service and volunteerism has been the forte of Betty's life. She is a very worthy recipient and The Quincy Sun is proud and grateful that Betty has accepted this honor."

"Betty embodies the spirit of volunteerism and all the characteristics of an amiable good neighbor and unselfish citizen. She has dedicated her life to lending a helping hand to countless worthy causes."

Bosworth also congratulated the other nominees for the Henry Bosworth Award.

"Although it's been said before it bears repeating: being nominated for this award is indeed an honor in of itself. The list of this year's nominees underscores the fact that the City of Quincy is home to many civic-minded citizens who serve this community with outstanding service."

"The Sun also acknowledges all our readers who took the time to submit nominations. The award would not be possible without them," Bosworth added.

He also thanked this year's judges for their efforts in the selection process.

Serving as judges were: Bette Campbell, director, Quincy Access TV; Maralin Manning, director of Business Development, Quincy Chamber of Commerce; Rev. William Harding, pastor, Bethany Congregational Church; and three Quincy Sun-Henry Bosworth Award past recipients: Ron Adams, Robert Noble and last year's selection, John Gillis.

DeCristofaro was nominated for the Henry Bosworth Award by George McCafferty of 1000 Southern Artery.

BETTY DeCRISTOFARO

"Betty is a tireless worker and volunteer at Interfaith Social Services and 1000 Southern Artery. She provides solace and comfort to many friends and neighbors who look to her for help. She deserves it," McCafferty wrote in his nomination.

DeCristofaro said her parents – John and Nellie Petzoldt – instilled in her the value of volunteerism and community service.

"I was brought up that way. My mother and father always did for people. When we came home from school there would be a cake sitting there but a big note on it: 'do not touch.' It was for the church or for someone who was ill."

Her community service has touched virtually every corner of her beloved Quincy Point – and beyond.

For many years, she has been very active at Quincy Point Congregational Church where she was baptized.

"The church used to run lunches for the workers at the shipyard. The men and women used to come over for lunch. The church raised a lot of money that way. I used to go over there to serve."

Over the years, Betty has served on every church board. She helps serve food at church suppers and lends support at church fairs. She also delivers flowers to the sick, ushers at services and helps put the church newsletter together.

Betty says she's always enjoyed knitting. She knits prayer shawls at her church, hats for premature babies at South Shore Hospital, chemotherapy hats for women undergoing chemotherapy and baby blankets for the Parent-to-Parent program in Quincy. Parent-to-Parent provides baskets filled with newborn necessities – including blankets and afghans – to new parents in Quincy.

She's also knit baby hats for high school students who are part of the Quincy Teen Mothers Program and contributes to a scholarship fund in memory of her late husband, former Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro. The scholarship helps graduates of the program continue their education.

Betty is also active at 1000 Southern Artery. She waits on tables, works in the kitchen and helps out at the reception desk.

She has served on the Council on Aging Board of Directors for a number of years.

JUDGING PANEL that selected Betty DeCristofaro as the 2011 recipient of the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., Memorial Citizenship Award deliberate at Quincy Access Television. From left: community activist Robert Noble and Broad Meadows Middle School teacher Ron Adams, both past recipients of the award; Rev. William Harding, pastor, Bethany Congregational Church; QATV Director Bette Campbell; Maralin Manning, director of Business Development for the Quincy Chamber of Commerce; and Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth. Missing from photo is another judge: former Quincy city clerk and current Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, the immediate past recipient of the Henry Bosworth Award.

Other causes near and dear to Betty's heart include:

- Interfaith Social Services where she collects clothes and volunteers at the ISS desk. She participated in the Walk for ISS for nearly 20 years and coordinated a team of walkers from Quincy Point Congregational Church.

- Quincy Christmas Parade – a longtime volunteer who has helped dress the elves and other characters and put their make-up on. For the last four years she's served hot cocoa and cookies for the kids in front of Saint Ann's after the parade.

- Marshall Elementary School – collects tonic tabs and box tops for education.

She's also served the community as a volunteer driver bringing patients to their appointments at the hospital and doctors' offices. "I still drive my own car and I'm a very good driver," she proudly says.

Her past community involvement includes serving on the Quincy Park and Recreation Commission; baking sheet cakes for veterans at the VA hospitals; and volunteering as a lunch matron and chaperone at the old Pollard School.

"Everything I do for people and the community I do because I want to do it. I don't do it for money. That's been the story of my life," Betty says.

Community service, she adds, has been a labor of love.

"I would be very hurt if anybody ever said you should be getting money for (volunteering) or give me money for it. I am comfortable the way things are. I don't need the money. I'm very fortunate in that respect."

Ted and Betty were married for 56 years before he died June 4, 2004.

They raised four children:

Ted Jr., who is the superintendent of the farm at the Plymouth County House of Corrections; Ruthie, a secretary in the Quincy Public Schools for some 20 years; Richard, superintendent of Quincy Public Schools; and Don who works for the Braintree Electric Light Department.

She also has 11 grandchildren and 7 great-grandchildren.

"The most important thing about all of this is the support I've always had from my family and my husband," Betty says.

A Job Well Done

On Jan. 16, Officers John McGowan and Dave Levine were dispatched to the area of Farrington and West Squantum Streets for a report of an unarmed robbery that had just occurred.

As the officers made their way to the area, the dispatcher told the officers that the victim was a female and gave out a description of the male suspect wearing a gray hoodie and jeans.

As Officer McGowan neared the area, the victim waved him down on Farrington Street. The officer asked the victim where she last saw the suspect and she pointed to the duplex in front of her.

She stated that the suspect ran behind this house, but she was fearful and waited for the Police. As the officer walked into the back yard, they noted that there was a six-foot fence.

A window from the building opened and a female leaned out and asked the officer what he was looking for. She was told that a robbery just occurred and the suspect was last seen running behind the building. When asked if any men lived in the building, she said that there were, pointing to the apartment.

Officer McGowan walked up the stairs to the apartment and observed that the rear door was slightly open. Fearing that the suspect was hiding in the residence or destroying evidence in the residence, Officer McGowan pushed the rear door open, which led to the kitchen with several people standing around. After getting identification from the people, the officer inquired if there were any other males in the apartment and one female said that her brother lives there but just left.

Officer McGowan asked what the brother was wearing and she said it was a grey hooded sweatshirt and jeans. Officer Levine stated over the radio that he found a pocketbook on the back porch of the same building and it belonged to the victim. Officer McGowan then requested and received permission to search the apartment for the suspect. Further in the apartment were several young girls and another male.

The female who spoke with Officer McGowan then said that this was her brother and she was mistaken that he never left the apartment. He was wearing a thermal shirt, blue jeans and boots. The male appeared to be nervous and had sweat on his forehead. Officer McGowan scanned the area and found a gray hooded sweatshirt sitting on a living room chair.

Believing this to be a possible suspect, Officer McGowan brought one of the males down to the victim and she said it was definitely not him. The officer then brought the suspect down and she said she wasn't sure if he was the suspect. The suspect was then told to put the sweatshirt on and she was then asked, on a scale from 1 to 10 how sure she was that it was the same man who robbed her. She stated that she was "at around 8."

The suspect was told what the victim said, then was asked if he wanted to talk about the incident. The suspect put his head down and stated, "I have nothing to say."

The suspect, a 29-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with unarmed robbery and transported to the station to be booked. Officer McGowan then proceeded to interview the female in the house further.

She stated that the suspect was at the house and went out of the back door for a cigarette, then about 15 minutes later, came back inside "out of breath - huffing and puffing." She said that the suspect has a drug and alcohol problem.

Officer McGowan then interviewed the victim, who said that she was walking westerly on West Squantum Street from the North Quincy train station when she noticed a male party behind her. She said that she felt her pocketbook being pulled off her arm. She said that as she turned, the suspect pushed her and said, "Just give me the bag." After a brief struggle, the victim let go of the bag.

The suspect ran off, followed at a safe distance by the victim as she called "911." It was at this time that the victim and the Police were able to catch the suspect.

Longtime Trainer: Has Worked With World Champions And Youngsters in Philippines

Tommy Barrett's Boxing Journey Brought Him To Quincy

By SEAN BRENNAN

From the streets and gyms of South Boston, to sunny Los Angeles, on to Las Vegas, across the Pacific to the Philippines and now settled in Quincy, Tommy Barrett has seen it all when it comes to the worlds of professional and amateur boxing.

Barrett, molded out of old school (boxing) clay, now spends most of his time training and mentoring the young fighters who come down to the Farrell-Cyr Boxing Gym in Quincy Center. These kids may have visions of becoming the next big thing, but for Barrett, the most important thing he can offer them after spending the last few decades immersed in the sport is balance and structure as he sees fit through personal experience.

"What I want to do here (at the Farrell-Cyr Boxing Gym) is to work with the kids," he said recently during an informal interview ringside in the gym's basement space. "I don't care if they become professional fighters or world champions. It might happen but if it doesn't that is ok."

"(What) I want to do is try and build some structure and discipline. There are kids that come down at first and they say they can't do this and can't do that and then we start challenging them. The whole thing here is to build some foundation with the kids."

"It is a tough thing because you have to draw the line," Barrett continued, "and you have to find a balance. You have to have that with these kids. But you can see them building not just physically but also mentally; I also try to slip some spirituality in there. You can see them growing. They are right at that age where one wrong step and they could be in trouble."

Barrett's road to Quincy can be broken down into chapters. As a six-year boy growing up in South Boston he began boxing at the Parks & Recreation facility alongside other youngsters who had dreams of taking that next step into the boxing elite. As it turned out, the actual art of boxing did not lead Barrett to a long career fighting for title belts, but instead, he found himself as he grew older on the other side of the ropes, training and preparing other fighters for the rigors of 12 rounds of body blows and left-right jabs.

He left the comfort of South Boston for the West Coast where he eventually hooked up with renowned trainer Freddie Roach and began working alongside some of the best fighters in the sport.

"I started boxing when I was six years old in South Boston," Barrett explained. "I made my way to Los Angeles and started working with Freddie Roach. He and Mickey Rourke had a gym called Outlaw Boxing and the first guy I worked with professionally was James Toney - a world champion a few times - and I used to spar with him."

"I worked with Freddie for a while, then I came back to Boston to take care of my father when he wasn't feeling good," continued Barrett, "so that kind of put me back on the outs, again."

As fate would have it, Barrett received a phone call from a friend who worked security for Manny Pacquiao (current WBO Welterweight champion), an up-and-coming Filipino fighter. It was a call that would change the course of his life.

"A friend of mine who worked security for Pacquiao called me and said you should see this guy, so he flew me out there and I stayed at his house," Barrett said. "I was more like a technical advisor. In the boxing world it is really competitive; my specialty is footwork and balance, so that is what I did."

His work with Pacquiao and other fighters brought him to Las Vegas where he met several Filipino boxing officials who offered him the opportunity to travel to the Philippines to work with young aspiring boxers on the island nation. The journey halfway around the world changed Barrett forever.

"When I was in Las Vegas I got to know some Filipino governors and was asked to go over to the Philippines, so I went over there and started training the kids," explained Barrett. "The Philippines changed my whole life. My outlook changed on what is really important in life. They live day-to-day there and to see the kids on the street, if one gets a piece of candy, everyone got a piece of that candy. The poorest people are the nicest."

"I went from living in a five-star hotel to living in a hut just like they do and it was really something for me," Barrett said about the moment his outlook on life changed. "I realized, for me, I don't really care for all that stuff anymore. Before going to the Philippines, I was always looking for the next big thing. Now if it happens it happens. I have already been there with Pacquiao."

Two years ago Barrett returned to the United States with a clearer understanding on what he should be doing with his knowledge of boxing - the people he lived and worked with in the Philippines taught him that. For him the last few decades before traveling there had been a grind both physically and mentally. And having the sport he loves so much burn him out was not going to be an option once he returned back home.

"Boxing has been ups-and-downs," he said. "But life is too quick; I am not chasing it anymore; we are only here for a short time. I just moved to Quincy and I want to just get settled. That is why I come down (to the Farrell-Cyr Boxing Gym) every morning. It is all about the kids because it can be so rough out there for them."

"It is a rough road and they are going to need some self-confidence," Barrett noted. "They need to learn how to make decisions for themselves and that all happens down here. That is why I am here."

Presidents Could Take Spoilers' Role

By SEAN BRENNAN

Although the Quincy boys' basketball team has only one win in eight games, it is showing steady improvement and Coach Joe Amoroso feels the Presidents could be spoilers over the second half of the season.

Quincy turned in its best effort of the year last week, giving Brookline one of its toughest games before bowing, 67-58, then gave Suburban League power Brockton trouble for a period and a half before going down, 76-49.

Against Brookline, Paul Gilbody had 16 points and eight assists, Bob Mudge had 15 points, 10 rebounds and eight assists, sophomore Bill Shaughnessy had 14 points and Denis Downing had 11 rebounds.

In the Brockton game, junior Jim Stasio led the way with 13 points and five steals.

"It has been rough going, but we are improving and the younger players are coming along well," Amoroso said. "Everyone is giving me 100% and I can't ask anymore than that."

"Gilbody and Mudge, both seniors, have been outstanding all season long. Stasio, who had a great night against Brockton and Downing are juniors who are doing well and Shaughnessy, a sophomore, is doing a good job."

NORTH RUNNERS BARRETT, KENNEDY UNDEFEATED

Sheila Barrett and Linda Kennedy remained undefeated in the mile and two-mile respectively last week as the North Quincy girls' track team topped Weymouth North, 51-35, to improve its record to 4-1.

In the Weymouth North meet Barrett won the mile in 5:18 while Kennedy won the two-mile in 11:32. Tracey Corrigan was third in the two-mile while Maria McGurl won the hurdles, Lisa Fitzgerald was second and Jean O'Hare third in the dash.

Coach Lou Tozzi's Raiderettes had several of his girls competing in the state coaches' meet at Harvard.

QUINCY WRESTLERS RUN WIN STREAK TO 12

The Quincy wrestling team, the No. 1-ranked Div. 1 South Sectional team and apparently well on its way to a fifth successive Suburban League title, had a big week with three more wins to raise its record to 12-0.

Coach Carmen Mariano's team defeated Waltham 38-8 and Lowell 41-14 in a tri-meet. In the Waltham meet, Dave Coulter won by major decision at 100 pounds, Joe Monahan won by decision at 114, Bill Marsden won at 121, Paul Miller won by pin at 128, Joe Madden by decision at 134, John DePolo drew at 140, Darrin DeCoste won by decision at 147, Bill Rollins by decision at 157, Kevin Cabezas by decision at 169 and Jamie Gravales by pin in the heavy-weight class.

Q/NQ Swimming Defeats Rockland

The Quincy/North Quincy boys swimming and diving team (2-8, 0-6) won its second meet defeating Rockland, 39-20, on Thursday, Jan. 19 at home.

The QNQ girls (7-3, 4-2) cruised to a 74-53 victory over the visitors.

Sophomore captain Elio Daci (Quincy) earned the meet's quickest clips in both the 100-yard backstroke (1:09.62) and 500-yard freestyle (6:10.43) events. Senior Sean Lerkvikam (NQ) touched the wall first in both the 200-yard freestyle (2:48.50) and 100-yard breaststroke (1:22.91), and his classmate, Cyril Caparanga (NQ), was first in the 100-yard freestyle, swimming 1:15.09. Freshman Mike Mullaney (NQ) paced the 50-yard freestyle field (30.47) then finished second in the 500-yard freestyle (7:48.84).

For the girls, freshman Evlyn Scuzzarella (NQ) prevailed in the tightest contest of the day, the 200-yard individual medley. After falling behind in the penultimate stroke, Scuzzarella used her freestyle 50 to surpass Rockland's Lilly Margolis for a victorious time of 2:46.06. Her classmate, Sabrina Rauch (Quincy), garnered top times in the 100-yard butterfly (1:09.25) and 100-yard backstroke (1:10.31). Senior captain Samantha Enbar-Salo (NQ) notched a first and second in the 50-yard freestyle (31.03) and 500-yard freestyle (7:25.79), respectively. Also in the 500 race, junior Kat O'Connor (NQ) swam an event-best time of 6:11.40.

Freshman Erin McMillen's (Quincy) effort of 1:32.59 undercut the 100-yard breaststroke field, and classmate Meg Caggiano (Quincy) won the 200-yard freestyle (2:57.88).

Senior captain Taryn Urbanus (Quincy) earned first in the one-meter dive with 276.3 points.

QNQ returns to action Tuesday, Jan. 31 when they host Duxbury at home. Meet starts at 3:30 p.m.

Girls Team Drops 93-84

Decision to Hanover

The Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving team (6-3, 4-2) dropped a 93-84 decision to Hanover, Tuesday, Jan. 17 at home.

The QNQ boys (1-8, 0-6) fell 85-53.

Quincy/North Quincy, who trailed by as many as 12 points, reduced the deficit on the strength of freshman Sabrina Rauch's (Quincy) 5:56.09 effort in the 500-yard freestyle. Rauch kept pace with Hanover's Alex Kelly then captured a commanding lead on lap 17; and thanks to senior captain Samantha Enbar-Salo's (NQ) effort of 7:27.28 for third, QNQ drew to within three points at 60:57. Hanover then earned the top spot in three of the final four events.

Junior Kat O'Connor (NQ) and sophomore Sarah Tran (NQ) placed first and second in each of the 50- and 100-yard freestyle events. O'Connor swam 27.53 followed by Tran at 28.65 in the 50 free. In twice the distance, O'Connor clocked 1:01.69 and Tran swam 1:07.53. Rauch won the 200-yard individual medley (2:32.19) and Evlyn Scuzzarella notched bronze medals in that race (2:46.75) as well as the 100-yard backstroke (1:17.62). Senior Jessica O'Donovan (NQ) and freshman Marlena Forrester (Quincy) secured QNQ's second- and third-place finishes in the 100-yard breaststroke, swimming 1:28.97 and 1:30.09, respectively. Senior captain Taryn Urbanus (Quincy) amassed 288.30 points to win the one-meter dive.

In the boys meet, freshman Mike Mullaney (NQ) won the 50-yard freestyle at 30.78.

To Hingham, 95-85

The Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving team (6-2, 4-1) snapped a six-meet win streak and suffered its first Patriot League loss, falling to Hingham, 95-85, Thursday, Jan. 12 at the Randolph High School pool.

The QNQ boys (1-7, 0-5) lost 87-47.

The lead changed three times, and despite QNQ's setting the pace in seven of 12 events, Hingham grabbed the advantage for good with one-two finishes in the final two individual events. QNQ's depth was demonstrated in the first half of the meet when freshmen Sabrina Rauch (Quincy) and Marina Chafa (Quincy) touched first and second in the 200-yard individual medley, swimming 2:31.50 and 2:44.22, respectively. The next race saw junior Kat O'Connor (NQ) and sophomore Sarah Tran (NQ) pace the 50-yard freestyle field clocking 27.19, a south sectional qualifying time, and 28.44, respectively.

Senior Olivia Goldson (Quincy) earned her event-best time of 2:14.72 in the 200-yard freestyle by undercutting the field and qualifying for the state championships at 57.50 in the 100-yard freestyle followed by teammate Kat O'Connor's south sectional qualifying time of 59.53. The 400-yard freestyle relay unit of Evlyn Scuzzarella (NQ), Kat O'Connor, Sabrina Rauch, and Olivia Goldson earned a seed at the state championships with an effort of 4:05.20. Rauch also qualified for sectionals with her effort of 1:06.18 in the 100-yard butterfly.

In the boys meet, sophomore captain Elio Daci (Quincy) won the 200-yard freestyle (2:10.82) and was second in the 100-yard butterfly (1:15.52). Freshman Mike Mullaney (NQ) finished second in the 50-yard freestyle (30.12).

QHS To Host 12-Team Individual Sectionals On Feb. 4 in Munroe McLean Gymnasium Presidents Are Leaving It All Out On The Mat

By SEAN BRENNAN

Records at first glance can be deceiving. Take a look at the Quincy High wrestling team. The Presidents began the week with a team record of 4-14, but with closer examination, the reason for that mark becomes a little clearer.

Head Coach Patrick Lane has a talented collection of wrestlers under 172 pounds. The problem this winter is that Quincy has no one to wrestle at the four weight classes above that spot. But don't expect Lane to bemoan this predicament.

"If you read the papers it looks like we are having a down year because on paper we are 4-14," he said before adding, "but there are 14 weight classes to fill and we don't have a soul over 172 pounds, so we have four weight classes that we have to forfeit every match."

"I have done the math," the seventh-year coach and math teacher at QHS explained, "and if you eliminate the four forfeits and the 24 points we give up each night the record would be 8-7-3. This is an individual sport at its base level and we have successful individual wrestlers - we just don't have a full team."

What Lane does have is impressive. Quincy boasts several top-notch wrestlers in the weight classes between 103-172. He also has depth at both the jayvee and varsity level, which means the program is moving in the right direction.

"We just are not attracting the heavier kids at Quincy High, that has ebbed and flowed" explained Lane about the lack of big bodies. "This is just one of those years where we have lots of kids below 172. We have backups at all the weight classes below that. Things look good for the future."

Leading the way this season have been senior captains Nico Ferragamo (126 pounds), David Hanna (126), Greg Lowe (145), CJ Brooks (160), and Dennis Nguyen. This group is the glue that keeps everyone else in line. They are seasoned wrestlers who know exactly what it takes to be good (dedication, hard work, toughness), but they are also excellent student-athletes. The prototypical team captains.

"We have had some true individuals stand out," Lane noted. "Nico and David have both been three-year varsity wrestlers for us and they are tremendous leaders and great in the classroom and on the mat. Greg, a two-year captain, has improved even beyond where he was last season, and CJ and Dennis have both been willing to wrestle at higher weight classes for the good of the team."

All five captains have performed up to task. However, junior Matt Roach (152) isn't far behind. Roach entered the week with a sterling 18-4 record and should be a contender for an individual South Sectional title when the annual 12-team event is held at Quincy High School on Saturday, Feb. 4.

The Presidents have also had no less than six first-year wrestlers step into a varsity spot and win a match this winter.

"Matt has a tremendous record," Lane said. "These (young) kids are willing and able, which is a fantastic trait that you can't coach."

When the new Quincy High School was completed, the wrestling program finally found a permanent home on campus. Situated in a window-filled room at the back of the gymnasium, the space has been a boon for Lane's program, as has the new weight room located in the same area. But if you want to wrestle for Lane, you better prepare to put in the work and, most importantly, respect the program's long tradition.

"You need to be resilient and have some heart and a will to work," he explained. "This is a varsity sport not a club (sport) where you can come and go. Beyond just discipline and toughness, a work ethic needs to be there. We attract a good quality student-athlete."

"We have had a number of kids win the sectionals on an individual basis. These kids (today) are seeing these names go up on a banner and staying there forever and there is a nice measuring stick," Lane said about the value of history and tradition in the program. "I am a big believer in history and I make sure they know who their wrestling ancestors are."

If you wrestle at Quincy you remain part of that family, forever. There is too much blood, sweat and tears that go into being successful in the sport to take that away. Alumni from years past occasionally come part to impart their knowledge on the current core, which is the only way that Lane would have it.

"I am most proud of the alumni wanting to come back and volunteer their time to help and that means more to me than all of the sectional/state champions (that we have had) and winning a league championship," he said.

Over the weekend, the President took part in the Weymouth Invitational against some of the best wrestlers in the area. Ferragamo earned first at 126; Hanna third at 126 while Lowe took fifth at 145 and Roach gained fifth at 152.

Jose Perez, Kevin Barry, Suhail Purkar and Kenny Garcia-Rosario stood out as well.

Preventing Winter Weather-Related Risks

With the arrival of frigid temperatures and wintry weather, senior citizens face additional challenges in preparing for and responding to issues like power and communication outages, icy surfaces and lack of heat.

SENIOR NEWS LINE

by Matilda Charles

Winter No Excuse Not to Exercise

Are you tired of winter? You're not alone. Too many of us have cocooned as temperatures have dropped, often not leaving the house for days or more.

We need to get moving, one way or the other, and here are some ways we can:

Look for exercise programs on TV, especially if you have cable. "Sit and Be Fit" is a show with exercises for seniors and others with physical limitations. All the exercises are done while seated. Check the website (www.sitandbefit.org) to learn where the show airs on public television. If you have On Demand, look at the Exercise TV section for other workout shows. Look for the walking in place programs or those geared to seniors.

Check into Tai Chi or QiGong classes geared to seniors. These are gentle, flowing movements that can be done even sitting in a chair if balance is an issue. (They'll help with strengthening core muscles, which actually can help with balance problems.)

If transportation is a concern (or if you don't like driving in winter) ask if the senior center has a van that can pick you up for classes. Parks and recreation also is a potential source of rides, as is social services. You're more likely to go to your class if someone is coming to pick you up!

If you're in an area with snow and ice (but are otherwise sturdy on your feet), look for indoor places to walk. Schools sometimes open their halls after hours and indoor malls open early in the morning.

If you're determined to walk for exercise, look into grips that attach to shoes. Search the Internet for "Stabilicers" and ask if your local shoe store can order something similar.

Matilda Charles regrets that she cannot personally answer reader questions, but will incorporate them into her column whenever possible. Write to her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475, or send e-mail to columnreply@gmail.com.

Experts recommend that they, and their adult children, neighbors or caregivers do some simple pre-planning to protect their safety during the winter.

"Seniors need to prepare for winter long before it arrives so they have safety and mobility plans in place," says Andrea Cohen, CEO of HouseWorks, a home care company dedicated to helping seniors live independently.

"Snow and ice, cold temperatures and heating devices are all potential safety hazards that result in a number of accidents every year. Minor additions or changes to a senior's home can minimize the risk of an accident and create a dramatically safer environment."

In order to keep seniors safe, Cohen strongly suggests conducting a safety inventory well before the weather becomes challenging. She recommends the following:

Snow and ice. Many seniors can't safely remove the snow and ice on their property or in front of their door. Make sure that someone is available to shovel snow and remove ice for them on a regular basis, to guarantee they can safely exit and enter their home, and that their dryer vents and gutters are cleared as well.

Supplies. Cold weather or heavy snow can drastically impact a senior's mobility. Is somebody available to help do the grocery shopping? Does the senior have enough food and medication to last for several days, in case weather makes streets impassible or affects electricity? In addition, make sure there are handy flashlights and batteries, in case of power outage.

Fire hazards. Seniors sometimes rely on heating pads or space heaters to provide additional warmth during the winter months. Unchecked or unattended items like these—as well as candles, old electric cables and outlets—can become fire hazards. Check, then remove or repair unsafe items, and put fresh batteries into smoke and carbon monoxide detectors.

Communication. Are all important phone numbers—family members, food delivery, health care providers—posted in a convenient and visible place, such as the refrigerator? Is the telephone easily accessible? Will it work if the power is out? Keeping a mobile phone charged for emergencies will help ensure communication even if the power is out. There are easy-to-use mobile phones for seniors who are not comfortable with technology.

Support system. If a senior's family lives far away, it's a good idea to arrange for a friend or neighbor to check on them from time to time. For emergencies, consider a medical alert system that can ensure immediate response to an emergency situation. Last winter reminded us that weather can affect heat and electricity for days—in some drastic cases, weeks—at a time. Make sure that you've identified a safe place for shelter if the heat or electricity are out for an extended period, and that there is a plan in place to get there. Consider signing up for grocery delivery service.

Home modification. As you prepare for winter, remember non-seasonal safety issues as well. Can the senior move easily around at his or her place and safely use all facilities, or are modifications necessary?

Home modifications such as grab bars, hand-held showers, or furniture and rug rearrangement can make the home a safer place.

Small changes can make a big impact when it comes to a senior's independence. Now is the perfect time to make those changes—before Mother Nature creates her own mischief this winter season. For more information, go to www.houseworks.com.

Choices for Blocked Leg Artery

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 74-year-old male and have been diagnosed with peripheral artery disease, PAD. I have a complete occlusion of the main artery just above the knee. What, in your opinion, are the chances of getting through the blockage with angioplasty? There is constant soreness in my calf, even at rest. Is that caused by the blockage? Will cilostazol (Pletal) and Crestor possibly dissolve some of the blockage? —J.C.

ANSWER: Peripheral artery disease, PAD, is also called peripheral vascular disease. It's an obstruction to the flow of blood through a leg artery. The obstruction is a buildup of cholesterol, fats and various other blood elements. Between the ages of 60 and 65, 4 percent of adults have it, and by the time people reach 80, 20 percent or more are victims of it.

Its chief sign is intermittent claudication, which is pain in leg muscles, quite often the calf muscles, when a person is active. Many can predict almost to a specified number of steps when the pain will arise. Once the person rests, pain usually lasts minutes, but it can take 20 or more minutes to leave. It returns when the person begins to walk again. I can't say definitely if your constant calf pain is due to PAD; it might be.

Ankle blood pressure is a valuable test for detecting PAD. Normally, the ankle pressure should be close to the arm blood pressure. A lower ankle pressure indicates an obstruction in a leg artery.

Your medicines cilostazol and Crestor won't completely dissolve the buildup in your leg artery, but they'll keep it from growing larger. Crestor might reduce the size somewhat. You can help matters by watching your cholesterol; eating a diet that emphasizes grains, fruits and vegetables; controlling your blood pressure; and controlling your blood sugar if you have diabetes. Walking is an exercise that is most helpful.

Angioplasty is one option for you. It will get through the buildup. It's the same procedure used to open heart arteries with a balloon-equipped catheter that is threaded to the blockage through a surface artery. The balloon is opened at the obstruction, and often a stent is left in the artery. A stent is a wire device that keeps the artery opened. Surgical replacement of the clogged segment of artery with a graft is another option. The location and extent of disease determine which is the better choice.

The booklet on PAD explains this common condition in detail. To obtain a copy, write: Dr. Donohue — No. 109W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My boyfriend's feet sweat terribly. His socks are wringing wet when he takes his shoes off after running. I have told him to wear cotton socks, and he made the change. I don't see any improvement. Would a different kind of sock be better? —H.M.

ANSWER: Acrylic is a better material. It wicks moisture away from the feet. Dusting powders and a change of socks will improve the situation. Have him carry an extra pair with him when he runs. Damp feet invite fungal infections.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ARE TOOTH IMPLANTS APPROPRIATE FOR CHILDREN?

When children lose permanent teeth due to accidents or sports-related injury, the teeth can sometimes be re-implanted. If the knocked-out tooth is handled properly and reinserted quickly, otherwise, children and parents must work with the dentist to come up with an appropriate tooth-replacement solution. While dental implants are normally the treatment of choice, their use in children with underdeveloped jaws may impede jaw growth and prevent other teeth from growing into their natural positions. With this in mind, girls must wait until they are at least 14-15 years old to get dental implants, and boys should be at least 17 years old. Until then, the dentist can fill the gap caused by a missing tooth with a denture.

Dental implants can give you back your smile, and help you feel better about yourself. We are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals — and we're here to help you make the most of your smile. For quality, compassionate dental care, please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, we are proud of our staff — a staff dedicated to helping your look and feel better. We are grateful for the trust our patients have placed in us by choosing us to provide their dental care. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a full trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If a permanent tooth is knocked out and can be recovered, it is important to hold it by the crown (top portion) rinse it (not scrub) very carefully in saline solution or tap water, gently put it back in its socket, and immediately get to the dentist's office.

CARPAL TUNNEL SYNDROME OR SOMETHING ELSE?

When numbness, tingling, and muscle weakness occur in the "thumb side" of the hand, carpal tunnel syndrome is usually suspected. This repetitive motion injury involving the hand and wrist is caused by pressure exerted on the median nerve, which runs through the "carpal tunnel" created by the carpal bones in the wrist and supplies feeling and movement to parts of the hand. Chiropractors also know to look elsewhere to find the cause of symptoms. Specifically, the "brachial plexus" is a network of nerves that originates in the neck and shoulders and controls the hand, wrist, and elbow. If there is pressure on any of these nerves, the result may cause symptoms similar to those of carpal tunnel syndrome.

Instead of covering up your symptoms with drugs, at the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we will help determine if your health problem, such as possible carpal tunnel syndrome, can be helped through gentle chiropractic care — without drugs or surgery. Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We have the services you require. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. "Referred pain" is pain experienced at a location in the body that is different from the site of the painful stimulus.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that a man with his head in the clouds is in no position to watch his step.

When driving in your car, have you ever been irritated and alarmed (and scared, too) by the way in which children, intent on their play, sometimes run suddenly out into the street oblivious of the traffic? If they pay attention to it all, they usually only look one way and fail to notice the traffic coming from the opposite direction.

This habit of looking only one way is not only characteristic of children, but can often be seen in older people as well. We all know some young people who made a snap judgment to drop out of school after looking only one way at the traffic of life. We all know persons who have been equally hasty and ill-advised in starting businesses without adequate preparation. . . .

"Standing on the curb" and looking carefully at dangers and problems coming from all directions might take a little more time, but it is the only way to insure a safe passage across the street.

There is a word for this way of meeting life's problems - Maturity . . .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
The changes you've waited to see in your work situation might not be happening quite as quickly as you'd hoped. Although the pace is slow, it's ongoing. Expect to hear news soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
You should be feeling very proud of the fine effort you've made to get that important project done. Now take some time out to celebrate with family and friends. You've earned it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
You're close to reaching your objectives. That's the good news. But be careful: Your aspects show lots of potential distractions looming. Stay focused and keep your eyes fixed on your goals.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Be careful not to let that suspicious Cancerian mind create a problem where none exists. What you might believe is an act of betrayal could be nothing more than a misunderstanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Your Lion's heart overflows with self-confidence. All you need to do is tap into it, and you'll be able to handle any change that must be made regarding that recent surprise development.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
The need to watch what you say becomes increasingly crucial this week. Be as temperate as you can with your comments and avoid arguments for the sake of controversy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
A longtime family problem presents new demands. But this time, you won't have to go it alone: Someone else is asking to help share your responsibilities. Let it happen.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
A period of feeling vulnerable is about to give way to a stronger, more self-confident aspect. Use this new strength to reaffirm promises you've made to others and yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
A creative dilemma stalls your progress. Instead of letting it raise your ire, use the time to re-examine your aims and, perhaps, come up with a new target.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
Your nimble will finds a way for you to work out those newly emerged problems plaguing your new project. Stay with it. The results will be well worth your efforts.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
You might feel overwhelmed at having to decide which new opportunity you should follow. Best advice: Check them all out and see which offers what you really want.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
Continue to tread water before you even consider plunging into something that never seemed quite right. Some facts will soon emerge that can help you make a decision.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're a natural-born peacemaker. You value truth and have little patience with those who lie to you for their own purposes.

John Hancock Polar Plunge Raises $4,000 For ISS

By EMILY TAFT

Over 50 individuals plunged into Wollaston Beach Saturday for the 6th Annual John Hancock Birthday Plunge. More than 200 people watched as participants braved snowy conditions and 35-degree water temperatures to help raise money for Interfaith Social Services in Quincy.

"It was so inspiring to see participants out there running into the water, part of the fun of this is plunging in January," said Interfaith Social Services Director Rick Doane. "Unfortunately the snow kept a lot of people away that day, which led to a drop in the donations we received."

The participants raised over $4,000, which is down from last year's total of $7,000. Their goal this year was $8,000. Doane said they would continue to shoot for their goal of $8,000 next year.

"We had a good turn out but not as good as we had hoped," said Doane. "When it snows it is harder to get people to come out. We are hoping we will still get donations in from those who weren't able to make it to the plunge."

Doane said that they serve over 17,000 people and they are the largest food pantry in the South Shore.

"We serve over 400,000 pounds of food a year," said Doane. "This was one of our largest fundraisers, we needed those funds to be raised."

Donations from the event will go towards Interfaith Social Services, a non-profit organization whose mission is to strengthen family life and offer assistance to anyone in need. They serve Quincy, Milton, Holbrook, Randolph, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, and Scituate.

This year's John Hancock plunge awards went to the youngest participant Mia Pecavich, age 7; the most money raised was by Bob Gannon; the oldest plunger Barbara Gilliland, who is over 85 and is the oldest participant to date according to Doane; and the best costume went to Michaela Pettinelli from Quincy's Girl Scout Troop 74120.

All participants and award winners received a plunger for their efforts. McKay's Breakfast and Lunch also gave gift certificates to participants, and Coffee Break Café supplied hot chocolate to help warm participants up after jumping in the freezing cold water.

Before this year's plunge the fundraiser had been growing in participants and spectators, and Doane hopes that with some luck and nicer weather next year's turn out will be a little larger.

"It was a community event on Saturday," said Doane. "John Hancock made it possible for us to have the great community we do."

FIRST LOOK at the refurbished bell that was scheduled to be installed in the bell tower at United First Parish Church, "The Church of the Presidents," in Quincy Center Wednesday. The 3,000-pound bronze bell from the McShane Bell Company is inscribed with a quote from the Rev. John Hancock, former pastor of the church and the father of American Patriot John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The quote, from the second of Rev. Hancock's centennial sermons marking the 100th anniversary of the founding of the congregation, reads: "Above all things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. This is the bond of union, the cement of societies." The quote was a joint research collaboration between Mayor Thomas Koch and Ed Fitzgerald, director of the Quincy Historical Society. The bell is the property of the City of Quincy.

Last month, Street-Works recently announced that the Boston-based Beal Companies had signed on as a partner for the project. Narva said the two companies would have equal say in the construction process.

"It's a true joint venture where we share managing responsibilities," he said.

Mayor Tom Koch was pleased the two companies reached the agreement.

Dianne Kane-McGunigle Heart Attack Survivor Quincy Woman Becomes 'Go Red Girl' For Heart Association

By EMILY TAFT

As a personal trainer and teacher for the Quincy Athletic Club, 54-year-old Quincy resident Dianne Kane-McGunigle never thought she would be a major heart attack survivor.

"I have been involved with athletics my entire life and all I did was try and get people healthy. If it can happen to me it can happen to anyone," said Kane-McGunigle. "I, like most people, thought it couldn't happen to me. I am here to save lives, and to try and prevent others from going through what I had to."

Heart disease is the number one killer in women in the country, and 80 percent of those deaths can be prevented if women make their health a priority, according to Kane-McGunigle. Heart disease kills more women than all causes of death, including cancer, and every minute

QUINCY FIRE CHIEF Joseph Barron (left) and Deputy Chief Joseph Jackson (right) and the Quincy Fire Department have been big supporters in Dianne Kane-McGunigle's campaign to raise awareness about heart disease. a woman suffers a heart attack. Worldwide, 8.6 million women die from heart disease each year, accounting for a third of all deaths in women.

On Jan. 18, 2010, Kane-McGunigle started feeling symptoms of a heart attack: numbness in her forearms and nauseousness after teaching two tough body classes. But she ignored them thinking it was because of the hard work out she had that day.

The next day, Jan. 19 at the age of 52, Kane-McGunigle suffered the type of heart attack that's called the widow maker, with 100 percent occlusion, where a blood clot was stopping all

MBTA: Energy Efficient Lighting Promotes Cost, Green House Gas Savings

The MBTA announces improvements to lighting at Quincy Center station garage providing enhanced visibility for parking customers, and improved operations while reducing energy costs and consumption.

A $144,000 investment, Quincy Center Station garage has been retrofitted with 473 brand new efficient, fluorescent fixtures. The project funded through a $55,000 incentive provided by National Grid with the remaining cost incurred by the MBTA will save money, reduce electricity use, and benefit those who use MBTA and MassDOT facilities each day.

"This lighting project is an excellent example of the Patrick/Murray Administration's commitment to promoting energy efficiency," said MassDOT Secretary and CEO Richard A. Davey. "These types of projects work to reduce green house gases and save money for the MBTA and the taxpayer."

This project will provide annual savings of 418,351 kWh, $37,000 in annual energy costs, and over 346,457 lbs. of GHG.

"This project is an excellent example of a smart investment that addresses the needs of our customers while promoting energy efficiency programs," said Acting MBTA General Manager Jonathan Davis. "I am very pleased with the timely completion of this project and look forward to similar outcomes at other stations throughout the system."

The month long project began December 1, 2011 and was completed in January, 2012.

Brown Pledges Support For Adams Green Project

By EMILY TAFT

U.S. Sen. Scott Brown met with Mayor Thomas Koch last Friday to discuss how a federal Transportation Investment Generating Economic Revenue (TIGER) grant that he supports would advance the Quincy Center Adams Green Project and other Quincy redevelopment plans.

After their meeting in the mayor's office, Brown and Koch walked from City Hall to the Quincy Center T station. The two sat down and spoke of the plans for Adams Green, and Brown's support in the project.

"The Mayor has a great team and a great plan for the downtown of Quincy," said Brown. "I came here to talk with him and give him our support."

If the TIGER grants are given to Quincy they will be used to construct the Adams Green Park, which is adjacent to the Quincy Center MBTA Station. The contiguous public space would incorporate Hancock Street between the United First Parish Church and City Hall into the existing park between City Hall and the Quincy Center MBTA Station.

Adams Green will form a natural gateway between an existing multi-modal transit hub and the downtown, and will enhance access to the Adams National Historic Park, proponents say.

"A portion of our project fits nicely on perimeters of that program," said Koch. "Quincy Center's (MBTA) Station is in dire need of help. The money from the grant will go towards replacing and fixing that station."

Last October, Brown, along with Sen. John Kerry and Cong. William Keating, sent a letter to the U.S. Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood in support of the Quincy Center Adams Green Project. The letter states that the TIGER grant will allow Quincy to address a multitude of safety and accessibility issues for all users of the Quincy Center transportation network and maximize efficient and safe access to the new Downtown District.

The letter goes on to say that the redevelopment of downtown Quincy is a high priority for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and the Adams Green Project represents one of the first steps towards the new downtown.

Koch said that waiting for the grant to go through wouldn't stop the city from moving forward with its plans.

"Knowing whether or not we get that grant is about a year away," said Koch. "But that won't hold anything up on our end, in getting things moving."

The project recently received a boost with a $1 million grant from the state's Gateway Cities program. The funding will be used to design the Adams Green Park and construction documents necessary to build the public gathering space considered a centerpiece of a reinvigorated Downtown Quincy.

The planned park also calls for a new civic open space featuring a unifying town green and promenade.

Hailing The NQHS Hockey Hall Of Fame

It's billed as the first induction ceremony of the newly minted North Quincy High School Hockey Hall of Fame.

But the celebration on Friday, Feb. 17 at 6:30 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club will be so much more.

This special dinner evening will also pay tribute to some of the program's pioneers and supporters since hockey was re-established as a varsity sport in 1947.

In all, 26 of the greatest Red Raiders to ever wear skates will be enshrined spanning six decades of hockey from the 1940s through the 1990s. Two friends are also being inducted for longtime support and dedication to the North Quincy hockey program.

"The Hall of Fame is a celebration of the players' achievements as well as the pride that is North Quincy High School hockey," said Al Grazioso, one of the Hall of Fame committee members who skated for the Red and Black back in the early 1970s.

"The hockey community is a very close-knit community. It's generational. We might have guys still playing in their 60s with guys who are in their 20s. It seems like everybody knows each other. Hockey guys are one big family and this Hall of Fame is long overdue," Grazioso added.

The inaugural enshrinement ceremony is being dedicated in memory of Bob Laing, a longtime teacher and hockey coach at North Quincy High School.

"Bob took over as coach in 1953 because it appeared the team was going to fold," Grazioso said. "He stepped up and said he would coach. He ended up staying through the 1970 season. He saved the program."

Here's the list of former NQ players and two special friends who comprise the first induction class:

1940s: Walter Hannon, Red Caswell and Fordie Pitts (posthumously).

1950s: Bob Hayes, Ken Hayes, Edward Pyne, Peter Gill, Edward Meleedy and Dennis Croke (posthumously).

1990s: James Sapienza, Andrew Vermotte, Michael DesRoche and Sal Manganaro.

The two friends of NQHS hockey who will also be inducted are Harry Messina and the late Bob Troup. Messina is a longtime supporter of the team and had three sons who played for North. Troup, a well-known teacher and assistant coach at NQHS, was instrumental in getting hundreds of kids involved in hockey, from driving them to rinks to getting ice time.

RED RAIDER PRIDE - 1949 North Quincy High School graduate Walter Hannon proudly displays the letter he earned playing varsity hockey for the Red Raiders in the late 1940s. The former mayor will be among the first 26 inductees of the newly established North Quincy High School Hockey Hall of Fame. The inaugural enshrinement ceremony will take place Friday, Feb. 17 at 6:30 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

The evening will feature award presentations to all of the inductees, biographical information on each recipient and highlights of each of the program's eras.

Serving as master of ceremonies will be Jim Fatseas, one of this year's inductees and an all-scholastic goalie for North Quincy in the early 1970s. Today, Fatseas is the executive secretary for Mayor Tom Koch.

Other recognition planned for the Hall of Fame includes a banner at Quincy Youth Arena and a display at North Quincy High School. The names of this year's inductees will also be announced at the North Quincy-Quincy High hockey game Saturday, Feb. 18 at the arena.

Eligibility requires potential inductees to be out of high school for at least 10 years. The committee tried to select four from each decade from the 1940s to 1990s.

Grazioso said a committee considered candidates for the Hall after an open nomination process solicited input and information from the public. Committee members included North Quincy coach Matt Gibbons, Vinny Cameron, Robert "Soupie" Campbell, Sandy Verhault, Fred Cobban, Coach Bobby Doyle, Coach Kevin Jago, Paul Markarian, Coach Tommy Benson and Coach Ronny Erickson.

About 40 nominations were submitted. Selecting the first group was no easy task, Grazioso said.

"There were so many eligible candidates and because it's the first induction, we wanted to keep the list to around 20 and then we added a few posthumous selections. It was very tough narrowing the list," said Grazioso who gave North's hockey coaches a big assist in the selection process.

"The coaches were instrumental in nominating players who they thought were the best players during their eras. Other people also submitted nominations. It wasn't just somebody who was a great player.

"We were looking for a good citizen or someone who was considered a team leader. Those are the types of things we looked at.

"I'm sure we missed people but anyone who was nominated this year will automatically be considered for induction next year," Grazioso added.

This year's class includes all-scholastics, collegiate standouts and one who was a program pioneer long before he became a household name in Quincy.

Walter Hannon - who grew up playing hockey on a marsh on Clay Street - helped re-establish hockey as a varsity sport at North. One could say the future mayor

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1963 promotional postcard was published by Sherry's Restaurant to announce the new addition to their restaurant: The Presidential Room. It was described on the back of the postcard as the South Shore's newest and most elegant function room. It featured the perpendicular and parallel table arrangements that were used at the time to optimize space. Today, most function rooms use round tables. Note the ashtrays on the tables. Sherry's, known to many as Emma and Dinny's, was located at 579 Southern Artery. For many years it was one of Quincy's most popular restaurant and lounge destinations. After Sherry's closed the restaurant's name was changed a few times before the building was demolished. The site is now used by Dan Quirk to store new automobiles for his dealership across the street. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net. From the Collection of City Historian Tom Galvin

Sqauntum Resident Strongly Supports Wind Turbine

I am a 20-plus year resident of Sqauntum and write in support of the proposed wind turbine on Moon Island. Both my family's current home on Bay Street (1998-present) and our previous home on Bayside Road (1991-1998) look directly out to Moon Island.

We moved to Sqauntum to be by the water and near Boston. We are proud to live here. We are "abutters" to the Moon Island project.

A wind turbine on Moon

Island would be about a mile from our home. Right now, we can see the two Hull turbines out our windows. While those are farther away than Moon Island, we do not anticipate being bothered by the one closer to home.

I strongly support a wind turbine on Moon Island and the collaboration that it represents on the part of Boston and Quincy on the development of a wind energy source. Generating electricity for safe and renewable sources rather than from fossil fuels is extremely important for our future.

To the question of why this wind turbine is good for Quincy, the answer seems clear. Quincy, and all other municipalities, need to be part of a better energy path than the one we as a society are on right now.

In the end, what other benefit needs to be outlined?

I expect that the two mayors will negotiate a fair agreement on how any financial gains will be shared.

What "we" get beyond that is to be a supportive and helpful part of the solution, rather than part of the "not in my backyard" problem that prevents wind, solar, and other beneficial energy sources from being sited.

To argue in this way about a possible Moon Island turbine seems like pitting city against city and ignoring the big picture gains.

Her Goal: Train NQHS Senior Class In CPR

My name is Tessie McGough. I am senior class president at North Quincy High School.

My goal as class president is to get the NQHS class of 2012 trained and certified in CPR/AED.

On Feb. 3rd, this goal will be converted to an accomplishment.

This goal stems from an experience I had during my sophomore year. I was walking home from school an ordinary day when a man, a complete stranger, collapsed in front of me.

I knew enough to call for an ambulance but by the time it arrived, the man's prospects were looking grim. I was the only one around, and unfortunately for him, I didn't know how to help. Even now, I don't know if he lived or died. It occurred to me that something as simple as CPR/AED could mean the difference between life and death, yet few are trained. With this realization, I felt that it was my responsibility to the community to equip others with the knowledge that I'd lacked.

With this purpose in mind, I decided to run for junior class president-the first time I'd run for any class office. This year, re-lected as senior class president, I hope to deliver on my promise.

If a student is able to save just one life, the training would be worth it.

My initiative is being furthered with the help and support of Mr. Earl Metzler, North Quincy High School principal; Mr. Dennis Mahoney, head of the American Heart Association at CPR Boston; Mr. Kevin Mont, FAS' Director for EMS Operations & Emergency Preparedness; Ms. Maura Papile, the Director of Student Support Services, as well as the school committee.

Lewis Submits

$16,194,947 City Budget

City Manager Edward T. Lewis submitted to the City Council a $16,194,947 budget, an increase of $1,940,000 over the previous year.

Lewis' budget contained no general salary increases for city employees but City Councillor Charles L. Shea was leading a movement to provide a general 10% wage hike with a ceiling of $500.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa estimated that the budget would mean a $4.40 increase in the $60.60 tax rate without pay raises and $7.77 with them.

Lewis said the bulk of the budget increase was due to an $882,000 rise in school costs.

BANK CHANGES NAME

Directors of the Granite National Bank voted to change its name to the South Shore National Bank, the second name change in two months for what was once called the Granite Trust Co.

"The directors were of the opinion that the new name better describes the area now being served by the bank," said President William J. Martin.

Granite Trust Co., which was founded in the days when granite was the big industry in Quincy, changed its name to Granite National as a prelude to an intended merger with the First National Bank of Boston.

GRUTCHFIELD PACES NORTH

Doug Grutchfield threw in 25 points to lead North Quincy to a 60-44 victory over Arlington without the services of Dick Mann, the second member of the Raiders' dynamic duo who was out with a virus.

The North lineup included Grutchfield, Jim Baldwin, Pete Frederickson, Fran Scanlon and Eddie Deane, who replaced Mann in the starting five.

Quincy guards Eddie Dunham and Tommy Connors scored 34 points between them but the Presidents bowed to Malden, 71-62, in a Greater Boston League game.

REGAL FASHION SENSE

Colored gemstones have been extremely popular with jewelry designers in recent years, and no colored gemstone has a hotter outlook than amethyst, the February birthstone. This purple gemstone beauty has long been favored for its eye-catching, regal look. As such, amethyst performs most admirably as an alternative to far more expensive gemstones when it comes to complementing virtually any style or outfit. Amethyst earrings, necklaces, and bracelets are elegant enough to attract glances and compliments at social gatherings and special affairs; yet, they also have a playful side, which is readily evident in beaded designs and pieces involving mixes with other popular colored gemstones. Few gemstones provide greater value or color saturation than this lovely purple beauty.

Dazzling purple amethyst is an attention-grabbing choice for jewelry. Our professional and knowledgeable staff will work with you to make sure you have the greatest buying experience possible. You will find a wide selection of amethyst jewelry available at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. Should you have any questions or concerns please call us at 617-773-3636.

ENC Theatre Department Stage Adaptation Of 'Stories of God' For Children

The Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department will present Stories of God, a theatrical adaptation of Rainer Maria Rilke's book featuring children's stories Feb. 16-18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Cove Fine Arts Center on the college's Wollaston campus.

The play is based on Rilke's book, which is said to have been inspired by a trip the Bohemian poet made to Russia in 1899. Director Michael Ballard said that unlike other ENC theatre productions, Stories of God will be performed in a "black box" setting, with the audience sitting on three sides of the stage.

"We are taking a playful, active approach to the stories, so children will be engaged," Director Michael Ballard said. "But there is much of Rilke's poetic language throughout, which should appeal to adults as well."

Producer Tara Brooke Watkins agreed. "The interconnected tales reflect the spirituality of the simple Russian people Rilke met on his journey," she said. "The stories reflect the powerful imagery of Rilke's later poetry, yet they have a folktale quality that makes them accessible to audiences of all ages."

Ballard also noted that Stories of God takes a "story theatre," or storytelling, approach.

Tickets for Stories of God are $10 general admission, $7 for students, $5 for children 12 and under.

Super Treats For The Super Bowl From Marie's Kitchen

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Sandwich Casserole-Super Bowl Style

Who doesn't like a sandwich?

That's why for the Super Bowl Sunday, for one of my appetizers, I am making a sandwich casserole. And the good part is that it has to be made ahead of time so it can marinate. That means that it can be made either the night before the big game, or the morning of since the game isn't until later in the day.

Any ingredients can be used to make the sandwich-what ever the family enjoys. I am using ham and cheese and other deli meats, but whatever you prefer is fine. I'm making them as a club sandwich, so three slices of bread is used for each one. Any amount can be made according to how many there is to serve.

SANDWICH CASSEROLE

- 27 slices of white bread (cut crust off)
- 8 eggs (beaten)
- 3/4 pound ham
- 3/4 pound of either American, cheddar, provolone, or any favorite sliced cheese
- 3/4 pound mortadella or salami (or any other favorite)

- Four fresh tomatoes (sliced) (optional)
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 package of shredded cheese for topping (any favorite)

Remove the crust from the bread. In a 9x11-baking dish, slightly greased, layer nine slices of the bread on the bottom of the pan.

On each slice, place the ham, and any deli meats you are using, and then the cheese. Top it with tomato slice, seasoning them with salt, pepper and a smidgen of olive oil. Add the next slice of bread repeating the same meat and cheese and tomato. On the top layer, just sprinkle each one with the shredded cheese.

When these are all made, pour the beaten eggs all over the top so it drizzles down the side. Marinate overnight or the day it is made.

Bake in a 350-degree oven until cheese is melted. Cut in squares and serve hot or room temperature.

Stuffed Mushrooms - Always A Big Hit

Each year during the football season, our family sometimes manages to get together and enjoy each other's appetizers.

And a favorite is stuffed mushrooms that can be made ahead of time and then just baked when the time comes.

In today's recipe I'm using spinach as one of the ingredients, but if you're not a fan, the recipe can be used without it. It's a pretty simple one to follow, and most of the ingredients we have in our pantry.

STUFFED MUSHROOMS

- 1/2 bag fresh spinach
- 2 mushrooms (chopped finely)
- 1-pound large mushrooms
- 3 tablespoons seasoned breadcrumbs
- 1-teaspoon fresh parsley (chopped)

Juice of a lemon

- 3 tablespoons white wine (optional)
- Salt and pepper to taste

Sauté the spinach in olive oil and garlic, drain and squeeze out any liquid. Set aside. You can also just boil it if you prefer and season it later.

Remove stems from mushrooms. Place the mushrooms in a slightly greased cookie sheet or baking pan.

In a bowl, put the spinach and all of the other ingredients except the lemon, and mix until well blended.

Stuff each mushroom to the top. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 20-25 minutes. Sprinkle lemon juice over the top and enjoy!

Kick Off The Big Game With Asparagus Or Clam Fritters

From the time I can remember, at our house, we ate all kinds of vegetables because we had a huge garden and vegetables were aplenty. And they were organic too but we didn't even know it.

In addition to jarring tomatoes, and many other things, my mother made all kinds of fritters. Today's recipe is for asparagus fritters. And if you're not a fan of asparagus, substitute them for a can of minced clams; equally delicious.

For the super-bowl, I'm making the asparagus fritter's as one of my appetizers. I purchased an organic bag of the whole asparagus, but any other kind either frozen or canned will do. They can be made ahead of time and just heated in a warming oven.

ASPARAGUS OR CLAM FRITTERS

- 2 eggs
- 2-3 tablespoons flour
- 3-4 tablespoons grated Romano or Parmesan Cheeses
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 can or one package of frozen asparagus

Or

- 1 small can of minced clams
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil for sautéing

If you are using the whole asparagus, and they are frozen, cook them until done. Cool and cut them in one-inch pieces. Which ever you use, they should all be about one inch. If using a canned asparagus, drain the liquid. Set aside.

If you are using the minced clams, drain most of the juice out, and use 2 or 3 tablespoons of the juice in the mixture.

In a bowl, beat the egg, and add the flour, cheese, salt and pepper and beat adding the milk or the clam's juice. Mix well. The mixture should resemble pancake mixture. If it is too watery, add a smidgen more of the flour.

Add the asparagus or the clams and mix well until blended.

In a skillet, heat the oil and drop the mixture by spoonfuls. Turn until they are browned on both sides. Drain on paper towel. Place in a dish that can be used in the oven when it is time to warm them.

These can be made way ahead and refrigerated until time to serve.

Landlords Found Guilty Of Manslaughter In Fatal Fire

Two Quincy brothers have each been found guilty of three counts of manslaughter in the March 2009 fire that claimed the lives of a Quincy father and his two young sons in a property where they were landlords, according to Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey.

A Norfolk Superior Court jury found Andy Huang and his brother Jason Huang guilty on all three counts of manslaughter, four counts of Wanton or Reckless Violation of State Building Code or Fire Code (causing serious bodily injury or death) Chap. 148 Sec. 34B, for the March 25, 2009 fire that cost a Quincy man and his two sons their lives, according to Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey.

Andy Huang was additionally found guilty of a single count of perjury for lying on an insurance application; Jason Huang was acquitted of a single count of perjury.

The apartment at 100 Robertson Rd. in Quincy lacked smoke detectors and only one way out of the apartment, in violation of fire code, the mandatory second exit for use in case of fire, among other violations. The fire claimed the life of Oudah Moshah Frawi, 39, his two-month old son Hassan Frawi and his year-old son Ali Oudah Frawi. Frawi's wife and the mother of the children survived with serious burn injuries.

"This was a senseless and jarring loss of life that shocked the City of Quincy, and now all three landlords have been held to account for the wanton and reckless conduct that caused these deaths," Morrissey said. "It is important to remember and recognize the courage of the surviving mother in returning to Massachusetts from her new home in Oklahoma to testify about these awful events."

Morrissey thanked the jury for their service and the investigators who put the case together.

"State Fire Marshal Stephen Coan's investigators, the Quincy Police Department, Fire Department, health department and the State Police detectives assigned to the District Attorney's Office had a tremendous task here. This was a complex and difficult investigation and a complex and difficult case to try for Assistant District Attorneys Lynn Beland and Varsha Kukafka, and Victim Advocate Maureen Russell," Morrissey said. "Their combined effort has been enormous, and today I believe it has resulted in a just verdict."

Prosecutors believe that these are the first convictions under Chapter 148, Section 43 B, which was enacted in Massachusetts in response to the Station Nightclub fire in Rhode Island.

In October, a third co-defendant, Jinny Xue Ma pled guilty to three counts of manslaughter, four counts of Wanton or Reckless Violation of State Building Code (causing serious bodily injury or death) Chap. 148 Sec. 34B, and one count of perjury for falsifying documents related to the property and is currently serving her sentence.

The Huang brothers were scheduled for sentencing today (Thursday) at 2 p.m. at Norfolk Superior Court.

Moon Island Wind Turbine Planning Board Public Hearing Feb. 8

the potential for building a 400-foot turbine on property owned by the City of Boston on Moon Island. Several public meetings have been held to date, and next week's meeting will include a presentation from project engineers on the proposal, including visual demonstrations, sound studies and research on the potential effect of the turbines shadows.

The Moon Island turbine is believed to be planned further away from any home – more than 1 mile – than any land-based wind facility built in Massachusetts. Both the City of Quincy and City of Boston will provide information demonstrating that the turbine's distance from Squantum eliminates many of the issues relative to sound and shadows.

As the public process continues, the two cities are continuing to work on a formal agreement that will allow the City of Quincy to share in the revenue of the turbine, which is estimated to cost $4.3 million. Such an arrangement between two cities would be the first of its kind in Massachusetts. Under any agreement between the cities, revenue from the power generated by the turbine will more than offset costs to build it, officials said.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the turbine proposal has also opened new dialogue with the City of Boston that did not exist previously and that has already produced tangible results, such as Mayor Thomas Menino agreeing to limit the hours of the Boston Police Department shooting range on Moon Island.

"The feedback to date has been tremendously positive, we are continuing to work through issues, and we believe we will have an arrangement that provides great benefits to the City of Quincy," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

Moon Island Wind Project Good For Quincy

On February 8, the City of Quincy Planning Board will be holding a public hearing on the application by the City of Boston to build a wind turbine on Moon Island, land owned by Boston but within the city limits of Quincy and subject to Quincy's zoning ordinance.

My nonprofit organization, Mass Energy Consumers Alliance (Mass Energy), supports wind power because it is the most affordable zero-emission energy source available. And as a Quincy resident, I know that our city will benefit financially and contribute to something of national and global importance.

People might remember that the project was first unveiled to the public at a community meeting at Squantum Elementary in May 2010. I really believe that attendees were impressed by the details and most were satisfied that the turbine would be a good enough neighbor.

More recently, the Quincy Planning Board commissioned an independent review of the project. Their consultant presented its findings on Jan. 11, 2012. I attended that meeting and have since read the consultant's report.

In my view, the Planning Board's consultant found no reason to deny the permit.

Mass Energy has been involved one way or another in many wind projects and we are familiar with many others. I am not aware of any projects in New England that are located as far from residences as this project on Moon Island.

The turbine would be located on the far side of the island, about a mile away from the nearest home in Squantum. Noise will not be an issue. Potential for flicker will be limited to a handful of dawn hours of the year.

Construction issues will be relatively minor and of short duration. There is a turbine being built in Scituate right now that is a cause for a great amount of positive excitement for people in the town. On a snowy day, hundreds turned out to sign their names on the first blade delivered to the site. We also know that residents of Hull were pleased enough with their first turbine to build a second.

Thanks primarily to legislation passed in 2008, the state provides strong incentives for municipally-owned wind turbines.

As far as I know, this project will involve some sort of a partnership between the two cities so that Quincy will get a good return on investment.

This is not a project benefiting a for-profit company.

It will benefit us all. The sooner, the better.

QHS Girls' Basketball Team Terrific

I was very pleased to read Sean Brennan's fine story about Quincy High School's terrific girls' basketball team in your 1-19-12 edition. While I have watched QHS boys' basketball for 65 years I have only watched the girls team for 10 years.

This year's girls' team is by far the best I have seen in that period. The key are the six seniors pictured in the article. They are all talented players who have played together for some years. They are friends of the court and closely-knit teammates.

They are a balanced team with Kiley McDonald, Caity Lowry and Maria Berberan, very tough under the boards. They are greatly aided by four solid ball handlers in seniors Nicole Lamie, Juli Tomer, Emily Nguyen and sophomore Alyssa Lydon.

Kiley McDonald is a relentless rebounder and inside scorer. Nicole Lamie is a deadly 3-point shooter.

They are a complete team; if one player is off her game another like Caity Lowry, Juli, Maria or Emily can fill the void.

I was not surprised to read that all six of the seniors are all honor roll students. They are smart on the basketball court as well as in the classroom. Coach Jeff Bretsch and QHS can be very proud of this team.

Repeating Town Brook's Profitable History Makes Sense For Quincy's Future

The Town Brook flows from the Blue Hills through Quincy Center and into Town River Bay.

People have always been drawn to water. We have a once in a century opportunity to rebuild our downtown and open up this historic brook. John Adams played in it as a child.

It was an important trade route between the natives and settlers from 1500 through the 1630's.

In the 1950's it was culverted and paved for parking spaces.

Before that time, Town Brook and Town River were a main source of money for Quincy:

Tide Mills, Shipping, Granite Quarries and the World's Best Fishing!

The brackish water connecting with a deep, salt-water channel create the perfect environment for fish spawning. More fish mean more money. Restaurants and shops would flourish with a pretty brook running through the center.

As the City of Quincy embarks on a $1.6 billion project to rebuild our downtown, spending a little more money to expose the brook seems like a wise investment.

A successful development requires a good plan. Please call Mayor Koch and ask him to open up the brook. It's a valuable resource and must be part of the plan NOT treated like The Inconvenient Brook.

Tell him you hope his plan provides the most daylight possible for Town Brook.

That makes economic sense.

'Vincent Who?' Film Screening, Discussion

A free screening of the recent documentary film "Vincent Who?" will be held Tuesday, Feb. 7 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

In 1982, at the height of anti-Japanese sentiments, Vincent Chin was murdered in Detroit by two white autoworkers who thought he was Japanese and, thus, somehow responsible for the job losses that accompanied the decline of the U.S. auto industry.

The judge fined the killers a mere $3,000 and three years of probation.

Through interviews with the key players at the time, as well as a whole new generation of activists, the film explores the history of the case, as well as other important touchstones in Asian American history including the Chinese Exclusion, Japanese Internment, the 1992 LA Riots, the recent murders of Joseph Ito and Cha Vang and post 9/11 racial profiling.

The 2009 film won the 2009 Media Award from the National Association for Multicultural Education and was a finalist for the American Library Association's Notable DVDs of 2010.

After the 40-minute film screening, the movie's writer/producer Curtis Chin will lead an open question and answer session. Chin is an award-winning writer and producer who has written for ABC, NBC, Fox, the Disney Channel and more. As a community activist, he co-founded the Asian American Writers Workshop and Asian Pacific Americans for Progress. In 2008, he served on Barack Obama's Asian American Leadership Council where he participated in helping the campaign reach out to the AAPI community.

The free event is sponsored by the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Quincy Human Rights Commission, Quincy Asian Resources and Asian Pacific Americans for Progress.

$709,000 Fire Truck Part Of $25M Capital Improvement Plan City Takes Delivery Of New Ladder Truck

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's newest fire truck was on display Tuesday at Fire Department Headquarters on Quincy Avenue.

The $709,000 ladder truck, dubbed ladder 1, was purchased as part of the city's $25 million capital improvement plan.

Fire Chief Joe Barron was on-hand as the truck, which has a 110-foot long ladder, was unveiled. He said it will replace another ladder truck, made in 2001, that was unreliable and difficult to drive.

"It kept going out of service," Barron said of the old truck. "We eventually wound up rewiring the whole truck, but because of the configuration of the vehicle it had a large overhang on the rear of it and it was what we call a mid-mount ladder, it just didn't maneuver through our streets very

Whitwell Street Resident Struck, Killed By Car

By EMILY TAFT

A 55-year-old resident of Whitwell Street was struck and killed by a car driving on Burgin Parkway Tuesday morning.

Wendy Chow of 173 Whitwell St. died after being hit by a 1997 Volvo at 145 Burgin Parkway in front of the Quincy Center T Station Tuesday at 5:33 a.m., according to Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan.

Ann Grant, 69, of South Easton was driving north through a green light on Burgin Parkway when witnesses say Chow darted out into the pedestrian walkway and was then struck by Grant's vehicle. Dougan said Grant stopped immediately after the accident happened.

Chow was taken to Quincy Medical Center where she was pronounced dead due to her injuries, according to Dougan.

Dougan said there have been no charges filed against Grant at this time.

The accident is under investigation by the Quincy Police Department's accident reconstruction team and the DA's office.

well it was constantly in little fender-benders. This is a much better vehicle."

The fire department has two other ladder trucks in its fleet. They were built in 1995 and 1998, and Barron said he would like another new truck that could stay in North Quincy.

Mayor Tom Koch, who was also on hand at fire department headquarters, said the city would consider buying an additional one next year. "We'll be looking at, over the next year, the purchase of another ladder truck to keep up with the fleet," he said. "They are aging and we need to keep up with the equipment and the apparatus for the firefighters."

The mayor said he looked into upgrading equipment for the police and fire departments when he first took office, but the economic situation made that difficult to do then.

"It's certainly something we're always cognizant of whether it's the fire service, police or other departments," Koch said. "Not long after I took office the economy hit the fan. We went through some major, tough budget decisions...it's tough to buy a piece of equipment while you're laying somebody off. So the equipment purchases were kind of put aside until we got through the last couple years. And now I'm not saying things have greatly improved, but it's plateaued - we're not seeing major cuts, we're trying to sustain what we have but now we're trying to address some of those equipment needs."

Koch pointed out that last year the city purchased eight police cruisers, and would consider buying more next year.

Barron said it is wise for Koch to purchase the new truck during tough economic times.

"The mayor recognized we can't do the job without proper equipment," he said. "In supporting the fire department - supporting our mission - he forwarded a bond to pay for it."

He also added that Quincy paid a fair price for ladder truck. "It's competitive," he said, "you could pay a lot more."

OIF Combat Veteran Running For Congress

Quincy Republican Matt Temperley, a combat arms 1st Lieutenant in the Massachusetts ARNG, will announce his candidacy for Congress at a campaign kick-off Thursday, Feb. 9 at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, Quincy.

Temperley, a resident of 55 Penn St., South Quincy, said he will challenge Democrat Cong. Stephen Lynch in the newly drawn 8th Congressional District.

According to a campaign announcement, when the Iraq War was ramping up in 2003, Temperley enlisted in the Army by walking into a recruiting station in Southern Illinois. In 2004, he was deployed with the 1st Cavalry Iraq where he fought the Mahdi Army in the streets of Sadr City.

Five years later, he returned to Iraq as a scout Placompany with a tremendous track record, tremendous credibility in the Boston and New England marketplace. It strengthens the partnership. This was always contemplated.

"When we were negotiating the LDA (land disposition agreement) with the developer this was always talked about. There's language actually in the LDA that addresses the partners they may engage. So we're delighted, it's another step forward in bringing the project to fruition," the mayor said.

Two executives from each company will be responsible for overseeing the development, according to Narva. Richard Heapes and Jeffrey Levien will represent Street-Works; Heapes is the company's co-founder and partner and Levien is their senior director for development. Joining them are two senior vice presidents from Beal, Stephen Faber and Peter Spellios.

The Beal Companies were responsible for restoring the Custom House

Tower in Boston's Financial District and the Back Bay's Park Square Building. They also developed facilities for the biotechnology industry in the greater Boston area.

Beal is the second firm to partner with Street-Works for the project. In September 2011 it was announced that the National Realty and Development Corporation (NRDC) had agreed to develop 400,000 square feet of retail space.

Finding companies to work with was Street-Works' main goal for last year. "Our primary objective was to put strategic partners in place," Narva said.

Beal/Street-Works is now waiting for the city to complete public works projects before they break ground. That includes the relocation of Town Brook and the building of a bridge linking Hancock Street and Burgin Parkway via Cliveden Street. Quincy is responsible for completing those projects as part of the LDA signed by Mayor Koch and Street-Works in January 2011.

Koch said the city is preparing to take bids for diverting the brook. But he also noted the actual work won't start until two separate appeals filed over its relocation are concluded.

"We're opening the bids next week for moving the culvert," Koch said. "There's still some environmental issues that folks have appealed - we'll continue to go through that process. We've got to wait for that process to finish before we actually start construction, but we're moving forward."

The LDA also calls for the construction of Adams Green linking the space between the Church of the Presidents and City Hall. Quincy recently received a $1 million grant from the state to complete the design-phase of that project. Mayor Koch was thrilled the city received the grant from the state, and said funding for construction of the project had already been secured.

"The state sees this project as a viable project that's going to create a lot of jobs and help the economy so we're delighted with their view," Koch said. "That'll help us complete the design of the Adams Green and we have money already in place to deal with the construction of Adams Green."

Beal/Street-Works plan to break ground in 2013. In the meantime, Narva said his company is meeting with potential tenants for the new space the project will create, though he decline to identify any. "We're in discussions with a whole group of tenants," he said, "some of them will be announced by the end of the year."

The project is expected to create 3.5 million square feet of new property. That includes 1.1 million square feet of office space, 700,000 square feet of retail, two hotels, and more than 1,400 residences. Beal/Street-Works estimate that 10,000 new jobs will be created by the new development.

Narva also said he plans on attending quarterly City Council meetings on the progress of the redevelopment. Councillor-at-Large Doug Gutro, chair of the council's downtown & economic growth committee, called for the quarterly meetings during the council's Jan. 17 meeting.

The first of those meetings has been scheduled for Feb. 27, and Narva said he would be there.

Narva also re-iterated that his company has a good relationship with the city. "We talk to the city all the time," he said. "They're our partner."

New First Parish Bell Rings In Quincy Center

By EMILY TAFT

For the first time in 25 years, a new sound could be heard in Quincy Center last Thursday after a new 3,000-pound bronze bell was installed in the bell tower of United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St.

According to James Edwards, Principle of Holmes & Edwards, Inc., the architect firm in charge of the renovations, the schedule for the bell to ring is still being worked on but they have a tentative schedule that might change in the future.

The bell could be heard being struck for the first time last Thursday. Other test rings were sounded Monday.

"The bell will ring as a call to Sunday morning church service, approximately around 10:25 a.m.," said Edwards. "There will also be special bell ringing occasions at the Presidents' birthday ceremonies, weddings, funerals, special church ceremonies and special civic occasions as they occur in the city."

Edwards said the plan is to begin the day at 8 a.m. and have the last toll at midnight. According to Edwards, the mayor's office and the church are still trying to come up with a date when the new ringing schedule will begin.

After almost a year of waiting and planning, the "Church of the Presidents" received the new refurbished bell Jan. 25. The $600,000 restoration project, which includes re-facing the clocks situated beneath the bell tower, is nearing completion.

The bell was hoisted up and bolted into place as onlookers watched from across the street. A crane raised the bell from Hancock Street to the bell tower in about 20 seconds.

"It was a very exciting day," said Rev. Sheldon Bennett. "It is something we have been looking forward to and working towards for some time now."

The bell, which cost $38,000, was originally cast in 1895 and is inscribed with a quote from a former pastor of the church, the Rev. John Hancock. He was the father of American Patriot John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The quote reads, "Above all things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. This is the bond of union, the cement of societies." Verdin Bells & Clocks provided the refurbished bell from a church in Chicago, which has been made to look brand new.

The quote comes from the second of Rev. Hancock's centennial sermons marking the 100th anniversary of the founding of the congregation, and was a joint research collaboration between Mayor Thomas Koch and Ed Fitzgerald, director of the Quincy Historical Society.

"It is a beautiful quote and very suiting especially since it comes from a former Reverend of the church," said Koch. "We had a few different ideas we were talking about, but ended up choosing that one. Ed was very involved with it and had done a lot of research."

Bennett said that the more exciting part of the day was seeing the bell fit through the columns. "One always holds one's breath in hopes it will fit between the columns and the edges of the bell," said Bennett. "We had measured and re-measured a number of times but at that moment when it's being done is when you hope it will fit."

Bennett said they measured the new bell to have three-sixths of an inch on each side to fit through the columns. For the workers installing the bell whether or not it fit through the columns wasn't something they were concerned about.

"You just have to take your time," said Paul Crook, foreman for Shaughnessy & Ahern. "Most of the things we move in are tight fits. Everything went really well."

The bell, according to Bennett, has the same pitch, size, weight, shape and tone as the one it is replacing, but he believes this one will have a more pleasing tone.

"It is a very handsome bell," said Bennett. "I believe it will have a better tone to it because it doesn't have a crack in it like the old one."

On Dec. 29, onlookers watched as the 153-year-old bell was taken down from its tower. The old bell had a crack around 28 inches long, and was no longer able to be swung for fear of it breaking.

The old bell was also stuck in a stationary position because of its crack, so the sound that came off of it was barely audible to those walking by.

The new swinging bell can be controlled by a remote control, according to Edwards and there is a whole new ringing mechanism, new wheel, new support equipment, and new paint.

Along with a new bell the church will also be receiving new clocks for the four sides of the tower. All four clocks were stripped down to the bare granite and are now in the process of being re-painted for a fresh, new look. The Roman numerals along with the circle that encompasses them have been painted with gold leaf, while the background consist of three layers of black paint. Edwards said that two of the four clock faces have been completed and depending on the weather the remaining two should be finished by the end of this week.

Bennett said that they plan on having a celebration when the project is complete.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, Jan. 24, Officers Sean Glennon and Jamie Parisi were assigned to the Quincy Center MBTA Station from 2 to 4 p.m. to monitor the area for illicit activity.

At approximately 3:10 p.m., Officer Parisi observed a middle aged male (30) and a teenager (17) on the walkway behind Quincy City Hall. Officer Parisi informed Officer Glennon that there appeared to be a significant age difference between the two and that they were walking slowly while in very close proximity to one another.

Through their collective experience, the officers knew that this particular area has resulted in several arrests for drug possession/distribution as well as violations of alcohol laws.

Officer Parisi placed the pair under surveillance from a position of concealment as Officer Glennon, on a bicycle, pedaled around the opposite side to obtain another vantage point. Officer Parisi observed the older male hand a white bag to the younger male. The bag appeared to have a bottle in it. He saw the older male then take out a brown bottle and drink from it.

A short time later, the Officers decided to encounter the two males from different ends of the walkway. As Officer Parisi approached, the younger male spotted him and handed the white bag abruptly back to the older male. As Officer Parisi got closer, he observed the bottle to be a 12-ounce Guinness Lager bottle.

Officer Glennon arrived on scene and questioned the younger male, who said he was "just hanging out" with the other male, stating that they were family friends. He told the officer the older male was 30 years old. The white bag contained a 1 liter bottle of Ciroc Coconut Vodka.

At that time, Officer Glennon read the younger male his Miranda rights and then asked him what was going on. The younger male confessed that he met up with the older male so that the older male could purchase the vodka for him.

When asked, the younger male stated that this was not the first time the older male purchased alcohol for him. He said that he paid $20 to the older male. With this information, the Officers placed the older male under arrest for "Procuring Alcohol for a Minor and Open Container of Alcohol Beverage."

The younger male was allowed to leave but faced a court appearance via mail. During a search of the older male, Officer Parisi located a $20 bill on him as well as a small brass container in the backpack. Knowing that many people use these containers to store narcotics and prescription pills, Officer Glennon opened it and discovered 41 ¼ orange pills and 1 white pill.

Using drugs.com, Officer Glennon identified the orange pills as Adderall, a Class B drug. The white pill was Alprazolam, a class C drug.

The suspect was asked if he possessed a valid script for the pills and he stated he did not. At that time, suspect #1 was informed of the additional charges of "Possession of Class B drug and Possession of Class C drug."

Once at the station, it was learned that the suspect is currently on probation out of Quincy Court for two counts of "Procuring Alcohol for Minors." He has also served state prison time for both armed robbery and kidnapping as well as county time for illegal possession of a firearm.

Water Meter Replacement and Automated Meter Reading System Project

Information for Residents

The Quincy Department of Public Works is updating 24,000 water meters throughout the city. The project includes the replacement of both the water meters and external reading system. The completed project will greatly improve the reliability and accuracy of water meter reading operations and will increase the efficiency of the DPW. The city has contracted with Easton Winwater Services, who will be performing the installations. Easton Winwater Services will need access to each water customer's house or business for this work. Please be aware that Easton Winwater Services will contact customers directly via U.S. mail. Residents of Quincy are reminded not to respond to unsolicited phone calls or home visits. All personnel installing water meters are issued identification and will arrive in uniform and in marked vehicles. A link to names and pictures of each installer can be found on the DPW website. If you believe you have been contacted by someone other than Easton Winwater or the city, please call the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212.

The meter replacement work will begin in September in the North Quincy/Squantum area, and will progress throughout the city by water meter reading route over the course of a two-year period. There is a systematic implementation plan for this project and therefore customers are asked to not contact Easton Winwater Service or Public Works for their meter replacement until they have received a notification letter from Easton Winwater. For a current update on this program please visit the DPW website at <http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/WaterMeterReplacement.cfm>

REFURBISHED BRONZE BELL before being raised to the bell tower of United First Parish Church. A dedication ceremony for the bell is being planned later this month. The bell is inscribed with a quote from the Rev. John Hancock, former pastor of the church and the father of American Patriot John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The quote reads: "Above all things put on charity, which is the bond of perfection. This is the bond of union, the cement of societies." Quincy Sun Photos/Emily Taft

3,000-POUND BELL purchased by the City of Quincy was installed in the bell tower of United First Parish Church Jan. 25. Since then, contractors have been testing its ring. It marks the first time a bell has been swung at the church since 1980. The old bell was replaced because of an 18-inch crack.

First Parish Church Bell Swinging, Ringing Again

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that for the first time in some 30 years, a bell has rung with a full swing atop the belflower of the historic First Parish Church in Quincy Center.

The City of Quincy owns the bell and the historic clockface on the tower of the iconic church, where founding fathers and Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams are buried together with their wives.

The bell and clock restoration project is part of a broader preservation project being conducted together by the First Parish Church and the City using money from the Community Preservation Fund.

The last bell that sat atop the Church was last rung with a full swing in 1980, shortly after an 18-inch crack was discovered in a bell originally installed in the Church in 1859. A replacement bell — weighing 3,000 pounds — purchased by the City was installed last week, and contractors were testing its ring throughout the week.

Mayor Koch said preliminary plans are underway for formal ceremony to christen the bell around Presidents Day this month.

"It is absolutely vital that we protect our precious historic landmarks and resources, and the newly renovated

First Parish Church is going to be a jewel in the heart of Quincy Center," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

"We are making historic preservation priority in this community, and doing it in a way that does not affect the daily operating budget of the City."

The replacement bell was cast in 1856 for a church in Chicago and is from the same famous bell foundry that cast the original bell in the Church.

Absentee Ballots For Presidential Primaries

Rainbow one.

Shea reiterated that absentee voting is only for people who won't be in the city on March 6, or who can't make it to the polls. He said people sometimes get confused because some states, including Florida whose primary was Tuesday, allow so-called "early voting" where any voter can cast a ballot before the actual election day.

The deadline to vote absentee is Monday, March 5 at noon.

Hailing The North Quincy Hockey Hall Of Fame

cut his political teeth with a hockey stick in his hands.

In 1947, Walter was a sophomore at NQHS. The school's hockey program – which apparently began in 1939 – had disbanded because of World War II.

Walter and two of his hockey pals, including the late Fordie Pitts who became a tremendous golfer – appeared before the Quincy School Committee. The trio asked the board to re-establish hockey as a varsity sport at North.

"We simply said we wanted hockey to be a major sport at North – just like football and baseball," Hannon recalled.

Soon, the program was back on the ice and Hannon and his teammates were competing against other area high schools including Milton, Hingham, Canton and Walpole.

But most of those games were played outdoors. In Quincy, the high schools teams competed at Sailors Home Pond and at Rotary Field adjacent to the South Shore YMCA.

Grazioso, who did a lot of the research on the early teams of the 1940s and 1950s, noted, "The games were scheduled around ice. They might have four games in four days because that's when there was ice."

North's rejuvenated hockey team had its first varsity win on Sailors Home Pond on Feb. 12, 1947, defeating Hingham 3-0. Walter Hannon was a sophomore on that team playing on the first line. Hannon, whom his coach Dave Hourin called a "spark plug," assisted on the game's second goal.

Another milestone in the team's history occurred in 1949 when the Red Raiders notched their first victory – a 1-0 shutout – against city rival Quincy Presidents. The game was played at the Boston Arena, now known as Matthews Arena, on the campus of Northeastern University.

Asked if he remembers that game, Hannon fires back a "yes" like a wrist shot on net.

"I remember it like yesterday. I got the puck and I brought it all the way up the right side. I can see it right now. I kept looking over and (Jack) Gilbody was trailing right behind me.

"I passed the puck over to Gilbody but I still kept skating toward the net. Gilbody fired the puck and bingo, it went in."

The late Frank "Bunchie" Carroll earned the shutout in net.

Like the Quincy-North football rivalry, there's also city bragging rights in hockey.

"It was a big deal beating Quincy," Hannon said. He noted the victory exacted some revenge for the Presidents football victory over North a few months earlier in the Thanksgiving Day game.

Hannon said he's honored to be one of the first Hall of Fame inductees at North. He also thinks some of his other teammates – like Gilbody – deserve the recognition as well.

"It means a lot to me. It really does. I think back to all the guys I played hockey with and went to school with. I never missed a day of high school and I loved going to North Quincy High School."

He has fond memories of playing hockey with his buddies in a much different era than today.

For one, some kids didn't even wear real shin pads. Instead, they taped thin telephone books to their legs.

A pair of skates ran about $8. As a youth, Hannon remembers getting skates that were too big for his feet and stuffing them with newspaper. He'd get more use out of them as his feet grew into them.

But one day when he was in high school, he convinced his mother and father to buy him a pair of CCM hockey skates for $31.95. "That was a ton of money back in those days," says Hannon who played right wing and wore number 33 his senior year.

He still has the skates today, and the varsity letter he earned as a member of the Red Raiders. The red NQ is appropriately sewn on to a black sweater.

The Feb. 17 induction ceremony is sure to spark many other cherished memories and glory days spent on – and off – the ice.

One famous story that will likely be a topic of discussion is the 1963 team considered one of the school's best. That year's squad had one loss heading into the post-season tournament. But the team was disqualified after one of its players was deemed ineligible.

NORTH QUINCY HOCKEY Hall of Fame induction ceremony Friday, Feb. 17 at the Quincy Neighborhood Club will be dedicated in memory of the late Bob Laing who served as head coach of the Red Raiders for 18 years and is credited with keeping the program going after stepping in behind the bench in 1953. Laing (shown in this 1970 Quincy Sun photo, was a hockey pioneer in this area and helped organize the old South Shore League. North Quincy High players also shown in the above photo (from the left, front): Bill Gardner, Bob Golden and Neil Cronin. At rear: Bob Frizzell, Tom Quinn, Al Struzk and Tom O'Malley. O'Malley is among the first class of Hall of Fame inductees who will be enshrined Feb. 17.

Ceremony Dedicated To Hockey Pioneer Bob Laing

The late Bob Laing, who served as North Quincy High School's hockey coach for 18 years, will be remembered at the school's inaugural Hockey Hall of Fame induction ceremony Friday, Feb. 17 at 6:30 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

The induction ceremony will be dedicated the memory of the longtime Red Raider coach and hockey pioneer.

Laing is credited with keeping the Red Raiders hockey program afloat when he became coach in 1953. He remained behind the bench until the end of the 1970 season.

Laing also helped organize the old South Shore League.

In an article printed in The Quincy Sun June 25, 1970, Laing talked about the changes he had seen during his tenure as Red Raider hockey coach.

"I've seen a lot of changes during the past 18 years. Of course, the biggest advance has been the advent of so many indoor rinks. We used to skate outdoors and had to make do with what we had.

"In the old South Shore League we used to play outdoors in East Bridgewater. Ken Hayes, our junior high coach, was one of my goalies for two years back then and he was a good one."

When Laing began coaching, he said it cost him $40 the first years. The Raiders made the Eastern Mass. tournament, the first of five North teams to make the post-season event, and he had to buy sticks.

"I made about $115 for coaching, and had to spend $40 for sticks," he said.

"The biggest changes in the kids are that they are so much better skating-wise.

They have more time to skate now with indoor ice and there are a lot of leagues in which they can play. That helps out a lot. Also, the boys are bigger, you can tell that when you to order uniforms.

"The sport has really progressed rapidly and it is going to progress a lot more. The greatest contribution in my time was the mandatory face masks for goalies. That's been the best change of all. I've seen kids get belted where they would have been hurt badly if they hadn't been wearing a mask."

Laing, whose teams have not fared too well in recent years, hopes to see an about-face.

"They must build up the junior high program and get more parents interested," he said. "Last year we had two junior high teams playing in the Greater Boston Freshman League and this was a step in the right direction. But there is one team in each junior high in all other sports and hockey has an awful lot of catching up to do."

Laing, a graduate of North in 1940 and Boston University, wishes his successor luck but said, "I hope whoever gets the job will be given time to get the program going, and, perhaps more important, the understanding of the situation that exists. As for myself, I'm very happy to have coached here and have some very pleasant memories. The kids have done very well."

The article also noted that "Bob will stay on at North as an industrial arts teacher and faculty manager. He is a member of Mayor James McIntyre's rink committee and hopes to land a second rink for Quincy to go along with the Shea rink in West Quincy."

From the June 25, 1950 issue of The Quincy Sun.

1947 NORTH QUINCY High School hockey team – the first varsity team established after World War II – includes three future Hall of Famers. They are: Walter Hannon (seated, far

Some of the inductees and family of the posthumous selections are traveling considerable distances to attend the induction. Robert Lippens lives in Ann Arbor, Michigan; Ed Pyne is a resident of Middletown, Delaware and Ralph Anderson resides in Rome, Maine.

Friday, Feb. 17 will be a banner night – in so many ways – for North Quincy High School hockey.

Quincy Real Estate Market: A Report From A Local Broker

By MADELINE CHENEY

We survived another roller coaster year for real estate here in Quincy.

The year 2011 was a stepping stone toward the recovery of our local economy and was a great learning experience for homeowners. Despite low interest rates and competitive home prices consumer confidence remained low.

So the big question remains, "Are homes selling?"

Homes are selling, although they may not be selling as fast as they use to or for the price that most homeowners wish they could get for their home.

In 2011, the average number of days a home was on the market was 123 days, up from 95 days in 2010.

Looking forward, homeowners should be prepared that their home may take four months to sell. This is a key aspect to consider when deciding on the right time to list a home on the market.

The spring market still tends to be one of the strongest for buyer activity with the highest percentage of closings taking place in May and June. If the market time of a home is four months and the average closing takes 30-45 days, homeowners are urged to list their home in early February to expect a closing in May or June.

Homes that are priced right and show well will definitely sell the quickest; however this formula is a good starting point for timing a home sale. (See chart: 2010 vs 2011.)

So how does 2011 compare?

The average single family home in Quincy had a sale price of $316,143, which is a 3% decrease from 2010 (Average Sale Price in 2010 - $325,394).

In 2011, 24% of the single family homes sold were in the price range of $250,000 - $299,999. Coming in second was the $300,000 - $349,000 price range at 20% of the homes sold.

Quincy did experience an increase in the number of transactions in 2011, which is a good sign that more buyers are entering the market. (See chart: Price Range of Home Sales.)

One of the biggest trends we experienced in 2011 was

2011	2010
Homes Sold - 354	# Homes Sold - 344
Avg Sale Price - $316,143	Avg Sale Price - $325,394
Avg $/Sq Ft - $212	Avg $/Sq Ft - $220
Avg Living Area - 1577 Sq Ft	Avg Living Area - 1535 Sq Ft

that buyers were less interested in homes that require a great deal of work.

To compete with lower priced bank owned properties homeowners should put their best foot forward and prepare their home for sale by making minor repairs or reducing clutter prior to listing their home on the market.

The market is flooded with many bank-owned properties that are in poor condition. The average homebuyer is looking for a home that is priced competitively but is still in "move in" condition.

Your Family's Health History

When it comes to leaving something for the next generations, there's something even more valuable than albums with carefully identified photos – and that is your family's health history.

The U.S. surgeon general has created the "My Family Health Portrait," an online tool that helps organize the specifics of your family's health. The potential benefits to the next generations are big. There are certain diseases that can run in the family, like diabetes, heart disease and cancer. The risk for high blood pressure can show up through the generations. By knowing what diseases are common in the family, the generations that follow will be able to guard against diseases that might have a hereditary basis. Their doctors will be able to assess which diagnostic and screening tests to run at various times based on family history.

If you'd like to create your own family health file, go online to https://family-

history.hhs.gov to access the online tool. You'll start with baseline questions like your age, gender, whether you were born a twin, and your height and weight. You'll move into the section on diseases or conditions you have or have had in the past.

Then it gets a bit tricky when you have to list your relatives. It's set up like a family tree: You start with your mother and father, if possible, and what you know about their health. Ideally, you can gather information for a total of three generations.

At the end you can save the file and update it later as you gather more information, or print out what you have and share it with your family.

QMC Alzheimer's Disease Drug Trial

Researchers at The Alzheimer's Disease Center (TheAlzCenter.org) at Quincy Medical Center announce they are participating in an international, multisite phase 2 clinical research study to test an investigational medication, known as SAR110894D, on the cognitive performance of study participants with mild to moderate Alzheimer's disease.

"Alzheimer's disease is a devastating illness because not only does it affect patients, but it affects families as well," says Anil Nair, MD, chief of Neurology and principal investigator at TheAlzCenter.org.

The Alzheimer's Association estimates that approximately 5.4 million Americans are living with Alzheimer's disease, a number that is expected to almost triple to 16 million by 2050, and that the number of Americans currently living as caregivers to someone with Alzheimer's or other type of dementia is 15 million. As deaths from other major diseases such as heart disease and stroke have decreased, deaths from the Alzheimer's disease increased 66 percent between 2000 and 2008. It is now the sixth-leading cause of death in the U.S.

"While there is no known cure for Alzheimer's, some medications exist to manage or slow down its symptoms," Dr. Nair says. "This study will accept participants who are already taking such a medication, donepezil (brand name Aricept), and test the safety and effectiveness of an additional investigational medication."

The medication, taken orally, is manufactured by Sanofi-Aventis U.S., which is sponsoring the study. Dr. Anil Nair reports no financial interest in Sanofi-Aventis U.S.

To participate in the study, participants must be taking donepezil for the treatment of Alzheimer's and be able to live independently, but still require assistance from a family member or a caregiver on a regular basis. They must be 55 or older, have a diagnosis of mild to moderate Alzheimer's, and have the family member or caregiver willing to accompany them for each study visit.

Study participants will receive either the investigational medication or a placebo, in addition to their regular donepezil therapy. Total study duration for each patient is up to 38 weeks. Study treatment will be provided at TheAlzCenter.org, located at Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Participants will receive the medicine at no cost, along with study-related assessments including blood tests, electrocardiograms, physical exams, eye exams and memory and other cognitive tests.

TheAlzCenter.org at Quincy Medical Center is a state of the art clinical and research facility that aims to advance the field of geriatric neurology and reduce the costs of debilitating diseases such as Alzheimer's disease and other related dementias. In addition to providing preventive, diagnostic and therapeutic services to patients with neurodegenerative and related diseases, the center runs clinical trials in multiple indications, primarily in Alzheimer's disease. For more information on the clinical study, contact Sheela Chandrasekar: (617) 302-6388 at TheAlzCenter.org or email study@thealzcenter.org.

9th Annual National Wear Red Day Friday

It's almost time to "go red" for the American Heart Association.

Local businesses are being encouraged to join National Wear Red Day for Women on Friday, Feb. 3.

Hundreds of local businesses, hospitals, towns, schools have already signed up to wear red to help raise awareness and funds to fight – the No. 1 killer of women – cardiovascular disease.

Participants wear red, donate $5 to join the Go Red For Women® movement and receive a red dress pin.

The 9th Annual American Heart Association's National Wear Red Day is an easy, powerful way to speak up and show support for Go Red For Women – the American Heart Association's solution to save women's lives. Go Red For Women invites women to make it their mission to help save lives by telling five women from their personal network that they want them to live.

Almost 420,000 women die annually from cardiovascular diseases. That's more female lives taken than from the next four causes of death combined, including all cancers. Heart disease is the No. 1 killer of women age 25 and older and stroke is the No. 3 killer of women, as women account for 61 percent of all stroke deaths annually. The American Heart Association Go Red For Women movement is about turning around these statistics. Women can find important health tips at www.goredforwomen.org including online tools and health assessments such as "My Life Check."

Participants can go red on Feb. 3rd by wearing a red dress, scarf, jacket, shirt, tie, hat or other item in support of all women who have been touched by heart disease or stroke. For more information about National Wear Red Day and to sign up your company or organization, call Lisa Kirkland at the American Heart Association at 508-656-2000.

SITTING DUCKS

Researchers from the American Cancer Society recently conducted a study that found that prolonged sitting increases the risk of early death from all causes. The theory is that uninterrupted sitting can cause large muscle groups to shut down and lead to damaging metabolic changes. This may help explain why sitting for prolonged periods at a desk becomes uncomfortable after a relatively short time. Holding the same position slowly stretches the elasticity out of soft tissues; stress then builds up and causes discomfort. To avoid this problem, try changing positions frequently, stretch, or take a short walking break. Goals of chiropractic treatment include increasing joints' range of motion and muscle elasticity to promote activity levels.

NQ and Quincy To Play Again On Feb. 18; QHS Won First Game, 2-1 on Dec. 26

Grady, Red Raiders Ice Presidents, 5-1

By ALAN McCALL

The Quincy High boys' hockey team was out to prove that its early season 2-1 win over North Quincy wasn't a fluke. North Quincy was looking to show their cross-town brethren that it was.

Advantage: Red Raiders.

Paced by senior Shawn Grady's two goals in a span of 32 seconds early in the first period, North Quincy skated to a 5-1 Patriot League win on Saturday night before an overflow crowd at the Quincy Youth Arena.

"We had plenty of chances to score in our first game against them last month, but their goalie (Justin Keenan) played out of his mind," said North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons. "It was important for us to score on them early tonight and take control of the game, and we were able to do that."

The Red Raiders (5-5-3) peppered the Presidents' end from the start and were already ahead 2-0 before Quincy (1-13 overall) registered its first shot on goal. The pressure resulted in Grady's first tally after senior co-captain Tim Marks kept the puck alive at the blue line at the right point. His shot was tipped by Nick McGaughey, which was initially stopped by Keenan. However, Grady was perfectly positioned for the rebound and tucked the puck into the left corner with 10:56 to play in the period.

Moments later, North Quincy caught Quincy in a line change and McGaughey sent Grady up the wide open left wing where he whistled a slap shot from the top of the left circle into the top right corner of the goal for a 2-0 lead. The period ended with the Red Raiders maintaining that two-goal lead and enjoying a 12-2 advantage in shots on goal.

Needing something positive to spark its offense, Quincy got just that with a goal just 45 seconds into the second period as senior John Jones was first to a rebound in front of the goal and beat Red Raiders net minder senior James Dunn with a wrist shot to the right corner. Sophomore Patrick Donovan and senior co-captain Peter Giunta assisted on the goal.

However, Quincy's momentum was short lived, and North Quincy regained its two-goal lead on the prettiest goal of the contest. With both teams playing a man down, Marks made a brilliant rush down the right side into the Quincy end then slipped a perfect pass above the goal crease to sophomore Andrew Currie for a redirect into the goal at the 9:10 mark.

"That goal was huge for us," added Gibbons. "They (Quincy) scored quickly in the period to make it 2-1 and now it's anybody's game. It was important to get the next goal."

The second stanza ended with North Quincy leading 3-1 while padding its shot advantage to 24-11.

Thoughts of a Quincy comeback went by the boards early in the third period as the Red Raiders went up 4-1 on a power play goal at the 11:59 mark. Grady was in the scoring mix again, setting up senior Tommy O'Brien in front of the goal for the score.

North Quincy put the contest on ice at the 7:42 mark of the period on a goal from a scramble in front of the net by junior forward Martin Blake, assisted by junior defenseman Rudy Tryon.

Quincy failed to convert on four power play opportunities in the third period, including missing a penalty shot. Jones was tripped on a breakaway, and was awarded a penalty shot, which was stopped by Dunn.

"We played smart in the third period and protected the lead," said Gibbons. "Quincy played a physical game and tried to force us into mistakes but we remained disciplined and did a better job taking advantage of our opportunities tonight. It was an important win and a huge two points for us. We are back at .500 and need to get over that hump this coming week."

Quincy head coach Tim Lewis was encouraged by his team's effort. "We are a young team and teams try to take advantage of that so we combat that by playing a physical style," he said. "We got ourselves back in the game with that early goal in the second period, but could not keep the momentum. I am proud of my team's effort tonight, they worked hard."

Game Notes: Quincy's 2-1 win over North Quincy was in the Quincy Holiday Tournament back in December and was not a league contest. The two teams meet again on February 18, which is senior night for North Quincy... Justin Keenan had another strong effort between the pipes for the Presidents with 28 saves... There were 13 penalties in the contest with eight being whistled in the third period... North Quincy's win gets the Red Raiders back to .500 and leaves them still in contention for a state tournament berth. They host Silver Lake on Wednesday (7:30 p.m.) and Hanover on Saturday (8:10 p.m.) in two important league games... Quincy played at nonleague Oliver Ames on Monday and travel to play Duxbury on Saturday... Final shots on goal advantage was 33-16, North Quincy.

A Thank You From Quincy Hockey

On Dec. 17, 2011, Quincy High School hockey hosted its first annual game-day food drive during the Patriot League game versus Hanover High School. QHS and HHS hockey fans donated an abundance of non-perishable food.

Along with Quincy fans, the Hanover fans and Boosters Club eagerly contributed to our food drive efforts, which was a great example of sportsmanship.

QHS varsity hockey players divided the food into meals and packaged it for delivery. Tom Nazaro of Stop & Shop Corp. donated turkeys for each of the meals, which were given to ten QHS families who wouldn't have otherwise been able to share in a Christmas meal.

Special thanks to Athletic Director Jim Rendle for allowing us to offer a game ticket discount as an incentive for donations; also, special thanks to the QHS cheerleaders, who collected the food at the game; lastly, gratitude to the QHS Guidance Department for its assistance facilitating the discreet distribution of these meals to families in need.

This event truly shows the character, neighborliness, and generosity of the entire Quincy High School community: players, cheerleaders, guidance counselors, administrators, parents and fans all came together to embrace the Christmas season!

The Elks National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Program is sponsored locally by the Quincy Lodge of Elks 943 and is considered America's largest non-commercial, co-educational sports program.

Both North and McDonald had been crowned at a Quincy citywide event supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department last month. North is a third grade student at First Baptist Christian School and McDonald is a fifth grade student at Saint Agatha School in Milton. He is the son of Dinah and Mike McDonald.

Also at the Circle District Regional, Quinlan Evans finished second in the boys' 12-13 age division and Brigit Durgin took second in the girls' 12-13 age group.

North and McDonald will shoot free throw this weekend at the state finals in Maynard. The Elks National "Hoop Shoot" competition continues through until a national champion is finally crowned in three age groups for girls and boys.

The Quincy Lodge of Elks Exalted Ruler is Dan Davis, Jr., and the Lodge "Hoop Shoot" Director is Ed Miller.

Recreation Director Barry Welch praised the generosity and time spent by the Elks' volunteers who have made the event available to Quincy youngsters for over 30 years.

The Quincy Sun, in conjunction with the Quincy Recreation Department, will update North and McDonald's progress in the next week's edition.

Good luck, Katie and Connor.

Carnell Finds A Home at Keene State

KEENE, N.H. — Heading down court in a recent road game against Little East Conference rival UMass-Dartmouth, Siobhan Carnell methodically grabbed a cross-court pass on the wing. The Keene State forward abruptly turned to face an opponent whose size and height dwarfed the five-foot, nine-inch junior from Quincy. Undaunted, Carnell made a quick ball fake. While her opponent went up in the air in hope of blocking her shot, Carnell went to the basket, scoring an uncontested lay-up.

"Siobhan's biggest asset is her first step. She's very quick going to the rim," said Keene State coach Keith Boucher. "At times it looks like it's not going to happen. She has a herky-jerky motion, but she gets it done. If it isn't broke, don't fix it."

While Boucher hasn't done anything to alter Carnell's unorthodox style of play, which also includes a line-drive shot, the Quincy native has had to renovate her basketball career, transitioning to a new school and a new position. Following a four-year career at North Quincy High School, Carnell headed north to Rindge, N.H., to play at Division II Franklin Pierce University. Although the team was highly successful, reaching the Final Four of the 2009-10 NCAA tournament, Carnell saw limited playing time, logging just 54 minutes over 18 games.

A desire to get off the bench and pursue a different major sent her down the road to Division III Keene State College. "I made the move that was best for me," Carnell said. "I looked around at schools in the Boston area, but I like being a little farther away from home."

Arriving at Keene State

NORTH QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL graduate Siobhan Carnell is proving to be a huge addition to the Keene State College women's basketball program. Carnell starts at forward for the Owls after transferring from Franklin Pierce University.

last year, Carnell not only had to get introduced to a new school and teammates, but a new position. A shooting guard throughout her career, Carnell was asked to move up front and help replenish a depleted Owl frontline. "When Siobhan got here we needed forwards, so we told her we'd probably have to move her," said Boucher. "Obviously, Siobhan isn't as big and strong as some of the players she is playing against, but she's more athletic and has used it to her advantage."

Carnell took the move in stride. "It's really not that difficult if you've played basketball for a long time," she said. "Physically it's more demanding — it's definitely harder playing defense against bigger, stronger girls — but you adjust and find a way to get the job done."

Carnell held her own in her first season with the Owls, finishing third in both scoring (8.5 ppg) and rebounding (3.8 rpg).

Carnell wasn't always on the move. She was a stabilizing force on a North Quincy High team that was always among the top teams in first the Atlantic Coast and later the Patriot League. The sharp-shooting guard was one of the most dominating scorers on the South Shore, setting the school single-season point record (492) and reaching the 1,000-point career milestone as a senior. The three-time All-Conference and Patriot Ledger All-Star had her share of big games for the Red Raiders, including a 34-point, 14-rebound performance in a double-overtime victory over Duxbury.

Carnell says her first name, Siobhan (pronounced Shi-von), is Gaelic, and everyone in her family has an Irish name. "Some people have a hard time pronouncing it, but they're getting better," she said.

As uncommon as her first name may be (there's just one other student with the same first name at KSC), Carnell has fit right in at Keene State. "It's always difficult adjusting to new people, hoping that they will accept you," Carnell said. "Luckily they were all very welcoming. I like playing on this team."

What's not to like? Back in the starting lineup after coming off the bench earlier this season, Carnell is second on the team in scoring (10.3 ppg.) and third in rebounding (3.8 rpg.). She scored a career-high 25 points in the Owls' opening season game against RPI and pulled down a career-best eight rebounds last Saturday at UMass-Dartmouth. "It doesn't make a difference if I'm starting or coming off the bench," she said. "When I get into a game, I try to make the minutes count and get into the flow of the game."

Carnell's teammates appreciate her hard work. "Siobhan just goes with the flow and does whatever is needed to help the team out," said senior forward Courtney Cirillo. "She uses everything she has going up against bigger players. I give her a lot of credit."

Carnell helped a few of her teammates off the court as well. "Siobhan arrived at the perfect time," said Cirillo. "We needed a roommate."

North Swim Team Defeats Quincy

By SEAN BRENNAN

Swimming has improved tremendously at Quincy and North Quincy since the sport was started a year ago. But Quincy will have to wait another year to score its first win over its rivals. Last Saturday, the Raiders defeated Quincy, 90-79. North's win over Quincy gave it a 6-3 record, while Quincy dropped to 3-6.

This Week

35 Years Ago

Ninth grader Ed Melanson broke two more North records in the 200-yard freestyle (2:04.7) and the 100-yard backstroke (1:09.68). Both 200-yard medley teams broke records. Quincy's George Duplain, Ed Fenby, Jim Lahive and Pete Sullivan won in 1:56.6, and North's foursome of Mike Braun, Dave Palma, John Flate and Dan Fowkes were close behind in 1:58.12.

North's 400-yard freestyle relay team of Kevin Greene, John Conley, Braun and Melanson set a school record of 4:00.9.

Both teams will compete in the All-Suburban League Meet at Brockton on Saturday.

QUINCY HIGH HOOPS CLINCH TOURNEY

It took Quincy 11 years to make it back to the Eastern Mass tournament, but last Friday the Presidents became early qualifiers when they defeated Weymouth South, 78-55, to run their overall mark to 12-1 and their Suburban League record to 10-1.

Quincy outscored Weymouth South 28-11 in the fourth quarter as Jack Uhlar had a big second half, scoring 16 of his 26 points to pace the attack. Head Coach Joe Amoroso rates Uhlar as "probably the greatest player in Quincy's history."

Earlier in the week Quincy staged one of its better two-way performances to outclass North Quincy, 61-38. Uhlar finished with 17 points and 16 rebounds while Mike Lamie had 12 points and Ed Callahan finished with 10 points and nine rebounds.

"They have a great defensive team and the big guy (Uhlar) was just too much," said North coach Ed Miller.

The Raiders will be home to Cambridge Latin on Friday night.

QUINCY HOCKEY DEFEATS NORTH QUINCY, 6-1

This has been a so-so season for the Quincy hockey team, but coach Bob Sylvia has had no trouble getting his Presidents up for rival North Quincy.

Last Saturday, Quincy got two goals from Mark Richardi and a goal each from Mark Giordani, Brian Jolly and Mike Gulizi to beat the Raiders, 6-1. Billy Deitsch added three assists for the Presidents who improved to 6-7-1 with the win. North dropped to 5-7-2.

"Quincy pride, that is what I like to call it," said Sylvia. "These kids were as high tonight as I have ever seen a Quincy team."

Red Raiders Are Off To A 12-2 Overall Start; Qualified For Div. 1 Tournament Last Week

North Quincy: Staking Its Claim As Legit Contender

By SEAN BRENNAN
How about them North Quincy Red Raiders?

With six games to go until the end of the regular season and, already tournament-bound, North Quincy is a scorching hot 12-2 overall. Back-to-back victories over Scituate (77-44 on Jan. 27) and nonleague Fatima HS of Rhode Island (82-35 on Monday) have the Red Raiders on pace to finish the winter with its best record since the 2008-2009 season when North Quincy ended the year at 16-8, which included a 76-69 victory over Bridgewater-Raynham in the first round Division 1 South Sectional tournament.

But this year's team may be even better.

North Quincy has been remarkably consistent. Following a nonleague loss to Weymouth in the first round of the John Adams Holiday Tournament back on Dec. 27, the Red Raiders reeled off eight straight wins before dropping a Patriot League game to Whitman-Hanson (52-39) on Jan. 23. However, head coach Kevin Barrett's program responded to that league loss by thrashing first place Scituate 77-44 last Friday to grab hold of overall first place in the Patriot League at 6-1. North Quincy has league games remaining with Pembroke (Tuesday), Silver Lake (Friday), Hingham (Feb. 7), Duxbury (Feb. 10), Whitman-Hanson (Feb. 14) and Quincy (Feb. 16).

The Red Raiders are a combined 5-1 against these teams this season.

"That was a huge win over a Scituate team that came into that game 6-0 in the league," said Barrett on Monday. "We really played one of our better games of the season against them. We did everything; we took care of the ball and we rebounded extremely well. It was nice to see following a frustrating loss to Whitman-Hanson earlier in the week."

"That loss and the long week leading up to the Scituate game gave us time to work on some things," continued Barrett. "The team responded and really rose to the occasion. It all started with our energy and turning defense into offense. The Whitman-Hanson game was our worst game of the year and I challenged them to play better and they all stepped up."

Leading the way versus the Sailors was junior forward Marquis McClendon. McClendon poured in 14 first-half points on the way to a team-high 27. The athletic small forward continually used his speed and aggressiveness to shred Scituate's defense while creating open space for junior shooting guard Dan Gould (25 points) to light up the Sailors from long range. McClendon's strong effort did not go unnoticed by his coach.

"Marquis was all over the place," Barrett noted. "His energy really got us going."

Senior center Tim Liuzzo chipped in with six points and 12 rebounds in the win.

On Monday against Fatima High School of Rhode Island, it was the Red Raiders' role players who took center stage. In improving to 12-2 overall, North Quincy got career games from seniors Ryan Evans (18 points) and Joe Brown (10 points) while sophomore Greg Clarke set a season-high with 13.

In a game that showcased North Quincy's depth up-and-down the lineup, the Red Raiders had ten players record at least one bucket.

In the game before North Quincy's 52-39 loss to Whitman-Hanson the team defeated Hanover, 77-66. Against the Indians Dan Gould dropped 24 points, including 17 in the first half; McClendon scored 13, Pat Gould tallied eight points and sophomore Efthim Butka chipped in with seven.

Led by stars Marcus Lee and Dennis Martin, the 2008-2009 Red Raiders won a postseason game (76-69 first round win over B-R) for the first time since 1991. Following a 74-45 loss to Framingham in the South Sectional quarterfinals, Barrett saw the majority of that team graduate.

Fast-forward four years. The cycle of basketball talent has come roaring back to North Quincy. Headlined by senior starters Tim Liuzzo and Paul Cuniff, the Red Raiders are also blessed with a strong junior class. Point guard Pat Gould directs the offense; shooting guard Dan Gould provides an accurate outside touch, and small forward Marquis McClendon has brought athleticism to the frontcourt.

Is this team better than the 2008-2009 team? That is a question that will not be answered until all is said and done, but Barrett likes what he has seen so far.

"This team has the potential to do what that team did," he said when asked about the similarities between the 2008-2009 and 2011-2012 teams. "The sky is the limit. If we continue to play like we did against Scituate, I feel like we can beat any team out there."

"We are trying to get a good seed in the upcoming Division 1 South tournament," continued Barrett before adding, "The goal is to stockpile as many wins over the final six games to put ourselves in the position to hopefully earn a top seed and a possible first-round bye and a home game. It is too early to speculate, but 18-2 sounds pretty good."

Production All Around

Most top-notch high school basketball programs have that one player who can dominate any opponent. North Quincy doesn't. But that is what makes this team so dangerous. On any given night, one of the five starters can be a headline-grabber.

There is Dan Gould, who is quickly becoming the best outside shooter in the Patriot League. Gould has been very good this winter from beyond three-point land, putting up 20+ points on a consistent basis. There is Marquis McClendon who has the ability to take over games like he did last Friday versus Scituate. There is Tim Liuzzo who dominated Duxbury on Jan. 13 to the tune of 19 points and 14 rebounds. There is Paul Cuniff, who battles for every rebound and plays defense like it's his job, and there is Pat Gould, the team's floor general who is the player who makes everything go offensively.

"This team is so unselfish," praised Barrett. "There seems to be a different guy who steps up every night."

"A player like Paul Cuniff, who is an unsung hero and is the glue that holds us together, is so solid with the basketball and is so valuable on defense," continued Barrett. "Pat Gould is the guy that gets us into our offense and makes sure the ball ends up in the right hands. We all see what Timmy, Dan and Marquis can do. This team definitely has the capacity to succeed."

Beyond the starting five, Barrett has gotten quality minutes from his bench. Seniors Joe Brown, Nate DePina and Ryan Evans along with sophomores Efthim Butka, Greg Clarke and Kyle Richardson have slid right in when they have been given minutes while junior Aaron Anderson is gaining valuable varsity experience.

The Road Ahead

At 12-2 overall North Quincy has a familiar road ahead of them as they wind down the regular season.

On Tuesday night, the Red Raiders traveled to Pembroke for their first and only meeting with the Titians; after that, every other team they play is beatable.

Friday night the Lakers from Silver Lake come to North Quincy for a rematch of a Dec. 16 meeting, which was won by the Red Raiders, 52-32. Next Tuesday, Hingham hosts North Quincy. The Raiders defeated the Harbormen, 67-50, back on Jan. 6.

The best game left on the schedule is probably the Feb. 10 game at Duxbury. North Quincy edged the Dragons 57-53 back on Jan. 13.

Redemption will be on the minds of every North Quincy player (and coach) when the Red Raiders host Whitman-Hanson in their final home game on Feb. 14.

"That was a game that got away from us," said Barrett about his team's 52-39 loss to the Panthers back on Jan. 23. "We never look beyond the next game but we will be out for redemption when we see them again."

The regular season winds down with the third meeting between North Quincy and Quincy on Feb. 16. The Red Raiders are 2-0 against their city rivals this winter.

JUNIOR MARQUIS MCCLENDON scored 27 points in North Quincy's huge 77-44 win over Scituate last Friday. The Red Raiders improved to 6-1 in the Patriot League following the win.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
The changes you've waited to see in your work situation might not be happening quite as quickly as you'd hoped. Although the pace is slow, it's ongoing. Expect to hear news soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
You should be feeling very proud of the fine effort you've made to get that important project done. Now take some time out to celebrate with family and friends. You've earned it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
You're close to reaching your objectives. That's the good news. But be careful: Your aspects show lots of potential distractions looming. Stay focused and keep your eyes fixed on your goals.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Be careful not to let that suspicious Cancerian mind create a problem where none exists. What you might believe is an act of betrayal could be nothing more than a misunderstanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Your Lion's heart overflows with self-confidence. All you need to do is tap into it, and you'll be able to handle any change that must be made regarding that recent surprise development.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
The need to watch what you say becomes increasingly crucial this week. Be as temperate as you can with your comments and avoid arguments for the sake of controversy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
A longtime family problem presents new demands. But this time, you won't have to go it alone. Someone else is asking to help share your responsibilities. Let it happen.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
A period of feeling vulnerable is about to give way to a stronger, more self-confident aspect. Use this new strength to reaffirm promises you've made to others and yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
A creative dilemma stalls your progress. Instead of letting it raise your ire, use the time to re-examine your aims and, perhaps, come up with a new target.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
Your nimble will finds a way for you to work out those newly emerged problems plaguing your new project. Stay with it. The results will be well worth your efforts.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
You might feel overwhelmed at having to decide which new opportunity you should follow. Best advice: Check them all out and see which offers what you really want.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
Continue to tread water before you even consider plunging into something that never seemed quite right. Some facts will soon emerge that can help you make a decision.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're a natural-born peacemaker. You value truth and have little patience with those who lie to you for their own purposes.

Dianne Kane-McGunigle 'Go Red Girl' For Heart Association blood flow to her heart.

"I had all the warning signs the day before, and like a typical women I ignored them," said Kane-McGunigle. "I woke up the next day, it was a typical morning, but when I went to stand up out of bed it felt like someone had punched me in the chest. I went downstairs told my husband I wasn't feeling well and was going back to bed. I took two steps and fell to the ground. It felt like a rhinoceros was sitting on my chest."

There are four common risk factors that occur during a heart attack, numbness in the forearms, chest pain, sweating, and nauseousness. Kane-McGunigle suffered five.

Even after falling to the ground, Kane-McGunigle said she got back up and told her husband she was going to lie down. Her husband, Joseph, a Quincy police officer, recognized the signs and told her that he was taking her to the hospital.

"He saved my life," said Kane-McGunigle. "He is my hero. If I had just went back to bed like I wanted, I wouldn't be sitting here today."

Her husband drove her to Quincy Medical Center, where they initially believed she was having a panic attack, but then everything started to get worse.

"I had a jolting pain in my chest," said Kane-McGunigle. "I finally reached and grabbed the nurses arm, looked her in the eye and said, 'I am dying'. That's when they decided to do more tests and found I had suffered a sever heart attack."

Kane-McGunigle said that it's a common misconception that if you are healthy, and in good shape you can't suffer a heart attack, and that even if she went in the day before doctors wouldn't have been able to predict when and if she was going to ever have one.

"You could check out fine days before you suffer a heart attack," said Kane-McGunigle. "Now with the family history it makes it a little easier, but they still can't be predicted."

Kane-McGunigle was transferred to Boston Medical Center (BMC) where she received a stent, which allowed blood flow back into her heart, and allowed her to breath easier.

"I thought the last thing I would see was the inside of the ambulance on the way to BMC," said Kane-McGunigle. "The one thing I said to myself is 'I can't die yet. I haven't had any grandchildren.' I consider myself just so lucky to have survived all of that."

After her heart attack, she learned that heart disease runs in her family.

"My family history was a big risk factor," said Kane-McGunigle. "What I did for a living saved my life. It made my heart stronger."

It took her 10 days to recover enough to be able to head home, but Kane-McGunigle said her heart would never be the same.

"There is permanent damage to my heart now. I lived healthy before my heart attack, but now I have to live DIANNE KANE-MCGUNIGLE'S (left) identical twin sister Denise Kane-Carey (right), has been a big supporter in her throughout her recovery and her work with the American Heart Association. Kane-McGunigle's mission is to spread the word on how important it is to know your family history.

Lance Armstrong healthy," said Kane-McGunigle. "I can now only do limited work at my job, and have to take pills to stay alive. My full time job now is the work I do with the American Heart Association."

Kane-McGunigle said that it has also changed her life for the better. She said she now appreciates the little things more and doesn't sweat the small things.

"When I stare out my windows I appreciate the view more. I try to appreciate the good things in life," said Kane-McGunigle. "I appreciate the sunsets and the sunrise. I feel more appreciative that I am alive."

She has learned a lot about her family history, and since her heart attack she has been able to spread the word on how important knowing your family health history really is.

"I had six family members, all men, that all had widow maker heart attacks, and I did not know about them until after I had mine," said Kane-McGunigle. "I want to spread the importance of knowing your family history. I have an identical twin sister; we share the same genes, so to know your family history is so important. Even though this has happened to me I am more concerned about her because we share so much genetically."

Kane-McGunigle said her sister has been a big supporter throughout the recovery process and helping raise awareness.

"My sister is hosting a Go Red fundraiser at her restaurant (in Hingham) this year, and she has been to events with me as well," said Kane-McGunigle. "She has been very supportive of me especially during my recovery."

Last year, the American Heart Association selected six local women to be 'Go Red Girls' for their campaigns, instead of celebrities. Kane-McGunigle was chosen nation-wide as the first Boston representative, and now she is working non-stop to advocate, raise awareness, and collect donations for heart disease. She attends walks, meetings, luncheons, health fairs, and also teaches hands-only CPR to high school students and employees of companies who ask to have it taught.

"They contacted me saying that I represented someone that was doing all the right things and it still happened," said Kane-McGunigle. "This is my passion now, everything they ask me to do I do it. I will be doing this for years and years. It's all or nothing if you do work like this. If I could save one life while doing this I would be happy. I just want to spread the word of how important knowing your family health history can be."

Tomorrow (Friday) is National Wear Red Day, and Kane-McGunigle has been visiting every business she can to ask for donations. She has had over 50 different organizations and companies on the South Shore sign up to participate in the nation-wide event. When she first started looking for participants, she set a goal of around 200 employees to sign up. She now has over 3,100 looking to participate in the one-day event.

"I just went crazy with recruiting for the event," said Kane-McGunigle. "I go out every Tuesday and Thursday to businesses hoping to add to the number. My hope is to visit everyone that participates on Feb. 3rd, and say thank you."

A number of Quincy businesses have joined the cause, including Quincy Medical Center, Quincy Credit Union, Quincy Athletic Club, The Four's Restaurant, Eastern Insurance and Eastern Bank, and local police and firefighters.

"I have received so much support, and have yet to have anyone turn me down, which is fantastic," said Kane-McGunigle. "The Quincy Fire Department has been phenomenal. We are on the same team, trying to save lives."

The funds collected from the Go Red Day and other events go towards supporting awareness, research, education and community programs to benefit women. According to their website, their goal is to encourage awareness of the issue of women and heart disease, and also action to save more lives. In 2010, the American Heart Association set a strategic goal of reducing death and disability from cardiovascular disease and strokes by 20 percent, while improving the cardiovascular health of all Americans by 20 percent by the year 2020.

It's not too late for other Quincy businesses to "Go Red" tomorrow (Friday). Businesses can Go Red any day in Heart Month (February) or Go Red on National Wear Red Day, for a donation of only $5 per employee. For more information visit GoRedforWoman.org or contact MAWearRed-Day@heart.org.

13-Year-Old Trevor Kirby Honored For Bravery

By EMILY TAFT

Trevor Kirby, a 13-year-old Quincy teen, is a hero.

The Quincy Fire Department recently honored the quick-thinking local youngster for his heroic actions after the family home caught fire. Trevor received a certificate of appreciation for saving the lives of his two sisters and the family dog in a fire last November.

Fire officials, during a recognition ceremony at Quincy Fire Headquarters last Friday, also lauded Trevor as a brave young man who made all the right decisions during an emergency.

"Trevor is a very brave young man, he saved his sisters and he didn't panic," said Quincy Fire Investigator Jimmy Wong. "He did all the right things, which is hard when you are facing an emergency like this."

On Nov. 19, two days before Thanksgiving, at around 5:30 p.m., Trevor, along with his sisters Hannah and Madison, were in the basement living room while their parents, Janet and Dana, were out for the night, when a fire started on the top floor of 85 Albatross Rd.

"I smelt something, and then all of the sudden the fire alarms started go-

Improved Safety Sought Outside Fenno House

Mayor Tom Koch might not be legally allowed to follow through on a city council resolution to improve safety in front of the Fenno House at 540 Hancock St.

Part of the resolution, passed unanimously Monday night, calls for a 20 miles per hour speed limit in front of the building. But because that part of Hancock St. is a state road, the city might not be able to reduce the speed limit. It also calls for lengthening the time the yellow light stays on and the installation of fluorescent senior crossing signs.

"The traffic engineer is going to take a good look at all [the items in the resolution], but "there may be some things we can't do legally," Chris Walker, the Mayor's director of policy and information, said in a phone interview.

Walker pointed out, however, that the Mayor has worked to improve safety at the Fenno House in the past, noting he'd been meeting with residents of the buildings since he took office. Walker pointed out that the administration already installed a new traffic light and improved signage around the building to help make the area safer for the

C-Mart Agreement Sparks Criticism

City Solicitor Jim Timmins came under fire at Monday's city council meeting for his agreement with C-Mart owner Miao Kun "Michael" Fang.

The deal remanded the issue back to the council in its capacity as a special permit granting authority, with the condition that Ward 6

Councillor Brian McNamee wouldn't be allowed to vote on the matter. The amount of retail space in the store is expected to be cut in half from the 34,000 square feet that was proposed in 2009, under the accord with Fang.

In 2009, Fang's proposal to build C-Mart on Hayward St. in North Quincy at the old Boston Gear Works

Building was rejected by the council in its capacity as a special permit granting authority. Fang appealed because he felt McNamee was predisposed against building the supermarket because of a public meeting held prior to that.

McNamee, however, is still allowed to comment on

New Drug Tester For Police

By EMILY TAFT

Quincy Police officers now have a new device to analyze narcotics that "brings the labs to the streets."

The narcotics analyzer, called TruNarc, has been tested by the department for a year and a half. Officers will now be recording the results in hopes to use it as evidence in future court cases.

The $20,000 device is a small portable drug identifier that allows officers a quick and easy way to know which drug they are dealing with while on duty.

"This new technology has the potential to impact the entire system, from the streets to the prosecution," said Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan. "It could save us valuable time and money."

Transportation Secretary Pressed On MBTA Cuts - Page 2 ♦ Divers, Swimmers Third In League - Page 21 ♦

South Shore Chamber Presses Transportation Secretary On MBTA Cuts

The South Shore is one of the fastest growing regions in New England, but threatened cutbacks in ferry service, buses and commuter rail could slow down the growth in jobs and investment. That message was delivered by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce when it met last Thursday with Massachusetts Transportation Secretary Richard Davey.

More than three hundred business leaders gathered at the Quincy Marriott for the Chamber's meeting with Secretary Davey.

Chamber President Peter Forman cited three major development projects that were planned and designed around access to public transportation: the Hingham Shipyard, SouthField at the former air base, and the new Quincy Center.

The MBTA has released two alternative proposals for higher fares and service cutbacks in order to balance its budget. Both alternatives would eliminate subsidies for the commuter boats serving Hingham, Quincy and Hull, along with reductions in bus routes and commuter rail service.

"This is not our proudest hour as transit officials, but it is the hand we have been dealt," Secretary Davey said, noting the MBTA is facing a deficit of $161 million this year and $334 million three years from now. "We are doing what we can with the resources that we have."

MASSACHUSETTS TRANSPORTATION Secretary Richard Davey told the South Shore Chamber of Commerce that no final decision has been made yet on a proposal to eliminate state funding for ferry service from the South Shore to Boston.

He said no final decision has been made on cutting the ferries or other transit services. That decision, he said, would be made in April after other alternatives are examined.

"Whether it is Hingham, Hull, Quincy, the boats are a good service," Davey said. "The administration is very supportive, the MBTA is very supportive, we're all very supportive of almost all of the service we put out there. With the towns of Hingham, Quincy, and Hull, we have made investments in the last several years. It is not a transit question or a service question. It is a pure math question for the MBTA."

Davey said the MBTA has taken great strides to rein in its expenses, cutting employees to the lowest number in 15 years, reducing pension benefits, and bringing health insurance costs into line with other state agencies. "This is not your grandfather's T," he declared.

The Chamber's president emphasized the importance of transportation policy to the South Shore's economy. "Four years ago, the Chamber developed a priority list of transportation projects that we felt would leverage private sector investment, create new jobs, and promote regional economic growth," Forman said. "Governor Patrick and the secretaries of transportation and economic development have worked closely with us in advancing that plan for growth. It has been a good partnership, but there is more to be done, and done under a tight budget."

Secretary Davey said the Patrick Administration is taking the same approach. "We have to be focused on areas where we can encourage private sector development and jobs," he said. "Transportation is not about trains, planes and automobiles. It is about jobs and economic development. If we build an off-ramp or we widen a road, if we put a T stop in, you as business leaders can then locate, relocate, or grow your businesses because we have given you the opportunity to get your employees to the job site and then back home."

To the 300 members of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce he was addressing, Secretary Davey said, "I challenge you to really think about what kind of investments you are willing to make in transportation. Think about more resources and, yes, revenues."

"The mantra 'reform before revenue' was used three years ago," he said, pointing to the transportation reforms that have been enacted since then. "At some point I hope we would have an adult conversation about revenues."

Keenan: Limit MBTA Expansion

Sen. John F. Keenan has backed a measure that would restrict future MBTA commuter rail expansion projects until the authority is able to identify how it will pay for the project and whether the expansion will impact existing transit services.

The restriction was adopted with bipartisan support as an amendment to a supplemental budget bill approved by the Senate. The amendment was proposed by Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, a veteran member of the Joint Committee on Transportation, Sen. Bruce Tarr, R-Gloucester, and Sen. Patricia Jehlen, D-Somerville. The House must also agree to the amendment.

Sen. Keenan has begun a review of MBTA finances as the authority pushes for sizeable fare hikes and service cuts to close a growing annual budget deficit. The MBTA's debt load, which now consumes 25% of the authority's operating budget and will continue to grow in coming years, is a primary cause behind the deficit, along with rising energy and personnel costs, and slow revenue growth.

"At least three prominent reports issued over the past decade have urged the MBTA to refrain from major service expansion projects until it figured out a fiscally responsible way to pay to build and operate the new lines," Sen. Keenan said. "It appears that this did not happen; that the MBTA simply moved forward with these projects, maxing out its credit card to pay for them, while being unable to afford day-to-day operating and maintenance costs."

Keenan pointed to a 2009 review of MBTA finances by former John Hancock CEO David D'Allessandro, which determined that "[i]t makes little sense to continue expanding the system when the MBTA cannot maintain the existing one."

A 2007 Massachusetts Transportation Finance Commission study found: "Neither the MBTA under Forward Funding nor the Commonwealth can afford any of the transit projects that have been deemed desirable by political and civic leaders. Although work is being done to advance these projects through design studies, there is no money for actual construction... And even if these projects were to be built, the MBTA could not afford the additional operating expenses."

And, the 2002 Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation report entitled "MBTA Capital Spending: Derailed by Expansion" concluded: "If the Commonwealth wants to continue to expand the T... the state needs to fund those projects. The T should focus its limited capital resources on the upkeep of the existing system while the Commonwealth assumes responsibility for expansion as part of a comprehensive, statewide transportation investment strategy. State funding for expansion would be above and beyond current subsidies for the T."

Keenan said: "While public transit expansion projects can help spark economic development, it is clear that future expansions, particularly those not required as mitigation for the Big Dig project, should not happen until the MBTA tells us how it plans to pay for them, and whether building and operating these new lines will result in service cuts elsewhere."

The MBTA currently carries approximately $5.5 billion in debt -- $8.5 billion, including interest -- of which $1.67 billion is from Big Dig mitigation projects, such as all three branches of the Old Colony Line, commuter rail expansions to Newburyport and Worcester, and Silver Line service from South Station to the South Boston Seaport District. The MBTA is still legally required to construct the Green Line extension into Somerville and Medford and the Blue Line extension to Lynn. In addition, there is a $4.5 billion backlog of maintenance projects.

To eliminate a $161 million deficit in its budget next year, the MBTA has proposed raising fares, on average, between 35 and 43 percent, plus modest to severe service cuts. Among the cuts up for consideration are several Quincy bus routes, along with commuter ferry service and weekend and night commuter rail service.

A public hearing on the fare hikes and cuts will be held Wednesday, Feb. 15 beginning at 6:30 p.m. at Quincy High School.

Sometimes, it is best to reduce things to their simplest terms. After all, why complicate matters when you can get your point across with a straightforward statement? Such is the case with women who are setting aside their chandelier earrings for the moment in favor of stick earrings. Bill Aimed At Increasing Awareness Of Dangerous Drugs, Reduce Supply, Target Fraud

Senate Approves Keenan's Prescription Drug Abuse Bill

The state Senate has unanimously adopted legislation authored by Sen. John F. Keenan (D-Quincy) that addresses the state's growing prescription drug abuse epidemic.

The bill aims to improve public awareness of the dangers of prescription painkillers, reduce the surplus of pain pills available for abuse and diversion, crack down on doctor shopping and other fraudulent means of obtaining the pills, and increase access to substance abuse services.

"Prescription drug abuse is a problem in every neighborhood in every community in this state," said Sen. Keenan, chairman of the Joint Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse. "This bill will not prevent those living with pain from receiving needed treatment, but it will make it more difficult to start down the path towards addiction."

More than 4,000 Bay State residents have died from prescription drug overdoses since 2002. On average, there are now 10 deaths every week related to prescription drug abuse. It is the leading cause of accidental death in Massachusetts, ahead of car accidents.

Nationally, prescription drug abuse causes more than 1 million hospital emergency room visits annually -- the same number of hospital visits caused by illicit drugs.

Prescription drug abuse among teenagers is particularly troublesome. According to statistics from the Drug Enforcement Administration, painkillers are the second most abused drug behind marijuana.

"When drugs like these are responsible for more accidental deaths in Massachusetts than motor vehicle accidents, you know we've got a problem," Senate President Therese Murray (D-Plymouth) said. "I said at the beginning of this legislative session this would be a top priority. The abuse of these drugs has devastating effects on individuals and families of every socioeconomic background. The costs are high, both to families and the economy, not to mention the significant impact on public safety. This bill will help save lives and keep us all safer."

Sen. Keenan's bill would increase public awareness by requiring each painkiller prescription filled to come with an eye-catching, concise, easily-understood informational pamphlet explaining addiction risks, signs of dependency, resources for treatment, and ways to safely store and discard drugs.

Doctors that prescribe controlled substances would be required to register with the state's Prescription Monitoring Program and conduct patient drug history screens prior to writing prescriptions for painkillers.

Also, a panel of medical practitioners would be required to put together a professional set of "best practices" to guide the prescribing of painkillers.

"Too often I hear about doctors who don't ask basic questions such as whether their patient has a history of substance abuse prior to prescribing them highly addictive pain medication," Sen.

Trip Through State's 351 Communities

Topic Of Free Slide Show At Library Monday

Debbie and Peter Lincoln will host a free slide presentation illustrating a pictorial journey through the state's 351 communities Monday, Feb. 13 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

On a whim in 2007, the Lincolns decided to visit every city and town in the Commonwealth. The whim evolved into a project to photograph, study, and compile information about each. From this mountain of material, they have developed an informative, entertaining, interactive, illustrated program filled with anecdotes, little-known history, hidden locales, as well as their own mishaps.

The Lincolns are lifelong Massachusetts residents, graduates of Tufts University, and retired high school teachers from Lunenburg. They have been presenting their program around the state and were recently featured on the Callie Crossley show on WGBH radio.

The Life Of Riley

Meet Riley.

He's a four-year-old English Springer Spaniel who is – pardon the pun – living the life of Riley.

And, by this time next week, he could be sitting on top of the dog world.

You see, Riley is no ordinary pooch.

An American Grand Champion and a Canadian Champion, his American Kennel Club registered name is GCH Cerise Verace CGC. Owned by Kathleen Nugent of Houghs Neck, Riley will be among 20 English Springer Spaniels competing in the Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show at Madison Square Garden in New York City Feb. 13-14.

In all, 2,000 dogs representing some 179 breeds and varieties will compete at Westminster. The competition has been a sell-out at Madison Square Garden since 2005. The winning canine dubbed "America's Dog" is lavished with celebrity, embarking on a media tour that includes TV appearances and a visit to the Observation Deck at the Empire State Building.

But just being at the Westminster Dog Show is an honor in of itself because all of the dogs that compete are considered champions – the best of their breeds.

And that's exactly what Riley is because he's accumulated the necessary points by winning titles at major dog shows, Nugent explains.

"You have to acquire so many points and so many of them have to be from large dog shows. You just can't scout out a little dog show and win. You can do that a million times and it still wouldn't make you a champion.

"I think it's 15 points and so many of those points have to come from large dog shows. They call them majors. You have to be a champion to go to Westminster," she adds.

Riley has beautiful markings for a liver and white-colored English Springer Spaniel. And he's becoming a very special canine. He won the prestigious title of Grand Champion at a competition in Springfield last Thanksgiving.

"Grand champion means you already have your championship so now you have to beat all these other champions to become a grand champion," notes Nugent, a fourth generation Houghs Neck who has worked as a Quincy building inspector for 23 years.

Riley certainly lives like a champion. Nugent calls him the king of the house.

"He's living the life of Riley. When I got him, his gear wouldn't fit in my car so I had to go buy a new car to get all his show gear in. He has his own bedroom as well as his own grooming table and crate. He has all his products in one room, too," she says.

Products?

Yup. Products.

Riley has his own hair products, mousses, sprays and even a special wax for his paws so that he doesn't slip on the carpet while he is being handled at a dog show. He wears an ear wrap on his ears that is pulled off right before he goes into the show ring. That's to make sure his hair will stay straight.

Other accessories that help Riley look his best: special scissors, blow driers and flat irons. For Westminster, he's also had his teeth cleaned and polished by a dentist.

Riley even has a few special robes that he can wear while he's beautified. The robes don't have his monogram but one has a little paw print on it.

But it's not all glitz and glamour competing at Westminster.

Riley has a long day ahead of him the day of his competition – next Tuesday, Feb. 14. That's when he will be judged along with his 19 canine colleagues for best English Springer Spaniel.

"We'll get to Madison Square Garden around 6:30 in the morning Tuesday and he's on at 12:30 p.m. We'll have a little time to adjust to being in the building. We'll then start his beauty regimen," Nugent says.

The pre-judging grooming could last up to 2 and a half hours. If you want to see how Riley does, the judging will be streamed live on the Westminster Dog Show website around 12:30 p.m.

Other last minute preparations include a sponge bath to make sure any street dirt that may have got on him is rinsed away and special driers to make sure his paws are dry and his coat is straight. He'll wear a robe to make sure his coat is flat.

Westminster is a two-day, all breed bench conformation show. That means tight quarters for the initial judging.

"There are little stalls and you have to fit all your stuff into this little stall – the dog's crate and the dog has to be there. The dog is allowed to leave for 20 minutes to use the bathroom and then the dog has to be back in his crate and be ready," Nugent explains.

"Some wealthier dog owners may hire security guards so they can leave their dog but you're pretty much there with your dog the whole day. It's fun meeting all the people. You're like an ambassador for the breed for the day," Nugent says.

The surroundings can be a little stuffy, too.

"It can be hot in there," Nugent notes. "There are a lot of people in the building. This is a dog show that people buy tickets and they come to watch. There are school tours and other people who just keep on coming through.

"Riley will probably sit on top of his crate. He'll be there from 6:30 a.m. until 8 p.m. that night."

Then, the moment of truth arrives. A judge will determine if Riley has the "ruff stuff" to be awarded best in breed.

That process takes all of about two minutes.

What are the keys to Riley's success at Westminster?

"Grooming is important but the most important part is that he's healthy and happy," Nugent says. "The judges pick up on that. If he's not happy – his tail's going to be down, his head's not going to be up, his posture won't be right. If that's not right, you could groom him 24 hours a day and you're not going to be able to pull it off."

Riley has the genes to make some noise at this competition.

His grandfather – Champion Saliyn's Condor (Robert) – won best in show at Westminster Kennel Club in 1993.

"He's considered to be one of the finest Springer Spaniels of all time," Nugent notes.

His aunt (Robert's daughter) won best in show at Westminster Kennel Club in 2000. Her name is Champion Saliyn 'N Erin's Shameless (Samantha).

Nugent's only expectations at Westminster are this:

"My only hope is to have a good time with my friends and that Riley shows well. My friend (Cindy Lester) is showing him. We're just there for the thrill and the fun."

If Riley wins best in breed, he'll advance to the sporting group competition where he'll go up against the best dogs representing breeds such as the German Shorthaired Pointer, Irish Setter and Golden Retriever. Despite being one of the most popular dogs in America, the Golden Retriever has never won Best in Show at Westminster.

If you're a betting type, you may want to lay a few biscuits on the dog representing the Terrier Group. That category has won more Best of Shows at Westminster than any other – 45 out of 103 since 1907.

But surprises do happen.

Last year's winner – Foxcliffe Hickory Wind – became the first Scottish Deerhound to walk away with the coveted best in show crown.

It's certainly "pawsible" that Riley could win best in breed and best in the sporting group. That would vault him into the Best of Show competition Tuesday night and spur a NYC shopping dash.

"I'd have to pull out the charge card and buy an outfit for Riley's handler to wear," Nugent says. "She would have to get some glitzy outfit so we'd have to go shopping very quickly to get some very glam outfit."

"You would probably have to scrap me off the floor, too," she adds.

The best in show competition begins at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 14 on the USA Network.

Riley has an impressive canine resume with many photos illustrating his dog show victories.

But to Nugent, Riley is more than a show dog. In fact, he's a beloved pet first and foremost.

"His temperament is excellent and he is well behaved," Kathy says. "Riley's a fun, good-natured, happy dog."

"He's a pet first, show dog second."

That makes Riley a little bit of an underdog at Westminster.

Some of these dogs sole purpose is to compete for title after title. They have very little home life.

"Some of these dogs who compete at that level people are spending $300,000 a year to compete. Dogs living on the road, living in a truck, living in a kennel, and there's a showing every day of the week," Nugent notes. "For your dog to be known and to win at that level, they have to live on the road. They have to be seen. People take out ads in catalogues so the judges can make the association."

"They're not supposed to know whose dog they are judging. But they might know the handler. So they put the pieces together."

Nugent is very appreciative of all the support she and Riley have had over the years, including friends John and Sue Ellen Healy who have mentored her and her friend Seamus Quinn and Riley's girlfriend Emma who "cheer and support us."

She is also grateful to the South Shore Dog Training Club and serves on the Club's Board of Directors. The club offers a wide variety of training to the public and meets Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at the Quincy Armory on Hancock Street.

After Westminster, Riley's future may be more therapeutic than competitive.

"My mother had Alzheimer's and I got Riley right after she passed away. I used to bring my female dog – named Emma – with me when I visited my mom in the nursing home. It was remarkable how the residents reacted to her."

"I'd like to do some therapy work with Riley. I don't know if visiting seniors is the best thing because he's kind of big and if he barks he's loud. But that's one of my passions that I want to try to do with him."

That's Riley. Living the life. Good luck in the Big Apple.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1912 advertising postcard published by the Boston Gear Works whose office and factory was located on Hayward Street in Norfolk Downs. The machines shown here were known as hobbing machines that used special metal-cutting tools to form the teeth in their gears. Some gears with teeth being cut in them can be seen in a horizontal position on the machines in the left and right foreground. Pallets stacked with gears can be seen in the center of the aisle. The company had hundreds of different machines for making a large variety of gears. At the time, 100 years ago, all types of manufacturing companies powered their machine tools with overhead systems of shafts, pulleys and belts as seen at the top of this picture. These systems were usually powered by a large steam engine of where possible a water wheel. Small electric motors that could provide separate power to each individual machine were just coming into use. Boston Gear Works was one of the first companies to develop and sell gear drives that were used to connect the motors directly to the machines. In its prime, the company was the second largest employer on the South Shore behind only the shipyards. Founded in Boston in 1877, the company's factory was located in Quincy from 1905 until it was closed in 1990. It had owned several buildings on over 20 acres of land here. Today, the company is still in business, but has a much smaller facility in Charlotte, N.C. The hobbing department shown here is now the ground floor of the Granite Loft Condominiums in Norfolk Downs. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Implement Safety Measures Outside Fenno House

Recently, Councillor Kirsten Hughes introduced a resolve regarding pedestrian safety at 540 Hancock St., Fenno House, a senior residency. The resolve asks the mayor and the appropriate appointees in his administration to carry out the requested safety measures. The resolve was passed unanimously by the City Council.

A salient measure is to install crossing signs at each end of the crosswalk. This is similar to the presence of school children signs at crosswalks at schools. Councillor Doug Gutro has made a survey of senior facilities. He has found similar safety concerns. It should be the policy of the city of Quincy to have such signs installed at all crosswalks used by seniors.

Another measure is to lengthen the time the solid yellow light stays on in a traffic signal in the change from blinking yellow to red. A major problem at this crosswalk is that vehicles will speed up to beat the red light. It has been shown in other jurisdictions that lengthening the time significantly decreases the incidence of red light running. This lengthening gives drivers time to react to the change of the traffic lights.

The resolves states that if these measures fail to make a sufficient impact in safety, an in-depth investigation be mounted to determine other measures.

One measure that I recommend relates to the jumping of the red light by drivers from Linden Street which intersects Hancock Street next to the crosswalk. Drivers take the opportunity to get to the far lane of Hancock Street during the break in traffic.

Four seniors have been hit in the crosswalk while crossing with the red light in this manner, along with a number of close calls.

A sign stating "No Turn On Red" should be placed on the traffic light pole opposite the intersection of Linden Street with Hancock Street.

Another issue is that there is a sign permitting two hour parking at the bus stop in front of Fenno

House. This should be removed and replaced with a sign stating "Bus Stop. No Parking." And another such sign placed at the opposite bus stop.

I urge the mayor to implement the requested safety measures.

Gertrude Halloran First Quincy Woman Judge

Gertrude R. Halloran was officially seated as the first woman justice in the history of Quincy District Court and easily handled her first case involving a missing pair of men's trousers.

Vincent Moscardelli of South Quincy claimed he sent his $45 suit to the cleaners who lost the pants, thus wiping out the value of the suit, which would not be a suit if he had to wear odd trousers.

Judge Halloran awarded him $15.

WELFARE HEAD FIRED

A rumored major shakeup in the administration of Mayor Thomas S. Burgin failed to materialize when only Welfare Commissioner Alvin S. Wight was ousted and replaced in the $2,400 job by WPA Administrator Anthony J. Venna.

"I have nothing personal against Mr. Wight," said the mayor, "but I believe it desirable at this time to make a change in the administration of the Welfare Department."

Wight called his dismissal "political expediency."

Reappointed were Ezekiel C. Sargent, public works commissioner at $4,000; Harold P. Newell, treasurer at $3,300; John D. Smith, solicitor at $3,000; N. Gorham Nickerson, assessor chairman at $3,250.

SALARY CUT VETOED

Mayor Burgin vetoed a City Council order that would have cut the salary of newly named City Purchasing Agent George Bonsall from $3,500 to $2,500 a year.

"We pay lucrative salaries to beginners," said Councillor Aldo Della Chiesa. "Let us pay this purchasing agent $2,500 a year. If he does his work, well he can expect a raise."

FEVER EPIDEMIC

Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash, noting 416 reported cases of scarlet fever since September, declared that an epidemic was sweeping the city, particularly in Wards 5 and 6.

"Call a doctor in every case of sore throat," warned Dr. Ash, adding that there was a great danger of serious complications from even the slightest case."

SEEK WAITING ROOM

The Houghs Neck Improvement Association voted to continue the fight for construction of a waiting room for streetcar patrons on an island recently acquired by the Park Department at Washington and Coddington Streets.

It was estimated a shelter could be built for $1,500 on the island, which was called "the smallest playground in the city."

7:30 P.m. Feb. 16-18 At Cove Fine Arts Center 'Stories Of God' For Children Stage Adaption At ENC

The Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department will present Stories of God, a theatrical adaptation of Rainer Maria Rilke's book featuring children's stories.

To be presented at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 16-18 at the Cove Fine Arts Center on the college's Wollaston campus, the play is based on Rilke's book, which is said to have been inspired by a trip the Bohemian poet made to Russia in 1899. Director Michael Ballard said that unlike other ENC theatre productions, Stories of God will be performed in a "black box" setting, with the audience sitting on three sides of the stage.

"We are taking a playful, active approach to the stories, so children will be engaged," Director Michael Ballard said. "But there is much of Rilke's poetic language throughout, which should appeal to adults as well."

Producer Tara Brooke

Watkins agreed.

"The interconnected tales reflect the spirituality of the simple Russian people Rilke met on his journey," she said. "The stories reflect the powerful imagery of Rilke's later poetry, yet they have a folktale quality that makes them accessible to audiences of all ages."

Ballard also noted that Stories of God takes a "story theatre," or storytelling, approach. "I directed another story theatre piece six years ago and believe it is a very creative way to tell and stage stories," he said. "In this piece, I am drawn to the blend of folktale, theology and poetry in the stories."

Tickets for Stories of God are $10 general admission, $7 for students, $5 for children 12 and under.

For tickets or more information, call the ENC box office at 617-745-3715 or visit www.brownpapertickets.com.

Potato Crust Quiche

Recently I found a different kind of a recipe for quiche. Through the years, I have made quiche out of every vegetable there is and most of time, a crust less one.

But wait until you hear about today's recipe made with a potato crust, and so simple.

The recipe called for packaged shredded potatoes, but I prefer to make them myself, and it doesn't take that long. If you still want to use the packaged one, it's absolutely fine.

FOR THE CRUST

2 large potatoes (or one package shredded)

½ stick butter (melted)

Salt and pepper

Shred two potatoes, drain and pat dry. Add the butter, salt and pepper. Mix well. Place all around a slightly greased pie plate as you would a pie crust. Bake in a 375-degree oven until the crust is lightly browned.

Remove from oven and set aside.

For The Quiche

3 eggs

1 cup half and half

½ cup chopped scallions

1/2 cup chopped ham

Salt and pepper to taste

In a bowl, beat the eggs, and add the scallions and ham. Add the half and half and mix well.

Pour the mixture into the potato crust and bake in a 350-degree oven for 30 minutes. It cuts great and it is so tasty with that kind of a crust.

P.S. Any favorite veggie or meats can be used to make a quiche.

Landlords Sent To Prison In Fatal 2009 Fire

DA Morrissey And Fire Marshal Working Together To Prevent Future Tragedies

The landlords convicted of manslaughter last month in the 100 Robertson Street fire that killed a city father and his two sons in 2009 have been sent to prison, according to District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey.

Morrissey and State Fire Marshal Stephen Coan, flanked by Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan and Fire Chief Joseph Barron, spoke to the press following the sentencing hearing for the two brothers at Norfolk Superior Court last Thursday. The DA and Fire Marshal revealed that they have begun working together on steps to stop landlords from renting the kind of illegal apartments that turned into a death trap on Robertson Street on March 25, 2009.

"Andy Huang was sentenced to 3 years and 1 day in State Prison and his brother Jason was sentenced to 2 to 3 years in prison, followed by 3 years of probation each," District Attorney Morrissey said. "We requested state prison terms of 12 to 15 years."

Morrissey praised the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, State Fire Marshall's office and State Police for their "outstanding work and cooperation," in putting the case together, and the prosecution team of Lynn Beland, Varsha Kulkafka and victim/witness advocate Maureen Russell for their work at trial.

"Manslaughter cases in fatal fires are very difficult to put together and complex to win at trial," Morrissey said.

In addition to being convicted of three counts of manslaughter each in the deaths of Oudah Frawi, his two-month old son Hassan and his year old son Ali, they were convicted on four indictments each for violating one of the new laws put in place in 2004 in reaction to the deadly Station Nightclub fire in Rhode Island. The Robertson Street fire prompted the first convictions under the new law, according to Fire Marshal Coan. They were each convicted of a single count of Wanton or Reckless Violation of the State Building or Fire Code, causing serious injury or death, for each of the three who perished and the fire's sole survivor, Terri Knight, their wife and mother.

"Terri Knight went to bed one night and woke up three weeks later in a hospital bed to the news that her entire family was dead," District Attorney Morrissey said. "She demonstrated strength and courage to fly back to Massachusetts from her new home in Oklahoma to testify at the trial.

"Those deaths cannot be the end of this story," Morrissey said. In the coming months, Morrissey and Fire Marshal Coan will be working together to draft legislation to make prosecution for renting illegal apartments more effective – and possibly to provide the threat of jail time for flouting the law, where now it can only be punished with modest fines.

The Fire Marshal also said that his office has been developing new training for municipal code enforcement officials state-wide to help crack down on dangerous illegal apartments expected to roll out this spring. District Attorney Morrissey has offered to host a regional training for Norfolk County officials. "The good news for the City of Quincy is the proposal.

C-Mart Deal Draws Criticism

At the meeting, McNamee admitted that he had discussed the issue with Timmins before the agreement was reached. But the councillor said that during those discussions he told the solicitor he'd only recuse himself if mandated by court.

"Mr. Timmins, I'm going to make this very clear," McNamee said. "I never said to you that I would recuse myself. I said to you 'if the court orders me, I have no alternative but then to recuse, but I will not voluntarily step aside' and that's my position today."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci was also critical of the agreement, claiming that the administration had overstepped their reach by agreeing to that McNamee would have to relinquish his vote on the plan.

"I would suggest the executive branch has overstepped their authority and their mandate here in disenfranchising one of our members from voting on something that's important to their neighborhood," Palmucci said at the meeting. "The executive has removed a member of a duly authorized board. I don't think that's right and nor do I think it's appropriate."

Palmucci also pushed his colleagues to reject the agreement and not hear the new proposal when it comes before them.

"If the Ward 6 councillor has not agreed and doesn't agree to recuse himself from this matter and agree to this removal then I would urge this council to reject the remand and simply not meet on it," Palmucci said. "This isn't an agreement that we reached, this isn't an agreement that was reached with our consultation."

Timmins defended reaching the deal without bringing it before the council. The solicitor said he would've brought the matter up during the Jan. 17 council meeting. Council President Mike McFarland, according to Timmins, said that wouldn't be effective because only half the councillors present at the meeting had voted on the issue. Palmucci and Margaret Laforest were both elected in 2009 after the proposal was rejected, while Brad Croall and Kirsten Hughes were elected last year. Joe Finn, who was on the council when they rejected the proposal, missed the January meeting.

"I told [McFarland] I wanted to come and get your blessings - it's much safer for me to go forward after you folks have blessed it," Timmins said. "We didn't do that because I would've been putting the newly elected councillors, and then the two councillors who weren't on the SPGA in a very difficult position. And after discussing all of that with the president, we reached an understanding."

Timmins also reiterated that when councillors sit as members of the special permit granting authority, they are to only consider the merits of the proposal and not act as representatives of their districts.

"As members of a permit granting authority you have a very different role [than being city councillors]," the solicitor stated. "You're supposed to evaluate an application in front of you, evaluate it on its merits and vote it either up or down using the criteria in our zoning ordinance that applies to special permits."

The question of whether councillors could hold or attend public meetings on SPGA matters was also brought up. Laforest asked why hosting a public hearing over an SPGA issue was different than hosting a normal one on a planning or zoning board issue. Timmins said that the difference was that in a normal meeting, members of the board who vote won't attend. Laforest countered by saying she acts only as a moderator in meetings, and refrains from expressing an opinion.

"I might give a welcome message, I might be the one to point out to the audience members, you know Mr. Timmins, your question," Laforest said. "That's it, I'm not saying 'well Mr. Timmins I disagree with your point,' I'm saying 'this question.' The applicant then has a chance to answer those questions. The councillor is a facilitator in that role. I think if we go in there with some rules...you're not to negate the public, you're not there to support the public comment - you're to be Switzerland."

Timmins suggested that councillors videotape future meetings on SPGA issues to prove they only acted as facilitators. He noted that in the C-Mart case, some tapes were available but not all of them.

Timmins also called on the council to hold an executive session where he could brief them further on legal issues relating to this case. The closed meeting will take place before the council's Feb. 27th meeting.

Contract Still Under State Investigation Council To Hear Honeywell Update In Executive Session

By SCOTT JACKSON

City Solicitor Jim Timmins appeared before the City Council on Monday to answer their questions regarding the city's contract with Honeywell International. Because of ongoing investigation about the deal, however, much of the information couldn't be disclosed and might instead be given at a closed executive session.

Previously, Councillor Doug Gutro called for the release of information regarding the $32.8 million agreement, which was reached in 2007 when Bill Phelan was mayor.

During the council's last meeting on Jan. 17, he proposed a resolution calling for the administration to release a list of buildings where the equipment acquired under the agreement was purchased, information on water and energy use at those buildings prior to that agreement, information on water and energy use since the equipment was installed, a report on the savings incurred as a result of the installation, and the administration's long term maintenance plan for the equipment. That resolution was sent to various committees.

Timmins told the council that some information sought by Gutro, including the list of buildings where equipment was installed, was included in the contract and is part of the public record.

Gutro said Monday that he was surprised by how long the whole process was taking, but that'd he reserve some comments until the executive session was held.

"I'll reserve the extent of my frustration until we get to executive session because I'm still completely mystified why it takes four years to get to where we are," Gutro told Timmins. "But you can explain that to me in executive session, if I'm satisfied, I'll let you know."

Gutro further added that he'd like the information so the city would be able to see how it fared under the deal. "Ultimately," he said, "someday, somewhere, we're going to get access to the energy and the water use data, and have the opportunity collectively as a city to judge the extent of the water and energy savings."

Timmins noted that the attorney general's office was able to obtain information the city might not have been able to on its own, and that he and the mayor weren't able to publicly say what that information is.

"We're a party to a contract - the Honeywell contract - there's information we can't get because of the way the contract's written," Timmins explained. "The attorney general, because of its investigatory authority, has the ability to get information. They make people who come before them sign confidentiality agreements, and the mayor and I had to sign them as well. We can't comment publicly on a lot of the things they've shared with us."

Gutro also asked if the city had the information on water and energy usage he requested, but wasn't allowed to release it because of the investigation.

Timmins responded that Gutro's comment wasn't correct and that he'd explain why in the executive session.

The date for the executive session wasn't set, but it could take place March 19.

Improved Safety Sought Outside Fenno House

building's residents.

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes proposed the resolution, "This is simply good common sense in protecting our seniors, and school children and really any resident who crosses at the traffic light," she told the council.

Hughes also credited other councillors who helped craft similar measures during the last council term. One of them was Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci who was chair of the council's public safety committee then and continues to be this term. He also described the issue of pedestrian safety at the crossing as a key one.

"I agree with Councillor Hughes that this is an issue that is pressing given the number of traffic accidents that we've had of late, it only highlights the public safety the folks in that area, not only in the Fenno House but in the area, have," Palmucci said.

Palmucci held a meeting of the public safety committee last fall. During Monday's meeting he thanked the mayor for having traffic engineer Jack Gillon attend that meeting.

"He knows, very appropriately, that this is a serious issue," Palmucci said. "He was willing enough, and most accommodating to have Mr. Gillon come to that meeting at the Fenno House."

During the meeting, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee expressed the same reservations Walker had over reducing the speed limit. "I think that creating false hope that a 20 mile an hour speed limit can legally be put there is really not the appropriate thing to do," he said. "I don't like to create these kinds of expectations when they're not at all in agreement with state law."

But Hughes prodded her colleagues to pass the resolution, saying that holding off on it would be dangerous and irresponsible.

Councillor-at-large Doug Gutro, who was the Ward 5 councillor until being elected to his new post last November, thanked Hughes for her work on the resolution. He also said pedestrian safety at all senior buildings around the city was an issue.

"As I circled the city to run at-large, I hit many of the senior buildings. Pedestrian safety around the senior buildings was a huge issue," Gutro said. "I think Councillor Hughes is doing the right thing as a ward councillor to look at the neighborhood there and work with the departments and the resolution is basically the starting point - it's the framework for discussion to see how we can make it as safe as possible for residents of the Fenno House."

Walker said the mayor is "open to ideas, and we will certainly take a look at Councillor Gutro's proposal."

"That being said, I'm not sure that there's going to be anything in such a proposal that isn't just taking existing decision-making away from the City Council and the professionals we already entrust and placing into yet another government commission," the mayor's spokesman added.

Quincy Receives National Community Development Achievement Award

For the second time in three years, the City of Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development (PCD) has won the Audrey Nelson Community Development Achievement Award from the National Community Development Association (NCDA).

The Audrey Nelson award, which was presented at the annual Winter Legislative Meeting of NCDA on January 20 in Washington, D.C., recognizes exemplary uses of Community Development Block Grant and "HOME Investment Partnership" funds in meeting the needs of families and neighborhoods.

The award was presented to the City of Quincy for the "Housing First for Families" project, in collaboration with Quincy Community Action Programs, in which a former church on Granite Street was transformed into five units of affordable housing for very low-income and "at-risk" families. Tenants receive case management services designed to connect them to resources that will foster successful tenancies, and help them achieve self-sufficiency.

Mayor Thomas P. Koch personally accepted the award, as he was also in Washington, D.C., attending the U.S. Conference of Mayors annual winter meeting. Representing PCD at the awards luncheon were Nancy Callanan, Community Development Director, and Sean Glennon, Principal Planner.

"We have an outstanding Department of Planning and Community Development," Koch said. "I am extremely proud of what they accomplish every day, and I am grateful to Dennis Harrington and Nancy Callanan for their exceptional leadership in the areas of planning and community development."

During the conference, Callanan gave a presentation to Congressional staff with respect to the importance of the CDBG and HOME programs, and Glennon gave a presentation on Social Media. Callanan is a member of NCDA's national Housing Committee, and Glennon is co-Chair of NCDA's national Technology Committee and is a member of the association's national Board of Directors.

ing off, so I went upstairs to take a look," said Trevor. "I saw smoke coming from one of the bedrooms and saw the fire. I shut the door to that room, ran downstairs and told everyone to get out. Then we called 911 and our parents."

Janet said it wasn't a phone call she wanted to ever receive, but she was grateful to see that everyone, including the dog, had made it out safely.

"Doing what he did stalled the fire long enough for all of my children to get out. We are all so proud of him," said Janet. "I think he believes he did what he had to do, and he doesn't realize what a great thing he did, by shutting that door."

Wong said after investigating the fire, it is still un-

TREVOR KIRBY holds his appreciation award presented by the Quincy Fire Department for his brave and heroic actions following a fire at his family's home last November. determined what the cause was but he believes, according to evidence, that it was an old electric blanket that started the blaze. The blanket was being used by Trevor's sister, Taylor, who was not home when the fire started.

"This kid had the presence of mind to shut the door to the fire room once he discovered it," said Deputy Chief Joseph Jackson. "Had he not shut that door things could have played out quite differently for this family."

Damage to the house was extensive, according to Janet. Most floors had fire and water damage, and they were only able to save a few photos.

"We literally came out of this fire with only the clothes on our backs," said Janet. "We didn't know where to turn, but our neighbors and the Quincy community have been so great to us. We can't thank them enough."

For now the family is living in a house on Wollaston Hill while their house is being repaired. Janet said the estimated time their house should be finished is in July, but she is hoping they will be able to move in sooner.

"This has been hard for all four of my children," said Janet. "Everything is different now, and it is even hard because they aren't near their friends."

The Kirby family received clothes, money, and food donations from organizations in Quincy, including the Germantown Neighborhood Association, Adams Shore and Houghs Neck communities, and the Friends Giving Back organization created by the Galian family in Quincy.

"There has been such an outpouring of help we feel so humble and loved. Everyone has been so giving and kind, we will never forget it. They have made all of this so much easier," said Janet. "Something like this happens and you realize how fragile life is. One day the world is fine and the next it can be disastrous."

"I am so thankful Trevor was using his head and closed that door, and that they were all able to make it out safe because of him."

ing a month that has seen an above-average number of accidents involving pedestrians on Quincy streets, including two fatalities, according to police statistics.

Police, Traffic and other City departments are now coordinating the full scope of the education and enforcement campaign, which officials said will include literature, outreach meetings, television programming, and potentially increasing signage among a series of potential educational initiatives.

Mayor Koch and Chief Keenan said "Public Safety Week" from April 8 to April 14 will be a highly visible and highly aggressive touchstone of the effort that will target every segment of the City's population. The full details of the campaign will be outlined in coming weeks.

"We tackle our issues head-on this City, especially when it comes to public safety. Chief Keenan and this Administration are fully committed to doing everything we possibly can ensure pedestrian safety in our community," said Mayor Koch.

Added Chief Keenan: "Combining education and enforcement is a major focal point of our efforts. We are targeting our resources where they need to be, and we are sending the message to all of our residents about keeping safe while both walking and driving."

Both Chief Keenan and Mayor Koch also asked residents for their assistance by following basic pedestrian guidelines and helping officials identify issues as they arise.

Chief Keenan reminded walkers to:

- Always push the button and wait for the pedestrian phase of a light cycle before entering the crosswalk.
- Wear light or reflective clothing at night.

- Always cross streets within marked crosswalks.

- Make sure all lanes of traffic have stopped before crossing the roadway look both ways (twice!).

He reminded drivers to:

- Slow down and proceed with caution when approaching a crosswalk.
- Expect a pedestrian to walk in front of your car when you are approaching a crosswalk.
- Expect a pedestrian in the crosswalk when making a right turn on red.

Ward 5 Precinct 1 Polling Location Moving To Quincy Career Center

Residents of Ward 5 Precinct 1 will be voting at the Quincy Career Center on Parkway.

Previously, voters in the precinct had voted at the Bernazzani School on Furnace Brook Parkway.

City Clerk Joe Shea proposed moving to the Career Center when the rest of the city's polling places were set at the City Council's Jan. 17 meeting.

The council approved the location of all other polling places in the city, but chose to defer voting on the location Ward 5 Precinct 1 because Councillor Doug Gutro wanted the city to consult with the South Shore Workforce Investment Board and the state Division of Career Services, because they operate the building.

The council unanimously approved the change at their meeting on Monday. Before the vote Kevin Madden, the Career Center's Executive Director, told the council that the Division of Career Services was okay with using the building as a polling place.

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Jan. 31, at approximately 8:15 a.m., a citizen called to report that his vehicle was just stolen from the 7-11 store located at 75 Copeland St., stating that it was last seen heading up Buckley Street. Detective Dave Pacino got on the police radio and advised the units that several stolen motor vehicles have been recovered recently in the area of Morton Street.

Sergeant Sean Duggan responded to the Morton Street area and located 2 males in a driveway. He told them about the stolen vehicle and asked them if they had seen it. They immediately pointed out the stolen vehicle and said that they saw a male park the vehicle and then run behind the building at 25 Morton St.

Officer Paul Jackson arrived on scene and spotted a male running from behind the building at 25 Morton St. The individual jumped over a fence and dropped something on the side walk. He then looked up and saw the cruiser approaching. Officer Jackson was able to detain the suspect until the two witnesses walked over and confirmed that it was the same male who exited the stolen motor vehicle.

The suspect, a 30 year-old Whitman resident, was placed under arrest for "Receiving Stolen Property over $250" and transported to the station. Officer Jackson then went to the location where the suspect dropped something near the fence and found a set of car keys that belonged to the stolen motor vehicle. The suspect also had an outstanding warrant.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, Jan. 28, at approximately 2:50 p.m., Officer James Sullivan was dispatched to a Wollaston area apartment on a "911" call of "domestic violence in progress."

Community Policing Officers Roger White and Sean Glennon were in the area and also responded. Officers Glennon and White located a male at the front entrance and began questioning him while Officer Sullivan entered the apartment to locate the caller/victim.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Sullivan located the victim, a 44 year-old female, who was visibly upset and crying hysterically. He observed that the kitchen chairs were tipped over and clothes were strewn on the floor. There was also a broken white mug shattered on the floor near the kitchen table.

The victim said that her boyfriend of 12 years pushed and slapped her twice in the face/mouth on the right side with an open hand. She also stated that her boyfriend, who was on the porch entrance with the other officers, spit in her face during the assault. She said that she responded by picking up the white mug and throwing it at her boyfriend, striking him in the left calf.

She attempted to flee the apartment but he grabbed her and then slammed her against the dryer and trapping her. The victim yelled at him, "I'm going to call 911." The boyfriend/suspect replied, "Go ahead you fat @$$%, I'm going to kill you or hire someone to do it." He then spit at her as he walked away and started to leave the room.

The victim grabbed her cell phone and called "911" as she screamed at the suspect, "Get out of my house." He replied, "Go ahead - call the police. I am going to tell them you had an affair." (Which didn't make sense since the issue is of domestic violence and there is no provision in the law that justifies someone being assaulted because of an affair. They aren't even married!)

The suspect stayed away from the victim and waited for the Police to arrive. The victim stated that her boyfriend/suspect has been verbally abusive for years but about ten years have passed since he last hit her. She said that he has a serious alcohol and drug addiction to pills (Percodan) and has anger issues. She added that she is not having an affair.

The victim said that she was fearful of him and wanted a restraining order because he would come back and hurt her. She stated that he has been in and out of the home for years and that she finally wanted to follow through with court action. She said that most of the abuse has been verbal over the years but his addictions have gotten worse over the past year. Officer Sullivan advised the officers detaining the boyfriend/suspect to arrest and transport him to the station for booking.

When questioned about recent abuse, the victim revealed that her boyfriend/suspect threatened her a few days ago in their apartment, again about her having an affair. She recounted that he angrily told her, "I'm going to kill you and cut your jugular vein and watch your blood pour out. I will then pour acid on you pretty face."

The victim said that she did not call the police but did tell her mother that evening. With the advice of her mother to call the police in the back of her mind from that incident, she did call on the most recent incident.

Officer Sullivan led the victim through the emergency restraining order process and the on call judge granted the order. Once the order was completed, Officer Sullivan visited the suspect in his cell and issued the restraining order to him.

The suspect, a 50 year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Threats to Commit a Crime (to kill) and Domestic Assault & Battery."

Entries in the Quincy Police Hot Spots are compiled and submitted by the Quincy Police Department.

They are published by The Quincy Sun as a public service to make local residents more aware of any crime activity in their neighborhood. Questions concerning the Hot Spots list should be directed to Crime Prevention Officer Lt. Dan Minton, 617-745-5719.

Quincy Police Using New Drug Tester

TruNarc allows for the accuracy and reliability of a narcotics lab to be available where ever the officer is. The new device not only identifies key drugs but also common cutting agents, precursors and emerging threats such as synthetic cathinones, known as "bath salts."

"This device brings the labs to the streets," said Detective Lieutenant Patrick Glynn. "It takes the guess work away from the officer and has simplified things. It is accurate, quick, and increases officer safety."

Quincy Police Department is one of six places that Thermo Fisher Scientific, the company that made TruNarc, has asked to test the device and help to improve it. Testing was also done at police stations in Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, China, and in Europe. Thermo Fisher Scientific works with pharmaceuticals, the military working with explosives, and now with the war on drugs.

"Drug threats can be different in different places," said Vice President and General manager Chris Petty. "It was important for us to test the device world before we launched the product nationwide today."

TruNarc allows officers to test a product and know within seconds of holding it up to the device. The handheld device shines a red light through the bag that the narcotics are incased in, takes a sample, and then reflects back into the device, which then scans its library of narcotic ingredients. The library database includes more than 60 drugs and over 80 precursors. After around 19 seconds, it is able to say what the drug is, or if it doesn't know it will come back saying inconclusive. Glynn said that even if the test comes back inconclusive it is still a positive.

"When we get a negative reading it is still a positive as far as law enforcement is concerned," said Glynn. "It shows us it is a counterfeit drug, which is still a criminal charge, but a lesser penalty."

The device comes with many advantages to the officers who will be using them. It is easy to use and provides clear, definitive results, which requires no interpretation.

"With the old system you had to have a really good idea of what the drug was. There is no real interpretation needed by officers, with TruNarc," said Glynn. "The product can be identified almost immediately."

Before TruNarc, officers had to guess which drug they believed they were dealing with and then test it with the corresponding capsules, and kits. During the testing officers would go through three to six kits on the scene before identifying the drug. This process would cost time and money ($6-$10 per kit) and also put officers at risk of exposure to the drug.

All data that is captured is stored, and time and date stamped, which will save on paperwork, according to Petty. According to Petty, the device is also always up to date. He said it doesn't require officers to plug it in to get updates on new drugs and software.

"This product is constantly updating because drugs on the street are constantly changing," said Petty. "It has software updates just like your phone would have with apps."

Since Quincy has begun testing TruNarc, Glynn said each test has come back to match the result sheet from the lab. Glynn said the hope is to eliminate having to send samples to the lab and waiting three to six months to hear back. Glynn said by the time the results came back some cases were put on hold or dismissed because they didn't have the evidence to take to trial.

"To this point it has always come back to be 100 percent accurate, matching the lab results," said Glynn. "The next hurdle, now that the product has launched, will be to introduce the results to a court. We are already walking with this evolving technology, when it is used in court we will start to run with it."

Keenan said he hopes that the department can buy at least a couple more.

"I would like to get a few more of them," said Keenan.

"I would like to pay for them by using our Asset Forfeiture Fund. One good size seizure would pay for them. I think that would be a great use for those funds."

A Valentine Tip From Social Security

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Valentine's Day is just around the corner, making this a popular time of year for proclamations of love. Such displays of affection can be as simple and sweet as a heart with a "be mine" message, or as life altering as a vow before the altar.

If you happen to be a newlywed who is head over heels in love, you may not be focused on things such as taxes or Social Security, but you should be. If you plan to exchange your maiden name for a married name — including hyphenated names such as Smith-Jones — be sure you let us know.

Telling us about your name change shortly after your marriage will help us accurately keep track of your earnings and will ensure that you and your family get the Social Security retirement, disability, and survivors coverage you're entitled to. Also, if the Internal Revenue Service and Social Security records do not show the same name and Social Security number, your Federal income tax refund could be delayed.

If you continue to use your maiden name consistently throughout your working years, you do not need to contact us. However, if you decide to change your name at a later time, you should let us know so that we can update your Social Security record and send you a Social Security card with your new name.

There's no need to pay someone else to mail in the information for you. Changing your name with Social Security is a quick, easy, and free service. Just go online to www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber, learn what documents you need, and click on "Fill Out and Print an application (Form SS-5)." You also can call us at 1-800-772-1213 to obtain the form. We will need the completed application along with a marriage certificate or divorce decree verifying your old and new names. If you were born outside the United States, you also need proof of your U.S. citizenship or proof that you are lawfully living in the U.S. You can bring or mail these documents to us.

You may be focused on the one you love, and we don't blame you. But if you like us (we hope you do) please click on the Facebook icon at our homepage and "like" us on Facebook. Also, you can follow us on Twitter too. Look for our Facebook and Twitter icons at www.socialsecurity.gov. We share information daily that can help you and all your Valentines.

Happy Valentine's Day from Social Security.

Keenan said. "Doctors are not responsible for this drug epidemic. But they do play a very important role in helping us fight it."

In a landmark change, the bill also recognizes the dangers and abuse potential of painkillers that contain hydrocodone, such as Vicodin, by rescheduling it alongside other narcotics such as OxyContin, Dilaudid and Percocet.

The bill would also:

- Require pharmacies and drug to alert local police when reporting missing controlled substances to the Drug Enforcement Administration.

- Require doctors and hospitals to notify a parent or guardian of any minor treated for drug overdose.

- Mandate the use of secure prescription pads that feature special watermarks, serial numbers, micro-printing, or other security features

- Ban the possession, distribution and manufacturing of synthetic over-the-counter recreational drugs known as "bath salts"

- Prohibit pharmacists from filling prescriptions for narcotics from doctors in non-contiguous states

- Toughen MassHealth's prescription drug fraud program;

- Provide limited immunity from drug possession charges for those who seek medical assistance for an overdose, excluding crimes involving drug trafficking cases;

- Allow sheriffs to enter into a study on the effectiveness of medication-assisted treatment for the successful transition of inmates back into society;

- Commission a study on substance abuse among seniors; and

- Mandate professional training for court personnel and legal counsel on substance abuse services available for those facing criminal charges.

The bill now goes to the House of Representatives for further action.

Happy Valentine's Day To Me

Whether happily anticipating, secretly dreading, generally indifferent or completely opposed to Valentine's Day, its annual celebration inevitably prompts personal reflections of love and happiness.

That is why author Cat Larose suggests Valentine's Day may be the perfect time to give yourself a little love.

In her memoir Any Color but Beige: Living Life in Color, Cat dives into the international dating pool searching for the new love of her life. But she quickly learns loving herself first is the key to developing meaningful romantic relationships. For Cat, being happy started when she committed to infusing her life with bold and beautiful colors — a loving gift she suggests all women give themselves this Valentine's Day.

"Year after year, women approach Valentine's Day with so many hopes and expectations from others. Instead, start the day with a deliberate show of self-affection. Give yourself a colorful gift to renew your confidence and confirm your values," suggests Cat.

"After all, you cannot truly love anyone else until you love yourself."

Cat offers a few simple suggestions.

"Send yourself a dozen red roses, indulge in a blushing bottle of pink champagne, find inspiration in a romance or love story like Any Color but Beige or perform a random act of love purely to see someone smile—it's the colorful thing to do. Appreciate yourself first and you will find you can appreciate love more."

It may seem simple, but Cat's philosophy — living life in color — has guided her international search for Mr. Right. Living life in color has anchored her ability to love herself and be truly happy — whether she is in a relationship or not.

Catherine "Cat" Larose is an international color-marketing expert who travels the world selling color. She is the author of Any Color but Beige: Living Life in Color, voice behind the successful Café Girl Chronicles blog (<http://cafe-girlchronicles.wordpress.com/>) and currently writing her second book.

NQHS's Tessie McGough's Mission: Make CPR Graduation Requirement

By EMILY TAFT

Two years ago, North Quincy High School student Tessie McGough was walking home from school when a stranger collapsed in front of her. At the time, she didn't know how to save his life other than calling 911.

"I don't know if that man lived, but I would like to say to him I am sorry I didn't know how to help," said McGough. "I also want to tell him thank you for giving me the drive. I have a different perspective now because of him."

Since that day, McGough has made it her mission to educate residents and her classmates in CPR (Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation). She began by taking a class and becoming certified as a trainer through Carney Hospital. She then ran for class president in order to achieve her goal of getting her classmates certified.

"Tessie exemplifies what student leadership is all about," said North Quincy High School Principle Earl Metzler. "I couldn't be any more proud of Tess. She achieved her goal even when there were obstacles in her way. She never let them stop her. I asked her what kind of legacy she wanted her class to leave behind and this is something completely different from the previous classes."

McGough achieved her goal last Friday — two years after it all began. McGough, along with instructors from Carney Hospital in Dorchester, volunteered their morning and afternoon to train the 250 students from North Quincy's senior class. Armed with dummies, both adult and babies, they split the seniors up into groups, training them on the heart saver course which taught students how to perform CPR and the Heimlich maneuver, along with how to use a defibrillator.

"I feel it is my responsibility to the community to equip others with the knowledge that I lacked during that day," said McGough. "There should be more people trained to do CPR. It is such a valuable skill that should be taught."

It wasn't easy for McGough to reach her goal, but she never gave up, and said she received the support of many members of the community. She went to every resource available including her principal Earl Metzler, the school committee, and other members of the community in hopes to find a way, but the one problem she seemed to always face was money.

"She learned not to take no for an answer on this project," said mom Merry Smith. "She made all the network connections she could, and she stuck to it."

During her junior year, McGough was able to raise enough money to certify 100 of her classmates, but that wasn't enough, so she kept on pushing for new ways to get her whole class certified. Finally, through the help of instructors at Carney Hospital, McGough was able to train the remaining senior class.

"It came down to a matter of supplies," said McGough. "We were lucky to have the volunteers from Carney do this for us for free. They volunteered all their time to be here."

For many in the senior class, the day was a success and worth the time to learn the proper steps to potentially saving a life.

"It is a good feeling knowing what you're doing could save someone's life," said senior Maria Bixho. "Everyone can make a phone call but knowing this saves lives."

For senior Nolan O'Brien, who is already trained and certified through the Red Cross, it was about supporting his friend and seeing how other programs teach CPR training.

"Tessie has put so much effort into this for the past two years, it was a great program, very concise and straight to the point," said O'Brien. "She was elected the senior president because of her story, and it is inspiring that she has done all this virtually on her own."

Now that the training is finished, McGough said her next goal is to make the training a graduation requirement, even if she has to continue advocating for it after she has graduated.

"It is a very simple, life changing thing to learn. If you can trust your life in the hands of the students of this community its huge," said McGough. "I want to make it a graduation requirement and have it be taught in gym. It is worth whatever it takes to make it happen. This is really important for Quincy, it will make the community a much safer place."

According to Metzler the junior class is already on board with the program and the hope is to have them certified before they graduate.

TESSIE MCGOUGH, a senior at North Quincy High School, along with volunteers from Carney Hospital in Dorchester, trained 250 fellow seniors in CPR, the Heimlich maneuver, and how to use a defibrillator.

HAMMER

Seeding the Future

Q: Why do seed companies — those selling small amounts of seeds to backyard gardeners like me — send their catalogs so early? I started receiving them at the end of December. — Darla J., Cleveland

A: Catalogs are sent early to give you plenty of time to plan this year's garden and order your seeds, of course. While we tend to be preoccupied in January and February with shoveling snow and staying warm, February is prime time for ordering seeds. Most companies make their shipments this month.

It's also just a nice, quiet time of year for most homeowners, right after the holidays and before spring lawn care and exterior house repairs gear up. So this is a great time to sit down with your catalogs or browse the Web looking for ideas on things to grow and ways to configure your garden.

One of my favorite Web sites is A Way to Garden (<http://awaytogarden.com>), which features plenty of advice for gardeners of all levels, as well as video and pictorial instructions, podcasts and other fun. It's a good place to start if you're new to researching gardening and seeds on the Web.

If you want to do something more than sowing herbs or struggling with tomatoes (not saying other people struggle to get big red tomatoes, but I sure do), look into planting vegetables or flowers native to your area. For example, residents of coastal Virginia or Maryland might want to look at Annapolis Seeds (<http://www.annapolisseed.com/>), which produces seeds native to the Maritimes.

A number of online garden planners also are out there. These can help you lay out and plan your outdoor garden, offer hints and ideas, and generally make this stage of gardening more fun, or as fun as it can be when you're anxious to get outside and start turning over dirt.

HOME TIP: Have an old, leaky garden hose you don't know what to do with? Use a section of hose as a blade guard for a hand saw.

Send your questions, tips or comments to ask@thisisahammer.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. When in doubt as to whether you can safely or effectively complete a project, consult a professional contractor.

While we cannot directly control the air we breathe outdoors or in the workplace, we can certainly take steps to improve indoor air quality in our homes.

The Healthy House Institute recommends considering investing in a portable air purifier to reduce contaminants in the home.

However, it is imperative the correct air purifier is purchased and used effectively to achieve maximum results. The Healthy House Institute provides the following tips:

1. Determine which type of air purifier you need. There are two basic types of air purifiers on the market. Units that remove particles such as dust, pollen, mold and pet dander, and units that remove gases such as paint fumes and formaldehyde from glue in wood furniture. Some units can remove both particles and gases.

Air-cleaning devices designed to capture tiny particles from the air typically use high-efficiency particulate air (HEPA) technology. HEPA filters remove 99.97% of all particles 0.3 microns in size. For reference, a single hair is typically 70 microns wide.

Air purifiers designed to remove gases and odors typically use activated charcoal or other material that binds to the pollutants. If you want to remove particles and gases, look for a purifier with both HEPA and activated carbon.

2. Evaluate the efficiency and certifications. A critical factor when selecting an air purifier is the device's Clean Air Delivery Rate (CADR), established by the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers.

This numerical rating measures how quickly a portable air purifier can remove pollen, dust and tobacco smoke from a certain square-foot dimension. Specifically, it measures how much air is moving through the filter, and the volume of filtered air delivered by an air purifier. The higher the number, the better—maximum CADR values are 450 for pollen and smoke and 400 for dust. For a list of certified air purifiers with their CADR values, visit www.cadr.org.

3. Ensure you place the air purifier in the best location to achieve maximum results. It sounds obvious, but the key to achieving the cleanest air possible is to ensure the polluted air actually passes through the filter. Many contaminants will never reach a small device that is located in the corner of your bedroom.

4. Run the air purifier as often as possible. If money or other factors like cost of electricity, cost of filters and ambient noise are not issues, run the air filter all the time or as often as possible. Indoor air is constantly being polluted and needs constant cleaning.

5. Change the filter as recommended by the manufacturer. Manufacturers provide a schedule of recommended times to change the filter. Be sure to follow these recommendations to keep your unit running in peak condition.

Quincy College Exercise Science Student Monica Davis Discovers Her Dream Career

Monica's interest in fitness began when she first joined the South Shore YMCA in 2005 after having her second child and also being laid off from her job as an Advertising Coordinator at Filene's. Monica and her husband James wanted to have a place that the entire family could enjoy and they chose the YMCA. They were able to drop off their two children with the gym's child care center while they worked out.

Monica started dabbling with the weight training machines and after one month of working out, she shed ten pounds. She also became interested in running and started out with walking and running intervals outside at Castle Island and soon enough, she was entering her first Sprint triathlon and most recently, Monica completed a half-marathon.

Shortly after becoming a member at the YMCA, Monica applied for a position in their child care section and, soon enough, her weight loss story caught on with her fellow employees including Wayne Westcott, Quincy College exercise science instructor, who, at the time worked at the YMCA. As Monica's interest in fitness grew, she received her certification to teach group exercise classes and was interested in getting her American Council on Exercise (ACE) certification. Dr. Westcott encouraged Monica to enroll in the Quincy College Exercise Science/Personal Training Certificate Program so she applied for the Health Works Alliance scholarship and received a full scholarship that covered the tuition for the certificate program.

"Monica's amazing physical transformation is actually equaled by her excellent academic achievements at Quincy College and her superb fitness leadership at the YMCA," Westcott said.

"She is an outstanding role model in every aspect of her life, and we are privileged to work with Monica in our Exercise Science Program," he added.

Fitness has now become a family affair in Monica's house. Her husband James has joined her in many running races and has also done some races on his own and her children stay active, as well.

Julia, Monica's six-year-old daughter, is in a running club at school and Jim, Monica's fourteen-year-old son, plays baseball. "My family is what inspires me to stay motivated and I want to stay healthy for them," said Monica.

It has been eight years since Monica first began a fitness routine and she has lost a total of 110 pounds. Monica is now an instructor of spin, definitions, boot camp and a beginner's triathlon training at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy.

Additionally, she has completed her ACE certification and is a personal trainer both at the YMCA and also privately, when her schedule permits. She has received a Certificate in Exercise Science/Personal Training from Quincy College and is working toward completing her Associate of Science Degree in Exercise Science/Personal Training from the College.

"My experience at Quincy College has been wonderful. The knowledge I have gained from each one of my professors has provided me with amazing tools for my career," said Monica.

When asked about working with clients and helping them transform their bodies just like she did herself, Monica says: "To be able to work with clients and see them accomplish their goals and be so happy is so humbling for me," said Monica. "The people that walk through the doors of the gym every day are trying to live a healthier lifestyle and that is so inspirational," she adds.

The Exercise Science/Personal Training and Customized Wellness programs are held at Quincy College's President's Place campus at 1250 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Tips To Keep Sun Safe On Winter Vacation

Sunscreen Still 'Applies' In Winter Months

Sunscreen shouldn't be packed away just because it's winter.

Skin can be exposed to harmful rays all year long. So before you hit the slopes, build a snowman, or head off to a tropical beach, experts at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute remind people to protect themselves.

According to the American Cancer Society, snow, ice and water can all reflect the ultraviolet radiation (UVR) that causes sunburn. Sunburn in turn increases the risk of developing skin cancer. Some experts say winter sports enthusiasts can face just as much risk of getting sunburn as summer sunbathers.

The same goes if a little 'R and R' means heading south. It's important to lather on plenty of sunscreen before hitting the beach — even if it's only for a few days. After being bundled up, bathing suit tan lines can quickly become burn lines — which can increase the risk of skin cancer.

"It is important that people protect themselves from the sun and make themselves aware of the signs and symptoms of skin cancer and melanoma to greatly reduce their risk of developing these preventable but dangerous diseases," explains Stephen Hodi, MD, clinical director of the Melanoma Program at Dana-Farber.

Other tips for protection:

- Wear sunscreen with an SPF of 15 or higher. Apply it often and don't forget your neck, ears, and hands.
- Apply Lip Balm with sunscreen and use makeup with an SPF of 15 or higher.
- Use eye protection especially for skiing. Look for wrap-around sun glasses and ski goggles with UV protection.
- If heading somewhere tropical — where a broad brimmed hat and sunglasses.
- Avoid excessive exposure to the sun, especially during peak hours between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. when the sun is at its strongest.

New Law Enhances Practice Of Nurse-Midwives

Governor Deval Patrick has signed legislation that authorizes nurse-midwives to issue written prescriptions and order and interpret tests and therapeutics, expanding access to nurse-midwifery care for more women in the Commonwealth.

"I am proud to sign this bill that recognizes the growing trend of nurse-midwifery in Massachusetts by giving women more flexibility in choosing their health care, while maintaining the safest practices," said Governor Patrick.

The Department of Public Health (DPH) will be charged with registering nurse-midwives to issue prescriptions. DPH will work jointly with the Board of Registration in Nursing and the Board of Registration in Medicine to authorize controlled substances for which nurse-midwives may be certified.

The legislation will eliminate the requirement of nurse-midwives to practice as part of a team that includes a licensing physician with admitting privileges. Instead, nurse-midwives will be required to practice within a health care system and have clinical relationships with obstetrician-gynecologists that will provide consultation and referral.

"The safe and cost-effective care nurse-midwives provide is well-known in our largest cities, but is not available to all women in Massachusetts," said Kathryn Kravetz Carr, a certified nurse-midwife and member of the American College of Nurse-Midwives. "This law removes an important barrier to all women having access to nurse-midwifery care. The Massachusetts Affiliate of the American College of Nurse-Midwives applauds Governor Patrick and the Massachusetts legislature for their support of better health care for Massachusetts women and their babies."

Finally, the legislation authorizes nurse-midwives to order and interpret tests and therapeutics in accordance with applicable regulations and requires that nurse-midwifery care be consistent with the standards of care established by the American College of Nurse-Midwives.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

IN A PINCH

When numbness and tingling are experienced anywhere in the body, it may be due to impingement ("pinching") of a nerve as it exits the spine between two bones, a bony overgrowth, or a bulging disc. By pinpointing the area where numbness and tingling occur, the chiropractor can trace where the pinching is taking place in the spine. For instance, symptoms in the arms, shoulders, or hands are indicative of nerve irritation in the neck, and numbness/tingling down the legs and into the feet are symptoms of pinched nerves in the low back. Treatment consists of carefully exerting pressure to restore joints to their normal position and motion. In some cases, these adjustments result in immediate relief.

Are you suffering with symptoms of a pinched nerve? At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are qualified — with specialized equipment coupled with training, education, and experience — to determine your condition, and what to do about it. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. When nerves become stuck to surrounding soft tissues (such as fascia, muscles, and ligaments), usually as a result of repetitive-motion injury, the nerve is commonly referred to as being "trapped."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

REVERSING ANESTHETIC NUMBNESS

While patients are usually grateful that local anesthesia blocks the pain that they might otherwise feel as a result of removing tooth decay with a dental drill, many dislike the discomfort associated with lingering numbness after they leave the office. Fortunately, there is something that can be done about this inconvenience. OraVerse® is an injectable drug (phentolamine mesylate) that reverses the effects of local anesthetic and allows patients to experience normal sensation in their lips and tongues about twice as fast as they normally would. As a result, patients can smile, speak and drink sooner. OraVerse® is not recommended for use in children under 6 years of age or weighing less than 33 pounds.

Today's column about OraVerse® has been brought to you as public service. The key to dental health is routine preventive care. Trust is the cornerstone of a good and safe dental practice. If you have concerns or questions about any subject relating to the well-being of your teeth and gums, call us at 617-479-6220. Please don't let unwarranted fears keep you from maintaining your dental health. Your chances of needing extensive treatment in the future because of neglect today are a far greater concern. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a full trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The administration of OraVerse® does not hurt since it is injected into a part of the mouth that is already numb from anesthetic.

The Q/NQ boys squad (2-10, 0-7) was eighth overall with 42 points led by sophomore captain Elio Daci's all-star performance.

"I am proud of the season (put in) by both the girls and boys' teams," said Q/NQ head coach Bob McGillicuddy. "I would also like to thank the rest of the Patriot League coaches for their support in helping us host the league championships. I am proud of my team's effort."

In a hard-fought battle, the Q/NQ boys (2-10, 0-8) slipped 83-69 to the hosts.

All three Q/NQ 100-yard breaststroke competitors clocked a new low time led by sophomore Marlena Forrester (Quincy) who swam 1:27.41. Then Randolph rattled off three consecutive one-two finishes until Q/NQ garnered first and second in the 500-yard freestyle event thanks to Daci and freshman Mike Mullaney (NQ), who swam 6:07.80 and 7:13.45, respectively.

Senior Olivia Goldson (Quincy) took top honors in the very next event, the 100-yard freestyle, swimming 59.57. Senior captain Taryn Urbanus (Quincy) earned 297.75 points for first place in the one-meter dive.

Two swimmers notched season-low times for the boys' team. Freshman Mike Mullaney's (NQ) 28.85 effort in the 50-yard freestyle earned him second. Senior Sean Lerkvikam (NQ) cruised to a 100-yard breaststroke win with his quick clip of 1:18.19.

MEMBERS OF THE GIRLS' TEAM dive into the pool at the start of a race on Saturday at the Patriot League Championships.

Raiders (7-5-3 overall): Three Points From The Division 2 South State Tournament

North Quincy In Hunt For Playoffs, League Title

By SEAN BRENNAN

Needing just three points to qualify for the Division 2 South Sectional tournament, the mission for the North Quincy Red Raiders over their final five regular season games is as follows: Any combination of two wins or, a win and a tie gets them back into the tournament for a second straight season.

That much is clear.

North Quincy is currently sitting at 7-5-3 overall (17 points) following recent victories over Silver Lake (9-5 on Feb. 1) and Hanover (7-5 on Feb. 4). The playoffs are a virtual lock.

What isn't as clear yet is how the final standings and, ultimately who wins the Patriot League regular season championship, will shake out.

Last season, North Quincy finished in a three-way tie with Scituate and Pembroke for the league title. As of Monday, the Red Raiders still had a legitimate shot at winning another championship. If the Red Raiders can go undefeated versus league foes Scituate (Wednesday), Pembroke (Feb. 11), Quincy (Feb. 18) and Whitman-Hanson (Feb. 22), they will reclaim at least a share the title.

However, Pembroke has already beaten North Quincy (5-1 on Jan. 11) as have the Presidents, (2-1 back on Dec. 26), so it will be a difficult road to tread.

"We have 17 points and need just three points with five games left to qualify (for the state tournament)," said NQ head coach Matt Gibbons on Monday. "If we can't clinch a spot with five games left and needing only three points than we don't deserve to be in the tournament."

"The good thing is we are hitting our stride," continued Gibbons, "and we have recently been playing well. Following a 5-1 loss to Pembroke back on January 11, we have gone 4-1-1. The season is full of peaks and valleys; it is up-and-down. But we seem to be getting away from (the valleys) and we keep grinding it out. This team does a good job of just focusing on the next game."

Finding The Groove

The Pembroke loss put North Quincy in a mid-season hole at 3-4-2. But just when it looked like a season that began with much promise would be washed down the drain, the Red Raiders began to find traction.

A 2-2 tie with nonleague Shawsheen Tech followed a hard-fought 3-0 win over Scituate on Jan. 14. Duxbury slowed North Quincy's momentum with a 3-1 win on Jan. 25, but the Red Raiders responded by scoring 21 goals in three straight victories over Quincy (5-1), Silver Lake (9-5), and Hanover (7-5).

At the moment North Quincy is buzzing around the offensive zone but are somewhat lacking in their own end, which is a concern for Gibbons as the playoffs approach.

"Our first line of Shawn Grady (team-high 12 goals), Pat Verhault (two goals versus Hanover) and Nick McGaughey (three goals, 11 assists) has been playing really well these last few games," said Gibbons before adding, "but we have also given up (10 goals) a lot in our end."

"We are a much better defensive team than that," Gibbons said. "We need to shore that up and our senior leaders Tim Marks, Nick Furey (both defensemen) and James Dunn (goalie) are going to have to be our best players on the ice during these final five games."

Offensive Explosion:

Can It Be Maintained?

North Quincy received a late-season infusion of offense when junior forward Pat Verhault returned to the ice after a season long layoff late last month.

Verhault slid right onto the first line with Grady and McGaughey and made an immediate impact against Hanover. His two goal, two-assist performance was much needed and, Grady and McGaughey benefited from his fresh legs as both had multiple point games as well. Grady finished with three goals and two assists while McGaughey chipped in a goal and three assists as the Red Raiders used a four-goal second period to pull away from the Indians.

Grady is feeling it right now. The senior transfer has seven goals in the last three games. He scored two against rival Quincy; two against Silver Lake, including a short-handed tally, and buried the hat trick versus Hanover.

"Shawn is finally healthy and has been playing really well," said Gibbons. "He quarterbacks our power play and his line is producing. We are going to need that to continue as we move forward."

Two sophomores: Andrew Currie and James Doherty have supplied offensive support as well, giving North Quincy firepower down the lineup. Currie has six goals and seven assists while Doherty has seven goals.

On the season, the Red Raiders have scored 49 goals and allowed 38 against.

Three Points Away, Road Ahead

Wednesday's home game versus Scituate will be a test. The Sailors currently sit in second place in the league at 7-3-2. North Quincy blanked them on the road, but Scituate is a team that has plenty of skill.

If they can get by Scituate, Friday's game at Pembroke could be the deciding factor in which team wins the league title. The Titans (8-1-1 in Patriot League) have scored 77 goals while allowing a measly 28 against. Suffice to say, these two games are huge.

"Scituate and Pembroke are very skillful teams," noted Gibbons. "We are not the most skilled team but we do work hard and we like to grind games out. We always focus on the next game, so that is what we will do this week."

The nonleague tilt with Canton - a Div. 2 powerhouse out of the competitive Hockomock League - will be no cakewalk either. The Bulldogs are currently 12-1-1 overall and have outscored opponents 80-19 this winter.

The season ends with games against Quincy and Whitman-Hanson. The Red Raiders are 1-1 versus the Presidents and defeated the Panthers 5-1 back in the season-opener.

Patriot League Standings (Feb. 7)

Pembroke, 8-1-1; Duxbury, 6-1-4; Scituate, 7-3-2; North Quincy, 6-2-2; Hanover, 4-5-2; Whitman-Hanson, 4-7-0; Silver Lake, 3-8-1; Quincy, 0-11-0.

NQHS Grad Collected 1,000th Career Rebound Catherine O'Connell Named NECC Player of the Week

North Quincy's own Catherine O'Connell just continues to rack up the accolades for her performance on the basketball court for Newbury College.

The junior center, for the third time this season, earned New England Collegiate Conference (NECC) Player of the Week honors. O'Connell averaged 15.5 points per game and 19.0 rebounds per game to help the Nighthawks to a 2-0 week, which included their first victory over Elms College on Saturday.

CATHERINE O'CONNELL

O'Connell started off the week by picking up her 1,000th rebound of her collegiate career less than a minute into the second half in a 79-59 rout over conference foe Mitchell College. Against the Mariners, O'Connell registered her 13th double-double of the season, netting 13 points while pulling down 18 rebounds.

O'Connell capped off her impressive week, shooting a strong 53% from the field in Newbury's 77-63 upset victory over Elms College, finishing with a game-high 18 points and 20 rebounds while keeping the NECC's leading scorer, Denisha Parks, in check for the majority of the contest.

Four Games Left In Regular Season, Already Qualified For Div. 1 South Tournament

Lady Presidents Are On An Upward Track

By SEAN BRENNAN

Good basketball teams always find a way to rebound from tough patches. Maybe it comes from playing aggressive defense and, sometimes it comes from an overall improvement on the offensive end.

And sometimes it is both.

The Quincy High girls' basketball team knows this full well. Following back-to-back losses to Scituate and Whitman-Hanson in mid-January, the Presidents refocused their attention on playing better defense, which in turn resulted in a more equally distributed offensive flow and, the results have been perfect.

Quincy is currently on a winning roll. The Presidents have won seven straight games to push their overall record to 13-3 (8-2 in the Patriot League). Taking a look at some final scores reveals just how good Quincy's all-around game has been.

The Presidents shutdown Hingham 61-36 back on Jan. 20 as senior Nicole Lamie set a school record with six 3-pointers (26 points) and seniors Kiley McDonald and Juli Tomer chipped in with 14 and nine, respectively. But it was the lockdown defense by senior Caity Lowry that set the tone.

"Our defense is starting to click in and that is reflected in the scores," said head coach Jeff Bretsch on Tuesday. "The leadership and intensity that Lowry is providing has been a strength and the other girls are feeding off that. They are all buying into the team defense. Caity has been taking it to the next level and has been terrorizing teams' best players night after night. She is as good a stopper as there is in the area."

Quincy's defensive mojo continued on Jan. 27 versus Silver Lake as Lowry held the Lakers' Courtney Yost to ten points. Behind Lowry's defense and the scoring of McDonald (14 points), the Presidents roared out to a 35-8 halftime advantage before taking their foot of the gas to win 49-30.

In their next game at Middleboro on Jan. 31, Tomer scored 14 first quarter points as the Presidents stormed out to a 20-3 lead and never looked back, winning 58-29. The good times continued versus nonleague Wareham on Feb. 1. After trailing by two points at halftime, Quincy grinded out a 44-38 decision. Again, Tomer (10 points) and McDonald (10) supplied the offense.

Hanover became the next victim of Quincy's relentless team defense and offense. The Presidents jumped out 15-1 after a quarter and cruised to a 44-21 win. McDonald (19 points) and Lamie (13) shined.

"This has been an exciting year," said Bretsch. "It takes some time for individuals to figure out what they need to be doing on both ends of the court but we are improving. Our defense has been solid and now the girls are playing more under control and looking for their shots on offense. The goal is to be a sharp as possible for the tournament."

Wide Open Field

When the Division 1 South state tournament tips off later this month, the Presidents are all but certain to host at least one home game. Best-case scenario has Quincy entering the one-and-down format with a 18-3 record. However, a difficult game versus league-leading and undefeated Scituate loomed on Tuesday.

The Sailors dismantled Quincy 61-26 back on Jan. 6. A strong showing on Tuesday — win or lose — will go a long way in the confidence department for the Presidents. In the final four regular season games against Pembroke (Feb. 10), Middleboro (Feb. 14), North Quincy (Feb. 16) and Hull (Feb. 20) Quincy will be favored, so according to Bretsch the goal is to play well versus Scituate and then let the rest of the season play itself out.

"I want to see us play better and more confident against Scituate," Bretsch said. The Sailors have all but locked up the league title for second straight season. "These are the types of teams that we will have to beat in the tournament. We are going to need to take our time (on offense) and take good shots. We will be playing for pride."

Last year, the Presidents were upset by Taunton in the first round in what was a stacked field. But this winter, Bretsch sees parity in Division 1 South.

"It looks like the bracket is going to be wide-open. There are some good teams but there really isn't a team that stands out (as the favorite)."

Starters, Reserves Stepping Up

Starters Kiley McDonald, Nicole Lamie, Caity Lowry, and Juli Tomer have continued to impress. McDonald's overall game has improved; Lowry's defense has been vital; Lamie's outside shooting touch has been steady, and Tomer has rediscovered her dribble drive ability.

In short, Quincy's top players are on an upward track.

"Kiley has really improved her game of late and she is a great rebounder," Bretsch noted. "Nicole has been making her shots. Caity's defense has been so focused and we have seen Juli's all-around game get better."

With the starters locked in, key reserves like senior Maria Berberan and sophomore Kayla McArdle have added an extra dimension to the rotation.

"Maria's scoring off the bench has been a bonus and she is becoming more confident defensively," said Bretsch added, "and Kayla has seen more playing time and is so valuable defensively. She is the heir apparent to Lowry."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Lots of mixed signals can create an unreliable situation in which to make decisions. Best advice: Hold off on making any commitments until you're sure you know what's going on.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
An apparently friendly offer comes with some strings attached. Be careful not to get tied into something you don't really want. Thoroughly examine all your options before making a choice.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
If you're not careful, distractions can interrupt your best efforts. Continue to focus on what you need to do. You'll soon have lots of time to enjoy the rewards of your dedication.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Knowledge replaces suspicion as you begin to learn more about that "act of betrayal." On a lighter note, someone close to you might be planning a pleasant surprise.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Control your sometimes-overactive jealousy gene before you find yourself saying or doing something that you could later regret. Best advice: Stop obsessing and move on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
It's a good time to loosen up and do something wonderful and exciting before your more reserved nature resurfaces. A message brings news of imminent change.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
Cheer up. Things begin to improve significantly by mid-February. However, you might still need help to get through the rest of this sometimes-difficult period.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
Something you learned last week takes on new meaning as you begin to relate it to another situation in your life. It's best to keep this matter to yourself for now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Your energy level is climbing, and so is your self-confidence. Good for you, because you'll need a good dollop of both to tackle an exciting challenge on the way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
A family issue might interrupt a career-linked project. Try to give the matter the attention it needs, but be careful not to jeopardize your workplace situation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
Some self-doubt shows up this week, causing you to question your ability to handle a new challenge. But you know you can do it, and this is your chance to prove it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
A personal matter requires you to be as clear and forthcoming as possible in order to avoid misunderstandings. A career move is eased with the emergence of new facts.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of reaching people that makes them feel good about themselves. You would be an excellent motivational speaker.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You don't like rejection. But instead of trying to "ram" your ideas through to an unresponsive audience, stand back and wait for a more favorable environment later this month.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Job commitments call for the tidy Taurean to charge into those problem-plagued projects and get them into shape. Then go ahead and enjoy the fun and friendships of your expanding social life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The pressures of the workplace are beginning to ease. While you still need to stay connected to your ongoing commitments, you'll be able to take more time to relax with family and friends.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel that you need to prove how much you can do. But be careful not to take on more than you can handle, or you risk being bogged down. An Aries has a message for you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Financially it could be a little tight for a while. So resist the urge to splurge on things you don't really need. There will be time enough to indulge yourself when the money squeeze eases later this month.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You demand trust from others. But someone is creating a situation that could put your own trustworthiness in question. Be sure to keep all lines of communication open.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A problem delays the recognition that you hoped to receive for your hard work. But all will soon be resolved. Remember to make patience your watchword this week.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Those wonderful ideas could expand your workplace prospects and ultimately lead you on a new career path. Your personal life also opens up new vistas.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) So much seems to be swirling around you these days that you might find it hard to focus on priorities. Best advice: Take things one at a time, and you'll get through them all.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Work out situations with what you have, and avoid the temptation to create complications where they don't exist. This applies both at home and in the workplace.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Keep your keen senses open to possible changes in personal and/or professional situations. Knowing what might lie ahead gives you an edge on how to handle it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Personal pressures at work could create a problem with your performance. Best advice: Focus on the job ahead of you. If necessary, you can deal with the other issue later.

BORN THIS WEEK: Like your fellow Aquarian Abraham Lincoln, you have a way of handling the most difficult situations with grace and conviction.

Competes For $20,000 Prize On TV Game Show Feb. 22

Jacobs Family Appearing On 'Family Feud'

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy resident Paula Jacobs and her family will be competing for a $20,000 prize on the game show "Family Feud" later this month.

The show was taped in August at the Atlanta Civic Center. While Paula can't say how her family fared, she said they had a fun time in Atlanta. "It was a blast," she said. "I never had so much fun in my life."

Paula's stepson Dan Jacobs was one of her teammates on the show. He said he grew up watching the show, and he too was elated to be on the Feud.

"It was great," Dan said. "A chance of a lifetime to be on the show – the best moment of my life."

Their road to the show began nine months ago. Paula and Dan, along with her husband Walter, her daughter Colleen Stone, her stepson-in-law Christopher Hall, and Dan's twin brother David auditioned for the show at Jordan's Furniture in Saugus. During the audition they played a few rounds of the game against another family.

"We went up, passed the first test, before we knew it we talked to the executive producers," Paula said of the audition process. "They said we'd hear in two weeks if we made it or not."

Sure enough, they did make it to the show. But Paula's husband Walter didn't make the cut – families can take six members to the audition and producers decide which person doesn't make it to the show's taping.

Paula said being in Atlanta without her husband helped her bond with the other members of her family. "We went down without our spouses," she said. "It was a nice way for us to connect."

They arrived in Atlanta the day before the show was taped and took time to explore the area. "We rented a car and went to see the sites," Paula said. Those sites included the Coca Cola factory, CNN's headquarters, an Atlanta Braves game, the Martin Luther King Jr. Historic Site, and Stone Mountain.

The next day they arrived at the Civic Center in the morning. But before actually playing the game, the family auditioned once again. "We went through another try-out in the morning before taping actually started," she said. "This helped the producer decide when we were going to play."

Her family passed that audition, and their episode taped in the afternoon. They were able to watch other families play the game while they waited their turn.

"All of the families were part of the audience," Jacobs said. "We didn't get to play until right after lunch, so we were able to watch the show being taped with other families. It was such a great experience to get to watch a TV show being taped before a live audience, then actually getting to play the Feud."

Paula said she wasn't nervous during the show's taping. "I was more nervous for the morning audition because a couple families went home," she said. "Once the show started taping the nerves went away – they just want you to relax."

Paula and Dan were both thoroughly impressed with comedian Steve Harvey, the show's host.

"Harvey is just hysterical, it was like going to a comedy show," Paula said of him. "He will take anything and make something out of it."

"Steve Harvey is very funny," Dan said. "The show is only about 22 minutes long without commercials, but the taping took an hour and ten minutes because he puts on a comedy show during breaks."

The funniest moment Paula remembers came during the question, "if you went to the medical doctor, what would you not want used for a second time." Dan answered "a Johnny," but Harvey didn't know that 'Johnny' was a nickname for a hospital gown.

"It was weird because no one outside New England knows what a Johnny is," Dan said. "So they had to stop the show so the judges could look it up."

When Harvey found out what it meant, he quipped to Dan "why can't you just call it a gown," according to Paula.

The episode featuring the Jacobs family will air on Wednesday, Feb. 22 at 3:30 p.m. on WHDH Channel 7. Because it airs on a Wednesday afternoon, they won't be able to watch it at that time. Paula plans to record the show and watch it with family and friends the following Sunday.

Moon Island Wind Turbine Hearing Reset For March 7

By KRISTINA KALABOKAS

The Quincy Planning Board will reconvene its public hearing on the proposed construction of a nearly 400-foot tall wind turbine to be located on Moon Island on Wednesday, March 7 at 7 p.m. at North Quincy High School.

Officials decided to reconvene the hearing because of space restrictions at the Feb. 8 public hearing.

Over 60 Squantum residents squeezed into council chambers on Feb. 8 to view presentations given by both Boston and Quincy city officials meant to ease concerns over possible environmental, noise and traffic impacts brought up in prior meetings.

The proposed project site, which is located on land within Quincy city limits yet owned by the City of Boston, has been deemed an ideal location due to being, "a prime candidate for wind"

After a year of planning and an unexpected delay, work to install four new clocks on the United First Parish Church appears to be winding down and could be revealed as early as next week.

"The last piece of the puzzle will be finished hopefully by Monday, when the clock hands are installed," said James Edwards, a principal of Holmes & Edwards, Inc., the architectural firm in charge of the renovations. "The hands are being primed and painted, and by the end of next week the tower will

Public Hearing Wednesday On MBTA Fare Hike, Service Reductions

The MBTA's proposal to raise fares and reduce services including the possibility of eliminating ferry service from Quincy to Boston and all other ferry services, was the subject of a public meeting Wednesday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Quincy

High School, 100 Coddington St.

The location was changed from the Thomas Crane Public Library to accommodate more citizens who were expected to attend the hearing.

Public comments can also be sent via e-mail:

The T has proposed the fare hike and service reductions to deal with a $185 million budget shortfall in operating expenses.

Councillor's Proposed Ordinance Would Require Permit, Limit Number, Set Fines

Coughlin: Control Donation Bins

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin wants Quincy to better regulate donation bins within the city.

Coughlin proposed an ordinance regulating the bins during the council's Feb. 6 meeting.

Currently, donation bins are unregulated. "We don't require anyone to register or seek a permit - it's basically a free-for-all," Coughlin said in a phone interview.

Coughlin also said he had reservations about some of the organizations that operate bins.

"I have some concern about Planet Aid," Coughlin said. "I'm not sure their mission is as altruistic as others. Places like the Salvation Army, the Red Cross are good, but I sometimes become suspect of the other groups."

The ordinance mandates that each operator apply annually for each bin they plan to place within the city. It also limits the total number of bins in the city to 50 and says no more than three could be placed on any one property. The proposal also limits donation bins to

Committee OKs New DPW Revolving Account

Quincy is one step closer to celebrating National Public Works Week this May after the City Council's Public Works Committee gave a favorable recommendation to establishing a revolving fund for the DPW.

DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi appeared before the committee Monday to request the fund, which would allow him to spend on certain items without seeking City Council approval, be created. Raymon-di said most of the money in the revolving account would come from donations he solicits. Under state law, the maximum amount that could be spent from the account in a fiscal year must be ARTIST RENDERING of the proposed vertical lift bridge over the Fore River unveiled at a Design Public Hearing in Weymouth Feb. 9. This design of the Fore River Bridge Replacement Project would exceed $280 million.

WARD 2 City Councillor Brad Croall spoke on behalf of Quincy Point residents who will be impacted by the proposed extended construction period for the new Fore River Bridge, which is scheduled to be completed in 2016. Also present were Quincy Councillors Doug Gutro and Margaret Laforest.

CONGRESSMAN Stephen Lynch spoke of the wealth of unemployed trades people in Quincy and Weymouth who should be considered for employment on the proposed construction of the new Fore River Bridge.

DEPUTY PROJECT Manager for the proposed Fore River Bridge Nikole Bulger gave an extensive outline and presented several maps, designs and proposed schedules for the construction of the bridge.

Concerns Expressed Over New Vertical Lift FR Bridge

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT) held a Design Public Hearing Feb. 9 regarding the proposed replacement of the Fore River Bridge.

Nearly 150 concerned citizens and public representatives congregated at the Abigail Adams School in Weymouth to hear details of the proposed vertical lift bridge, construction of which would be completed in 2016.

The public was assured that their views would be properly recorded in the minutes of the meeting and would be taken into consideration in determining the final design of the bridge.

The most common criticism of the proposed bridge was of the two-tower, vertical lift design, which one public opponent claims could reach as high as 290 feet. Although the design team claims a 2.5 minute time span to open and the same time to close the bridge, many at the hearing disputed that estimate.

This bridge is projected to meet the needs of motorists, cyclists, pedestrians and the maritime community for the next 75 years. Two travel lanes in each direction with pedestrian 6.5 to 9 foot sidewalks and 5 foot bicycle paths will be provided on both sides of the roadway.

Also strongly disputed at the hearing was the decision to not include a median barrier on the bridge's roadway. Many at the hearing felt that with travel speeds upwards of 40 miles per hour, a median barrier was essential to the safety of motorists.

Local residents referred to the recent meetings held in Hingham to discuss the possible abandonment of ferry service there. This, too, they felt would create an even greater demand upon use of the Fore River Bridge at a time when the proposed construction will frequently limit use of the bridge to two lanes only.

The new bridge will be erected in the same position as that of the draw bridge built in 1936. As presented in the time line graphic at the hearing, the temporary bridge was designed with a 15 year life span, which will expire in 2017.

Ward 2 City Councillor Brad Croall represented Quincy at the hearing, along with councillors Doug Gutro and Margaret Laforest. Other elected officials attending the hearing included Cong. Stephen Lynch, state Sen. John Keenan and State Rep. Tackey Chan of Quincy.

Gary Peters, founder of the Fore River Bridge Neighborhood Association took strong issue with recommendations for a vertical lift bridge, as opposed to a drawbridge.

"The Coast Guard has made some recommendations, but has not yet told us exactly what the needs of the bridge are. I urge you to stop this process and re-examine. Bascule [draw] bridges are cheaper to build," Peters said.

Traffic counts obtained in 2011 show that approximately 32,000 vehicles use the bridge daily. Design engineers claim a vertical lift span will be a truss that places the supporting superstructure above the roadway. Thus, the bottom of the span is higher above the water and allows more vessels to pass under without having to raise the bridge.

Braintree Mayor Joe Sullivan and Weymouth Mayor Sue Kay each addressed overflow traffic concerns in East Braintree and Weymouth Landing, when commuters use these areas as alternate routes in order to avoid bridge construction inconveniences.

Other concerns regarding design and construction raised by several officials and citizens included air quality, noise control, energy conservation, guard rails, and the disclosure of project documents and recommendations to the public.

This project is part of Governor Deval Patrick's Accelerated Bridge Program in which nearly 200 bridges were targeted as structurally deficient. Through January, 2012 the MassDOT Accelerated Bridge Program has advertised 166 construction projects with a combined construction budget valued at $1.649 billion.

The Highway Division of MassDOT will assume 80% of this project's cost, which includes the dismantling of the temporary bridge now in existence, with the remaining 20% absorbed by MassDOT.

As presented by the project architect, the proposed bridge will span a navigable opening that is 250 feet wide by 60 feet high in the closed position and 175 feet high in the open position. There will be a manned control room in the tower on the Quincy side of the bridge, an elevator and stairwells.

The Design team hopes to complete design and award a Design/Build contract by the summer of 2012, with an approximate 4 year period for completion of construction and demolition of the temporary bridge.

Current traffic movement will be maintained during construction. Work will be sequenced to maintain two lanes in each direction over the bridge at all times except during one four-month period, between May and August, when the bridge may be narrowed to a single lane in each direction for construction of abutments and end spans.

The Design/Build procurement method allows for innovative construction techniques composed of a contractor and an engineering firm working together to take advantage of the contractor's expertise to ensure that a project will be completed on time and on budget.

Fire Causes Estimated $200,000

In Damage To Houghs Neck Landmark

Quincy Yacht Club Blaze Believed Sparked By Electrical Malfunction

By SCOTT JACKSON

A two-alarm fire caused an estimated $200,000 in damage to the Quincy Yacht Club Feb. 10.

Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth said heat tape used to keep pipes from freezing caught fire because of a suspected electrical malfunction. He also added that fire might have gone undetected for hours before a passing commuter boat called 911 to report smoke under the building at 1310 Sea Street in Houghs Neck just before 11 a.m.

Five engine companies and all three of the city's ladder companies responded to the blaze; companies from neighboring communities were called in to staff Quincy's stations. The fire spread through the floor and walls, and that meant the 30 firefighters on scene had to work extra hard to stop it.

"We had to do an extensive overhaul where we opened up walls and the floor," Smyth said. "It was very labor intensive."

The building didn't have any firestops because of its age, according to Smyth. That meant the fire was able to spread quicker through the all-wood structure. A sprinkler system was in place at the building, but the nature of the fire rendered them moot.

"The sprinklers were activated but for the most part they're not in the walls," Smyth said.

It took five hours to put down the flames, and residents from around Houghs Neck gathered around to watch it. One of those residents was City Councillor Margaret Laforest, a Houghs Neck resident who joined the club three years

Traffic Advisory For Travel On Burgin Parkway

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation announces several road closures and detours affecting vehicular traffic in Quincy.

The closures and detour were implemented Monday and will continue from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. until Friday morning, Feb. 17 at 5 a.m.

The roadway will be open to traffic daily between the hours of 5 a.m. and 11 p.m.

The closures are as follows:

- Route 3 southbound from I-93 northbound, exit 18/19. (This is one exit ramp that splits further down the ramp. Exit 19 is Burgin Parkway in Quincy and exit 18 is Washington Street, Braintree - but the sign at the closure point says "exit 18 - 19".)

- Route 3 southbound from I-93 southbound, at exit 18/19

(same comment as above).

This closure affects traffic bound for Burgin Parkway in Quincy and Washington Street in Braintree.

Both ramps to Burgin Parkway in Quincy and Washington Street in Braintree will be closed. Traffic is detoured to Route 3 southbound, exit 17 (Union St, Braintree) and will reverse direction at the Union St rotary back onto Route 3 northbound.

Drivers are instructed to take the Burgin Parkway exit off Route 3 northbound (exit 19). At that point the Burgin Parkway detour is complete. Drivers wishing to go to Washington Street in Braintree are instructed to make a U-turn at the bottom of the Burgin Parkway exit and are directed to Washington St (end of detour).

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible? This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. Honeywell's Homestretch

After several years in mediation, the city's dispute over the Honeywell energy contract appears to be coming to a head.

Will there be an amicable resolution worked out between each side?

Will one party take the other to court?

Or something else?

Whatever the outcome, we should know later this winter or spring.

"I'm very optimistic that we're going to have some direction in the very near future," says Mayor Tom Koch.

For many, the Honeywell saga can't come to an end soon enough.

And it will be interesting to see how it shakes down.

It's been nearly five years since the city entered into a $32.8 million contract with Honeywell Building Solutions. The 20-year contract called for energy improvements at 22 school buildings and 18 other city facilities including the police and fire stations and local libraries.

The improvements were expected to more than pay for the cost of a loan financed by Honeywell Global Finance, LLC. over the next 20 years. Under the plan guaranteed by Honeywell, the city's electricity usage would drop by 25 percent, fuel usage by 27 percent and water usage by 35 percent. At the time, energy savings were projected at $1,078,700 a year and water revenue gains of $1,253,000 a year.

Essentially, the new equipment installed by Honeywell would be more efficient and lead to lower energy costs.

Sounds like a win-win situation.

But is that the case?

That's at the very crux of the matter.

The Honeywell plan was pitched by then Mayor William Phelan and unanimously approved by the city council back in the spring of 2007.

But after Phelan was defeated by Koch in the 2007 mayoral election, Koch zeroed in on the contract.

"We turned (the contract issue) over to the inspector general a few months after taking office because we didn't realize it was fraught with issues and problems. It took us some time to identify those issues," the mayor said during a recent interview.

Two years later, the Honeywell contract remained unresolved and became one of the hot-button issues during the 2009 mayor's race when Phelan challenged Koch in a rematch. Koch hammered away at the Honeywell contract - at candidate forums and political ads - in his successful bid for a two-year term.

In 2010, Koch refused to sign the maintenance contract because it would have cost the city over $600,000. "I refused to sign it because the work was not done properly, never mind that I believe we were overcharged," he said in August that year.

However, the city was paying the note on work that was done. The multi-million contract called for roofs, boilers and weather protection for city buildings.

It's now 2012 and people - especially taxpayers - want answers.

Was the contract good - or bad - for the city?

And if it wasn't a good deal, what mitigation can the city expect?

Koch says he's as frustrated as anyone over the delay but is grateful that two state agencies - the inspector general and now the attorney general - have investigated the original contract.

"Once we started to identify those issues and did not get satisfaction from dealing directly with Honeywell, we called the inspector general and he began an inquiry and basically took all of our documents and reviewed everything," Koch said. "The inspector general kept us posted periodically and then turned the investigation over to the attorney general who continues to have the case."

"Because of the ongoing investigation, I'm not allowed to comment on the merits of the case," the mayor said.

KOCH

"Having said that," Koch continued, "there's nobody more frustrated than me trying to bring this to a resolution. All I've been fighting for since day one is to make the city whole on what I think was not a good contract."

The Honeywell contract has been kicked around in the public arena as much as Gisele Bundchen's post Super Bowl rant. It's been the topic of city council discussions, media inquests as well as political fuel on the campaign trail.

"I've gone through two election cycles with this issue hanging out there, with a lot of people questioning what's going on with it," Koch said. "I'm extremely frustrated that it hasn't all come out yet or been brought to a conclusion."

"On the flip side, I'm grateful for the state agencies' involvement. If the city had to do this on our own, we'd be spending an awful lot of money on legal fees to do this. For the state to be involved - and the inspector general and the attorney general - it is a great help to the municipality."

"I'm not suggesting they're not doing their job - it's the timing and the time it takes to go through this. It was a massive deal with a lot of pieces to it and a ton of documents and those people have to go through every aspect of those documents and continue to do that," the mayor added.

The Honeywell issue has whet the public's appetite for information, including city councillors who supported the contract in the first place. They want an update and they wanted it yesterday.

There's been talk that councillors will receive an update on Honeywell in executive session. That may or may not happen.

We hope it does not.

We applaud elected officials who ask difficult questions and strive for answers on matters of the public interest. That's their inherent responsibility as our representatives.

But executive sessions don't sit well with the public. If there is an update with new information, everyone deserves to receive it - not just a chosen few.

So, if the Honeywell investigation is nearing a conclusion, city leaders should wait until it's complete instead of providing a piece-meal update behind closed doors.

Bottom line: we think it serves the taxpayers of the city who footed the original bill for the Honeywell contract to receive all the information regarding the Honeywell decision at the appropriate time.

Let the investigation continue - and may the decision - and its details - be known to all when it's complete so that both parties can move on.

The Honeywell matter, to borrow a sports metaphor, is heading down the homestretch.

The finish line can't be too far off.

ATTENDEES AT LOCAL high school sporting events may have noticed a new rendition of the Star Spangled Banner played during the National Anthem.

But if you attended or watched last month's city inauguration at Quincy High School on Quincy Access TV, it should be a familiar tune.

At the suggestion of School Committee member Paul Bregoli, the School Committee adopted a new version of the Star Spangled Banner be played at the high school gymnasiums and Quincy Youth Arena before games. Ditto for the outdoor venues at Adams Field and Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The new rendition was performed by the Combined Choir of Quincy and North Quincy High School at the city inauguration Jan. 3.

"I suggested we play the choir's rendition of the Star Spangled Banner because the recording underscores the talent of students attending Quincy Public Schools. We should be showcasing how good our kids really are," Bregoli said.

Della Chiesa Hits MTA Assessment Bill

Rep. Amelio Della Chiesa (R-Quincy) promised to fight shoulder-to-shoulder with other state legislators against bill that would assess 14 fringe communities 25 percent of the Metropolitan Transit Authority deficit.

On the basis of the MTA's $7,829,004.64 deficit in 1952, he said, Quincy would be charged $503,010, or about $3.50 on the tax rate.

Nevertheless, when the legislature's Metropolitan Affairs Committee held a hearing on the bill no one appeared to oppose it, although Sen. Charles W. Hedges (R-Quincy) had himself recorded against it after the hearing.

"It was useless to express any opposition before the Metropolitan Affairs Committee as 11 of its 14 members represent communities that contribute to the deficit at the present time," said William A. O'Connell, executive vice president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

O'Connell said it was the Chamber's position that the New Haven Railroad "has demonstrated that it is possible to provide transportation to the South Shore at a profit" and the MBTA should be able to do the same thing.

Kudos To McNamee, Keenan And Gutro

I would like to thank Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee for his letter concerning the proposed wind turbine project on Moon Island, and State Senator John Keenan for his informative legislative updates and for filing a bill requiring lending institutions to have more transparent records regarding sales of mortgages (Jan. 19th edition of The Quincy Sun.)

I would also like to thank Councillor Doug Gutro for pushing for public release of energy and water consumption of specific municipal buildings. And thank you to The Quincy Sun for giving his efforts front page coverage (also Jan. 19th edition.).

Energy and water conservation efforts deserve much more exposure than they currently receive. We ignore and underestimate the detrimental ramifications of our glutinous consumption of resources.

Please continue to spotlight these constructive actions by our elected officials.

Quincy Taxpayers Deserve Details About Honeywell

I have been trying to follow the discussion regarding this contract.

In 2007 when the City entered into this contract, I felt that, on the information released, that, of course, it was a great idea.

Why not?

Saving money by improving the energy efficiency of City buildings could only benefit the City and therefore the tax payers. While no specific details were released I, and I'm sure, most of the City taxpayers, made the assumption that our Councilors knew what this was all about.

Now we find that nobody has any idea what is going on. We find that shoddy work was done, rework by City workers needed to be done and no records are available to compare, before and after.

Councillor (Doug) Gutro has for a very long time been trying to get details on what has been done and what the results of what was done. Now we read that the City Solicitor, Mr. Timmins, may reveal the details to the Councilors in "executive session."

I say, how dare they!

The City Council spent

nearly $33 million of our money, and, We the People, cannot get details on how they spent it or what the result is on what they spent.

No contract should be so secret that it cannot be made public. It is the money given by the taxpayer, to be used on their behalf, for the betterment of the City and therefore should be open for discussion by the People of this City.

How dare they go behind closed doors to hide things from us.

The Attorney General of Massachusetts apparently has been able to get information that the city was not able to obtain. Mr. Timmins advised that he is not able to comment on this information.

Ridiculous. This is not national security! If everything is above board, then nothing needs to be hidden.

What has happened to transparency?? The taxpayers of this City are being kept in the dark, like mushrooms, and are there only to supply the funding for what ever project the Administration feels like entering in to.

Arline Goodman: 'A Great Citizen'

Arline Goodman is a great citizen. All her life she's done everything she was supposed to do and more. In 1970 she married her sweetheart Dr. Carl Goodman and made a house a home in Quincy Center along Town Brook. Carl had a dentist office at home and there they raised their 3 children. Arline is a retired school nurse and has been involved in the community and active in many groups over the years.

Arline was one of the first people I met when I moved to Quincy. One day I stood looking at the pretty brook and Arline came outside. She told me about the rich history connected to this body of water. Over the years it had been neglected but once upon a time it spawned the world's best fishing. With a small amount of attention, the bubbling brook would once again generate revenue for the City of Quincy.

Years after that encounter, one woman has been at the center of the downtown development. Her letters to the editor have informed us all. From her pleas, not to give away prime real estate to leaving "Revere Road" named to honor a civil war hero, Arline Goodman fought to protect history and the neighborhood she loved. Arline embraced progress and development also understanding the value of incorporating our successful history to ensure a flourishing future.

For someone who has spent decades giving to Quincy it is hurtful to be painted as an obstructionist by the city she loves. Arline looks out her window checking the brook and comments about one of the plans that would drain the water from her property leaving an empty brook. Now a widow, she worries about the inconvenience to her tenants and her rights as a property owner. Mostly, she thinks about what's best for all the citizens of Quincy.

Arline Goodman hopes Town Brook has a place in the new downtown, not along the highway out. Let's show Arline Goodman and Town Brook the respect and appreciation they deserve.

Quincy Youths Show The Irish Where The Revolution Began

A.J. Maloney, Connor McGonagle, David Nguyen, Michael O'Donnell and Matthew Pham of Quincy, all sophomores at Boston College High School, recently accompanied their Irish visitors on a trip to Concord.

The five young men wanted the exchange students from Belvedere College in Dublin to experience the cultural landscape which ushered in two American revolutions: the political revolution of the 18th century, and the Transcendentalist movement of the mid-19th century.

The students traced the route of British soldiers on the morning of April 1775, they stood at the Old North Bridge (site of the "shot heard round the world"), and they gathered at the spot where Henry David Thoreau spent the night in jail, having refused to pay taxes to a slave-holding government (the event associated with his essay "Civil Disobedience").

Finally, all students sat in silence - and wrote in their journals - while considering what one scholar has called "the most important view in American letters:" the very place, just outside the Old Manse, where Ralph Waldo Emerson sat while writing his landmark essay "Nature."

The trip was led by Will Kemeza of the English Department, Leslie Kogan of the Social Studies department, and Jessica Kontchou of the International Programs Office.

an adorable Daffodil Days Boyds® by Enesco® Bear.

"Last year we were pleasantly surprised at the outpouring of support by members of the community for Daffodil Days," Keohane said. "The teachers and families of Quincy Catholic Academy responded generously, helping us to raise $2,000, double our goal in 2011. This year we are hoping to do even better!"

Flowers will be delivered to Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service the week of March 19th. Orders must be placed by March 2.

Timekeeping With Les Tyralla Feb. 23; Astronomy And Navigation Feb. 24

History, Science, Technology Connection Topic At Historical Society

Quincy Historical Society will host two programs this month at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center that explore the connections between history, science, and technology.

On Thursday, Feb. 23, at 7:30 p.m., Les Tyralla, antique clock and barometer restorer, will give an illustrated presentation about the different ways that timekeeping has historically evolved in step with technology. The presentation will consider what these advances have meant for societies at different times. In particular, it will focus on American and European timekeeping during the last two hundred years and how Massachusetts and Connecticut dominated production of clocks and watches for many decades starting in the late 1700s.

Audience members may bring in a clock (be sure to unhook the pendulum bob before transporting and pack the clock well), or a photograph of a clock.

Tyralla will provide comments about the piece in terms of its history and its general worth.

On Friday, Feb. 24, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., the Historical Society will host a program by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and the South Shore Astronomical Society that combines an historical perspective with some first-hand astronomy.

Inside the Academy, there will be an illustrated presentation on The Stars and Navigation, the original GPS used by seafarers for centuries. On the Academy lawn, there will be four telescopes set up for guided stargazing.

Both events are open to everyone.

Admission is free.

'Moneyball' At Crane Library Tonight

The 2011 Oscar-nominated movie 'Moneyball' will be shown tonight (Thursday) at 6:45 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The film centers on Oakland A's general manager Billy Beane who challenges the system and defies conventional wisdom when he's forced to rebuild his small-market team on a limited budget.

Despite opposition from the old guard, the media, fans and their own field manager, Beane — with the help of a young number-crunching, Yale-educated economist — develops a roster of misfits and along the way, forever changes the way the game is played.

The film is based on a true story as told by Michael Lewis in his nonfiction best-seller 'Moneyball: The Art of Winning an Unfair Game."

Starring Brad Pitt, Jonah Hill and Philip Seymour Hoffman, the 133-minute film is rated PG-13 for some strong language.

The screening is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Jed's Sweet Potato Soup

While having lunch at my daughter Nancy's house, she served a delicious soup that her husband Jed made the night before. He enjoys cooking and is so good at it. The soup was great and it is today's recipe.

Often times when a recipe is printed, substitutes can be used in place of some ingredients. But in today's recipe, Japanese sweet potatoes should be used to achieve the wonderful flavor of this soup. They can be purchased at Good Health Store in Quincy or Whole Foods in Hingham.

SWEET POTATO SOUP

2 large Japanese sweet potatoes
2 cloves of garlic (chopped)
1 small onion (sliced)

½ cup arugula (uncooked)
½ cup Portabella mushroom uncooked (sliced)
2 tablespoons butter
4 cups milk

First, peel and boil the sweet potatoes together with the garlic and onion. Drain and mash all three ingredients. Place in a pot, and cook for a couple of minutes. Add the milk, salt and pepper, and mix until well blended. Then add the arugula and the mushrooms and continue cooking. By now, it is a thick wonderful soup.

On top, add the butter until melted and serve hot. It was delicious heated up the next day when I enjoyed it.

Mocha Cupcakes With Pecan Mocha Frosting

With the recent cup cake craze, plus all of the recipes for cupcakes almost everywhere you look, I recently found a great recipe for a mocha cupcake.

I have always made vanilla or chocolate, family favorites, but this one is very different and delicious.

MOCHA CUPCAKES

½ cup butter
1-cup sugar
1 egg
1-teaspoon vanilla
1-½ cups flour
1-teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup cocoa dry (unsweetened)
½ cup milk
1 ½ teaspoons instant coffee

Cream butter and sugar until light. Add egg and vanilla and beat well. Add the next five dry ingredients alternately with the milk beating after each addition.

Dissolve the coffee on ½ cup hot water. Stir into the batter.

Fill paper baking cups ½ full and bake in a 375-degree oven for 20 minutes. Cool and then frost with the following.

MOCHA FROSTING

6 tablespoons butter
1-pound package of powdered sugar
About ¼ cup light cream
1 ½ teaspoons vanilla
¼ cup cocoa
½ teaspoon instant coffee
2-3 tablespoons chopped pecans (for topping, optional)

Melt the butter and add all of the other ingredients except the pecans and mix well. Frost each cupcake and top it with chopped pecans.

28-Year Veteran Also Proud To Join
Brother Peter Turowski At The Same Rank

Quincy's Newest Police Lieutenant Paul Turowski Happiest For His Wife

By SCOTT JACKSON

As happy as Quincy Police Officer Paul Turowski was when he was promoted from sergeant to lieutenant, there was one person who he was happier for – Kathleen, his wife of more than 21 years.

"I was most happy for my wife," Turowski said. "Her father was a sergeant in the Boston Police Department assigned to communications and I was a sergeant in the Quincy Police Department assigned to communications, so we always talked. He used to tell me he hoped I'd retire a rank higher than he did."

Turowski is also proud of the fact that both he and his older brother Peter are now lieutenants on the force. Paul believes they are the first brothers to serve as lieutenants at the same time in the department's history. They both joined QPD on the same day – Aug. 11, 1983 – and were both promoted to sergeant in the fall of 1993.

Peter, the department's liquor inspector, said he's happy for his little brother and commended him for the work he's done at the communications department.

"He does an excellent job," Peter said of Paul. "At the communications department he did his job inside and out, he is excellent at it."

When asked how he felt about being the first brothers in department history to serve as lieutenants concurrently, all Peter had to say was "what else can you say about that?"

Paul Turowski was sworn in as a police lieutenant Jan. 23. He maintains that he should've been promoted to lieutenant around 2004 when his brother was. His brother echoes that sentiment.

PROUD MOMENT –Kathleen Turowski pins a lieutenant badge on her husband Paul Turowski after the 28-year Quincy Police Department veteran was sworn in to his new rank by City Clerk Joseph Shea at a City Hall ceremony.

"It's a long time coming," Peter said. "He should've been promoted a long time ago."

Paul was up for a promotion in 2005. Though he was ranked high on the Civil Service list, other candidates, including two relatives of then-Mayor William Phelan, bypassed him. Paul pursued the matter through Civil Service and in 2010 the board ruled in his favor and ordered the city place him atop their list for promotions.

Because he was bypassed, Paul has the right to seek back pay and repayment of his legal fees; Turowski says he spent almost $25,000 on attorney's fees and other costs. He says he plans on pursuing both.

"When I was promoted I compared it to treading water," Paul said. "To complete the metaphor I've been treading water for six-and-a-half years and now the mayor has me on the boat and needs to take me to shore."

The reason the younger Turowski wasn't promoted in 2005 was because he had taken sick-time after being diagnosed twice with cancer. He said his battles with cancer helped give him the determination he needed to pursue his case through Civil Service. "I got my push from cancer, there's nothing worse than that," he said.

He also drew inspiration from another source, the late actor Christopher Reeve. Reeve, best known for portraying Superman, was paralyzed in a horse-riding accident in 1995. Turowski said he and his wife donated to Reeve's foundation, and that Reeve corresponded back to them. Included in the actor's messages was the motto "nothing is impossible."

PAUL TUROWSKI treated his brother and 14 women on the Quincy Police Department staff to a day trip to celebrate his promotion to lieutenant. The trip included a two-hour helicopter ride out of Plymouth.

Paul was so inspired by the motto that he took the motto as his own. When he learned of his promotion he ordered 400 tubes of lip balm with the message on it. He brought them to City Hall on the Monday he was sworn-in, and gave them to anyone he could, including the mayor.

"I was walking into City Hall with my wife on my arm and lip balm in my pocket," Turowski said of the day he was formally promoted. "It was like Christopher Reeve was in my heart."

The lip balm was also a reminder of his unsuccessful 2009 mayoral campaign, when he had tubes of lip balm bearing his slogan "authenticity in government." Paul said the reason he ran for mayor then was the legal wrangling over his promotion.

To celebrate his promotion Paul took 14 women from the records, communications, and payroll departments, as well his brother, out shopping in Plymouth and to dinner in Boston. While they were in Plymouth, he also rented a helicopter for a two-hour ride.

"I asked them 'where am I going – I'm going up and so are you'," Turowski said about the helicopter ride.

Peter called the helicopter ride a good time. He added that his brother often prefers to spend money on his friends and family instead of just himself.

"He always does that," Peter said.

Sheriff's Rapid Alert Notification Safety System Available

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti continues to urge area residents to sign up for his free-of-charge Code Red Rapid Alert Notification System (RANS), which directly notifies residents about public safety emergencies via telephone voicemail, email, text message, Twitter, Facebook or iPhone app.

"This system is very versatile in that it allows a person to receive a safety alert in whatever way you prefer," Sheriff Bellotti said.

Roughly 8,000 people already have signed up to receive the alerts via their phone, computer or handheld device. In addition, all publicly listed home phone numbers in Norfolk County are in the system's database to receive voicemails in the event of a local emergency.

The RANS program notifies residents about flood warnings, hazardous material dangers, missing person alerts and other situations that local officials deem to be public safety emergencies.

The notification system calls residents' home phones via databases available from the phone company. People who wish to add their cell phone numbers or email addresses must voluntarily register their information with the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office by visiting the NCSO website at www.norfolksheriff.com and clicking on "Rapid Alert Notification System." The NCSO keeps all such information confidential and does not share it with anyone.

To receive alerts through

Facebook, search for the "NCSO RANS" page on Facebook and click on the icon to become a friend. People on the Twitter network can search for "norfolkcorans" and then click to follow.

The iPhone app allows you to receive alerts that occur in other areas of the United States while you are traveling in those areas.

The RANS program is run by Sheriff Bellotti as a public safety service to all of Norfolk County and was originally financed in part through a federal Homeland Security grant. Local public safety officials contact the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office when they determine they need to send out an announcement, and Sheriff Bellotti's RANS officer carries out the task.

Be In The Know Before You Go

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

We're in the dead of winter. In many areas of the country, that means that we could be in for some rough weather. When severe weather strikes, parents of young children are well aware that they need to check for school closings as they prepare for the day. But sometimes inclement weather can be severe enough to close down government buildings and offices as well — including Social Security.

If the weather outside is frightful, you should check our website before making a trip to a Social Security office. The place to go to find out about emergency office closings is www.socialsecurity.gov/emergency.

Social Security's office closings and emergency page provides information on specific offices that are closed due to weather and emergencies, as well as reminders about upcoming Federal holidays during which government offices are closed.

The website also offers a link to a comprehensive list of Federal holidays throughout the year.

To the right side of the page, you'll find helpful resources from other government agencies, such as the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and the National Weather Service. They can help you to prepare for weather emergencies before they happen.

We also provide information about alternatives to visiting an office, helpful even when offices are open. For example, many of our most popular services are available online at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Find out what types of benefits you may be eligible for by using our benefits eligibility screening tool and then apply online. If you are already getting benefits, you can use our website to sign up for direct deposit so that your payments won't be interrupted during weather emergencies. You can learn about these and other services available on our secure website by visiting our Online Services page at www.socialsecurity.gov/online.

If you'd like to be alerted to office closings, that's easy to do. Just visit www.socialsecurity.gov/emergency and subscribe to the page by selecting the "Get email updates" link next to the red envelope. Then you'll get an email alert any time there is a change, such as an office closing.

Is the weather outside frightful? Never fear, Social Security service is always so delightful at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Tom Anacone 'Cooks Up' Changes At Eatery Craig's Cafe Owner Shares Passion For Cooking

By EMILY TAFT

"It's something I think that has always been in my blood, even as a little kid," says Tom Anacone, the 27-year-old new owner of Craig's Café on Hancock Street.

"I have always had a passion for cooking."

With a new owner comes a new look to the outdated décor and color of the old Craig's. Anacone said he painted the walls and has many other projects in mind that will improve upon the look, feel, and food of the restaurant. Some of his future goals include new floors, counter tops, and widening the dining area.

"I have all these ideas that I just need to organize my thoughts and figure out what I want to do," said Anacone. "I have been researching different types of food, different styles. I want to try and stay with the lighter foods that people on their lunch breaks will want."

After attending Chaplain College for restaurant management, and learning the skills necessary from a teacher and managing restaurants after graduation, Anacone decided to purchase Craig's to achieve his lifelong career goal.

"I was a nervous wreck the first month of owning the place," said Anacone. "For that first month I sat back and observed. I looked at what the regulars liked, what wasn't selling, and made some changes."

Anacone says he takes pride in serving quality food at the downtown eatery.

"I worked with my guys to put out quality food," said

Anacone. "I want them to take responsibility and pride in the food they make."

Anacone said that each morning they cut and prep food fresh, even slicing their own meats. Other additions that have been added are a specialty board displayed outside to catch the eye of those passing by, along with freshly made bakery products, such as cookies, muffins, whoopee pies, cinnamon buns, and different pies. Anacone said he hopes to expand on the dessert menu by possibly adding a cheesecake of the week, among other ideas.

As for the main courses, Anacone said he hopes to expand the menu to include house-roasted turkey, roasting his own roast beef, more creative salads, and new entrees.

One thing Anacone said he isn't sure about changing just yet is the name.

"I have been toying with some ideas, and have had a few suggestions," said Anacone. "I am still undecided though, at first I was set on not changing the name but now I am considering it."

Anacone added that if he changes the name he would hold a contest where customers can submit their ideas.

He also has some ideas of his own, but said he is interested to see how creative his customers can get.

The cooking doesn't stop at work for Anacone. He said he enjoys cooking from scratch at home and would like to make most of the food at work from scratch as well. His favorite meal to cook is spaghetti and meatballs, from scratch.

Another addition to Craig's is the new outside catering company that is now offered to businesses and customers. He said he hopes to expand the catering company and the café in the future.

Some other future goals consist of opening more restaurants and cafes, and eventually even a bar.

"I would like to expand the catering company and Craig's," said Anacone. "Whether it be to make the hours longer at Craig's or to open a couple other places with different styles I am not sure yet. I would like to do both."

Craig's Café, located on 1354 Hancock St., is open 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, serving breakfast and lunch all day. It is also open for breakfast on Saturdays.

Tom Anacone, the 27-year-old owner of Craig's Café on Hancock Street, has served up some changes at the downtown eatery since buying the business.

Moved By Warren's Words

Senate candidate Elizabeth Warren was in Quincy recently for a campaign event, gearing up for her expected challenge to Republican Scott Brown in the November 2012 election.

I met Ms. Warren a few weeks ago when she made a quick walking tour of Everett Square, where I work. She is strikingly slight of frame, but has an energetic and engaging personality that makes her a far more comfortable and likable campaigner than Martha Coakley ever was.

I observed Warren to be an active listener—engaging those she met with a natural and earnest interest in what they had to say—as well as a cheerful small-talker, able to keep the banter flowing with an ease Mitt Romney couldn't begin to achieve.

While I wasn't able to make the Quincy event, my wife and our nine year-old daughter did go, and came home energized and excited about the campaign. They also came home with a quick story that tells a lot about the choice voters will have next fall.

As Ms. Warren was meeting people and greeting supporters in the usual political way, she came to my daughter. Bending down to get eye level with our little third-grader, Ms. Warren said "I'm running for the Senate, because that is what girls do." She shook her hand, looked her in the eye, smiled, and moved on to the next well-wisher.

Ten seconds of priceless inspiration: "Because that is what girls do."

Now, contrast those words with the spectacle of Scott Brown on the night of his election, in a national spotlight, excited and speaking off the cuff. What were his comments about the most important young women in his life—his daughters?

He told us they were "available", unmarried and eligible bachelorettes.

I know those words were spoken in parody of the groaning humor of the middle-aged parent, and I am certain Mr. Brown loves his daughters, is rightfully proud of their achievements, and has great ambitions for them. Yet, with an opportunity to inspire all our young women, he chose to relegate them to the ranks of the merely "marriageable."

I haven't been able to forget the words Scott Brown delivered that night. I hope my daughter won't ever forget the words Elizabeth Warren whispered to her today.

More Thoughts On Pedestrian Safety

Recently the City Council unanimously passed a resolution to improve pedestrian safety at 540 Hancock St.

The response from the mayor's office was that safety would be entrusted to the professionals. This despite the numerous accidents cited in my prior letter.

I noted in the "Quincy Yesterdays (1938) section that the City Council issued an order to the mayor.

As long as the City Council does not exert its powers to issue orders to the mayor, override the mayor's veto when necessary, or to impeach the mayor if the mayor ignores the council's order, the City Council will remain a discussion group and not reflect the will of the people.

Coughlin: Control Donation Bins

nonresidential property in business A, B, or C zoning districts that doesn't abut a residential neighborhood.

Because bins are unregulated, Coughlin couldn't say how many bins are in the city at the moment—though he did recall counting nine at one Stop and Shop location. He did, however, say that the number of bins has been growing.

"There's a growing proliferation of these sort of receptacles," Coughlin said. "There's a tipping point of how many you can have. It's time to establish a rational limit on them."

The ordinance also calls on the bins to be emptied at least once every 30 days. "In some locations when the bins become overfilled people leave the bags outside," Coughlin said, adding that bags left on the ground can be a blight on the area.

If people do complain about items left strewn around, or anything else regarding the bins, the city currently lacks the ability to remedy the situation, according to Coughlin. He added that the city might be able to use his 2007 Neighborhood Property Preservation Ordinance—also known as the "blight ordinance"—to go after the owner of the property the bin is located on, but referred to that tactic as a "stretch."

The ordinance Coughlin proposed, however, would allow the city to fine both the owner or lessee of the site the bin was located at and the owner of the bin itself for any violations. Those fines would range between $50 and $100 per violation. The city could also order the removal of bins if violations continue for longer than 30 days.

Coughlin originally proposed regulating donation bins in 2010. An ordinance he proposed that year was sent to the ordinance committee where several changes reflected in the new ordinance were made in committee. It was also submitted to Jay Duca, the city's director of inspection services, at that time. The proposal wasn't passed before council's session expired at the end of 2011 though.

The ordinance proposed by Coughlin on Feb. 6 was also referred to the ordinance committee.

New DPW Revolving Account

established — the maximum allowed in the proposal the Public Works Committee recommended is $100,000. State law also dictates that all allowable uses for the revolving fund must be declared by ordinance.

One of those stated uses is the celebration of National Public Works Week. At the meeting, Raymondi argued that it was due time for the city to celebrate DPW employees for their work by celebrating it.

"It's been 10 years since the City of Quincy has honored its hard-working men and women of the Department of Public Works," Raymondi said. National Public Works Week is an opportunity for the department as well as the city of Quincy to come together...to celebrate the hard-working men and women of this department. We haven't done it for 10 years and we should do it."

Part of that week would involve bringing students to the department's headquarters. There they'd see exhibits on the different areas the DPW handles. The idea is to draw them into the field.

"There'll be an awful lot of vendor exhibits there that hopefully will attract, entice a young person there to perhaps have a future in public works or maybe go to school for technology or science or something along those lines," Raymondi said.

A second use of the revolving fund would be to recognize employees. The commissioner alluded to a longtime employee who retired soon after he took over as commissioner. He wanted to honor the worker but didn't have resources in the budget to do so.

"When I first got here there was an employee who had served the city for 40 years and was retiring," Raymondi said. "Unfortunately that person was just going to go on his way, so we [put] some resources together to buy a gold watch — not gold gold — to at least symbolize the hard work and the longstanding duration of the public service of this particular employee."

The proposed ordinance also allows funds to be spent on employee training, recycling and waste supplies and equipment, processing of yard waste, fencing, disposal of televisions, monitors and other materials.

In addition to donations, the fund will raise money from fees and charges from the collection of various items, grants, from the sale of composting machines and products, and payment of dumping permits from commercial landscapers or other communities. While there is a limit on the amount of expenditures that can be drawn from the account, there is no limit on the amount of money that can be deposited into it.

Raymondi reiterated throughout the meeting that the revolving fund wouldn't take money from the city's general fund. When asked by Council President Mike McFarland money would harm the receipts of the general fund, Raymondi told him the mayor wouldn't allow that to happen.

The five-member Public Works Committee voted 4-1 to give a positive recommendation to the measure. Councillors Margaret Laforest, Brian McNamee, Brad Croall and Kirsten Hughes voted for it while Joe Finn opposed the measure.

Finn, who serves as chair of the council's Finance Committee, argued the council should maintain its control over DPW's budget.

"The group that no longer has oversight is this body, in terms of the choices and priorities for the taxpayers of Quincy," Finn said. "That oversight and discretion is now fully contained within the commissioner and the mayor's administration."

Finn later clarified that he had no problem with Raymondi overseeing but thought it would be better served creating jobs at the DPW.

"$100,000, let's suppose those receipts generate that amount, what level of investment coming back in terms of the budget we approve is going to go towards hiring additional workers? None of it, because it's now off-line and solely at the discretion of the commissioner," Finn said. "Many of the things that he cites, if it's such a small number, bring it back within the budget so that we can judge it accordingly and maintain some oversight."

The committee did approve two amendments to the measure. The first, proposed by McNamee, prohibits money from the fund from going towards compensation for employees or contractors, except those that deal in safety training.

Though not a member of the committee, Councillor Kevin Coughlin proposed the other amendment. It requires the commissioner to give quarterly updates on transactions involving the account.

$1.07M For Deficit Accounts

The City Council's Public Works Committee recommended spending some $1.07 million to close out four deficit accounts.

Two of the accounts, totaling over $900,000, are related to the Quincy Shore Drive sewer project. The deficits occurred because the city charged the MWRA for expenses the MWRA doesn't reimburse communities for, such as sidewalk repair.

Another $7,896 is related to the Sea Street/Edgewater Drive sewer project. A deficit occurred there because the contractor completed additional work above the amount that was originally funded.

The remaining amount, $109,691, is associated with the Strand sewer project. Because the deficit was incurred before the city switched to its current accounting system, no reason was given for that deficit.

In separate measures, the public works committee also recommended moving $million from the water enterprise retained earnings account to the water stabilization fund and $346,306 from the sewer enterprise retained earnings to the sewer stabilization fund.

All of the moves were recommended unanimously. Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi said the city's external auditor, James Powers, insisted on the moves as a good housekeeping practice.

Christine Prendiville Receives Educator Of The Year Award

Sterling Middle School Teacher Honored

By Mass. Department Of The American Legion

(Christine Prendiville, a teacher at the Sterling Middle School, was recently honored by the American Legion Department of Massachusetts as its Educator of the Year. Below is the nomination for Prendiville submitted on behalf of the Morrisette American Legion Post in Quincy.)

By GEORGE BOUCHARD

Every year for over 10 years the students at Sterling Middle School in West Quincy have held an assembly the day before Veterans Day to honor America's Veterans.

Those who have attended these events will testify to the moving and meaningful presentations put on by these school children. The one person who inspires, organizes, and produces these assemblies is a popular teacher named Christine Prendiville.

On Nov. 10, 2010 a contingent from the Cyril P. Morrisette Post No. 294, led by myself and Senior Vice-Commander Heikki Pakkala, attended the assembly in honor of Veterans Day. SVC Pakkala, a Sterling alumnus, was the invited guest speaker at the event.

The theme of the 2010 assembly was a salute by the students to the veterans who had been honored with the bounds of their West

Quincy school district by having a square dedicated to their memory, usually with a bronze plaque. The students had photographed all of the memorials and prepared a Power-Point presentation during which selected students recited narratives about each of the honorees that they had themselves researched and composed. Dozens of West Quincy veterans were featured and the entire performance was outstanding.

Afterward the students presented the Morrisette Post with a large book containing all of the photographs and research documents that had gone into their project. They also presented handwritten "Thank You Veterans" cards that had been made by all the students at Sterling. So moved were the members of the Morrisette Post delegation that they sponsored Ms. Prendiville for the American Legion's Americanism Medal, which was awarded to her by the Post and the Department in December 2010.

For another example, in 2009 the students presented a "virtual tour" all of the various components and features of the new World War II Memorial in Washington, D.C., using dozens of photographs which Ms. Prendiville had taken during a visit the preceding summer at her own expense. The students researched and composed narratives explaining each section. The theme was that the veterans from the "Greatest Generation" were passing at an alarming rate and should be remembered through the Memorial by those who may not be able to visit in person. Last November, the students conducted interviews with veterans from all over Quincy who volunteered for the project and they composed oral histories, including photographs, about each of those veterans and presented them onstage.

Christine Prendiville was born in Milton and raised in Dorchester. A graduate of Girls Latin High School in Boston, she received her teaching degree at Bridgewater State College and was a substitute teacher in the Quincy Public Schools from 1978 to 1989, when she began teaching full time at the Sterling Middle School. As the teacher of health education she instructs all the grades at Sterling, which enables her to bring her message of patriotism and respect for veterans to the entire student body. Ms. Prendiville learned these values from her father, now deceased, who was a sergeant in the First Marine Division and landed with the assault on Guadalcanal. A lifetime active Legionnaire, he was also a Past Commander of the Milton Post No. 114.

We know of no one person in the field of education who better epitomizes the promotion of 100% Americanism and respect for veterans, and who endeavors to pass these principles on through the education of so many young people, year after year for over 10 years and continuing, as this outstanding educator, Ms. Christine Prendiville.

CHRISTINE PRENDIVILLE, a teacher at the Sterling Middle School, was recently presented the American Legion Department of Massachusetts John J. Mulkern Third Annual Educator of the Year Award. Moon Island Wind Turbine Hearing Reset For March 7

according to Jim Hunt, the Chief of Environment and Energy for Boston.

A representative from Weston & Sampson, an environmental and infrastructure consulting firm, presented renderings depicting the turbine from various angles and distances for those concerned about the visual appearance of the structure, which will be located over one mile away from the nearest Squantum residence.

The shadow cast by the rotating turbine blades, also known as shadow flicker, cannot be seen by the human eye at a distance of over 4,600 feet. Weston & Sampson estimate that shadow flicker will be visible less than 10 hours annually, most likely in the late evening and early morning hours.

Any sound produced by the turbine will be in full compliance with noise standards for both cities and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Vibrations caused by the sound produced by the turbine will be imperceptible due to the distance between Squantum and the turbine itself, according to engineers.

The two to three acres required for the project houses no endangered species of animal or plant, according to The Massachusetts Natural Heritage and Endangered Species Program. Additionally, modern turbines spin at a much slower rate than they did in years prior, nearly eliminating the risk of bird mortality.

According to Weston & Sampson, any traffic resulting from the three months of construction needed to complete the project will be minimal as most large equipment will be shipped over the harbor, rather than hauled down East Squantum Street.

Negotiations continue on how the revenue brought in by the turbine, which will produce enough energy to power 750-1,000 homes over one year's time, will be divided between the cities.

Despite these possible monetary gains, many Squantum residents are still questioning whether Boston officials are taking advantage of the Moon Island location while dismissing the possible effects of the turbine on surrounding locations. Many concerned residents called for clearer renderings of the turbine and further sound studies. Still others voiced disapproval over the visual change to Squantum's skyline. Others fear that shadow flicker will have a more substantial effect than is being predicted.

Citizens, seemingly unconvinced by data presented by Boston officials during the meeting, lined up at the conclusion of the presentation to sign a petition in opposition of the proposal, and will get a chance to speak at next month's Planning Board meeting.

As of now, no new details regarding the proposal have been released.

Additional items discussed at Wednesday's meeting included the construction of two, four unit condominium complexes, to be located at 38-46 Gilmore Street. Opponents voiced concerns over limited parking and the risk of increased automobile traffic to children.

"It was a child-safe street; it was a quiet street," said Ken Bertrand of 35 Gilmore St.

To address concerns over the availability of parking, Jim White of H.W. Moore Associates, Inc., presented slides depicting the parking arrangements for each complex, which will house cars partially underneath an awning which will extend 4-feet past the front exteriors of each condominium, reducing the need for on-street parking.

The motion was passed unanimously by the board to allow for the construction as all city codes and regulations have been met by the landowner.

The continued public hearing, meant to take place at last Wednesday's meeting, concerning the construction of a nursing home, including parking and all necessary amenities, to be located at 286, 290, and 300 Washington Street, has been postponed until further notice.

All e-mails regarding the Moon Island Wind Turbine proposal should be sent to Christine Chaudhary, of the Planning Committee, at CChaudhary@Quincyma.gov.

VITAMIN D AND NERVE HEALTH

As research continues to reveal the multiple health benefits associated with vitamin D (including building bones; strengthening the immune system; and lowering the risk of heart disease, diabetes, kidney disease, cancer, and high blood pressure), interesting new findings have emerged. In recent years, low levels of vitamin D have also been linked with a variety of autoimmune conditions, including multiple sclerosis. Now, research has found that vitamin D levels are lower among patients suffering from "transverse myelitis," a disease of the spinal cord that affects the myelin sheath protecting nerve fibers. Symptoms include back pain and leg weakness. This finding underscores the importance of good nutrition in maintaining overall health. Chiropractic is concerned with all aspects of disease prevention.

Significant research suggests that chiropractic is the safest approach available for relief from neck pain, back pain, headaches and other "musculo-skeletal" complaints. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we have many years of experience to ensure that each adjustment is precisely delivered. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. To Purchase Air Bottles, 'Jaws Of Life' Tool Quincy Fire Department Receives $68,000 FEMA Grant

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's Fire Department received a $68,000 grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

The grant was formally awarded at a ceremony at Braintree Fire Department headquarters on Sunday.

The fire department will use the money to purchase

60 air bottles, according to Chief Joseph Barron. The bottles are worn by firefighters at the scene of a fire, and Barron said, "they do go out of service, a lot of [ones currently used] are coming out of service in the next year."

The money will also be used to purchase Jaws of Life, a hydraulic rescue tool used to extra people from crashed cars.

In all, fire departments across Massachusetts received some $1.8 million in grants from FEMA's Assistance to Firefighters Grants program. Grants awarded under the program go towards health programs, new safety equipment and emergency vehicles, and increased training for firefighters.

ago. She estimated that about 100 residents arrived on scene because of how important the building is to the neighborhood.

"The Quincy Yacht Club has been vital to the Houghs Neck community for the past 100 years," Laforest said. "Even if someone's not a member, they've been to a function there - it's the heart of the Houghs Neck community."

Friday's weather might have helped save the building. Smyth said the building could have been a total loss if the wind coming in over the water been as strong as it usually is.

Laforest said the club was lucky because of the weather. "It's such a significant saving over what could've been," she added. She also pointed out that historical documents, including the club's original charter, escaped the flames.

"There's so much of historic significance in that club's that's irreplaceable," Laforest said. "It gives us a chance to preserve that."

Smyth said structural components of the building will need to be replaced, and that would walls need to be taken down to allow that to happen. "Unfortunately for the yacht club they have to take out some walls," he said.

Area businesses have reached out to the club, offering use of their space while the club is being restored, according to Laforest. The councillor also praised the work of the firefighters. "The firefighters were fantastic," she said. She pointed out that Germantown's engine 8 was staffed Friday, though it sometimes isn't because of budgetary constraints.

One firefighter was sent to Quincy Medical Center with a laceration and then returned to duty, according to Smyth. No one was in the yacht club at the time, and no boats were damaged.

Because the fire spread through the walls, a fire watch detail was assigned to the club from 3 p.m. Friday to 7 a.m. Saturday. No additional fires were spotted.

THE 24TH ANNUAL Quincy Lunar New Year Festival attracted thousands at North Quincy High School Sunday in celebration of the Year of the Dragon.

24th Annual Event Features Traditional Chinese Dancing, Musical Performances, and Storytelling

City Celebrates Year Of The Dragon At Lunar Festival

By KRISTINA KALABOKAS

Thousands gathered at North Quincy High School on Sunday to celebrate the Lunar New Year and to enjoy a day of food, culture, and entertainment.

The event, which was presented by Quincy Asian Resources, or QARI, with support from South Cove Community Health Center, is in its 24th year. John Brothers, Executive Director of QARI has seen a steady increase in attendance since he joined the organization. "In 2003 there was an estimated attendance of 600. Last year we had a count of 8,000," said Brothers.

The celebration's opening ceremony began with the lion dance, which is performed by highly trained martial artists donning an elaborate lion costume. This dance is primarily seen at new year's celebrations.

"Lion dances are more special so you don't see them as much," said Gabriel Cheong, the social media and communications manager for QARI.

The year 2012 marks the year of the dragon, which, according to the Chinese zodiac, means good fortune and prosperity are forthcoming.

Traditional Chinese dancing, musical performances, and storytelling took place in the auditorium while young students picked up the essentials of Chinese painting from Xiao Yong Liu, a local art instructor, in the library. Attendees could stop by a booth showcasing various Chinese medicinal remedies and learn about holistic healing practices using herbs such as prunella, which is reported to have antiseptic properties, or angelica, which is used to facilitate wound healing.

The cafeteria was host to several local eateries, such as the Fuji Restaurant, Beni-Cafe, and China Pearl, serving fried rice and pork buns to hungry patrons. A particular crowd favorite was the bubble tea, also known as pearl milk tea, which is a tea or juice based beverage which contains tapioca pearls.

An impressive number of young QARI volunteers helped orchestrate activities such as paper fan coloring, jump rope contests and a scavenger hunt. Children could be seen wearing hand-colored dragon masks while waiting in line to have their names translated into Chinese and painted onto parchment.

A Korean hip-hop troupe, made up of North Quincy and Quincy High School students, provided a modern edge to the festivities.

The celebration was not strictly limited to Asian performances. Irish step, Spanish, and Indian dancing troupes performed in the gymnasium, reflecting the changing cultural dynamic of Quincy.

Funding for the event is provided mainly by sponsors, according to Brothers. "This is a way that many organizations in the community can support the work that Quincy Asian Resources does, whether it's our ESOL classes, our youth program or whether it's working with new immigrants," he said.

Along with the annual

Lunar New Year celebration, QARI also hosts the August Moon Festival, and a community banquet.

Clock Work Winding Down At Church Of Presidents

be completely finished."

Weeks ago spectators watched as the 372-year-old church received a 3,000-pound bell as a part of the $600,000 restoration project.

When the clocks were first installed in 1869, the bell and the clock were connected so the bell would ring at the same time the clock would strike the hour. Now they will be on separate mechanisms: the bell on an independent control with a timer and battery back up; and the clock, which doesn't have a back up, will have to be fixed manually if the church loses power.

After over a month of repainting and retouching, due to weather, the new clocks will be adorned with a fresh coat of black paint and gold leafing.

"There was no way to paint over the old paint," said Edwards. "The whole thing was deteriorating. This was a job where you had to start fresh."

Edwards added that they also had to test the old paint before removing it and found that it tested positive for lead paint, so they had to dispose of it properly before moving forward.

The area where the painting of the clocks was done was enclosed with a tarp to maintain the right temperature and protect the paint as it dried from various weather conditions. The painters started by taking templates of each clock in order to keep the same size on all four surfaces. According to Edwards, three of the clock faces were all the same size and width, while the fourth — the east facing side clock — had smaller Roman numerals because the inside diameter was a different size. Edwards said they didn't want to change anything from the original because it is something that is a part of history.

"You don't change time, and you don't change history," said Edwards. "We wanted to stay true to the original artists design."

Painters applied a peel away product to remove the original paint, and after a couple of applications they were down to the bare granite. They then applied primer and three coats of black paint that Edwards said should last another 50 years.

After the black paint was applied, artists came in to apply $8,000 worth of gold leaf to the Roman numerals and the circle that would encompass them. Before applying the gold, an adhesive had to be painted on and then dried to a certain temperature in order for the gold to stick correctly.

"Each day they would come in and add a different part of the clock," said Edwards. "The gold may have cost a lot to many people,

AFTER SEVERAL weeks and coats, the clock faces at Presidents Church are nearing completion. It took several steps to make it to the finished product.

but it will last generations, and you can't use imitation products for something like this."

Using a paintbrush, the artists dabbed the gold leaf on to the areas where they had applied the adhesive. The two artists then took a cloth to rub and press the gold leaf into the designated area. Edwards said that heaters were up in the enclosed area to keep it a certain temperature in order for the gold leaf to be applied correctly. After finishing the gold leaf the artists went back and touched up the lines with black paint.

The city and church plan to celebrate the project's completion — and dedicate the new bronze bell — after the job is finished.

ARTISTS APPLIED $8,000 worth of gold leaf to the four clock faces on the church. The gold leaf came in rolls that were measured out to certain sizes. Artists had to paint the gold on with a paintbrush and then smooth it down. The gold filled in the Roman numerals, the dots that tell the seconds, and the circle that encompasses them.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, Feb. 1, at approximately 5:50 p.m., Officer Matt Tobin and William Lanergan were dispatched to Papa Gino's in Wollaston on a report of a drunk female causing a problem inside the store. Upon arrival, the store manager stated that a heavy set female was yelling and screaming inside the restaurant. This escalated to her throwing pizza at other customers, then walking out and sitting on a bench across the street. The manager was concerned that she would return.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officers approached the female and determined that she was intoxicated and drooling on herself. She initially denied being in Papa Gino's, then blurted out, "Some dirty n@##$% tried to put his f@#$%^& paws on me so I hit him with my pizza." She then admitted to drinking "two big ice cold Natural Light beers" in the last hour. She said she just wanted to go home which was nearby, adding that she had friends there.

Officer Lanergan decided to transport her home rather than place her in protective custody. The female, sitting in a caged rear seat of the police cruiser, was cooperative until the cruiser, on a well lit main street, pulled up to her home, where she then began to scream at the officer, "You dirty f@#$%^& n@##$%, you think you can pull in a dark lot and rape me?" She unleashed a volley of screaming obscenities as the officer pulled his cruiser over at her house and advised dispatch to send another cruiser to assist in bringing the female under control.

When back-up arrived, Officer Lanergan opened the rear door to the caged area where the female was held. She was still screaming "dirty f@#$%^& n@##$%" over and over again to the point several pedestrians walked over to see what was going on. Sadly, for her, just prior to her outbursts, she was home and was free to go inside, but this changed everything.

The officers advised the female to place her hands behind her back but she refused. As Officer Lanergan attempted to handcuff the female, she hit him on the side of his head with her cell phone. After a brief struggle, the officers were able to place the suspect in handcuffs and placed her back in the rear of the cruiser. She then attempted to kick out the rear windows of the cruiser. Once at the station for booking, she continued to be uncooperative and verbally abusive to all officers on scene. She spit at the booking officers and called them, "no good f@#$%^ Irishmen." Since she was uncooperative, the female was placed in a female cell where she immediately urinated on herself.

The female, a 52 year-old Quincy resident, was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (cell phone), resisting arrest and disorderly conduct. The cell phone was seized and placed into evidence for court purposes. It should be noted that the female has a lengthy criminal record (47 entries) that include numerous assaults. She also lists two names she uses as an alias.

Nice Work!

But there's more.

On the same date, about an hour earlier, Officers James Menz and Mark Millane were dispatched to Elm and South Streets regarding a woman with her "Pants down defecating." Upon arrival, Officer Millane interviewed the female suspect while Officer Menz interviewed several witnesses, who were shocked and alarmed from what they had witnessed. Two female witnesses who were picking up their children at the nearby bus stop said they observed the female inside the Elm Street Playground drop her pants and began defecating on the grass. Both stated that they could see "everything," referring to private body parts. Although they were "grossed out", the witnesses stated that they were not looking to press criminal charges.

The officers confronted an intoxicated male who was sitting on a nearby wall. He said that he knew the female suspect and they had been drinking in a nearby apartment. A check of this male showed that he had an extensive criminal record but no warrants, so he was sent back to the apartment. Officer Millane determined that the female was drunk and incoherent, so Fallon Ambulance transported her to QMC. At the emergency room, Officer Menz observed the female suspect to become extremely belligerent towards everyone, even those trying to help her. In addition to dealing with this hostility, the female defecated again, but this time it was in her pants. After being cleared by her Doctor, she was transported to the station where she was placed into protective custody due to her excessive drinking. It was determined that the 49 year old female is homeless and usually spends most of her time in the Copley Square area of Boston. She stated that she is originally from New York.

Nice Work - but sometimes it's not easy!

Local legislative leaders had an opportunity to learn more about affordable housing issues last week, when elected officials and their aides met with staff members from Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore.

Elected officials from Quincy and the South Shore and their legislative aides attended a breakfast meeting at Neighborhood Housing's Quincy office to discuss the Community Development Partnership Act - proposed legislation that would use state tax credits to leverage private investment in high-performing community development organizations.

Neighborhood Housing Services, a member of the Mass. Association of Community Development Corporation (MACDC), was one of 80 such organizations scheduled to hold legislative briefings this month to discuss how legislation like the Community Development Partnership Act can support efforts to build more affordable homes and strengthen small businesses.

Getting the Most From Compost

Q: I just have a patio garden for my city apartment, but this fall I was able to start saving kitchen compost, which I transfer weekly to a large plastic laundry tub on the patio. The large tub is the problem - water is seeping up around the dirt, and of course the water has an odor. A friend of mine said the pH balance is off. How can I stop this from occurring? - Jane in New Jersey

A: What you need to do right away is turn the compost pile - meaning, take a shovel, spade or stick and stir the compost, remixing everything. The compost in the tub has compacted, so instead of actually composting (breaking down solids) it's putrefying.

Turning the compost will reintroduce air into the pile and help restart the process. If there's a lot of extra water after turning, pour off some, but not all of it. There's also the possibility that rain or snowmelt got into the tub. If you don't want to punch drain holes in the bottom of the tub (most apartment managers frown on compost water stains on their patios) you should loosely cover the tub with a tarp so that air gets in but water does not.

From here forward, monitor your compost regularly and turn it every week. Also keep an eye on what you're putting into the kitchen compost. Under no circumstances should you put in meat scraps; this will attract flies and result in maggots. Keep a roughly 50/50 ratio of carbon-rich to nitrogen-rich ingredients.

Carbon-rich ingredients include anything "brown," such as sawdust, dead leaves, paper or straw; nitrogen-rich ingredients include anything "green" such as greens and vegetables. You can also add crumbled eggshells (calcium) and occasionally sprinkle wood ashes from the fireplace into the pile. When the danger of hard frost is past, add a handful of live earthworms to the freshly turned pile. They'll help aerate and break down the pile into rich compost.

If you want to learn more about composting, primal-seeds.org has published detailed instructions on building a keeping a healthy compost pile.

HOME TIP: Keep compost piles in a far corner of the yard or as far from a home's exterior walls as possible to prevent pests from entering your home.

Three-Time Patriot League, South Sectional Champion;
Diving For The University of Connecticut Next Year

Quincy's Taryn Urbanus Seeking State Diving Title On Saturday

By SEAN BRENNAN

Quincy High senior Taryn Urbanus will be diving for the triple crown this Saturday at Blodgett Pool on the campus of Harvard University when she competes in the Division 1 state diving championships.

Urbanus, the No. 1-ranked high school diver in Massachusetts, heads into the state finals as the reigning Patriot League and South Sectional champion. Last Saturday at the South Sectional swimming and diving championships held at the Zesiger Sports and Fitness Center on the MIT campus, Urbanus won her third consecutive sectional title in the one-meter dive by increasing her own 11-dive school record to 515.40 points, a final score which was nearly 21 points better than her record-setting and Patriot League winning total of 494.60 set back on Feb. 4 at the Lincoln Hancock Pool during the Patriot League Championships, which she won for a third straight winter.

As a sophomore, Urbanus finished third overall at states. But the driving force behind her undefeated season in 2012 has been her disappointing fifth-place finish last year at states when she entered the competition ranked second overall but faltered on the big stage.

"I am ranked first this year in the state event," said Urbanus last week in an interview at The Quincy Sun. "I just had a bad meet last year when I finished fifth. At the beginning of that meet I did pretty well but I messed up some dives and that brought me down."

"This year I have learned a couple of new dives, perfected some other stuff and got better at some dives, but basically everything was the same," Urbanus said when asked what she has to do to win a state title this season.

Next Stop: State Finals

Through many hours of off-season practice with the South Shore Diving Club and coach Craig Dolloff, Urbanus has ascended back to the top of the diving echelon with an eye solely on capturing a state title. The three-time league and sectional champion wants to end her impressive high school career with a splash.

"For each week there is a different category of dives (forward, back, reverse, inwards, twist) that you have to start with," Urbanus said in explaining how the usual six-dive regular season competitions play out, "so you have to start with that dive but after that you can do whatever dive you want. (Coach Dolloff) and myself come up with that list."

"For the league championship, the sectionals and the states, I do an 11-dive format and in these meets there are five judges who eliminate the highest and lowest (scores) and multiply (times three) the degree of difficulty with the rest of the dives to get the final score."

The former gymnast, who had surgery for a torn meniscus back in 2007, turned to diving soon after and, has successfully utilized the flipping skills and fearlessness she flashed competing in gymnastics to her advantage on the board.

"Before I had surgery on my knee in 2007 I was a gymnast," she said. "Having done gymnastics has helped my diving. It is mostly the flipping. When people start diving without the background of gymnastics they are not used to the flipping and twisting. Knowing all that already helped me get used to the motion of diving."

"When you get off the board that is when you want to flip or twist," she continued, "and once you get that, (diving) is fun and easy."

All the flipping and twisting has made Urbanus the diver to beat come Saturday. Only this time around she is better prepared both mentally and physically for the rigors of competing at the highest state level.

"I know that people are going to be competing to try and beat me but when I go into the meet I plan on just clearing that away from my mind and try not to think about it," she said.

Cementing Her High School Legacy

Regardless of how Urbanus finishes this weekend at the state final, she is already, arguably, the best diver ever to come out of Quincy. Three straight league and sectional crowns solidifies that position.

And if Urbanus can pull out a state title Saturday she will become the first diver in city history, regardless of sex, to earn such an honor. Amazing stuff for an athlete who didn't even decide to make diving her primary sport until two months before her freshman year at Quincy High.

"High school diving is time consuming but it is just for a couple of months a year," Urbanus said about what it has taken for her to become so good so fast. "I have definitely improved from my first year. After I made states following my sophomore year, I have always had the state championship as my goal."

Huskies Reel In Urbanus

As her high school years have come and gone, Urbanus has proven to the doubters that she is a legitimate schoolboy diver. The cherry on top of her four years of hard work: Urbanus gets to continue diving on scholarship at the collegiate level next year for the University of Connecticut, competing at the Division 1 level.

UConn's head diving coach John Bransfield is excited to be adding Urbanus to his team.

"Since my correspondence with Taryn started, I knew I was engaged with a rare young lady," Bransfield wrote in an email to The Quincy Sun during a break from coaching the Huskies in the 2012 Big East Championships. "She is, indeed, talented. Taryn has some wonderful natural ability in being both dynamic and having graceful lines, and I believe her potential is tremendous."

"It has been a long time since I have corresponded with a prospect that has me this excited with possibilities. Her best years are ahead, though as much in her being a humble and focused individual with a genuine smile."

Urbanus' path to UConn was fortuitous. Knowing that she wanted to continue diving in college she and her mom, Janet, traveled to Pennsylvania to visit Drexel University, but the urban setting of Philadelphia wasn't a good fit.

Driving back north through Connecticut, Taryn and her mom decided to make a stop in Storrs. That visit sparked an interest and the rest is history.

"I was a little wary on where I wanted to go to college," Urbanus said. "I never had a top decision but my mom and I went to visit Drexel and I ended up not liking it but on our way home we stopped at UConn. I really liked the campus so when I got home I contacted (Bransfield) and he liked my diving and me, so I went back for recruitment."

"I am going to UConn. I got a scholarship, so that should be exciting."

(The Quincy Sun will report on Taryn Urbanus' performance in the Division 1 Diving Championships in next week's issue.)

Wildcats Are Number One Ranked Team In New England Class E Division

Woodward School for Girls In Tournament-Mode

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Woodward School for Girls basketball team, the No. 1-ranked Class E program in all of New England, wrapped up its regular season as co-champions of the Independent Girls Conference with the Montrose School.

At 18-1 overall, Woodward was scheduled to play an IGC semifinal game on Tuesday and, if they won, the team would face off with Montrose today (Thursday) in the IGC title game.

That is quite an impressive accomplishment for a program that suits up four seniors, three juniors, four sophomores, an eighth-grader, a seventh-grader and a sixth-grader. The small number of girls enrolled at the school could be seen as an impediment but head coach Bob Giordano sees it differently and, what his team has accomplished already this winter is proof to him that the program is on solid ground.

"We ended the regular season as the No. 1-ranked Class E team in New England," he said last week. The IGC is broken down into Class D and Class E. "That is something they can never take away from these girls. We also had four Class D wins this year."

"I have liked this team, from top to bottom, better than any team I have had in 16 seasons. These kids are so unassuming and they deserve all the credit."

Following the IGC tournament, Woodward gets an extended break before tipping off the Class E New England Tournament after school vacation week. The Class E New England Tournament will pit Woodward up against the best Class E preparatory schools from throughout the region.

But even Giordano isn't sure what to expect once that tournament begins.

"I am not sure what team we will play," he said. "But I like our chances."

Giordano's confidence isn't grandstanding. He has a talented team, which is made up of players who each play specific roles on the court. His best offensive threat is sophomore forward Ava Small.

Small joined the 1,000-point club last week and her steady progression on the court has given Woodward a dynamite player down low. But Small wouldn't be on her way to smashing every school scoring record if it wasn't for the leadership and experience of the senior class.

Seniors Bryn Coulesey, Antoinette Jean-Louis, Mariana Verenis (Quincy) and Delilah Goncalves have bought into the Woodward way and, in the process, they have had to reinvent their own games for the benefit of the program. It is the type of leadership that has made Woodward into a legitimate threat to claim a New England championship.

"Antoinette has really improved," said Giordano when asked what each senior brings to the hardwood. "For the last two years she has led the IGC in rebounding and blocked shots. Mariana does all the dirty work. She is our enforcer on defense and she has really taken to that role."

"Bryan came here as tenth-grader and in her first year she scored 262 points," added Giordano. "When Ava joined the team we had to make her the point guard and she gave up her natural position. She would have been a 1,000-point scorer, but she made the change for the team and we became a more rounded team because of it. She is a very unselfish player."

Coulesey never blinked when her role changed. A lot of players would have fought such a move but at Woodward, family and team always come first. The only thing she cares about is winning, which is something Woodward has done a lot of in recent seasons.

"We are 18-1 and clinched the regular season co-championship of the IGC with Montrose," she said last week during a round-table interview at the school, which is located in Quincy Square. "We began to form this team back in 2010 and we have been building that sense of community and family ever since. It has all come together this year. Last year we lost by nine points in the IGC championship game. The tournament starts for us on Tuesday and if we win we will play Montrose for the title."

"The seniors (at Woodward) are expected to show leadership and have the mental toughness that the younger kids may not have," she continued. "We are like the big sisters. We are there for support in the classroom and on the court. That is something that we have had this season. This team is much more confident and eager to do well and help each other."

Jean-Louis also understands that any success that Woodward has on the court comes from the sense of family and togetherness that is prominent at a school that houses students between sixth to twelve grade in one building.

"I can say personally that as seniors we help the younger kids and they help us," she said. "That relationship shows how strong we are. We represent the school and what it means to be a student here."

Verenis summed up the role of the senior class best when she said, "We play for each other and we play for Woodward."

The fact that Woodward rosters student-athletes from every class helped Small find her way early on. There was never a sense of resentment from the older players because when a talented younger player hits the scene they all know it is beneficial for the program.

To her credit, Small could care less about scoring records. Her only care is helping her Big Sisters win a championship.

"All I want to do is win a championship for the seniors," she said. "They helped me get involved and they all cheer me on."

The rest of the Woodward School for Girls varsity roster includes juniors Imani Graham, Andreyana Jean-Louis and Queenette Odum, sophomores Andrea Barros, Traci Litthcut, and Tatiana Rivera and lower school members Cassandra Wesner, Meagan Donovan and Cheyenne Taylor.

Season Highlights

The biggest win of the season, and a potential preview of a title game versus Montrose, was Woodward's 33-26 win over Montrose back on Jan. 25.

Jean-Louis led all scores with 13 points and Coulesey chipped in with 11 points while seniors Mariana Verenis and Delilah Goncalves provided excellent defense. Small added nine points in the victory.

Montrose got its revenge with a 54-26 win over Woodward on Jan. 31.

Ten Wildcats scored in Woodward's 45-15 win over the Cambridge School of Weston. This win was Coach Giordano's 200th of his career.

THE SENIOR CLASS at the Woodward School for Girls has taken on a greater leadership role this season. The Wildcats enter the IGC tournament with a 18-1 overall record and a No. 1 ranking in New England Class E. Q/NQ Girls Swimming & Diving 26th At Sectionals

Senior captain Taryn Urbanus won her third consecutive sectional title in the one-meter dive to lead the Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving team (8-4, 4-3) to 26th out of 45 teams at the South Sectionals swimming and diving championships held Saturday, Feb. 11 at the Zesiger Sports and Fitness Center on the MIT campus in Cambridge, Mass.

Olivia Goldson improved upon her own school standard, swimming the state-qualifying time of 26.27 in the 50-yard freestyle for 15th overall. The senior swam 58.57 for 18th overall in the 100-yard freestyle event and also contributed to Q/NQ's new record of 1:50.10 in the 200-yard freestyle relay with teammates Evelyn Scuzzarella, Kat O'Connor, and Sabrina Rauch.

The Q/NQ girls will compete in the State Championships, Saturday, Feb. 18 and Sunday, Feb. 19 at the Blodgett Pool on the Harvard University campus in Cambridge, Mass.

AFC Under-10 & Under-14 Girls Teams Looking For Players

The America FC Under-10 and Under-14 girls' teams are looking to add players for the Spring season that begins in late March. If interested, come try America FC for two weeks during the winter season for free and see if you child enjoys playing and training with the club.

America FC is fielding youth teams from ages 10-14 for both boys and girls this Spring season, along with three high school teams. The AFC Under-9 and Under-10 girls and Under-14 girls are the only teams still looking for a few more players.

However, AFC's Academy (training-only) is open to all ages. AFC provides an Under-8 program that is a fun and skill-based learning atmosphere for players 6-7 years of age.

AFC is predicated on providing high quality training at a low cost. Training is focused on technical development with considerable emphasis placed on developing ball mastery skills, including dribbling, moves and general ball control. This focus helps players develop a core set of soccer skills before entering the more competitive high school age.

During the winter season the Under-9 and Under-10 girls train Monday and Wednesday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. at Bernazzani Elementary School, and the Under-14 girls train Tuesday and Thursday from 5:30-6:30 p.m. at the Clifford Marshall School.

If you have a child that may be interested in participating in the training program and team, visit www.americanafcunited.com for more information, or contact Tyler Martin at tmartin4@gmail.com for Under-10 girls, or Jim Sheridan at sherj11@yahoo.com for Under-14 girls.

Red Raiders Are Currently 9-5-3 Overall, Patriot League Championship Still In Play North Quincy Hockey Back In Tournament

By SEAN BRENNAN
Mission accomplished.

In last week's Quincy Sun it was reported that the North Quincy Red Raiders hockey program needed to earn three points to qualify for the Division 2 South tournament. The Raiders took care of that with an impressive 2-0 week, which included Patriot League victories over Scituate (4-2) and Pembroke (3-2).

With three games left in the regular season, including a city showdown against rival Quincy on Saturday (7:50 p.m., Quincy Youth Arena), North Quincy (9-5-3 overall) is riding a five-game league-winning streak, a run that has placed a second-straight league title within grasp.

If the Red Raiders can sweep Quincy and Whitman-Hanson (Feb. 22) and, if Duxbury defeated Pembroke Wednesday night, North Quincy would share the league crown with the Dragons; if Duxbury tied the Titans, North Quincy, Duxbury and Pembroke would share the league title if the Red Raiders win out.

An Historic Win

North Quincy took the momentum gained following their 4-2 win over Scituate down to the Hobomock Ice Arena and rallied from being down 2-0 midway through the second period to knock off Pembroke for the first time in three seasons.

Led by late second period tallies from seniors Nick Furey (power play) and Shawn Grady (team-high 14 goals), the Red Raiders took the lead in the third period off a goal from sophomore Andrew Currie to keep hope alive for another league championship.

"That was a huge win," said NQ head coach Matt Gibbons. "It was the first time that we had beaten Pembroke in three years. We not only clinched a spot in the Division 2 tournament by winning on their rink but we kept the league title in play."

"I think the team came into (this game) feeling confident following the win over Scituate," continued Gibbons. "We went down 2-0 in the second period but Furey's goal really sparked the bench and when Grady scored just fifty seconds later we started to ride that momentum. Pembroke had a late game flurry after Currie's goal but the defense buckled down and we had some luck when a shot hit the post late."

Grady continued his hot play against the Titans. During North Quincy's five-game winning streak, the senior forward has been immense. Grady has recorded multiple-point games in all five contests and, his production has trickled down through the Red Raiders' second and third lines. And with a balanced offensive attack, the defensive core has begun to tighten their belts in front of senior goalie James Dunn (2.45 goals against average).

"Shawn has put up multiple-point games in five straight," Gibbons noted, "and when our first-line (Grady, Pat Verhault and Nick McGaughey) is playing this well it brings a balance to the second and third lines. Defensively, we are playing better. Scituate and Pembroke were the two highest-scoring teams in the league and to hold them to a combined four goals was impressive."

Peaking At The Right Time

Last year the Red Raiders finished the regular season with an 8-4-8 record, shared the league title with Scituate and Pembroke, and qualified for the state tournament, but North Quincy never really found its groove.

The beginning of this season saw the Red Raiders again spin their wheels. On Jan. 11, North Quincy was 3-4-2, but a 3-0 win over Scituate on Jan. 14 set into motion the current 6-1-1 streak.

The goal now is to keep momentum moving forward as the postseason approaches.

"Last year with all those ties (eight) we could never get on a roll," explained Gibbons. "We never played like we are right now. This team is very confident and they know that they can play with any team and they know that if we go down a couple goals that we can come back. We challenged Pembroke and Scituate and it was nice to be able to clinch a tournament berth early."

Div. 2 Field Looks Wide Open

At the moment, the upcoming Division 2 South field is anybody's to win. According to Gibbons the number of teams that may qualify is between nine and 11, which means that a hot program (like North Quincy) could advance with two wins into the sectional finals.

Last year the Red Raiders lost in the sectional quarterfinals to Franklin, 5-2.

A nonleague game on Wednesday versus Canton should have been a good barometer for North Quincy. The Bulldogs (13-1-1) are the top team record-wise in all of D2 South.

"That will be a game to see how we match up with one of the better teams in Division 2," Gibbons said about the Hobomock League powerhouse.

As of Feb. 14, the top teams heading down the home stretch in Division 2 South are: Canton (13-1-1), Franklin (14-1-2), Mansfield (12-2-3), Martha's Vineyard (12-4-1), Oliver Ames (10-4-3), North Attleboro (10-4-3), North Quincy (9-5-3), and Coyle & Cassidy (8-6-1) — all records taken from masshockey.com

What's Up With Quincy?

The Quincy Presidents are young and the results have not been of the winning variety.

Quincy, which played league-foe Hanover on Wednesday and closes out the regular season on Saturday against North Quincy, is currently 1-17-0 overall, with the lone victory coming back on Dec. 26 against the Red Raiders (2-1).

Senior captain Peter Giunta leads all scores with ten points (six goals, four assists) while senior Connor Quinn has chipped in with two goals and six assists.

Quincy's youth movement is headlined by the play of sophomores Mike Pugsley (two goals, four assists) and Pat Donovan (three goals, three assists) while freshmen Pat Freeman (six goals, two assists) and Brian O'Callaghan (two goals, three assists) make up the foundation for future success.

Patriot League Standings (as of Feb. 14)

Duxbury (8-1-4, 20 points; 8-6-4 overall), Pembroke (9-2-1, 19 pts; 13-2-3), North Quincy (8-2-2, 18 pts; 9-5-3), Scituate (8-4-2, 18 pts; 11-5-2), Hanover (5-6-2, 12 pts; 7-7-2), Silver Lake (4-9-1, nine pts; 5-10-3), Whitman-Hanson (4-9-0, eight pts; 5-12-0), Quincy (0-13-0; 1-17-0 — win over North Quincy was non-league game).

Note: The Quincy/North Quincy girls' hockey team, which had been scheduled to play at the QYA on Saturday before the boys' game had their game moved to Franklin. The jayvee boys' will take the ice instead at 6:50 p.m.

A Final Farewell For QHS Volleyball's Senior Class

THE QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL VOLLEYBALL team held its end of the year banquet on Feb. 8 at The Fours Restaurant in Quincy. It was an emotional night as the program said farewell to a very special senior class. All levels were in attendance as well as QHS Principal Frank Santoro, Quincy Athletic Director Jim Rendle, Assistant Principal Ellen Murray, and Mass Patriots Volleyball Club co-founder and coach Chris Prendiville. Parents and student-athletes were treated to a buffet dinner, followed by an awards ceremony and a slide show. Head coach Jacqui Niosi presented the seniors with various parting gifts such as trophies, collages commemorating their four years together, specially made clothing apparel and varsity letters. Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your ideas are finally reaching those who can appreciate them. But don't expect any immediate reactions. That will come later. Meanwhile, a personal matter needs your attention.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your energy levels are rising, and you're feeling restless and eager to get into some activity, whether it's for profit or just for fun. In either case, the aspects are highly favorable, so go for it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A relationship seems to be winding down from passionate to passive. It's up to you to decide what the next step will be. But don't wait too long to take the initiative. Delay could create more problems.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A decision looms. But be very sure that this is what you really want before you sign or say anything. Once you act, there'll be little or no wiggle room for any adjustments.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Money matters improve, but you still need to be cautious with your spending. Also, set aside that Leonine pride for a bit and apologize for contributing to that misunderstanding.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A tempting financial situation could make the usually unflappable Virgo rush in before checking things out. Be alert to possible hidden problems. Get the facts before you act.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's nice to know that you're finally getting due credit for your efforts. You also should know that new opportunities will follow. A family member brings important news.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Any uncertainty that begins to cloud an impending decision could signal a need to re-examine your reasons for wanting to take on this commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You benefit from taking time out of your currently hectic schedule to do more contemplation or meditation. This will help re-energize you, both in body and soul.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Nursing hurt feelings can zap the energies of even the usually self-confident Sea Goat. Best advice: Move forward. Success is the best balm for a painful ego.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A display of temperament surprises you, as well as those around you. It could be all that pressure you're under. Consider letting someone help you see it through.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Some things don't seem to be working out as you'd hoped. Don't fret. Instead, take some time out to reassess your plans and see where changes could be made.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy traveling and meeting people. You are especially good with children and would make an excellent teacher.

Nicholas M. Bertone, 78

Thoroughbred Horse Breeder

A private funeral service for Nicholas M. Bertone, 78, of Norwell and Florida, formerly of Quincy, was conducted through the Sullivan Funeral Home, Hanover.

Mr. Bertone died Feb. 5.

Born in Santa Maria Del Molise, Campobasso, Italy, he moved to the United States at the age of seven, and settled with his family in Quincy. He was educated in the Quincy school system and it was here where he developed his artistic skills. As a young boy who spoke no English, he spent a good deal of time in school drawing and sketching — these skills would stay with him throughout his life.

At an early age, it was evident he was mechanically inclined, and he developed a keen interest in automobiles. As a teenager, he began building and racing his own stock cars. In his early 20s he opened his first car dealership at Lovell's Corner in Weymouth, and spent the remainder of his career partnered with his son John at Hanover Autoworks.

However, his true passion was thoroughbred horses, and he purchased his first thoroughbred in 1963.

Lt. Gov. Praises City Education At QHS Visit

By EMILY TAFT

Lt. Governor Tim Murray recently visited Quincy High School for a tour of the new school and to look at how the students and faculty are working to close the achievement gap.

"As we move forward with a renewed education strategy, our administration is increasing our focus and resources within the state's Gateway Cities, including Quincy," Murray said. "These efforts will help Massachusetts move towards our goal of closing the achievement gap and preparing students for the future workforce and driving regional economies across the state."

Quincy is one of 24 gateway cities in the Commonwealth that will close achievement gaps more quickly and effectively through the gateway cities education agenda. The agenda, put forward by Gov. Deval Patrick, was imple-

Non-Profit Group Preserving Lyons Turning Mill

Landmark Last Remnant Of City's Granite History

By SCOTT JACKSON

Work is ongoing to save the Lyons Turning Mill.

The mill, located off Riccini Drive in West Quincy, was finished in 1894. The 200-foot long by 90-foot wide structure was used to turn and polish granite balls and columns.

"It's the last remaining remnant of our granite history here in Quincy, we're trying to preserve it," said Al Bina, the president of the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum.

Since the stones walls were erected, rainwater has seeped into them. That water then freezes and thaws, loosening the stones and causing the structure to weaken. Because of that, the mill was in poor condition before preservation work started.

"It was deteriorating because it hadn't been touched for 100 years," Bina said.

Bina's group, a registered 501c(3) non-profit organization, is the driving force behind the preservation efforts at the site. They brought on Structures North Consulting Engineers of Salem to come up with a way to save the walls. Bina said that process was tedious because the mill is listed on both the state and national register of historic places.

"It was kind of intense because we had to abide by all the rules and regulations," Bina said of the process.

Preservation work at the mill began in June. During the first phase of the project, workers are capping the tops of the wall's concrete. The front wall has been completed and the back wall will be capped next, followed by the two sides. After the walls are capped, the next

The City received a total of five qualified bids for the project ranging from a high of about $11 million to a low of $6.6 million filed by LM Heavy Civil Construction of Westford. The City's

Quincy Man Held On Drug, Firearm Charges

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy Avenue resident is facing an assortment of charges following a month-long investigation.

Jason Campbell, age 28, of 158 Quincy Ave. Apt. #1 was arrested Feb. 15 at 3 p.m. That afternoon, detectives from the city's Drug Control Unit arrested Campbell as he was en route from his apartment to a convenience store on Franklin Street.

There he was arrested for possession of crack-cocaine and was taken to Police Headquarters. Quincy's new Tru-Narc device was used to test the substance seized from Campbell; it tested positive for cocaine-base (crack-cocaine).

A search warrant was subsequently issued and during a search of Campbell's apartment. Police said they recovered two handguns during the search. One was a .50 caliber Desert Eagle and the other was a 9mm MAC-11 large capacity gun with a defaced serial number. Both guns were loaded, and an additional 53 Winchester .357 caliber rounds and 17 .50 caliber rounds were also

Public Protests MBTA's Proposed Fare Hikes, Cutbacks

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The Acting General Manager of the MBTA took it on the chin last Wednesday at a public hearing held to discuss proposed changes to MBTA service and fares.

An outraged public filled the auditorium of Quincy High and told Jonathan Davis, former MBTA Deputy GM and now the man-in-charge, exactly what they thought of the potential fare hikes and elimination of bus and ferry service.

Citizens from as far north as Woburn and far west as Stoughton explained in sometimes angry and often emotional detail exactly how the proposed budget-reducing changes would affect their lives and livelihoods.

Before opening the microphones to the public, MBTA spokesperson Mark Boyle presented a slide show delineating specific changes and presented two different scenarios being proposed to deal with the MBTA's $5.2 billion debt.

In one scenario, a more modest increase in fares would result in greater elimination of bus routes (101)—in the other, a greater increase in fares would result in fewer routes cut (23). In either scenario, all ferry service would be eliminated as well as Commuter Rail service after 10 p.m. and on weekends. T parking fees would also rise.

Boyle first detailed the Authority's operating costs for energy. "The T's fuel costs have doubled since the 2003 figure and are now at $110 million. The MBTA is What To Do With The Wolly?

New Owner Of Former Theater Entertaining Ideas For Site

By EMILY TAFT

For many longtime Quincy residents, Wollaston Theater is a place where they were able to get away for a while and enjoy a movie.

But, after being closed for almost 10 years, and sold recently to a supermarket owner, the Beale Street theater's future is unclear.

"I would go there all the time as a teenager. I love that place," said longtime Quincy resident Erin Munn. "I want them to restore it, do like a midnight movie night, or play classic movies. It's a place you can imagine your parents going on dates to when they were teenagers. It's beautiful."

Last month, Miao Kun (Michael) Fang bought the theater from longtime owner Yvonne Chandler. He said he has no immediate plans for the historic building.

"I have no plans as of right now for the theater," Fang said in an interview last week. "I don't just want to do what I want. I want to talk with the community and city officials before moving forward with the building."

Fang bought the property for $600,000 from Chandler, who had been looking to sell after her husband Arthur died in 2008. The theater was built in 1926 and closed for renovations in 2003, but never reopened.

"I bought the property because it was such a great deal at the time," said Fang. "The condition of the building is bad right now. I have to have my engineer look at it and decide if it is safe before moving forward."

Chandler said that she hasn't really thought of what she would like to see done with the old theater.

"I have really put it out of my mind," said Chandler. "I haven't even thought about it. I am just so glad it is over with."

The building was built as a 1,259-seat theater and cost $90,000 in 1926. It was originally owned by W.W. Wilson, a Wollaston realtor. Between 1930 and 1935, the structure was converted to a movie theater. The Chandlers purchased the property in 1977 from a well-known contractor at the time, Edward H. Sears, according to the Thomas Crane Library.

Fang, who lives in Weston, owns a number of C-Mart grocery stores. He said he also owns a couple of other properties in Quincy. The C-Mart located in Boston has been running for about four years and Fang said that he wants to work on running that business smoothly before moving on to what to do with the theater.

"I want to do what is good for the community and the city," said Fang. "We have to figure out what the right thing to do with it is, but that is in the future. We need to see what has to be done with the building first."

Business owners and Quincy residents asked what they would like done to the property agreed the site should benefit the Wollaston business district and surrounding neighborhoods.

"I would like to see it turned into something that will be good for the surrounding businesses and the community," said Brain Tenore, owner of Beale Street News & Tobacco. "It would be nice to see something more done with it than what it is right now."

Others agreed the building should remain a theater.

"I would go there in high school and pay $1 for student movies," said Lynne McKeever of Wollaston. "I think they should restore it back into a movie theater."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes said she hopes that Fang and the community can work together, to make the theater something that will benefit everyone.

"I hope it can stay a theater or at least something that will be of great benefit to the Wollaston and Quincy communities," said Hughes. "I believe Wollaston Center has the potential to enhance our business and residential community greatly and I look forward to working as a team with the neighbors, business owners and the city to make sure that happens in the near future."

Hancock Street Bridge Travel Restrictions

MassDOT crews will be implementing a phase change next week on the Hancock Street Bridge, which carries Sagamore Street over the MBTA Red Line and the MBTA Commuter Rail, in the City of Quincy.

MassDOT is targeting either Wednesday, Feb. 29, or Thursday, March 1 to implement that phase change. At 3 p.m. through mid-June, 2012, the northbound lanes on Route 3A Hancock Street in Quincy will be closed as part of the phase II bridge demolition.

During the work, the bridge will be reduced to one travel lane in each direction on the southbound side and the ramp to Sagamore Street will remain open.

Traffic exiting from the parking lot at Panera Bread and Applebees to Hancock Street northbound (heading towards Boston) will travel to Sagamore Street and proceed approximately one half mile onto Commander Shea Blvd. and turn right onto Quincy Shore Drive northbound. Traffic exiting the parking lot heading to Hancock Street southbound will proceed to Kendall Street and turn right onto Newport Avenue in order to access East Squantum Street back to Hancock Street by North Quincy High School.

Nearly 30 Percent Of Voters Redistricted

If you're a registered voter in Quincy, there's nearly a 30 percent chance that you've been redistricted.

And you'll be receiving a letter from the City Clerk's office specifying your new ward and precinct and the location of your polling precinct. Those letters went in the mail last week.

Population-wise, about 27 percent of the city's residents have "moved" from one precinct to another. And in some cases, they are now in a new ward, too.

"Most of the changes are intra-ward - not inter-ward," says City Clerk Joseph Shea. That means most of the changes occurred from one precinct to another but in the same ward. Only six percent of registered voters "moved" from one ward to another.

The changes were necessitated by the city redistricting - or reapportioning - its 30 precincts last year because of population shifts counted by the 2010 census. Quincy - like every municipality across the country - was redistricted. The new boundaries are the "building blocks" that are then put together with other communities to redraw state Senate, state Representative and Governors Council districts in Massachusetts and ultimately new Congressional districts, too.

Locally, the decennial process of drawing new precinct lines has reshaped some of the city's 30 precincts that are divided equally amongst six wards. There are still five precincts in each of the city's six wards but those precinct boundaries - in some cases - have shifted.

Shea is notifying all registered voters by mail before the Presidential Primaries Tuesday, March 6 if they have changed precincts and/or wards as well as polling precincts.

Notifications will also go out before the state primary Sept. 6 and the state (Presidential) election Nov. 6.

Only registered voters are receiving the notification. Residents who are not registered voters but were redistricted will not be notified. However, if they register to vote, they will be informed of their ward, precinct and polling location at the time of registration.

The city's redistricting process is a necessary but tedious task that took many months to complete, Shea said.

"Re-districting is necessary. It is required by law but it is tedious in a changing city. Not everyone can vote where they want to. We're trying to educate those registered voters who are now located in a new precinct and in some cases a new ward, too," Shea said.

How many residents were affected by redistricting or "re-precincting?"

According to Shea, 27 percent or 24,948 of the city's 92,271 residents have been redistricted. Of those changes, 19,533 residents (21 percent) are in new precincts and 5,415 (5.8 percent) are in new wards.

In terms of registered voters, 16,382 or 29.5 percent of 55,434 registered voters have been moved into a new precinct or ward. Of that number, 12,781 or 23 percent of registered voters are in new precincts and 6.5 percent or 3,601 are in a new ward.

Most of the redistricting changes have occurred in Wards 1, 2 and 5. There were fewer changes in Wards 3, 4 and 6, Shea noted.

According to the 2010 federal census, Quincy's population increased by 4,266 people since 2000. The city's population shifts occurred basically where apartment buildings were constructed during the last 10 years. Those areas include Squantum Gardens in North Quincy, high-rise buildings in Quincy Center, High Point and Archstone in West Quincy and others.

As a result, these population shifts send a ripple effect into the surrounding neighborhoods.

So, when the city is redistricted, each precinct count was pegged at 3,076 people, give or take five percent (151 people.) An equal distribution of population among precincts is required by law.

The redistricting process also created some changes at some of Quincy's polling locations. Three new polling precincts have been established, one has been phased out and another will serve for one precinct instead of two.

The changes are:

• Ward 5 Precinct 1 - Voters who live in this precinct will cast ballots at the Quincy Career Center, 152 Parking Way (Mayor Walter J. Hannon Parkway). This location replaced es the Bernazzani Elementary School because it was too crowded.

Ward 5 Precinct 1 area includes Spear and Washington Streets near the Thomas Crane Public Library; Pleasant Street, School Street, Quincy Street, Jackson Street, Kidder Street and Brook Road.

• Ward 5 Precinct 3 - Voters who live in this precinct will vote at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center. Voters in W5 P1 had voted at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston but that location now serves only one precinct (Ward 5 Precinct 2).

Ward 5 Precinct 3 area essentially consists of Glendale Road, Dimmock Street, portions of Furnace Brook Parkway, Presidents Lane, Willow Avenue, Oval Road, Gilmore Street, Carruth Street and portions along Hancock Street near Veterans Memorial Stadium.

• Ward 2 Precinct 3A - This "sub-precinct" serves voters who live in the North Tower at 1000 Southern Artery. Voters in Ward 2 Precinct 3A will vote in the north tower's library. This polling location is adjacent to the community center also in the north tower that still serves as the polling precinct for Ward 2 Precinct 2.

There are bound to be registered voters who do not like their new "precinct assignments." But redistricting an entire city that has experienced significant build-up in certain areas during the last decade trickle down to established neighborhoods. That means some people will be bumped into another precinct.

But Shea did his best to re-draw the lines in a logical manner according to state law.

For example, registered voters in apartment buildings at 25 and 45 School Street across from Saint John's Church have been redistricted from Ward 5 Precinct 1 to Ward 2 Precinct 5. They can now walk across the street and vote at Saint John's Church that serves as a polling precinct for Ward 2 Precinct 4 and Ward 2 Precinct 5. Before the change, these voters voted at the Bernazzani School.

"I have to draw the lines somewhere so it's hard for some people to understand how that could have happened," Shea says, referring to the old set up.

A few other observations from the redistricting process: The largest precinct geographically in the city is Ward 4 Precinct 1 in West Quincy. This area - known as Saint Moritz - abuts the Blue Hills and includes Willard Street, Ames Street, West Street and Wesson Street.

The smallest precinct geographically is Ward 6 Precinct 1 in the Norfolk Downs area. This part of the city is densely populated with many two and three-family homes. Streets include Walker, Atlantic, Billings (Street), Holyoke, Webster and Newbury Avenue.

But the smallest precinct in 10 years?

That could be in Quincy Center where apartment buildings are part of the Quincy Center revitalization project. The denser the population, the smaller the precinct land-wise.

THE QUINCY PARTNERSHIP will host its 16th annual Saint Patrick's Day Luncheon Friday, March 16 at noon at the Quincy Lodge of Elks Tirrell Room, Quarry Street.

One of the city's rites of spring, the luncheon is among the most popular social events of the year.

Tickets for the luncheon - which features a traditional corned beef and cabbage dinner - are $50 per person. They're available by contacting Quincy Partnership members as well as at the City Clerk's office, 1259 Hancock St.

FILE THIS ONE under "I went to a Dog Show and a Cat Fight Broke Out."

Kathleen Nugent of Houghs Neck attended last week's Westminster Kennel Club's Dog Show in New York City. Her English Springer Spaniel, Riley, was among the dogs entered in the show.

During the second night of the show, there was an altercation between two dog handlers. Kathy said one of the handlers apparently kicked or tripped another dog. The dog's handler took exception and "clocked" the other handler. Apparently a long day of dog showings and stress got the "worst" of these two handlers.

But, there's also some happy news to report.

There was a wedding. Two owners of the same dog tied the knot in the main show ring at Madison Square Garden on Valentine's Day. The dog's handler, dressed in a tuxedo, was the best man.

No word on whether the dog went on the honeymoon.

Scenes From Yesterday

St. Mary's R. C. Church, W. QUINCY, Mass.

THIS IS A 1912 postcard view of St. Mary's Catholic Church on Crescent Street in West Quincy. This view shows only the basement portion of the present church that was built in 1901. Archbishop Williams laid the cornerstone. The upper portion was added in 1917. The church is made of Weymouth seam-faced granite even though it was built to serve the Quincy granite quarry workers. The wooden building on the right was the original church building built in 1841 and dedicated to Bishop Fenwick. It was the first Catholic Church built south of Boston and served parishioners as far south as Plymouth. When the new church was finished, the first building became known as St. Joseph's Hall and served as a function facility for many years. It is now a parking lot. Opposes Proposed Moon Island Wind Turbine

I am writing today in opposition to the proposed wind turbine for Moon Island.

My husband and I moved to Quincy almost 11 years ago. We chose Squantum because it had everything we were looking for in raising our children.

Almost 11 years later I am very unhappy with the City of Quincy and the condition it is in. We have eight supermarkets, and a convenience store on every other corner (let's add a C-mart). To date there are 111 salons? I thought this was the City of Presidents, seems like it is the city of manicures.

So now let's put a 400 foot wind turbine on a 97 foot hill 5,000 feet from the homes of Squantum.

It is bad enough we listen to gun fire every morning while feeding our children breakfast.

It is bad enough the BFD uses Dorchester Street as a race track to see how fast their engine and ladder trucks can go around bends in the road before tipping over.

And must we point out the BPD, BFD and shelter vans and buses stopping for pedestrians?

Oh right they don't so walking my children to school is like walking suicide alley.

Why have the employees of Boston considered us?

Because we are not their neighbors and they are not barreling down their neighborhood streets, their kids are safe. If you want a lesson in profanity stop by the Tedeschi's/Dunkin' Donuts when the shelter vans unload. You shouldn't have to cover your kids ears while getting your coffee.

Mr. Koch I thought all shelter vehicles were non-stop to the island? You might want to look into that.

So do I live in Boston Mayor Koch or Quincy? Why are you in bed with Boston and throwing your residents under the bus.

Can you see the wind turbine from your house? Is it in your back yard? Funny I hardly ever see the IBEW turbine in Dorchester moving?

How much energy are we going to receive? Oh right hardly any, it's Boston's wind turbine. Why don't you and Mayor Menino put the turbines in your yards? Better yet why don't you put the $4 million into your residents?

I called the city to have the nets replaced at the Squantum park. The response I received, "that is not our responsibility."

Maybe the kids won't mind the noise of the turbines, because they are too busy watching their parents clean the glass out of the park everyday before they get to play.

How's the wind turbine? Mayor Koch, I do believe every year Ward 6 has the highest voter turn out, yet we don't matter to you.

Residents of Quincy, don't forget a 400 foot turbine on a 97 foot hill 5,000 feet from shore will be an eyesore for all, not just Squantum.

Purchasing Agent Would Save $20,000, Mayor Burgin Says

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin urged legislative action to create the post of city purchasing agent, a move which, he said, would save the city at least $20,000 a year.

"I am convinced," he told the City Council, "that a purchasing officer would save at least four times the amount of his pay."

Burgin said he knew of instances when two city departments, one small and one large, purchased the same thing on the same day at two different stores for two different prices.

CIVIL WAR VET DIES

James H. Webb, 91, of Navy veteran of the Civil War and the next to last surviving member of Quincy's Paul J. Revere Post, Grand Army of the Republic, died at his home in Boston.

Webb manned the main topsail starboard watch aboard the USS Sacramento that chased the Confederate raider Alabama across the Atlantic and around Africa into a trap in a French harbor.

DEMOCRATS COMPLAIN

Members of the Democratic City Committee complained to Gov. Charles F. Hurley that aliens were getting preferred treatment over citizens by the WPA and they wanted the rules changed.

Recently, they said, the WPA sent 40 painters to the Fore River Shipyard to work on the cruiser Vincennes. Thirty-eight citizens were kept at 67 cents an hour while two aliens were put back on the WPA payroll at $1 an hour.

FIRE STATION APPROVED

The City Council voted 6-3 to authorize the building of a $160,000 Central Fire Station, with the federal government picking up $72,000 of the cost and the city $88,000.

"How can the city make any savings in the tax rate if we continue to borrow and keep the debt at a high figure?" declared Councillor John W. Savage, one of those opposed.

He was joined in opposition by Councillors Myron N. Lane and Edward J. Sandberg.

'The Best Thing That Ever Happened To Me'

Eileen Durgin Lives Out Dream Performing With Boston Ballet

By EMILY TAFT

Eileen Durgin of Quincy, a third grader at Beechwood Knoll Elementary School, recently lived out her dream when she danced in Boston Ballet's production of the Nutcracker. Since Durgin, who is eight years old, started dancing at the age of five, it has been her dream to be in the Nutcracker.

"It has been the best thing that has ever happened to me," said Durgin. "It was really a special place and ballet to be a part of."

Durgin followed in the footsteps of six other family members who had been in the ballet when they were younger. She also played the roll of a doll, which was what her sister, mother, and two aunts played when they participated.

Durgin said she enjoyed every moment of her experience on stage and hopes that come next year she will be able to play a bigger role that will involve more scenes.

"I think one of her highlights this year was seeing that she can aspire to be one of the older dancers," said mom Maureen. "The older dancers were really a big thrill for her. She took in so much of what they did on stage."

During the month the ballet was playing, Durgin had to endure long nights and early mornings. She also had to learn more than just dance steps during her performances. Durgin said that she had to memorize when to go on and off stage and where to be at certain points in her scene.

"I thought she would be happy when the show ended because of the long days," said Maureen. "But when it ended it was the opposite. She was sad that it was over."

Durgin was in the "Battle Scene" of the ballet, a dream scene where the main character Clara is dreaming and all of her toys come to life. Durgin's big debut was on Nov. 27 and she continued to participate until it finished on Dec. 31.

"Eileen enjoyed every moment from the time she entered Boston," said Maureen. "She was nervous the first and second day of performances but after that she had fun. She hated to have it end."

Durgin attends ballet school at the Boston Ballet Academy every Monday and Wednesday for a couple of hours, and she also practices every weekend. She is also in Irish Step dancing classes, which is what her older sister decided to stick with when it came time to choose. Durgin said prefers ballet over the Irish step dancing because she enjoys ballet too much to let it go.

"I just love ballet so much," said Durgin. "It's just so magical to be a part of, and it helps you stay in shape."

Durgin will continue to have her dancing plate full while she waits for next year's Nutcracker season to arrive. In July she will be heading to Chicago for Irish step dancing competition, and there are other shows she might be participating in come May.

"She recently has slowed down in talking about the Nutcracker experience," said Maureen. "What is on her mind now is that she will soon be starting to learn the violin."

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Roasted Scallops, Red Pepper & Feta

I found a recipe recently which included one of my favorite seafoods: scallops. And it is pretty simple because it is made all in one pot.

Shrimp can also be used.

I used angel hair pasta and poured the mixture over it. But, it can be also served over flat bread.

ROASTED SCALLOPS

1-pound scallops
1 10-ounce jar roasted red peppers
4 scallions, sliced
2 tablespoons dry white wine
1-tablespoon fresh lemon juice, plus wedges for serving

Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons olive oil
4 ounces feta cheese (I used goat cheese)
12 ounces of angel hair pasta (cooked)
Flat bread for serving

Heat oven to 425 degrees. In a baking dish, combine the scallops, peppers, scallions, wine, lemon juice and salt and pepper.

Drizzle with the olive oil and sprinkle with the feta cheese.

Bake uncovered until the scallops are done (about 10 to 15 minutes).

Serve with the lemon wedges either with flat bread or the pasta. If you serve it with the pasta, add an extra tablespoon of lemon juice over the top.

Italian Lemon Tea Cookies

Recently, my daughter Ann Marie brought me a couple of cookies so I could enjoy them with a cup of tea. And of course I had to have the recipe so that I could share them with all of you.

In this recipe, I'm using a lemon extract and vanilla, but almond, anisette can also be used.

LEMON TEA COOKIES

4 cups flour
1 cup melted butter or margarine
4 eggs

1-cup sugar
2 tablespoons vanilla
2 tablespoons lemon extract
2 tablespoons baking powder

Mix sugar and butter together. Add the eggs, lemon extract, vanilla and milk. Mix well. Then slowly add the dry ingredients.

Drop by tablespoons on to a cookie sheet and bake in a 350-degree oven for 5-10 minutes.

An icing can be used to the top with candy sprinkles.

'Dance & The World Of John Adams' Lecture, Demonstration Saturday

The social dances in John Adams' lifetime reveal great changes in personal and public behavior in the world he encountered and so successfully navigated.

The public is invited to see and hear how the dances of his day reflect these changes at an entertaining lecture-demonstration Saturday, Feb. 25 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Accomplished dancers in period costume will be accompanied by live music of the times in the historic

H.H. Richardson building of the Crane Library.

The program was designed and organized by Veronica McClure with the help of English, Scottish, and colonial dancers from the Boston area. McClure has been square and round dancing for decades and has taught, demonstrated, and conducted workshops and classes on rounds, in addition to being involved in other dance forms and dance history.

She has been involved with many dance organizations, including Roundalab, the Universal Round Dance Council, and the Council of Research on Dance.

The performance is the first event in John Adams Unbound, a special two-month program and exhibition series about John Adams and his library.

The series has been made possible through a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the American Library Association.

For more information, call 617-376-1316.

History, Science, Technology Connection Topic At Historical Society

Quincy Historical Society is hosting two programs this week at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center that explore the connections between history, science, and technology.

Tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m., Les Tyralla, antique clock and barometer restorer, will give an illustrated presentation about the different ways that time-keeping has historically evolved in step with technology.

The presentation will consider what these advances have meant for societies at different times. In particular, it will focus on American and European timekeeping during the last 200 years and how Massachusetts and Connecticut dominated production of clocks and watches for many decades starting in the late 1700s.

Audience members may bring in a clock (be sure to unhook the pendulum bob before transporting and pack the clock well), or a photograph of a clock.

Tyralla will provide comments about the piece in terms of its history and its general worth.

On Friday, Feb. 24, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., the Historical Society will host a program by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and the South Shore Astronomical Society that combines an historical perspective with some first-hand astronomy.

Inside the Academy, there will be an illustrated presentation on The Stars and Navigation, the original GPS used by seafarers for centuries. On the Academy lawn, there will be four telescopes set up for guided stargazing.

Both events are open to everyone. Admission is free.

New Pill Stronger Than Vicodin Senators Want Powerful New Opiate Regulated

With an average of 10 Massachusetts residents dying from opiate overdoses every week, a bi-partisan coalition of state senators are asking the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to carefully consider requests by drug companies to begin selling and marketing a new super-strength, hydrocodone-based painkiller.

"As the elected representatives of a state in the grips of a growing opiate drug epidemic that was, we believe, touched off by the FDA's 1996 approval of OxyContin, we are very wary of the impact a new, powerful opiate will have on the Commonwealth's already high drug addiction rate," the letter states. "Considering the similar potencies of hydrocodone and oxycodone, the active opiate in OxyContin, we urge the FDA to learn from the devastating lessons taught us by OxyContin, and refuse to approve any pure hydrocodone medication that lacks proper safeguards and restrictions to prevent abuse."

The letter was written by Sen. John F. Keenan (D-Quincy), co-chairman of the Joint Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse, and co-signed by Sen. Stephen Brewer (D-Barre), Sen. Jennifer Flanagan (D-Leominster), Sen. Bruce Tarr (R-Gloucester), Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth), Sen. James Eldridge (D-Acton), Sen. Katherine Clark (D-Melrose), Sen. James Welch (D-West Springfield), and Sen. Daniel Wolf (Harwich).

Painkillers such as Vicodin consist of hydrocodone mixed with acetaminophen. Currently, there is no painkiller that contains pure hydrocodone, which is as potent as morphine. OxyContin contains pure oxycodone. Percocet is oxycodone mixed with acetaminophen.

There are four pharmaceutical companies looking for permission to begin manufacturing, selling and marketing a pure hydrocodone pill. The coalition specifically asks the FDA to:

- Review any application for a single-dose pure hydrocodone medication in the backdrop of the ongoing opiate epidemic affecting Massachusetts and many other states across the nation;
- Recognize that any new immediate-release opiate introduced to the market will become a target for widespread misuse, and mandate that any new hydrocodone medication feature a tamper-resistant formulation that will deter diversion;
- Reflect on the lessons learned from OxyContin in regards to inappropriate labeling and corresponding off-label marketing practices that lead to unintended dependency and addiction;

• Consider, in light of the tens of thousands of Americans who have died from their addictions to opiates, taking the unprecedented step of requiring practitioners to adhere to established model medical guidelines for the prescribing and use of controlled substances in the treatment of pain.

Vicodin is the most prescribed and most-abused drug in America, according to the Drug Enforcement Administration, which recently reported that the number of hydrocodone-related emergency room visits have skyrocketed from 19,221 in 2000, to 86,258 in 2009.

REPAIRING WORN RINGS

When rings are subject to heavy wear over the years, the shank may become too thin. To return the ring to like-new condition, the jeweler will have to make a repair that involves removing the worn section and replacing it with a new piece made of the same alloy. Once the new piece is aligned with the top portion of the ring, properly sized, and soldered into place, the ring must be inspected for smooth transitions from all perspectives. After a perfect taper is achieved with filing, and each soldered junction is smoothed, detail work to re-engrave the new portion to match the old is undertaken if necessary. A final polish and cleaning returns the ring to nearly new condition. Most people have a favorite ring and often wear it daily no matter what they're doing, but daily activities can damage a ring's shank. The shank comes in contact with anything and everything, and wears at a much faster rate than the top of the ring. If you have any questions about the jewelry we offer or repairs to your current pieces, please feel free to contact us at 617-773-3636. Here at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center our educated staff along with experience, skill and knowledge will help you make a confident purchase.

Earn (And Keep) More Money

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

You probably already know that there was an increase in Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) monthly payments at the beginning of the year. If you receive monthly Social Security or SSI payments, you received a 3.6 percent cost-of-living adjustment beginning with your payment for the month of January 2012.

For people who receive Social Security retirement benefits, there's more good news. In addition to receiving a little more each month, you may now earn more income without offsetting your benefits because the "earnings test" numbers also have gone up.

If you have reached your full retirement age (age 66 for anyone born between 1943 and 1954), the earnings test does not apply and you may earn as much money as you can without any effect on your benefits. However, if you are younger than full retirement age, collecting benefits and still working, we do offset some of your benefit amount after a certain earnings limit is met. For people under full retirement age in 2012, the annual exempt amount is $14,640, and if you do reach that limit, we withhold $1 for every $2 above that limit from your monthly benefit amount. For people who retired early, continue working and will obtain full retirement age in 2012, the annual exempt amount is $38,880 and we will withhold $1 for every $3 you earn over the limit from your monthly benefits.

You can learn more about the earnings test and how benefits may be reduced by visiting our website, www.socialsecurity.gov, and searching on the topic "earnings test."

Find out what your full retirement age is at our Retirement Age page, www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/ageincrease.htm

Riley Still A 'Winner' At Westminster

Quincy's Kathleen Nugent Proud Of Her English Springer Spaniel

By SCOTT JACKSON

Kathy Nugent's four-year old English Springer Spaniel Riley didn't fetch an award at the Westminster Kennel Club's dog show, but the Houghs Neck resident is still proud of her pup.

"He did very, very well," said Nugent, a building inspector for the city. "A small town boy in a big city, he stood there with all the rest of the dogs that are out there all the time, that do this all the time - big shows, this is a big, big show - he doesn't do big shows every-day or every week or every month. This was a big deal and he stood his ground and showed well."

Riley is both an American Grand Champion and a Canadian Champion. He had previously competed at the Westminster show in 2010. The event, held annually at New York City's Madison Square Garden, is considered the premier dog show in the country.

In this year's competition, held on Valentine's Day, Riley faced about 20 other English Springer Spaniels, including his sister Lizzie. Nugent and Riley traveled to the show with Lizzie's owner Nancy Bitters of Connecticut and Nugent's friend Cindy Lester. Lester's own dog William died within the past year, and Nugent let her handle Riley at last week's show.

"She was heartbroken that she wouldn't be able to go to Westminster," Nugent said. "So when William passed away that's when we came up with this idea that Cindy would show Riley at Westminster."

This made Riley one of the few dogs not to have a professional handler at the show. Nugent, however, said that Lester was a good enough handler to turn professional if she decided to do so.

Though the judging took place at 1 p.m. Valentine's Day, Nugent's preparation began the prior night when she waited in the blistering cold outside the Garden for some 90 minutes before she could drop off the equipment, including a blow dryer and a crate she'd need for the next day.

The day Riley's breed was judged Nugent woke up before 4 a.m. to take him for a walk and then washed the white part of his coat. They arrived at the Garden at 6:30 and spent the morning in a large waiting area with the other dogs. Nugent said she didn't feel nervous waiting for Riley's turn, but she did want him to do well.

"I wanted to make sure that he was going to show well," Nugent explained. "It was more just making sure that everything was going to go right and that he'd show well because that's the most important part."

The judge, Geir Flyckt-Pedersen, chose four winners. There was a best of breed, a best of opposite sex, and two awards of merits. Nugent heard from spectators that Riley should've won one of the prizes.

"People had watched him that had met him earlier in the day and patted him while he was getting ready and then they came back [after the judging] and said they really liked him - they would've picked him - that's kind of funny," Nugent said.

Up to 1,000 people met Riley before and after the show, according to Nugent.

Riley was one of the few dogs whose owner allowed fans that opportunity, and Nugent said he stayed calm and friendly the whole time. She said he acted as a "great ambassador for his breed."

The next competition for Riley might be the New England Sporting Dog Show in March, but Nugent said that's not yet set in stone. Besides going to shows hosted by the clubs she's a member of, Nugent maintains she only goes to shows her friends also attend and prefers to stay local, only going to events within a two-hour drive of her Houghs Neck Home.

"It will be more of just shows we want to go to," Nugent said of her future plans for Riley. "Not because we're trying to achieve a goal but just because we're interested in going to a show."

the largest user of fuel, energy and electricity in The Commonwealth, because the system is so large.

"THE RIDE service costs that we provide for our disabled customers have tripled since 2003—it's up to $93 million now and is a federally mandated program," Boyle also discussed employee health care costs, which have grown by nearly 400% over the last decade.

In addition, since 2000 the T's primary source of funding, which was a 20% share of statewide sales tax receipts has not produced the increased revenue originally projected. In fiscal year 2013, which begins this July, available revenues are projected to be as much as $185 million below the T's operating expenses.

Boyle said, "The T spends approximately $450 million per year in its debt payments, which is equivalent to all the fares that we collect. So, every dollar of fare money that we collect goes just to paying off the debt services."

This enormous debt with which the T is burdened was roundly criticized by many of the nearly 100 people who spoke at the hearing. Some suggested the debt should be passed off to The Commonwealth, as the fallout from these service reductions will most certainly affect many other aspects of living life in Massachusetts.

This theory was supported by all those recognizing that this isn't just a transportation problem; this is an issue which will have ramifications on industry, housing markets, tourism, road-use, pollution and commerce, among many others.

State Sen. John Keenan said, "We have been expressing our concerns to the MBTA. The burden of these fare hikes belongs to not just the people in this room. People benefit from the MBTA all across the Commonwealth...the MBTA is a big, economic engine."

City Councillor Doug Gutro addressed the potential change to ferry service. "We have a coveted ferry system to Boston's Logan Airport. The proposed cuts will complicate, compromise and cripple the commute for South Shore residents."

State Rep. Bruce Ayers urged Davis "not to balance the MBTA budget on the backs of its riders," and Rep. Ron Mariano described the proposed changes as a "short-sighted disaster." Mariano pointed to the challenges involved with the construction of the Fore River Bridge replacement, slated for the same time ferry service would be eliminated.

Many of the speakers talked of losing their jobs, their access to their education, or their ability to visit medical facilities, many of which are located on proposed route-cuts. Economic hardship was a common thread amongst protesters.

Some offered suggestions in handling the budget deficit, such as proposing MBTA employee pay cuts, furloughs and fewer benefits, such as free family ridership. One speaker suggested the management 'get rid of their Lexus cars.'

On a less serious note, some speakers spoke of the impact upon attendance of sporting and cultural events in Boston and how that may affect the regional economy; the Boston Red Sox and Fenway Park were mentioned more than once.

Councillor Kevin Coughlin referred to the T's debt as a 'fiscal cancer' and suggested that MASSPORT should help support the services to Logan, and that "the Legislature should shift the Big Dig SIP [State Implementation Plan] out of the MBTA budget and back to the state!"

Councillor Margaret Laforest questioned how significantly the T's changes will affect the $1.6 billion in Quincy tourism, while one irate speaker suggested to Davis that he "stick to a budget or turn over control to someone who can."

Mayor Koch spoke to the two scenarios being proposed by the T. "Either of these scenarios is just not acceptable to the city of Quincy. Our future depends on the MBTA—you're changing the rules. Working together with the government, we can fix this."

Because of the huge attendance at the meeting, the allotted time was extended to provide a forum for more people to speak.

Concerns regarding the T's proposals may be addressed at fareproposal@mbta.com, calling 617-222-3200, or writing MBTA Fare Proposal, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116.

Quincy Chamber Marks 2nd Anniversary At Annual Meeting, Business Expo

Over 350 business owners and state and city officials recently came out to enjoy an evening of food, networking and fun at the Quincy Chamber of Annual Meeting and Business Expo.

The event, held at the Boston Marriot Quincy, marked the second year of the new organization that was formed as a partnership between Quincy 2000 Collaborative and Discover Quincy.

"The past two years have been fantastic," said Ed Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Chamber. "It's clear from the positive response we've received over the past two years that combining our efforts and energies under the Quincy Chamber name has allowed us to provide better services and programs to the business and tourist communities."

During the event, Quincy Chamber President Dean Rizzo outlined key initiatives planned for 2012, including:

- Shop Local, an exclusive program for Quincy Chamber members that encourages business owners, residents and visitors to utilize goods and services provided by Quincy based businesses. Through Shop Local, consumers can get coupons and other promotions automatically sent via text or email;
- Development of a revised Visitor Guide and City of Quincy Map, as well as a focus on regional advertising for tourism;
- Attracting the bio-tech industry to the City of Quincy.

"As an organization, we continuously strive to provide as many opportunities as possible for our members to market their business and to create programs that they may not otherwise be able to do on their own, whether it's due to cost or resources," Rizzo said.

In addition to the networking aspect of the evening, the event also included a business showcase with over 60 different Quincy Chamber businesses represented. It was an opportunity for members to learn about each other's business and to generate business contacts and new customers.

McNamee Meeting On Modern Neighborhood Watch

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee is co-sponsoring a community crime watch meeting with Lt. Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Department Wednesday, Feb. 29 at 7 p.m. in the Squantum School Library.

In response to continued concerns about property crimes in and around Ward 6 neighborhoods, Lt. Minton will conduct a community workshop on the "Modern Neighborhood Watch." He will specifically address proactive measures that can be taken by a community working in coordination with the police department that will deter criminal activity.

"A watchful neighborhood where residents are enlisted to be reporters of suspicious activity is the first line of defense in the modern neighborhood watch," McNamee said. "Today, one can pick up a cell phone and make a call instantly if they observe something that looks out of place. This speed of observer reporting can produce real results and in many instances stop crime before it occurs."

McNamee has established an e-mail newsletter that provides updates on Ward 6 issues.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, Feb. 5, at approximately 3:53 p.m., Officers Declan Breslin, Steve DesRoche, John Leuchte, Paul Foley and his K-9 partner Rex were dispatched to the Quincy Point area for a report of a "Breaking and Entering in progress."

LT. DAN MINTON

While in route to the scene, dispatch updated the Officers, giving a description of the suspect, who was wearing black fingerless gloves with skulls printed on them. The witness reported that the suspect pried open the rear sliding door of a neighbor's house and went inside.

Officer Foley was first on scene and drove his cruiser into the drive way, parking it at the back of the home right in front of the rear deck where he could clearly observe the rear sliding door half way open. Officer Foley then deployed K-9 Rex and notified dispatch of his findings. The other officers arrived on scene and surrounded the front of the house. Seconds later, the suspect fled out the front door of the home, being chased by the officers as they radioed the suspect's direction of travel.

Officer DesRoche jumped into his cruiser while Officers Breslin and Leuchte gave foot chase. As the suspect ran, he began to discard pieces of jewelry that he was carrying in his hands. Officer DesRoche then pulled his cruiser directly in front of the suspect, who appeared to be tiring. The chase ended on Grafton Street, but this was followed by a struggle to handcuff the suspect after he fell to the ground and tucked his arms into his torso.

Once detained, Officers found two screwdrivers and a crow bar on him, along with a film canister containing four baggies of Heroin inside the suspect's pants pockets. Officer Foley returned to the home and conducted a search for additional suspects to no avail. The suspect, a 26-year-old homeless man, was charged with "Breaking and Entering in the Day time with Intent to commit a felony, Wanton Destruction of property, Larceny from a building, Resisting arrest, Possession of burglarious tools, Possession of Class A w/intent to distribute and school zone violation." Later on, during the booking process, Officer Jimmy Whedbee located jewelry (several small earrings) inside the suspect's jacket.

Officer Foley then read the suspect his Miranda rights, which he stated he understood. The officer asked the suspect if he was under the influence of drugs and the suspect responded, "Drugs what drugs?" The suspect then said, "I don't have any drugs and if I do, they came from inside the house." The suspect then refused to answer any questions.

Officers' Leuchte and Breslin collected the jewelry that the suspect discarded during the foot pursuit. The victim came to the police station shortly after and confirmed that the items recovered were hers. There was a total of 52 pieces of jewelry recovered from the suspect. After taking photos of the stolen jewelry, the items were returned to the victim.

The suspect has an extensive criminal record with an upcoming case in Norfolk Superior Court this March from an incident in Walpole where he was charged with "Armed assault to kill, Mayhem, Armed robbery and Assault and battery with a dangerous weapon." He also has recent charges of "Home invasion, armed robbery and A&B dangerous weapon (claw hammer)." In December 2010, the suspect was convicted of "Possession of both class A and B" in South Boston. He was on parole until March 2011.

Due to the dangerousness of the suspect, Officer Foley requested no bail for the suspect.

Nice Work!

Nice Work! Also goes out to the witness who noticed the suspect walk down the driveway of the victim's home. He knew that no one was home and the suspect did not belong there, so he called "911." Dispatcher Laurie Brancaccio stayed on the line with the witness, forwarding the information to the responding Officers, who quickly apprehended the culprit. This is just another example of the public working to make our community safer.

mented into the 2013 fiscal year budget proposal. An additional $10 million in funding will support students, families and educators in the 24 gateway cities.

The agenda focuses on five goals:

- Getting every child reading proficiently by third grade;
- Providing every child with a healthy platform for education;
- Providing students, particularly English language learners, with the quality and quantity of education they need to succeed;
- Preparing all students for college and career success; and
- Seeding and incentivizing education.

ers and Tackey Chan joined Murray on the tour that took the group all over Quincy High School.

"It is important that kids have the first-class facilities to prepare them for their future," said Murray. "When visiting here today I got the sense that the kids appreciate the facility and are working hard. There are a lot of good things happening in Quincy and we are glad to be a part of it."

Murray went to a number of different wings of the school, where he was able to see what Principal Frank Santoro calls 21st century

The group stopped to look at the TV station classroom, the fashion design classroom where students have been working on making dresses out of recycled products, the gym and the culinary department.

The group made its final stop on the top floor of the school to talk students about their science fair projects. Murray spoke with a handful of students and learned

"The Lieutenant Governor asked to visit Quincy and the high school, and to see how the school is designed," said DeCristofaro. "We were interested in what he had to say and it was a pleasure to have him here."

Senate Approves Utility Emergency Response Bill

The Senate has passed legislation that addresses the poor emergency response efforts by utility companies in the wake of last year's storms that left tens of thousands without power for days.

Utility companies drew heat for their apparent unpreparedness, the lack of status updates for customers, and lengthy delays in restoring power after the state was hit by Tropical Storm Irene in August and a snowstorm in some areas in October.

"These storms, by many measures, were not severe storms. Yet we saw some of the longest delays in power restoration in more than two decades," said Sen. John F. Keenan (D-Quincy). "It became very clear in the days following these storms that these power companies were woefully and dangerously underprepared. Routine line maintenance and tree trimming had not been taking place. There were too few crews on call. And customers could not receive reliable, regular updates.

The bill requires public utility companies to provide to customers twice-daily estimates of when electricity will be restored following a 24-hour damage assessment period. Utilities will be required to designate a liaison to each community without power, as well as assign staff to help the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency coordinate a statewide response.

Prior to a storm, utility companies will have to prepare an emergency response plan that includes procedures for dispatching work crews, identifying manpower and equipment needs, and establishing a call center located in Massachusetts, with sufficient staffing to handle increases in calls.

Additionally, utilities will pay an assessment charge to help the Department of Public Utilities pay for storm investigations. The cost of this assessment cannot be passed on to customers. The bill also ensures that any penalties assessed on utilities for violation of emergency preparation and response will be credited to customers.

Finally, to further ensure that public utility companies in Massachusetts improve their response to cities and towns during a storm, the bill extends the possibility of utilities being placed in receivership in cases of gross negligence. Currently, only Unitil is subject to receivership. That company took more than three weeks to restore power to thousands in Central Massachusetts following a December 2008 ice storm.

During debate on the legislation, Sen. Keenan proposed to have utility companies provide at least one line crew and one forestry crew to each community, as well as one supervisor with the ability to confer with city and town officials and immediately dispatch crews and equipment to areas of need. The proposal was not included in the final version of the Senate bill.

"A major source of frustration for my district was the glaring lack of manpower, as well as the inability of utility companies to work efficiently with municipal officials," he said. "We had municipal officials identifying urgent needs in their communities, but not having anybody from the utilities authorized to make immediate decisions to respond to those situations. Much time was wasted while utility workers sought permission from those higher up the chain of command."

The bill moved to House of Representatives for approval.

City Upgrades Online Property Database

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday the completion of major upgrades to the City's online property database that will provide residents with easier access and clear aerial images of properties across the City.

As part of Mayor Koch's 2011 Capital Improvement Plan, the City partnered with Applied Geographics to integrate a state-of-the-art Geographic Information System (GIS) into the City's existing online property viewer. The new system incorporates some of the key features of the Vision Property Viewer system while adding useful aerial imaging tools.

The GIS employs a user-friendly format that will enable residents to obtain property information and abutters' lists instantaneously. In the past, the Vision software required a search by individual address that did not incorporate the aerial photography.

With the GIS, residents will be greeted with an aerial image of the City and search bar for any parcel. Once a specific parcel is selected, the property information will be displayed with a current valuation and basic dimensional information in the standard Vision format. A ward/precinct map is also available with the recently updated boundaries implemented through redistricting.

A link to the GIS is available on the City's homepage on the bottom right hand side. For more information, contact the IT Department at 617-376-1120.

Local Princesses Celebrate Valentine’s Day

More than 100 local “princesses” recently celebrated Valentine’s Day at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church Annual Valentine’s Princess Tea.

Princesses enjoyed Valentine’s Day sweets, punch and tea while and participated in a variety of holiday activities. In addition to taking part in royal dances led by Brigid Carroll, princesses had their nails painted and made brightly colored paper flowers, Valentine’s Day cards and royal bracelets.

Once a princess had completed all her activities, she received her magic wand from Snow White (portrayed by Jennifer Logue) and Cinderella, portrayed by Ward 5 City Councillor Kirsten Hughes, who once portrayed Princess Ariel (The Little Mermaid) professionally at Walt Disney World.

their magic wand to “King John” (portrayed by church Pastor John Castricum) to receive their official princess hat. The event concluded with story time, as Snow

“All the little princesses had a wonderful time,” said Gayle Mackay, who organized the event.

“The Princess Tea has become a much anticipated annual event that the girls and their families look forward to every year.”

Town Brook Construction Slated To Start In Spring

the Town Brook by at least a factor of 10 – and most likely considerably more than that – after years of degradation, and it is a vital element to our Quincy Center redevelopment plan,” Koch said. “This project will have far-reaching environmental benefits while at the same time allowing us to create thousands of new jobs in a revitalized Quincy Center.

Added Stephen Chrusciel, the Director of Construction Services for the City’s Quincy Center redevelopment partner, Street Works Development:

“The relocation of the Town Brook culvert is the crucial first step toward completion of the New Quincy Center. Successfully completing this project will allow us to begin private construction in 2013. We are excited to see this get underway.”

A total of $10.1 million in state funding is set aside for the project, which will transform a 1,700-foot section of the Brook’s long-degraded downtown culvert into a dramatically improved waterway that will daylight more than 200 feet of the Brook, improve the rainbow smelt habitat, and create several new “pocket parks” in the Quincy Center area, according to Mayor Koch’s office.

Last year, the Department of Environmental Protection issued an extensive permit allowing the restoration project to move forward. The DEP permit includes a series of 47 specific conditions that touch on monitoring rules, construction standards and the ultimate performance of the Brook under the newly aligned culvert. The DEP concluded that the new daylight Brook culvert realigned on the Southern side of the Walter Hannon Parkway will meet or exceed flood-control guidelines, and it states that “important wildlife habitat functions will be improved” by the project.

The ruling is currently being appealed, but those appeals have not affected the construction schedule to date.

Evening Dedicated To Legendary Coach Bob Laing

NQHS Hockey Hall Of Fame Inducts Inaugural Class

By SEAN BRENNAN

Judging by the large number of folks in attendance, last Friday's inaugural North Quincy High School Hockey Hall of Fame Awards banquet at the Quincy Neighborhood Club was a rousing success.

It was a long time coming but well worth the wait.

An estimated 350 people filled the main reception hall and adjoining dining area and bar to honor 27 of North Quincy's best hockey players from the 1940s through to the 1990s.

"We were extremely happy with how it went with the large turnout and the great atmosphere," said Al Grazioso, Hall of Fame Committee member on Tuesday. "It was more than we could have expected. It was just a great night for North Quincy hockey and the Quincy hockey community."

Following a cocktail hour, Master of Ceremonies Jim Fatseas welcomed those in attendance before thanking the family and friends of the inductees for helping to make the night so special. He also acknowledged the hard work and dedication of every coach who has ever spent time behind the bench for the Red Raiders including Kevin Lewis, Kevin Jago, Tom

Fatseas went on to explain that well over 50 former players were nominated for the inaugural Hall of Fame induction class before mentioning that moving forward a banner with the names of all inductees and the year that they graduated would be hung at the Quincy Youth Arena, as well as a banner hung at NQHS along with a plaque in the Trophy Room at the school.

After explaining briefly the history of North Quincy hockey, which began as far back as 1939-1940, before shutting down during World War II and, starting back up in 1947, Fatseas turned the microphone over to Bobby Lippens who dedicated the night to legendary coach Bob Laing who was posthumously honored for the instrumental role he played in keeping the program afloat from 1953-1971.

"He was my only long term coach," Lippens remembered, "and he was a hell of a guy. I share his birthday and I can only hope that I live as long and as well as he did. He inspired me and kept me going. He provided me with much needed equipment and he even challenged me academically. Here is to a great role model, Bob Laing."

"Tonight we dedicate the evening to our inductee, Bob Laing," toasted Fatseas. "He played for North in 1940 before there was a real official program. He coached NQHS from 1953 to 1971; 18 years as head coach. Many credit Bob with saving the program in 1953 when they couldn't find a coach to replace Dave Hourin."

"Bob Laing had a number of memorable teams," continued Fatseas. "In 1953, his first year coaching, he led the squad to the South Shore League championship and a state tournament bid. This team contributed four members who will be honored tonight: Ken Hayes, Ed Meleedy, Bob Hayes and Peter Gill."

"Tonight we honor Bob as both a player and a coach and as the cornerstone of the program that has continued to grow and has successfully thrived today. We are dedicating the evening to Bob Laing."

Each of the six decades of inductees then took their respective turns being honored by the crowd. One player from each decade spoke: the 1940s were remembered by Walter Hannon, the 1950s by Kenny Hayes, the 1960s by Robert "Soupy" Campbell, the 1970s by Kevin Lewis, the 1980s by Kevin Jago and the 1990s by former coaches Tom Benson and Bob Doyle.

Also recognized were Friends of the Hall of Fame Harry Messina and Bob Troup (posthumously).

The nomination process for the next Hall of Fame induction class is ongoing. To nominate a former player (must have graduated 10 or more years ago) email Sandy Verhault at sjv122@yahoo.com.

Presidents Finished Season At 2-18; Red Raiders Start Tournament Play Next Week

North Quincy Blanks Quincy On Senior Night

By ALAN McCALL

Normally you throw out the records anytime North Quincy and Quincy play each other, in any sport.

Well, not this time.

On Saturday night, the team that was significantly better on paper was just as dominant on the ice as North Quincy blanked Quincy 6-0 on senior night for both teams at the Quincy Youth Arena. The win keeps North Quincy (10-5-4) in the race for a share of the Patriot League title, which the Red Raiders will share with Duxbury if they beat Whitman-Hanson at the Bog in Kingston on Wednesday afternoon. Quincy finished its season with a 2-18 record.

North Quincy, which shared the league crown with Scituate and Pembroke last season, defeated Whitman-Hanson 5-1 in the first game of the season.

"The kids were very focused from the beginning and have been for the past few weeks," said North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons. "We wanted to get a jump on them (Quincy) early and be aggressive and it worked for us."

Quincy senior goaltender Justin Keenan (34 saves) did his best to keep the game scoreless for the first half the opening period, but the Red Raiders finally broke through with a seeing-eye slap shot from the blue line by junior Rudy Tryon to open the scoring. Less than a minute later, the lead was doubled when senior Shawn Grady potted his first of two goals. Keenan made a brilliant stop on a point-blank bid by junior Nick McGaughey, but the puck fell perfectly for Grady, who only needed to steer the disc into a wide-open goal.

The Red Raiders followed with a pivotal third goal with just 1:08 to play in the period when sophomore James Doherty placed a perfect pass from the left corner in front of the goal where junior forward Josh Hayward redirected the puck into the top left corner of the cage. North Quincy held a 14-2 shots on goal advantage in the period, as Quincy did not get its first shot on goal until the 7:10 mark of the period.

North Quincy wasted no time adding to the lead in the second period, lighting the lamp just 44 seconds in on a wrist shot from the top of the right circle by senior tri-captain Tim Marks which glanced off the glove of Keenan into the goal. The Red Raiders kept up the offensive pressure for most of the second stanza, enjoying a 21-3 shots on goal advantage, and adding two more tallies in the final two minutes of the period on a goal by sophomore Andrew Currie, assisted by Grady and senior David O'Connell. Grady added an unassisted short-handed goal, stealing the puck in the left corner, then slipping the pick between Keenan's pads to give the Red Raiders a 6-0 lead at the second intermission.

The Presidents outshot

North Quincy 7-4 in the third period, but could only manage one serious scoring chance on Red Raiders senior goaltender and tri-captain James Dunn.

"These kids never quit and I am very proud of how they played hard right to the end," said Quincy head coach Tim Lewis. "It's been a challenging season, and I am proud of how this team, especially the seniors, have given a total effort. We have a lot of young players and a strong group of players coming back next season."

While the Quincy players start looking toward the spring sports season, North Quincy is eyeing the prize of a shared league championship and then playing in the Division 2 South state tournament.

"Whitman-Hanson will be a tough game, they will be ready for us," said Gibbons, whose team is unbeaten in its last seven games including six league wins and a nonleague 2-2 tie against perenial powerhouse Canton. "From the time we won the game that started this winning streak, we have been a very different team with a much more positive focus. We are playing very well at the right time," said Gibbons.

Senior Moments: The seniors from both teams were honored, along with their parents during a pre-game ceremony. Playing in their final game for Quincy High School were co-captain Peter Giunta, co-captain John O'Callaghan, Justin Keenan, Adam Nazzaro, Conner Quinn and team manager Coleman McCairn. For North Quincy High School, seniors who were honored were, tri-captain Tim Marks, tri-captain Nick Furey, tri-captain James Dunn, Michael Adduci, David O'Connell, Tommy O'Brien, Colin Kullig, P.J. Gorman and Craig Hines...This was the third meeting of the season between the two teams. Quincy won the first game 2-1 in the Quincy Holiday Tournament in December. North Quincy won the second game 5-1, which was the first league match-up of the season... The Red Raiders will be playing in the Division 2 South state tournament. Last season, NQ was eliminated in the quarterfinals by Franklin 5-2...With his two goals and one assist, Shawn Grady increased his team-high season point total to 26.

Sylvia Cup Results

Quincy picked up its second win of the winter on Feb. 15 at the QYA following a 5-3 victory over Hanover High in the annual Sylvia Cup.

The Sylvia Cup is named for former coaches Bob (QHS) and Jim (Hanover) Sylvia.

The Presidents' Patrick Donovan notched a hat trick while Giunta (goal) and Steven Ross (goal) also lit the lamp. Senior Connor Quinn had two assists and Keenan made 31 saves.

Red Raiders Won Patriot League Championship; Presidents Qualified For Div. 2 Tournament

North Quincy Closes Out Quincy To Finish At 17-3

By SEAN BRENNAN

Whenever North Quincy and Quincy meet on the hardwood, you can be assured that whichever team wins, they are going to be bruised and battered in the end.

Such was the case, again, last Thursday as the Red Raiders and the Presidents played a highly competitive contest at Quincy High that wasn't decided until North Quincy used a 12-0 scoring run late in the fourth quarter to win 48-39.

North Quincy ended its historic regular season at 17-3 (see below). The Red Raiders claimed the outright Patriot League championship with a 60-47 win over Whitman-Hanson on Feb. 14, finishing with a 12-2 league record; North Quincy should be a high seed when the MIAA releases its pairings for the Division 1 South tournament on Friday.

Despite their third loss to North Quincy this winter, Quincy (10-9 overall, 8-6 in league play) lives to play another game. The Presidents had previously qualified for the Division 2 South tournament on the strength of their second-place finish in the Fisher Division.

Quincy hosted the annual Vin Moscardelli Basketball Tournament on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

"It is tough to beat any team three times in a season - that is not an easy thing to do," said NQ head coach Kevin Barrett whose team has now won 11 of the last 13 matchups with Quincy. "The coaching staff stressed to the kids that they had to go into this game and play hard for 32 minutes. We were worried about a hangover after clinching the Patriot League championship a couple of days earlier and already having 16 wins going in was not going to have anything to do with getting a win versus Quincy. It was a game played on a big stage, in a crowded gym; it felt like a tournament game."

Slow Start

For the first 16 minutes, the contest felt more like an early-season scrimmage as both teams struggled to find any offensive touch. But thanks to five first quarter points from North Quincy junior Marquis McClendon and four points from senior Tim Liuzzo, the Red Raiders took a 12-8 lead into the second quarter.

Role were reversed in the second as Quincy, behind four quick points from senior Zerick Fadario (18 points), tied it at 12-12. Free throws by McClendon and senior Paul Cuniff, sandwiched around another Fadario layup, gave North Quincy back the lead at 18-14, but then Quincy's sophomore guard Tino Goncalves went off.

Goncalves banked in a left-handed layup to tie it at 18-18 before sinking an elbow jumper at the buzzer to give the Presidents a 20-18 lead at halftime.

Back-and-Forth Second Half

Goncalves remained hot to start the third quarter when he buried a deep three that gave Quincy its largest lead of the night at 23-18. But the Red Raiders slowly chipped away.

Liuzzo cleaned up a missed jumper (23-20) and, following a strong inside move by Fadario (25-20), McClendon took over. The junior small forward scored on a beautiful spin move in the lane, sank a pull-up 18-footer and scored on a quick drive to put North Quincy on top, 26-25.

Fadario and Liuzzo exchanged buckets (28-27 North Quincy) and when Goncalves drained another deep three-pointer, Quincy took a 30-28 lead into the fourth quarter.

The fourth's opening six minutes were back-and-forth. Liuzzo's put-back evened it at 30-30 but Fadario's hook shot gave Quincy back the lead (32-30). Cuniff tied it with an aggressive move under the basket but, again, Fadario found daylight to put the Presidents back in front at 34-32.

North Quincy sophomore Kyle Richardson's pretty floater tied it at 34-34 before Goncalves' fast break layup gave Quincy its last lead of the night at 36-34.

The next two minutes belonged to the Red Raiders. McClendon got the 12-0 run started by putting back a rebound off a missed three-pointer (36-36), which he followed with a long three-pointer (39-36) the next time down the court.

With 1:30 left, Liuzzo made one of two free throws (40-36). After McClendon pulled down a defensive rebound in traffic, Liuzzo and junior point guard Pat Gould executed a perfect pick-and-roll with Gould finding a streaking Liuzzo down the lane for an easy two (42-36).

made four combined free throws to close out the scoring for the Red Raiders. Goncalves' late three accounted for the final score.

"Shots didn't fall and we really didn't have guys in (good position) when we did take outside shots, which is something that we are going to have to work on because obviously we are going to need that in the tournament," said QHS head coach David Parry, "but we played hard."

"It was tied with about two minutes to go but we just couldn't get it done," continue Parry. "(North Quincy) is a very composed team and very poised. My guys are young and they are getting there. There is nothing to put their heads down about. We will look at some film and go from there."

For Barrett, the game was exactly what his team needed as they head into the postseason.

"There was a lot a stake in this game for it being our 20th game of the season," he said. "We were playing for a high seed, which is a big thing for us. These guys are a determined bunch. They got a taste of (the tournament) last year after finishing 10-10 and I don't think there are going to be a lot of teams too crazy about having to play us."

A Statistical Look At North Quincy's Season

The last time any North Quincy team claimed even a share of a league title was way back in 2005-2006 when the Red Raiders were co-champions of the Atlantic Coast League (ACL). That team was coached by current Athletic Director Jim Rendle.

The league championship is the seventh in program history. The Red Raiders qualified for the postseason for the 30th time in school history.

The 17 wins is the third most in school history. The 1964-1965 and 2005-2006 teams also finished with 17 wins. The most wins by any North Quincy team is 20, set by the 1971-1972 team, which lost to Catholic Memorial in the South Sectional finals at Boston Garden.

North Quincy's .850 winning percentage is fourth best all-time.

The team's 1250 (points for) to 973 (points allowed), a +277 differential is second best all-time.

North Quincy's 62.5 points per game versus 48.7 points allowed (+13.8) is third best all-time.

Presidents End Regular Season At 17-4 Overall; Division 1 Tournament Begins Next Week

Quincy Completes Season Sweep Of North Quincy

By SEAN BRENNAN

The third installment of the Quincy-North Quincy girls' basketball season slate, played last Thursday, wasn't the prettiest of games, but somebody had to walk off the Munroe McLean Gymnasium at Quincy High with the victory.

Thanks to clutch fourth quarter performances from seniors Kiley McDonald (game-high 12 points, six coming in the final eight minutes), Juli Tomer and Caity Lowry, and two key late-game free throws by sophomore Kayla McArdle, Quincy (17-4 overall) won 38-30.

The Presidents, following their 57-47 win over non-league Hull on Monday, will learn their Division 1 South postseason fate Friday when the MIAA releases its seeding for the upcoming state tournament. Based on Quincy's final record, a first-round home game seems inevitable. Last season Quincy lost to Taunton 62-54 in a Division 1 first round tilt.

North Quincy (8-11 overall), under first-year head coach Jessica Worden, missed out on qualifying for the tournament despite ending the season by winning six of its final ten games.

"That wasn't a pretty game at all," said Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch. "(North Quincy) is a good team and it is hard to beat a team like that three times (in a season)." Quincy had already defeated North Quincy 53-51 and 47-31 earlier this winter.

"The environment (at QHS) changes the intensity," said Bretsch about playing in front of the packed house. "We started off and just couldn't make any shots. We are usually a hot shooting team but we were ice cold from the outside, but we found a way in the second half to get it done."

The Presidents entered the rivalry game having won nine-out-of-ten games but Quincy scored only ten first quarter points. However, thanks to four points from McDonald, the hosts led 10-5 after one. North Quincy flipped the script in the second quarter, outscoring Quincy 12-4 to take a 17-14 advantage into the halftime break.

Sophomore guard Jane Minton led the Red Raiders with five-second quarter points.

After the break, Quincy tied it at 19-19 on a driving layup by senior guard Juli Tomer before senior Caity Lowry finally put Quincy ahead 21-20 with an elbow jumper. The Presidents outscored North Quincy 11-4 to take a 25-22 lead into the fourth.

North Quincy Caitlin Bulger tied it up at 25-25 but McDonald increased the Quincy lead to 28-25 with less than five minutes to play in regulation - the Presidents would not trail the rest of the way.

Minton brought the Red

Raiders back to within a point (28-27), but McDonald scored on a put-back and then made one of two freebies (32-28). Lowry upped the lead to 34-28 after converting on a fast break but North's Olivia Umoren (ten points) kept it a two-possession game with a layup.

Up four, Quincy's McArdle was fouled. The talented sophomore stepped to the line for a one-and-one and calmly sank the first free throw (35-30), and sealed the game with a successful second. Tomer's late-game layup accounted for the final points.

"(We) came out a little more confident in the second half," explained Bretsch. "I think the girls relaxed. Sometimes the environment (of a Quincy-North Quincy game) gets them tense but we started attacking the hoop a little more and I think our press (defense) was effective. That allowed us to focus on our defense, which is where our strength is - that made the difference."

Quincy's Super Sophomore

Kayla McArdle has earned her stripes this winter on a senior-laden team because of her defense. But her two free throws were immense in a game in which points were at a premium. McArdle was on the court during the most pivotal minutes. That says something about her development this season.

"Kayla is a phenomenal defender and she is always willing to work defensively," said Bretsch about his sophomore stopper. "When I put her in she gives us a lift with her intensity. But for her to step up and hit those free throws on a one-and-one, that is a big time moment for a sophomore. It was impressive."

Senior Night

Before the start of the game, the seniors from both teams were recognized by Bretsch.

PATRIOT LEAGUE ALL-STAR Caity Lowry (#25) takes a shot with North Quincy's Annie Dow applying defensive pressure. Lowry tied the school single-game record for assists (11) in a win over Middleboro last week.

QUINCY'S JULI TOMER, playing defense on North's Jane Minton (#10), was recently awarded the Patriot League's Sportsmanship Award. Tomer also earned all-star honors for a second time.

Q/NQ Girls Swimming Finishes 28th At States; Urbanus Third

The Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving team (8-4, 4-3) placed 28th at the State swimming and diving championships held Sunday at Blodgett Pool on the Harvard University campus in Cambridge.

Olivia Goldson (Quincy) eclipsed her own Quincy school record, clocking

26.07 in the 50-yard freestyle for 14th and swam 57.70 in the 100-yard freestyle for 19th. The senior also anchored two more relays that established new program standards. The Q/NQ quartet of freshman Evelyn Scuzzarella (NQ), junior Kat O'Connor (NQ), freshman Sabrina Rauch (Quincy) and Goldson undercut their own program standard set a week ago, swimming 1:48.82 in the 200-yard freestyle relay for 18th overall. The same four broke the Quincy school record, clocking 4:00.67 in the 400-yard freestyle relay for 20th overall.

Senior captain Taryn Urbanus (Quincy) accumulated 448.30 points and finished third in the one-meter, 11-dive competition improving upon a fifth place finish merited a season ago. For the past three years, Urbanus earned both Patriot League and South Sectional crowns, most recently increasing her own 11-dive school record to 515.40 points at the South Sectional competition.

BBB Tips On Finding A Tax Preparer

Tax season is upon us again and the Better Business Bureau of Eastern MA, ME, RI & VT (BBB) is encouraging taxpayers to do some legwork before selecting tax preparation help.

According to the IRS, taxpayers are legally responsible for what's on their tax return even if it is prepared by someone else, so, it's important to choose carefully when hiring an individual or firm to prepare your return.

The BBB offers the following advice on how to find a trustworthy tax preparer:

- Ask around. Get referrals from friends and family on who they use and check BBB reports on tax preparers and tax preparation services atbbb.org.

- Look for credentials. Ideally, your tax preparer should either be a certified public accountant, a tax attorney, an enrolled agent or certified E-file provider. Be sure to find out if the preparer is affiliated with a professional organization that provides or requires its members to pursue continuing education and holds them accountable to a code of ethics.

- Make sure they have a Preparer Tax Identification Number (PTIN). A PTIN must be obtained by all tax return preparers who are compensated for preparing or assisting in the preparation of, all or substantially all, of any U.S. federal tax return, claim for refund, or other tax form submitted to the IRS.

- Investigate whether the preparer has any questionable history with your state's Board of Accountancy (for CPA's), the State Bar Association (for attorneys) or the IRS Office of Professional Responsibility (OPR) for enrolled agents.

- Don't fall for the promise of big refunds. By wary of any tax preparation service that promises larger refunds than the competition, and avoid tax preparers who base their fee on a percentage of the refund.

- Remember that a Paid Preparer is required by law to sign your return and fill in the preparer areas of the form. They should also include their appropriate identifying number on the return. In addition, the preparer must give you a copy of your return.

- Think about accessibility. Many tax preparation services only set up show for the months leading up to April 17. In case the IRS finds errors, or in case of an audit, you might need to be able to contact your tax preparer throughout the year; be sure to find out how you would do so.

- Read the contract carefully. Read tax preparation service contracts closely to ensure you understand issues such as how much it is going to cost for the service, how the cost will be affected if preparation is more complicated and time consuming than expected and whether the tax preparer will represent you in a case of an audit.

"STILL NUMBER ONE"

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta
Prepping for Spring

It's still February, but spring planting season is just around the corner - even in traditionally colder areas of the country like the Northeast, which experienced a warm winter with little snow this year. That means homeowners should be going over their outdoor lawn-care and garden tools and equipment, making sure everything is ready to go when March roars in.

If you treated wooden-handled tools with linseed oil or other wood treatment and hung them up over the winter, take those tools down now and wipe away excess oil and check for water damage or other problems. Make sure that hinged parts move smoothly and are free of corrosion and dirt. Then, place the tools in an easily accessible place, ready to grab when you need them.

Lawnmowers and other equipment also need to be readied for the growing season, even though it may be awhile before they're needed. Take the lawnmower out of the garage or shed to a well-ventilated area. Check the blades to make sure they're free of rust and corrosion; if you detached the blades for storage, reat-tach now.

Turn the mower upright and, with the spark plug disconnected and the fuel tank empty, give the starter cord a few pulls. Next, connect the spark plug and fill the tank with the proper fuel-oil mixture (see the manufacturer's manual for details). Start the mower and allow it to run for a minute or two. Then, shut it down and store it upright in an easily accessible place, ready to use.

Do the same with other outdoor equipment over the next couple of weekends. Not only will you know that your tools are ready when the weather is, but you'll be able to repair any damaged tools or equipment before they're needed.

HOME TIP: Keep tools dry and accessible by installing a pegboard with adjustable hooks on one wall of the garage, shed or workspace.

The Real Value Of Camp: Thriving Without Technology And Parents

By BRUCE NETHERWOOD

Being a parent is a little like holding on to the string of a kite. We know that with each year we need to loosen our grip, and let a bit more of that twine slip through our fingers so the kite can soar, but every day it seems there's more news that causes us to pause and reel those precious kites back within our comfort zones.

Parenting has always had its challenges, but in today's world of instantaneous social media updates, technology overload, and rapidly diminishing face-to-face interactions, being an engaged parent and striving to raise trusting, independent children, has proven an increasingly difficult task.

We live in a time where children spend an average of seven hours a day looking at various computer and television screens (ten if they're multi-tasking), according to the Kaiser Family Foundation.

Children today learn to deal with issues via texts and e-mails, and as I speak with parents around the country the one concern I hear that resonates above all others is the lack of personal interactions in their children's lives. Many of us fear we are raising a generation of individuals whose technical skills continue to increase as their social skills diminish.

This is why now, more than ever, summer camps — those mythical havens where kids acquire new skills, play sports, swim, take nature hikes and gather around campfires — matter. And, why camps play a critical role in shaping our youth and impacting society.

In the Quincy community, South Shore YMCA camps

currently serve more than 349 campers ages 3 to 15 at one of our four specialized day camps or two overnight resident camps. SSYMCA camps provide a safe and fun environment for campers of all ages where they try new things, learn, grow and make friendships that last a lifetime.

Universally when children are immersed in an emotionally safe environment, they begin to develop a sense of trust in others, and also in themselves. With that comes the most critical component in the process of growing up, fostering independence in a young person. At camp children learn that not only can they survive without their parents, but that they can thrive.

Along with determining the readiness of our child, often the bigger question we need to ask when pondering camp as a summer option is how ready we are to let them go. Can you handle not being in constant cell phone contact with your child? In an era when we've become accustomed to being able to reach our kids at any time we choose, resident and even most day camps do not allow campers to carry cell phones with them. The lack of communication can be a deal breaker for some parents who think only of their loss of control rather than the benefits the disconnection can have for their children. Consider the idea of being "unplugged" for a time; couldn't we all use that in our lives?

At the end of the day, that's ultimately the greatest gift that camps have to offer — an opportunity for genuine face-to-face socialization with both peers and positive young-adult role models, which in turn, creates an authentic sense of connectedness with others. Furthermore, camp provides the perfect opportunity to work, play and problem-solve with a group. In essence, camp empowers children by allowing them to be an integral part of something bigger — a community. In a time of disappearing neighborhoods, growing internet fears and general mistrust, more than ever it requires a village to help raise a child. And, good camps are an integral, if not essential, part of this critical effort.

A camping professional since 1988, Bruce Netherwood is vice president of Camping Services and Outdoor education for the South Shore YMCA. He also serves as a camp consultant and training specialist, and is the father of three daughters who love camp.

QMC First In State To Perform
Robotically Assisted Total Knee Replacement

A team at Quincy Medical Center, led by orthopedic surgeon Leonid Dabuzhsky, MD, has performed Massachusetts' first robotically assisted total-knee replacement, a safer, less invasive procedure and a major advance in the field of joint replacement surgery.

The procedure was performed using the Praxim Computer Assisted Navigation System, designed and manufactured by Taunton-based OMNLife science.

The Praxim system couples patent pending bone morphing software with the accuracy and adjustability of Apex Robotic Technology. This proprietary technology allows the surgeon to do virtual bone preparation planning in 3-D prior to actually making the bone cuts.

"This technology allows us to make adjustments before we ever touch the patient and it gives us a level of precision we would not be able to attain with conventional joint replacement surgery," says Dr. Dabuzhsky. "We hope that patients undergoing this procedure may experience less blood loss, need less pain medication and recover more quickly."

Studies have shown that even minor mal-alignment between the implant and the bones can harm joint performance and longevity. The Praxim robotic system enables superior surgical accuracy and alignment. The Praxim System uses a computer-assisted technology, called the iBlock cutting guide, which automatically positions a bone cutting instrument exactly as planned by the surgeons, enabling surgeons to perform fast and accurate bone cuts that create optimal alignment and fit between the knee implant and the patient's bone.

In addition, most total-knee replacements require surgeons to temporarily drive a rod into the bone to serve as an anchor for the cutting devices. The Praxim system eliminates the need for the rod, reducing the risk of formation of potentially dangerous emboli, or blood clots. Another benefit is that patients using the Praxim system do not need additional MRI or CT scans, minimizing exposure to radiation as well as reducing time and costs.

The first Massachusetts patient to receive a total-knee replacement with the Praxim system is a 74-year-old male from Quincy. He had his left knee replaced in the traditional manner three months ago at another local facility after living with pain for three to four years. He had robotically assisted surgery on his right knee on Jan. 30 and went home three days later with a cane.

He was able to walk without the cane within two days and he is looking forward to returning to his active lifestyle, which includes fishing, boating and golfing. His wife says she is looking forward to hitting the dance floor with her husband again soon.

In addition to the Praxim system for robotically assisted total knee replacement, Quincy Medical Center is further enhancing its orthopedic service line with a number of other advances in the field of joint replacement, including MAKOpasty, a robotically assisted technology developed by MAKO Surgical Corporation for partial knee replacement and resurfacing and total hip replacement surgery. QMC will be the second hospital in the state to offer MAKOpasty procedure. The hospital will be opening a new orthopedic unit specifically for total joint replacement patients later this winter.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

RECESSION FEARS

The term "long in the tooth" refers to the fact that gums tend to recede as we age. When they do, "cementum" and "dentin" are left exposed. Cementum is a thin, pale-yellow layer of calcified substance that covers the tooth root; dentin is the bone-like tissue that makes up the largest portion of the tooth. Exposure of these parts of the tooth of bacteria and acids renders the tooth root vulnerable to decay. This is why more than 60% of people over age 65 have root caries, making it one of the most pervasive oral-health problems faced by older adults. Roughly one-half of these lesions have not been filled, which leaves teeth vulnerable to further caries and pulp death.

Have you ever noticed that the most picture perfect smiles have an almost flawless "gum line" like a beautiful frame surrounding the smile? Periodontal disease approaches silently. It may progress painlessly, producing few obvious signs. We believe oral health is key to overall health and well-being. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer complete dental care for the entire family. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. You can trust your dental health to our experience and knowledge. We want to keep you smiling. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a full trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

HOW WELL ARE YOU HOLDING UP?

To diagnose back pain, the chiropractor must look at the spine in the context of its relationship to the rest of the body. There are physical factors related to poor posture and movement that can affect the proper functioning of the spinal column. The chiropractor may look at foot, knee, and leg alignment; muscle strength in legs, buttocks, back, and abdominal wall; abdominal protrusion; hip flexibility; the position of the pelvis, especially if it is tilted forward, back, or to either side; the position of the neck in relation to the shoulders; shoulder carriage and the mobility of the arms at the shoulder joints; and the shape and flexibility of the lumbar, thoracic, and cervical spinal curves.

Your spine is designed to support your weight and protect your spinal cord, the vital link

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
The adventurous Aries won't be disappointed with taking on a new challenge, despite some initial misgivings. Look for this move to open other opportunities down the line.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Let that beautiful Bovine smile not only put you at ease, but also show that you're ready, willing and more than able to confound the naysayers around you. A new admirer has important news.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Be careful how you handle a relationship that you're hoping to save. You already have the facts on your side. Avoid weakening your position by embellishing it with unnecessary dramatics.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Taking definitive stands isn't easy for the often-wavering Moon Child. But you not only need to stay with your decision, but also reassure others it was the right thing to do.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
As a proud Lion, you're right to be upset about those who might be lying about you to others. But the best revenge is proving them wrong by succeeding at what you set out to do.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
Caution is still advised before making a financial commitment to a "promising" project. Look for the facts behind the fluff. Devote the weekend to loved ones.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
A Taurus offers comfort and advice as you deal with an upsetting event. Use this as a learning experience that will help you avoid similar problems in the future.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
A romantic situation creates some chaos for single Scorpions. But it's well worth the effort to work things out. A trusted friend can offer some helpful advice.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Expect to make new friends as your social circle expands. Also, remember to tell that family member how proud you are of his or her achievements.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
New ventures continue to be favored. And with your self-confidence rising all the time, you'll want to see how well you can do with a new challenge. So, go to it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
This is a good time for the usually "serious-minded" Aquarian to let loose and enjoy some fun times. Expect to get good news about a workplace issue.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
Changed plans might upset some people, but your needs should be respected. Offer explanations when necessary. But don't let yourself be talked into changing your decisions.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for bringing people together. You would make a fine judge or counselor.

phase involves repointing, or filling the gaps between the stone with concrete. All the concrete used will be treated to match the color of the concrete used when the walls were first built.

Folan Waterproofing and Construction of Easton is the company working on the site. Work is moving ahead quicker than Bina anticipated because of the mild winter the city has experienced. "We've been fortunate to go right through this winter," he said.

The work is being paid for with funds from Quincy's Community Preservation Fund. Bina said the group has received $110,000 in funding over the past three years. The preservation work is projected to cost between $200,000 and $225,000 total and will take two or three years to complete, depending on how fast that funding can be secured.

Bina, who before retiring worked at Northeastern University as chemical engineering technician, has a personal connection to Quincy's historic granite industry.

"Both of my grandfathers worked in the granite industry," Bina said. "One of my grandfathers was a foreman on the Granite Rail," he said. "The other was a blacksmith at a quarry in South Quincy."

Bina credited the granite industry for helping make Quincy a more diverse place. "It was really a melting pot, so many ethnic groups came here to work the quarries," he said.

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum has some 150 members from up and down the East Coast, according to Bina. The group's goal is to build a museum of the same name, possibly adjacent to the Lyons Turning Mill.

Bina estimates that it will be four or five years until they break ground on the museum. But they've been actively seeking artifacts and relics from the granite industry. So far they've collected items including photographs, tools, pieces from the Granite Railroad, salesmen's samples of granite, and even jewelry made from granite extracted from Quincy's quarries.

"People didn't know what to do with them," Bina said of the items collected. "Stuff has literally come out of the woodwork."

Some of those artifacts are already on display at a special window display at 1418 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. They've also hosted tours of the quarries – so-called "quarry walks" – in the past and plan on having more this year.

AT ITS PEAK in 1900, the Lyons Turning Mill was staffed by up to 50 granite workers per shift. It closed in 1908 and all the equipment inside was sent to a mill in Arizona.

Koch Withdraws Support For Boston Initiative

Moon Island Wind Turbine Scrapped

By KRISTINA KALABOKAS

Plans to build a nearly 400-foot tall wind turbine on Moon Island have been scrapped due to strong opposition by Squantum residents.

In a letter mailed to residents last week, Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch wrote that, "the community has made its voice clear that it will not support a wind turbine on Moon Island."

Koch, who had supported the proposal since its inception over two years ago, said he "did not come to this decision lightly," as he found the dialogue between Boston Mayor Thomas Menino and himself, "a welcome opportunity to open a new relationship with our Boston neighbors."

The wind turbine was proposed by the City of Boston. Menino has agreed to withdraw the proposal.

The Quincy Planning Department said it had not received written confirmation that the proposal had been officially withdrawn before the Sun went to press Tuesday. But Quincy officials expected confirmation sometime this week.

Quincy Planning Director Dennis Harrington said concerned residents could check the status of the withdrawal on the city website at www.quincyma.gov/calendar.

"I'm disappointed that we were not able to move forward with this model clean energy project that would showcase our cities' commitment to climate action and green jobs," Menino said in a statement issued last week. "Moon Island is uniquely situated for a com-

Race For Republican Presidential Nomination Primary Highlight Low Turnout Seen On 'Super Tuesday'

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

About a quarter of the city's registered voters are expected to vote next Tuesday when Massachusetts holds its Presidential Primaries on "Super Tuesday."

City Clerk Joseph Shea forecasts 14,412 of the city's 55,434 registered will cast ballots in the Democrat, Republican and Green-Rainbow Primaries - that's a turnout of 26 percent. With only one main contest next Tuesday - in the Republican primary for the GOP nomination for President - turnout is expected to be low.

Next Tuesday's primaries are "semi-closed" meaning voters registered with a major party can vote only in their party's primary. However, unenrolled voters can select one of three ballots: Democrat, Republican or Green-Rainbow.

Of the three ballots, there are only two contested races

Benchmarks Missed But Downtown Project 'Making Progress'

By SCOTT JACKSON

The redevelopment of Quincy Center is going well, except for two benchmarks missed by developer Beal/Street-Works.

At the City Council meeting Monday, Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines told the council the developer paid $25,000 into an escrow account after they failed to deliver a traffic plan and a certificate of consistency (COC). According to the land disposition agreement between the city and developer, the COC was to include detailed plans for each building, information on public utilities, and information on landscaping, among other items.

The deadline for filing the COC was Jan. 25 of this year. But the COC was held off because Beal/Street-Works has yet to file an environmental report with the state, the draft of which is due in May and the final version in December. Results of that report could affect the COC.

The extension is only for

DPW Revolving Fund Approved

A revolving fund for the DPW won final approval at Monday's City Council meeting.

The fund allows Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi to spend on certain items without first seeking approval of the City Council. The items Raymondi is allowed to charge to account are the celebration of National Public Works Week, employee recognition, employee training, recycling and waste supplies and equipment, processing of yard waste, fencing, disposal of televisions, monitors and other materials.

At the Feb. 13 meeting of the council's Public Works Committee, Raymondi said the main focus of the fund will be the celebration of National Public Works

CBS News Spotlights Fr. Bill's Housing First Model

Shelter Recognized Nationally For Helping Homeless Achieve Self-Sufficiency

By EMILY TAFT

Father Bill's & Main-Spring was recently featured by a CBS Evening News segment with Scott Pelley to discuss the Housing First model that was implemented by them in 2005.

The model shows that people can achieve self-sufficiency faster and more effectively if they are given a home to call their own. The shelter was recognized and highlighted by the National Alliance to End Homelessness as the community leader in moving the chronically homeless from the streets and shelters to permanent housing.

A portion of the segment reported the program has helped reduce homelessness by 63 percent in Quincy and has also cut medical costs for former homeless people by more than two-thirds.

"We are very humbled by this," said Fr. Bill's President and CEO John Yazwinski. "This is not just about Father Bill's & Main-Spring but the City of Quincy, our local supporters. We have come up with a plan and have executed that plan, and it is now something other people in the country are looking at and working with."

As the shelter continues its efforts to eliminate homelessness, Yazwinski said they continue to help bring the homeless off the streets and into the shelter. Even with a mild winter, Yazwinski said they continue to have the same numbers as last year because of the recession.

"Last year was very difficult, but we have not seen the numbers go down because of the mild weather. We let everyone in that needs a place to stay," said Yazwinski. "We are their safety net, when it comes to a state system of care."

The 18 and over adult shelter assists around 125 adults each night and 80 families throughout the South Shore. The Quincy shelter is funded for 75 beds but they have 95 available, and mattresses for anyone over those 95 beds.

At the beginning of January, Yazwinski said they were seeing around 113 people looking for shelter. As February comes to a close, Yazwinski said the numbers have not changed. On Jan. 15 and 16 Father Bill's was over capacity, helping more than 130 homeless. They had a high of 33 women, which with only 24 beds for women left nine women to sleep on mats on the floor. The shelter had a high of 103 men looking for shelter, and a low of 89. The average during the two days was around 120 men and women looking for a warm place to stay.

"As the weather slowly gets colder we see a steady increase in numbers," said Yazwinski. "We allow everyone to come into the building during those cold days. Thankfully, we haven't had to turn anyone away."

The community donates 90 percent of the dinners given out to each guest, which allows the shelter to serve three meals a day.

"We call them guests here at Father Bill's," said Yazwinski. "We are very blessed by all the support we get here in the community."

The shelter is split up into women and men dorms with a large dining area that serves as a sleeping area at night when there aren't enough beds. There is a 75 to 25, male to female ratio in the shelter. They provide 24 beds for females but are averaging around 30 women a night, and they offer 80 beds for males, with 40 extra mats for overflow.

If they go over their resources, Yazwinski said they would transport those in need of shelter to other shelters, which they have done a few times this year because of the growing female homeless population.

Along with the growing female population, Yazwinski said that they have also seen an increase in the veteran homeless population this year.

"We are seeing more old and new veterans now than ever before. No veteran that has fought for our freedom

Interest In Additional Buildings On 75-Acre Property

Highpoint Headed For Expansion?

By SCOTT JACKSON
Additional construction may be in store for Quarry Street's Highpoint apartment complex. James Fatseas, the mayor's Chief of Staff, acknowledged at Monday's City Council meeting that there has been some talk about adding additional buildings on the 75-acre property.

"You've heard about Highpoint - there's some interest out there," Fatseas told the council when asked if the redevelopment of Quincy Center had spurred similar proposals elsewhere in the city. He went on to note that talks are only in

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On March 6, 1899, the Imperial Patent Office in Berlin registers Aspirin, the brand name for acetylsalicylic acid, on behalf of the German pharmaceutical company Friedrich Bayer & Co. In its primitive form, the active ingredient, salicin, was used for centuries in folk medicine.

• On March 10, 1902, in the case of Edison v. American Mutoscope Company, the U.S. Court of Appeals rules that despite his claims, Thomas Edison did not invent the movie camera. The court did, however, admit that Edison invented the sprocket system that moved perforated film through the movie camera.

• On March 9, 1913, English author Virginia Woolf delivers the manuscript of her first novel, "The Voyage Out," to her publisher. In 1941, fearful for her own mental state and afraid of the coming world war, she filled her pockets with rocks and drowned herself.

• On March 7, 1923, the New Republic publishes Robert Frost's poem "Stopping By Woods on a Snowy Evening." The poem begins with the famous line "Whose woods these are, I think I know." Although Frost never graduated from a university, he had collected 44 honorary degrees before he died in 1963.

A Sample Of Super Tuesday

It's a very small sample but in Quincy it appears President Obama will collect more votes in the Democratic Primary than former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney and all the other Republican candidates combined in next Tuesday's presidential primaries.

Maybe that's not a surprise for some political observers since Quincy has been considered a Democratic stronghold for many years. Up until of course Republican Scott Brown's historic win in the special U.S. Senate election in early 2010. Quincy was one of the many communities Brown carried in his defeat over Democrat Martha Coakley.

Two years later, some are asking: was Brown's victory an aberration?

It certainly looks like the pendulum is again swinging the Democratic way.

Consider every Democrat running for statewide office was elected in November 2010. That includes open seats for state treasurer and state auditor. Local Democrats also won open seats for Congress, Norfolk County district attorney, state senator and a state representative seat.

Some would say the Brown victory served as a giant wake-up call for Democratic leaders and party activists. Apparently that message is resonating in Quincy.

A look at that small sample of voters - those who have already cast absentee ballots in Quincy - shows the Democratic primary is attracting more interest than the Republican contest. (The Sun obtained only the number of absentee ballots and how many were Democratic and how many were Republican. Those ballots remain sealed until Election Day.)

It's important to note there are no contested races in the Democratic primary - the President as well as candidates for state committeeman, state committeewoman and ward committee are all unopposed.

The race that would seemingly attract the most interest is in the wide-open, topsy-turvy campaign for the Republican presidential nomination. But there doesn't seem to be a groundswell of interest in that race locally.

As of last Friday, some 281 Quincy voters had cast ballots in the Super Tuesday Presidential Primaries. Of that number, 182 took a Democratic ballot and 99 chose a Republican ballot. That's about a two-to-one margin in favor of Obama over the GOP field that as of this writing still had four candidates in it.

Granted, that's still a pretty small sample and no one can predict how many people will go to the polls. And it's only a primary Tuesday and many unenrolled voters - who can choose either a Republican or a Democratic ballot - will probably stay home.

But perhaps Obama's vote total and the GOP's vote total will give a glimpse as to the President's overall support in Quincy as well as in Massachusetts. A big vote for the President is a good sign heading toward the Nov. 6 election. If he polls poorly here and state-wide next Tuesday, some observers would say he's vulnerable in the general election in November.

This will be the third time Obama's name has appeared on a Quincy ballot. It will also be the third time Romney - who was still considered the GOP frontrunner going into the Michigan primary (his home state) Tuesday night - has been on a ballot in Quincy.

Obama's Quincy election record is one win, one loss. Romney's record is 0-2.

In the 2008 Democrat Presidential Primary, Hillary Clinton defeated Obama by a wide margin. The former First Lady and future Secretary of State polled 11,292 votes or 63 percent to Obama's 5,190 votes or 29 percent.

Obama, who was a freshman senator from Illinois at the time, eventually secured his party's nomination. In the final election, Obama defeated Republican Sen. John McCain. Quincy went with Obama over McCain by a wide margin. Obama's final vote here was 22,775 votes or 57.89 percent. McCain received 15,536 or 39.49 percent - a difference of 7,239 votes.

Quincy has not been "Romney Country" when it comes to past elections.

In 1994, Romney challenged incumbent Ted Kennedy.

The Democrat senator was re-elected with 58 percent of the vote to Romney's 41 percent statewide. It was the smallest margin of Kennedy's eight re-election bids for U.S. Senate.

In Quincy, Romney received 12,433 votes to Kennedy's 18,726 votes.

But the city helped elect two Republicans to statewide office that very same election.

Republican William Weld defeated Democrat Mark Roosevelt for governor. Here, Weld polled 21,487 votes to Roosevelt's 9,582 votes.

In the state treasurer's race, Republican Joe Malone put Quincy in his win column with 19,098 votes. Democrat Shannon O'Brien polled 10,363 votes here.

In the 2002 governor's race, Romney was elected with 50 percent of the vote statewide over O'Brien, who was state treasurer at the time. She received 45 percent of the vote statewide.

Romney did not carry Quincy in the governor's race - but the margin was a slim 25 votes. O'Brien polled 14,907 votes to Romney's 14,882 votes.

As a former Massachusetts governor, Romney will probably break that Quincy losing streak next Tuesday. His main competitor appears to be former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum.

But if Santorum pulls off an upset in Massachusetts, political logic says Romney's bid for the GOP nomination will be over.

Yes, Tuesday is only a primary. And the absentee ballot sample was a very small sample.

But primaries can serve as a barometer of support in a final election.

Next Tuesday, we'll get an idea how much support the President has in Quincy and in Massachusetts. And whether local Republicans have a clear choice to go up against the President in November.

THE TREND of voters becoming more independent (unenrolled) in Quincy continues according to the latest voter registration numbers from the city's Election Office.

Between last Oct. 19 to Feb. 15, a total of 1,550 new voters registered in Quincy. Of that amount, 841 preferred unenrolled status instead of declaring for a political party. That's about 54 percent of all new voters during that four-month period.

Of the 1,550 new voters, 530 registered as Democrats (34.1 percent); 168 registered Republican (10.8 percent); seven registered Green Rainbow and four others noted some other political affiliation.

"It's pretty good. It's a little more active than I thought," City Clerk Joseph Shea said commenting on the 1,550 new voters.

There are 55,434 registered voters in Quincy. Unenrolled voters are the largest block with 26,325 (47.4 percent); Democrats are second with 24,403 (42.2 percent) and Republicans third with 5,333 (9.6 percent).

AT FIRST GLANCE, it appears that one resident is running for two spots as a ward committeeman in next Tuesday's presidential primaries.

There's Daniel Dewey, 139 Sonoma Rd., Squantum, who's a candidate for Democratic committeeman in Ward 6.

Then there's Daniel M. Dewey, 139 Sonoma Rd., Squantum, who's a candidate for Republican committeeman also in Ward 6.

But it's not the same individual.

The Democrat Dan Dewey is the son of Republican Daniel Dewey. It may be the first time a father-and-son appeared on different primary ballots in Quincy.

IT'S OFFICIAL - Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis will kick off his campaign for a sixth four-year term Thursday, March 8 at the Common Market, Willard St., West Quincy. The reception is 6 to 8 p.m.

Gillis, the longtime former city clerk, has made county commissioner a second career serving 20 years in that post. He was first elected in 1992 and re-elected in 1996, 2000, 2004 and 2008.

Scenes From Yesterday

Neponset Bridge, NEPONSET, Mass.

THIS IS A 1910 POSTCARD view of the first bridge across the Neponset River at the end of Hancock Street. This view is from Quincy looking towards the old coal yards in Neponset on the right. The bridge was built with private money in 1803 as part of the Neponset Turnpike connecting Quincy Square to the Boston side of the river. It was part of the privately owned toll road until 1858 when the Commonwealth took over the road and it became Hancock Street, a public way. This privately built bridge lasted for over 100 years until a new bridge constructed by the state was built in 1924. That bridge lasted for less than 50 years. The next bridge was built in 1971. It lasted just over 30 years. The lifespan of these bridges keeps shrinking. Hopefully, the new bridge being built there now will be finished before it needs to be replaced. Neponset is a word derived from the Algonquin Indian language meaning "The place of the crossing." To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

City Council Bars Raises Granted By School Committee

The City Council, in an unprecedented action, voted to instruct the City Auditor not to honor the $200 salary increases granted to School Supt. Dr. Paul Gossard and Asst. Supt. Albert H. Cochrane by the School Committee.

Councillor Russell T. Bates led the attack on the raises that would have made Dr. Gossard's salary $8,200 and Cochrane's $5,400.

But Bates failed in a bid to forestall a $500 raise for Dr. Ensio K.F. Ronka, director of City Hospital, and a $200 increase for Public Works Commissioner James P. Donovan.

Councillor Thomas F. Gilmartin succeeded in getting the Council to reject a $4,500 for creation of the new school post of assistant superintendent for maintenance and business affairs.

LANDMARK BURNS

An early morning fire destroyed the landmark newsstand next to City Hall operated by blind Samuel Gray, 52, which had the endorsement of the Chamber of Commerce as the official tourist information bureau of Quincy.

Gray, a familiar figure around Quincy Square for 20 years, said he hoped to be back in business in four days. He estimated damage to newspapers, magazines, cigarettes, cigars and tobacco at $600.

Thanks Mayor For Withdrawing Wind Turbine Support

I would like to thank Mayor Koch.

In deciding against the installation of the Moon Island Wind turbine, Mayor

Koch showed that he does listen to his residents. I am sure the mayor did not come to the decision easily, however he made the right decision.

In this day and age when politicians are in the news more for how they have cheated their constituents, Mayor Koch showed that his constituents do matter.

Thank you again Mayor Koch, job well done.

Wants Mayor To Reverse Decision On Wind Turbine

Mayor Koch's abrupt and ill-considered decision to withdraw support for the wind turbine project slated for Moon Island short-circuits the democratic process.

We attended the 2010 meeting in Squantum where resident after resident spoke in favor of the project. Yet now the mayor tells us he's cancelled it because of neighborhood opposition.

What happened between 2010 and now? The answer seems clear: The demagogues and fear-mongers went to work.

A leaflet filled with scare stories, produced by an anonymous person or group that thinks Quincy is in the 413 area code, was distributed to Squantum residents shortly before the project came before the city planning board. Meanwhile, City Councillor Brian McNamee was telling the press that the Moon Island turbine was a good deal for Boston and a bad deal for Quincy, even though no deal had actually been struck.

After an hour of preliminaries, the Feb. 8 planning board hearing was suspended - to be resumed at another location, we were told - in response to loud demands from McNamee, who complained that the City Hall meeting room was insufficiently comfortable. Little did we imagine that, before the hearing could be resumed, the mayor would capitulate, effectively gagging the significant number of residents who had come to City Hall to testify for the benefits of clean, renewable energy in an age of costly oil wars, global climate change, and soaring rates of asthma and other lung disease.

A full airing of the facts might even have calmed some residents' fears and led to a better, more thoughtful outcome. With this in mind, we urge the mayor to show true leadership by reversing his decision on the wind turbine project. That way, the planning board process can resume, and all Quincy citizens, whatever their opinion on the project, can have their voices heard.

Financial Disasters

The height of arrogance the mayor is going to award a contract for the Town Brook relocation.

Before the court rules on the location of the brook the problem he is already has spent over a $1 million installing a tunnel under Hancock Street. He is famous for putting the cart before the horse.

Between Phelan and Koch, Quincy is heading for the Guinness Book of Records for the amount of disasters in a small city: $50 million extra for the new high school; $30 million for a sweetheart deal with Honneywell; the Wolly disaster; the boat dock at Squantum Gardens; the boiler mess up for Germantown; the few extra million on the Quincy Fair Building; $800,000 to relocate a tenant out of Quincy to Boston; over a million for asbestos removal and shipping it to Ohio; over a million in tax revenue taken off the books with all the buildings they are demolishing on the assumption that there is going to be a new Quincy Square.

And the biggest problem of all: what are they going to do about the thousands of rats that will moving into the neighborhoods once you start moving the Town Brook?

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Butternut Squash, Then Some Soup

Every once in awhile, when I feel like making soup, I actually use food that is already cooked, leftover, but not quite enough for a serving.

And so it was one cold day, (not too many of those this year) when I found just enough to make the soup. It was the quickest one I ever made.

I started it off with an organic chicken stock, and then took it from there.

The result was a hearty different, delicious soup..

BUTTERNUT SQUASH & THEN SOME SOUP

4-5 cups chicken stock (or a favorite plain broth)

1 teaspoon Better Than Bouillon (or a cube)

1-cup butternut squash (cooked)

1-cup spinach (cooked)

1-cup corn niblets

½ cup brown instant rice

Salt and pepper to taste

¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

In a large pot, heat the chicken stock. Add all the other ingredients and cook until blended.

The butternut squash gives the soup a natural thickness. It only took about 25 minutes, and tasted as if it took longer.

Italian Lemon Tea Cookies

Recently, my daughter Ann Marie brought me a couple of cookies so I could enjoy them with a cup of tea. And of course I had to have the recipe so that I could share them with all of you.

In this recipe, I'm using a lemon extract and vanilla, but almond, anisette can also be used.

LEMON TEA COOKIES

4 cups flour

1/4 to a 1/2 cup of milk

1 cup melted butter or margarine

4 eggs

1-cup sugar

2 tablespoons vanilla

2 tablespoons lemon extract

2 tablespoons baking powder

Mix sugar and butter together. Add the eggs, lemon extract, vanilla and milk. Mix well. Then slowly add the dry ingredients.

Drop by tablespoons on to a cookie sheet and bake in a 350-degree oven for 5-10 minutes.

An icing can be used to the top with candy sprinkles.

'John Adams Unbound' Exhibition Opens Today At Crane Library

"John Adams Unbound" a traveling exhibition opening at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy today (Thursday), explores the personal library of John Adams, a collection of 3,500 books willed by Adams to the people of Massachusetts and deposited in the Boston Public Library in 1894.

This remarkable collection of books provides first-hand insight into how John Adams shaped American history and how he was shaped through his lifelong dedication to reading and books.

"We are pleased to have been selected as the final stop for this traveling exhibition," said Library Director Harry Williams. "When Adams deeded his library to the town of Quincy in 1822, he provided the foundation on which today's Thomas Crane Public Library was built, as well as the basis for the fledgling Adams Academy, now the Quincy Historical Society.

"Adams's generous donation to our city has had lasting effects in the community. By coming 'home' to Quincy, the exhibition honors Adams's legacy of self-education and intellectual reflection."

Adams's engagement with books was active and argumentative, as evidenced by the meticulous and personal commentary he crammed into the margins of the works he read. Seeing the numerous notations in his own hand is like listening in on his personal conversations with writers such as Cicero, William Blackstone, Thomas Paine, and others across oceans and across centuries. As Adams the lawyer prepares in 1770 to defend British soldiers on trial after the Boston Massacre, for example, he references Cicero's views on self defense contained in Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England.

Through photo-reproductions of many of Adams's books, as well as personal objects, graphics, maps and portraits, exhibition viewers will witness one of our founding fathers wrestling with intellectual and political ideas at every stage in his long life - as a boy, university student, Boston lawyer, revolutionary, diplomat, President and citizen of the early American republic.

The exhibition is also an extraordinary case study in the power of reading, which reveals the role of books and libraries in the health and prosperity of a democracy.

The "John Adams Unbound" traveling exhibition was organized by the Boston Public Library and the America Library Association and made possible by a major grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The traveling exhibition is based upon the gallery exhibition of the same name mounted by the Boston Public Library in 2006, the first public display of Adams's complete 3,500-book collection.

The library is sponsoring a variety of free lectures, discussions, performances and other events for the public in connection with the exhibition.

Visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316 for more information.

"John Adams Unbound" will be on display at the library until April 25, 2012.

Moon Island Wind Turbine Scrapped

munity scale wind project, as it is nearly a mile away from the nearest residents and has virtually no noise or shadow impacts in the residential areas. Notwithstanding the merits of the project, we will honor Mayor Koch's request."

Ward 6 Councilor, Brian McNamee, attributes the withdrawal of the turbine proposal to a "strong, Squantum-based grass roots resistance" by a "highly motivated group of residents who communicated their displeasure with the proposal."

Squantum residents were not comforted by sound and environmental studies presented by engineers at the Feb. 8 meeting of the Quincy Planning Board, which illustrated the possible impact of the turbine. Despite evidence suggesting negligible consequences, citizens demanded further trials be performed.

Squantum Community Association President Louise Grabowski of Crabtree Road said, "This is an issue for more than Squantum; we always saw this as a Quincy issue."

"I thank Mayor Menino for asking Boston to withdraw its application," she said. "Our group expressed concern that the project's impact outweighed its benefits. The mayor had a difficult decision."

McNamee said he was not surprised that Menino agreed to the withdrawal.

"As soon as the community support failed to materialize, I'm sure he knew the proposal was politically risky for the Mayor of Quincy," he said. "Menino's understanding of these dynamics is evidenced by his withdrawal of the permit application."

Koch's letter also stated his administration is committed to pursuing alternative energy.

The text of his letter follows:

"I write today to inform you that I have requested the City of Boston to respectfully withdraw its proposal to construct a wind turbine on property it owns on Moon Island and have subsequently cancelled a community meeting on this matter previously scheduled for February 28.

"I did not come to this decision lightly, and I make it only out of an abiding trust I believe we have built together that is based on listening, honest dialogue and working as partners in the best interest of our community. After speaking with many of your Squantum neighbors over the last few weeks, it has become clear to me that the kind of strong community consensus necessary to allow construction of a major wind turbine on Moon Island simply does not exist.

"As you may know, Boston Mayor Thomas Menino first approached our office about building a turbine on Moon Island about two years ago. I viewed the proposal as a welcome opportunity to open a new relationship with our Boston neighbors after many years of having our concerns virtually ignored.

"At that time, we entered into discussions with the City and Mayor Menino regarding a number of long-standing neighborhood issues and the possibility of the City of Quincy sharing in the revenue that the turbine would produce. A community meeting in May 2010 produced a largely positive response, leading to more detailed discussions that included limiting the hours of the Boston Police gun range on Moon Island and providing Quincy residents access to both Moon and Long Island among other potential benefits.

"It is my hope that this dialogue continue even though the community has made its voice clear that it will not support a wind turbine on Moon Island. I will certainly work as hard as possible to make sure it continues.

"I wish to also stress that the City of Quincy remains committed to pursuing alternative energy, reducing what we spend on energy, and protecting our environment for our children and grandchildren. I am looking forward to sharing with you in the coming weeks some very exciting plans that will benefit our entire community," Koch wrote.

DPW Revolving Fund Approved

Week.

"It's been 10 years since the City of Quincy has honored its hard-working men and women of the Department of Public Works," Raymondi said at that meeting. "National Public Works Week is an opportunity for the department as well as the City of Quincy to come together...to celebrate the hard-working men and women of this department. We haven't done it for 10 years and we should do it."

All of the expenses that money from the fund can be used for are included in the ordinance approving it, as mandated by state law. State law also dictates that the maximum amount that can be drawn from the fund each year be established by the council - this year's expenditures are capped at $100,000.

While there is a limit on the amount of annual expenditures that can be drawn from the account, there is no limit on the amount of money that can be deposited into it. Raymondi told the Public Works Committee that a majority of funds put into the account will come from donations he receives. In addition to donations, the fund will raise money from fees and charges from the collection of various items, from grants, from the sale of composting machines and products, and from payment of dumping permits from commercial landscapers or other communities. All those are also spelled out by the ordinance in accordance with state law.

The council approved the fund's establishment by a 7-2 vote.

Joe Finn cast one of the two dissenting votes Monday. He had previously opposed the measure during the Public Works Committee meeting because he felt the council should maintain control over the DPW budget.

Councillor Doug Gutro also opposed the measure on Monday.

Council OKs $1.07M For Sewer Projects

The City Council unanimously approved some $1.07 million in appropriations Monday night. The money is to close out four deficit accounts related to sewer projects.

Two of the accounts, totaling over $900,000, are related to the Quincy Shore Drive sewer project. The deficits occurred because the city charged the MWRA for expenses the MWRA doesn't reimburse communities for, such as sidewalk repair.

Another $7,896 is related to the Sea Street/Edgewater Drive sewer project. A deficit occurred there because the contractor more work than was originally funded.

The remaining amount, $109,691, is associated with the Strand sewer project. Because the deficit was incurred before the city switched to its current accounting system, no reason was given for that deficit.

In separate measures, the council approved moving $1.02 million from the water enterprise retained earnings account to the water stabilization fund and $346,306 from the sewer enterprise retained earnings to the sewer stabilization fund. Both of those items were also passed by 9-0 votes.

Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi had proposed the three spending measures after the city's independent auditor, James Powers, recommended them as good housekeeping practice.

but the main election spotlight is for the GOP Presidential nomination.

That race appears to be a two-man contest between former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney and former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum. Romney was the early favorite after emerging with an impressive victory in the New Hampshire primary in January. But Santorum has been nipping at his heels and some polls positioned Santorum within striking distance in Romney's home state of Michigan this past Tuesday as the Sun went to press.

Super Tuesday has historically been the "make-or-break" point for candidates seeking their party's nomination for President. And this year it looks like the same scenario is shaping up among the major Republican Presidential contenders.

Massachusetts is one of 10 states holding primary contests next Tuesday. The others are Alaska, Georgia, Idaho, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Vermont and Virginia. A total of 419 delegates are up for grabs in the GOP nomination race, more than a third of 1,144 needed to capture the nomination and challenge President Barack Obama in November.

In Massachusetts, 38 Republican delegates are at stake.

Romney and Santorum are not the only names on the GOP ballot in Massachusetts. There are five other names of which two were still in the race as of press time and three who dropped out following dismal showings in earlier primaries and caucuses.

Republican candidates who remained in the race as of Tuesday were Texas Cong. Ron Paul and former Georgia Rep. and House Speaker Newt Gingrich. On the ballot but out of the race are Texas Gov. Rick Perry, former Utah Governor Jon Huntsman and Minnesota Cong. Michele Bachman.

The other contested race Tuesday is a three-way race for the Green-Rainbow Presidential nomination. The three candidates: Kent Mesplay, Jill Stein and Harley Mikkelsen. Stein ran unsuccessfully for Massachusetts governor in 2002 and 2010.

President Obama is unopposed in the Democratic primary.

There are other races in the Democrat and Republican primaries but they are unopposed for state committeeman, state committeewoman and ward committee.

Quincy Democrat Patrick

McDermott, former Ward 3 councillor and Register of Probate for Norfolk County, is running for re-election for Democratic State Committeeman in the Norfolk and Plymouth District.

Quincy Democrat Alicia Gardner, former Ward 6 councillor, is running for re-election for Democratic State Committeewoman in the Norfolk and Plymouth District.

There are also local Democrats running for ward committee. All are essentially assured to being elected because there are fewer than 35 candidates — the most that can be elected in each ward — on ballot in each ward.

By ward, there are 34 Democrats on the ballot for Ward Committee in Ward 1; 29 in Ward 2; 24 in Ward 3; 35 in Ward 4; 22 in Ward 5 and 30 in Ward 6.

On the Republican ballot, Braintree Republican Matthew R. Sisk is running for State Committeeman in the Norfolk and Plymouth District.

Christine C. Logan, a Quincy Republican, is running for re-election as State Committeewoman in the Norfolk and Plymouth District.

State committeemen and women set policy for their party's platform and meet a handful of times of each year. They are party activists at the state level and attend their party's state convention among other responsibilities.

Republicans will also elect ward committee members but there are names on the ballot in only three of

The polls will be open in Quincy for the "Super Tuesday" Presidential Primaries Tuesday, March 6 from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

WOLLASTON HILL Montessori School will hold an open house Saturday, March 10 from 10 a.m. to noon. The new preschool is located at the Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., Quincy.

NEW CLASSROOM at the Wollaston Hill Montessori School will be available for viewing at an open house Saturday, March 10 from 10 a.m. to noon. "A bright, spacious, uncluttered environment, with lots of natural light presents the best setting for learning," said Oonagh Connolly, the director of the Wollaston Hill Montessori School.

Wollaston Hill Montessori Brings Life To Historic Church

A new preschool in the historic neighborhood of Wollaston Hill in Quincy will open its doors to the public Saturday, March 10, bringing life and joy to the beautiful building of the Wollaston Congregational Church.

Built in 1926 by Smith and Walker and added to the National Register of Historic Places in 2008, this very impressive stone structure, lends itself well to the education of young children.

"A bright, spacious, uncluttered environment, with lots of natural light presents the best setting for learning," said Oonagh Connolly, the director of the Wollaston Hill Montessori School. And with 10-foot high ceilings and a wall full of tall elegant windows, the Wollaston Congregational building possesses the perfect space for children to realize their potential.

Over the last month extensive repairs have been made to the roof of the church and much has been done to the inside of the building in preparation for the school Open House in March.

"The classroom is now ready for viewing, but work will be ongoing, both inside and out over the coming months," said Connolly, a native of Ireland. "We want to make it a welcoming space for the children, their families, the neighbors and the surrounding communities."

Open House Saturday, March 10 At Wollaston Congregational Church

Already on Wollaston Hill is the Cornerstone Campus Preschool. The director of this school, Gail Macdonald, has welcomed the addition of the Wollaston Hill Montessori School, expressing the need for another quality preschool in the area.

"Having known Oonagh for some years, we can be like 'Sister Schools', sharing resources, ideas etc."

Macdonald said. "This will indeed fill a need for this type of school in the community. There are many full-day school programs out there, but not too many that specialize in half-day programs."

The Wollaston Hill Neighborhood Association (a community group representing the interest and concerns of residents of the Wollaston Hill and Forbes Hill neighborhoods) has endorsed the idea of having a Montessori preschool in the Wollaston Congregational Church building. This group continually works to try and improve the neighborhood, making it a better place for all to enjoy. A second preschool on the hill will thus enable children to walk to school and prevent families from having to travel further afield in search of a good education for their child.

The school will run a Montessori program five mornings a week for children 2.9 to 6 years. The emphasis will be on nurturing the "whole" child through daily yoga, individualized academics, healthy eating, arts, Spanish and outdoor play.

For more information, go to www.WollastonHillMontessori.com or contact Connolly at 617-237-0722.

The school is located in the Wollaston Congregational Church building at 48 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston.

"I am so happy to have found this wonderful facility and we look forward to welcoming families from all backgrounds, faiths and cultures, whether you live on Wollaston Hill or beyond," Connolly added.

Cosmetologists And Beauty Salons Benefit The City And Serve Society, Too

As a volunteer who works with boys and girls in football, basketball, cheerleading and baseball in Quincy, I too am very much concerned about the quality of life in the City of Presidents, especially the Squantum neighborhood. Although I do not live in the city, my daughter and two grandsons do.

I was somewhat puzzled and dismayed, however, by a letter in last week's Quincy Sun that says among other things, "I thought this the City of Presidents, seems like it is the city of manicures." Did I miss something written between the lines?

My daughter Kim is a cosmetologist who has worked in Quincy and now works in Dedham, and my wife and I have owned and operated 11 different beauty salons on the South Shore since 1988, where we have provided manicuring and pedicuring services. Our full service salon in East Bridgewater provides me with the flexibility to serve the youth of Quincy.

Over that period of time our business has paid millions of dollars in salaries and wages in a legitimate business that also has paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in payroll taxes (Social Security, Medicare), unemployment insurance, workers compensation, health insurance and vacation pay to hundreds of workers, both women and men of all backgrounds and orientations, in addition to property taxes (schools, police, fire, parks, etc.) and corporate income taxes and fees.

We have also contributed many tens of thousands of dollars in contributions to charities, while encouraging our team members to volunteer in the community. At the same time we have provided meaningful personal beauty services to assist thousands of clients to look their best and feel better about themselves.

Obviously, most salons in Quincy (are there really 111 of them?) do the same or similar. Denigrating any viable business or profession that requires extensive education and licensing, even one that provides personal beauty services, is unfair and inappropriate. As an active Rotarian I am, along with many Quincy Rotarians, devoted to many positive principles, including the "dignifying of each... occupation as an opportunity to serve society." Our cosmetologists, stylists, manicurists and aestheticians do that every day.

Women & Social Security

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

March is Women's History Month — a time to focus not just on the past, but on the challenges women continue to face in the 21st century.

Social Security plays a vital role in the lives of women. With longer life expectancies than men, women tend to live more years in retirement and have a greater chance of exhausting other sources of income. With the national average life expectancy for women in the United States rising, many women will have decades to enjoy retirement. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, a girl born today can expect to live more than 80 years. As a result, experts generally agree that if women want to ensure that their retirement years are comfortable, they need to plan early and wisely.

What you can do

The best place to begin is by knowing what you can expect to receive from Social Security, and how much more you are likely to need.

You can start with a visit to Social Security's Retirement Estimator. There, in just a few minutes, you can get a personalized, instant estimate of your retirement benefits. You can find it at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

You should also visit Social Security's financial planning website at www.socialsecurity.gov/planners. It provides detailed information about how marriage, widowhood, divorce, self-employment, government service, and other life or career events can affect your Social Security.

Benchmarks Missed But Downtown 'Making Progress'

60 days, at which time the developers could opt to pay for additional extensions. But Hines told the council it's not in anyone's best interest for the payments to continue.

"This initial as of right extension is 60 days, and there are further 60-days periods of time available to incur addition $25,000 payments," Hines said. "This initial one was paid so as to give some breathing room for the teams...to get together; and that's what we're doing, we're in those negotiations now on how best to address that situation. I don't think it's in anyone's best interest to basically continuously fine them $25,000 when that money could go towards the project."

Any change to the LDA that would affect the payments would need council approval.

The Oct. 25 deadline for the traffic report was missed in part because design plans aren't yet finalized. But Hines told the council having that report filed at a later date is actually a good thing.

"It would make it more relevant, having [the report] later" Hines said, "because it's designed around the project as it will be built as opposed to in the abstract now. Again, as we get through the MEPA (Massachusetts Environmental Protection Act) process, the final layout of the buildings — orientation, driveway cuts, curve cuts, whatever — aren't known... so all of that needs to come out and then the traffic study is fit to that scenario."

Representatives of Street-Works, The Beal Companies, National Realty and Development Corporation also appeared before the council as part of a quarterly update called for by Councillor-At-Large Doug Gutro.

Street-Works Founding Partner Richard Heapes was the first to address the council. He said that he was proud of the progress his company has made since the LDA was signed.

"If we were looking at this a year ago, having just signed the LDA, we would've certainly been pleased at the progress that has been made," Heapes said. "The bottom line is to assure you that we are right on schedule to break ground in 2013 and to open in 2015."

Heapes also said the development team is working to secure tenants for the 3.5 million square feet that will be created by the project. That process also involves going through the design of each building with potential tenants, something he referred to as "natural" and "good" because it shows a heightened level of interest.

Heapes went on to explain why Street-Works was partnering with NRDC and Beal on the project. He said his company has other agreements with NRDC, which both develops retail property and owns significant stakes in Lord & Taylor and the Hudson's Bay Company. "They teach us about retail," he said.

NRDC will be responsible for developing 400,000 square feet of retail space in the new Quincy Center. John Orrico, the company's president, said they are looking for unique proposals from different tenants who could fill that space.

"We've been involved with this since September and what I've told all the retailers that we're speaking to is 'you have to tell me how you're going to be different — don't give me the same store that you give Braintree or Hingham or wherever — I want you to tell me why you're going to be different,' because we're creating a different environment," Orrico said.

Stephen Faber, a senior vice president for the Beale Companies, went next. The Cohasset resident said he thinks Quincy Center is an ideal location for such a large development because three MBTA commuter rail lines that service 25 communities pass through the city, though only one of those lines stops at Quincy Center. He said he'd talk with the MBTA about having more stop in the city, to make it a hub.

The council did have some questions for the developers. Gutro, who chairs the council's Downtown and Economic Growth Committee, asked how Beal/Street-Works was working with tenants of existing buildings as the project moves forward.

Heapes said that negotiations with those tenants are private, but said no one would be forced to leave early. He also noted that since many of the tenants are small businesses, they don't general commit to longer-term leases.

"The small, street level tenants are an unusual category in that those tenants don't usually decide about their future four years in advance," Heapes told Gutro. "They're really looking at three months, four months, six months so we don't actively try to lease the space until it's three months, four months, six months out."

Following the presentation by the developers, representatives from the city spoke. Hines assured the council that funding for the Town Brook was secured through a $5 million appropriation from the state and a $5.1 million grant; that project's expected cost is around $7 million.

Hines said that despite those appeals over the relocation of the brook, one by the Quincy Environmental Network and another by Arline Goodman, the city has already started work further upstream, putting it ahead of the September deadline to begin work on the brook as mandated by the LDA.

Frank Tramontozzi, who's overseeing the infrastructure improvements the city is responsible for, was also on hand. According to him, the state approved the design of the Burgin Parkway Access Bridge in late January. The bridge will be built and owned by the State Department of Transportation.

In total, the council spent more than two-and-a-half hours listening to the presentation about the progress of the redevelopment. The next quarterly update on the matter has been tentatively scheduled for the City Council's June 18 meeting.

SEA WORTHY

If you were born during the month of March and happen to love the ocean, you are blessed to have aquamarine as your birthstone. There once was a time during the 19th century when the preferred color for this gemstone was sea-green. Today, gemstone aficionados largely seek out clear blue aquamarines that do not have a tint of yellow, green, or gray. Unlike its cousin emerald (both aquamarine and emerald are members of the beryl family), aquamarine is not subject to inclusions that cloud the stone. Instead, aquamarine is as clear as the still, blue sea waters after which it is named. Because smaller stones lack intensity of color, larger aquamarines are both more desirable and more valuable.

Gorgeous aquamarine jewelry is the perfect birthstone gift for March babies. Its pale blue color gives jewelry a naturally light and bright charm. Our store is conveniently located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center and we are happy to bring you our exceptional level of service and value. Our professional and knowledgeable staff will work with you to make sure you have the best buying experience possible. Call us at 617-773-3636 we want to show you these precious jewels.

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Adriana Jaimes '11

Adriana Jaimes of Boston is attending Boston University this year, studying Biochemistry with a Pre-Medicine concentration. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being a leader in the student division of the Anti-Genocide Network, STAND, and the Association for Diversity in Action organizations on campus. She was the Captain and Choreographer of the Dance Club; a member of the National Honor Society and the Cooking Club. She also served as an Admissions Ambassador and a Peer Minister.

"Two things that I love about Fontbonne are its community and the opportunities it offers. As an Hispanic girl from Boston, I originally felt I might not fit in at Fontbonne. Though this initially seemed like an issue to me, Fontbonne provided a very accepting and supportive community and made me realize that each girl is accepted at Fontbonne for who she is. Fontbonne gave me the confidence to explore innate passions and skills, such as activism. Fontbonne then provided me the opportunity to act on those newly-found interests as well as my old hobbies. While I was at Fontbonne, I started two clubs. Fontbonne has taught me that I am a unique person and that I can accomplish anything with hard work."

REMEMBERING WHEN Group Leaders Quincy Fire Lt. Gerry McCourt and VNA Hospice Care's Denise Murphy.

Tips To Prevent Fire, Fall Injury And Death

- To prevent fires, space heaters should be kept at least 3 feet (1 meter) from anything that can burn and unplugged when no one's home or at bedtime.

- While cooking, older adults should wear tight fitting clothing or short sleeves so clothes don't ignite from the stove. People should never leave cooking unattended or cook if drowsy from medicine or alcohol.

- To prevent falls, older adults should exercise to improve balance and build strength. Consulting a doctor first about ability-appropriate exercise is best.

- To prevent falls in the home, it's important to clear stairs and hallways of electrical cords, shoes, books, magazines, clothing and any other things that can be tripped over.

Fire And Fall Prevention Program For Older Adults

VNA Of Boston, Quincy Fire Dept. Partnering To Prevent Fires, Falls

Through a grant from the National Fire Protection Association, the VNA of Boston, VNA Hospice Care, and the Quincy Fire Department have embarked on public awareness campaign entitled "Remembering When; Fire and Fall Prevention Program for Older Adults" to help reduce injuries and deaths from fires and falls among older adults in the Quincy community.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, falls are the leading cause of injury and death in the US among older adults (age 65 and older); a rate that has increased sharply over the past several decades. While the number of fatalities and injuries caused by residential fires has declined gradually over the past several decades, fires and burns are still the third leading cause of fatal home injury.

The Remembering When program, a national initiative, partners home visiting community organizations and local fire departments to provide outreach and education on home safety practices. The Program focuses on 16 key fire and fall prevention messages. (see TIPS box for a sample of included messages)

In Quincy, the VNA of Boston and Fire Department plans to achieve their goals with Train the Trainer sessions focusing on educating clinicians on community resources available to Quincy residents and how they can help their patients access them.

There will also be individual home visits by VNA staff. Every admission made by a VNA of Boston clinician includes a home safety evaluation that requires an assessment of the patient's home for areas that are potentially unsafe.

Also included will be group presentations to the targeted older adult population. VNA Hospice Care's Denise Murphy, RN and Lieutenant Garry McCourt from the Quincy Fire Department will help the older adult population identify, fix, and prevent unsafe issues that could potentially lead to injury or even death.

The first presentation held at the Kennedy Center last December was attended by 85 people. A second presentation held Feb. 21 at Fenno House in Quincy was also well attended.

"The partnership between the VNA of Boston and the QFD can yield only positive results," said Denise Murphy. "The Remembering When initiative expands the reach of the QFD and provides VNA staff with information and tools to help their patients; allowing for education and prevention before accidents occur. Most importantly, Remembering When promises to keep the residents of Quincy safe and healthy at home."

Quincy Neighborhood Club Offers A Warm, Memorable Experience

Banquet Halls, Superb Dining, Private Professional Setting

By EMILY TAFT

The Neighborhood Club of Quincy welcomed a new president last June, C. Robert Foy, a long time Quincy resident who is following in the footsteps of his father.

Foy, who has been a member for over 30 years, has taken on the same seat as his father, after years of being on several committees and boards for the club.

"I became a member because of my father," said Foy. "I think both of my parents would be proud to hear I am walking in his footsteps."

Foy's father served as the president of the club in 1979 and 1980, and now Foy will be the president from 2011-2013. He began going to the club with his wife and parents, and ultimately decided to become a member, after much convincing from his father. After joining, he became involved in the club's leadership serving as secretary, vice president, and now president.

The Neighborhood Club of Quincy opened in 1917 and is one of the longest running restaurants. Located on Glendale Road near the MBTA Quincy Center station, it offers a banquet hall and food that Foy said people continue to talk about long after they leave.

"We have had people here for weddings and other events that still talk about how great the food is," said Foy. "We know how to do it and we know how to do it well. The food here is superb."

With the direction of the club's General Manager Martin J. McGovern, who attended culinary school, and has been in the restaurant business for many years, members and guests are provided with an experience of good food and a place to get away.

"I have five children. My wife and I would come here for the quiet," said Foy. "It's an oasis, a place that you can create your own privacy."

The club provides the catering for events that are booked in either of the club's halls including the ballroom with chandeliers and a fire-placed living room. Those renting can choose from a wide selection of different foods, along with either a sit down meal or buffet style. According to Foy, the club is unique since they assign one waitress for every two sit down meals and three tables for buffets to give guests a more personal experience. The larger hall can hold anywhere from 20 to 200 people, but Foy said they have held functions where there have been over 200 guests, such as the North Quincy High School Hockey Hall of Fame celebration that happened recently.

"This is a place for reunions, to get personal and catch up with folks you haven't seen in a while," said Foy. "We give you a place to really sit down and say hello to those you haven't seen in years."

Along with renting out their function halls and holding member gatherings, the club also holds a fundraiser each holiday season for charity, called a night of thanks and giving. Last year they raised and donated over $20,000 to the St. Francis House in Roxbury. Each year the money raised is donated to service men and women, along with a service charity. The event includes a meal, auction, and a raffle.

"Last year it was a great event, with over 225 people who attended," said Foy. "There were a lot of residents of Quincy that attended, and a lot of veterans as well. It was a great night."

Members who visit the club for dinner or lunch can expect a new dining experience with little wait time. Couples and groups can expect to sit and have drinks at the bar or lounge area and then be seated when their appetizers or meals are ready and waiting for them at their tables.

"We have a unique way of doing things," said Foy. "We offer a different dining experience, a lot different from a regular restaurant experience. That's why the place isn't just banquet full - it is restaurant full."

Foy said that there are a lot of plans being discussed, a list of around 35 items, including projects on how to get the word out about the club, different renovations being done on the building, and expansion ideas. They are also looking into ways of bringing a younger generation of members in, along with gearing up for the club's 100-year celebration, which is a few years away.

As the new president, he has already started with some of his plans by putting a new roof on the building, adding a fireplace to the members' lounge along with bringing the building up to code and handicap access-sible.

But most of all he wants to let residents know that the club's halls can be rented by anyone, not just members.

"I find that a lot of people don't know we are around, or think that only members can rent out the hall," said Foy. "I want to change that perspective."

The club offers many different activities and events for members to attend, including different bowling leagues for all ages, lady's night, comedy nights, dinner theaters, and dance lessons among other exciting events. The club also offers a members-only lounge, dining room, and social events that are only for members and their guests. Those who visit the Neighborhood Club are required to wear a jacket and tie for gentlemen and proper attire for ladies.

The 475 members (and counting) pay monthly dues and have monthly minimums they have to spend in the members dining hall. They also have to go through an application process and receive the recommendation of two sponsors before becoming a member. The club also has a number of honorary members, and members outside of Quincy including some from Cohasset and Duxbury.

"Our membership is very stable," said Foy. "We have loyal members, and we are looking to expand on our corporate members."

Foy added that they are now actively pursuing corporate memberships, and that they have the proper equipment to host business meetings and functions.

"We are able to create a private professional setting here," said McGovern. "A lot of business is able to get done here in a private setting."

should be homeless," said Yazwinski. "We see an average of six months to a year that soldiers coming back from the war become homeless, and we hope to end that in the next five years."

Yazwinski added that there is more out there for veterans than ever before, and that the Department of Labor is helping get vets back to work.

"What we are seeing is more resources for our vets. About 45 vets this year have been placed in full-time jobs," said Yazwinski. "As they are coming back from war, they are going to need us more than ever."

Another growing population at the shelter, according to Yazwinski, is 18 to 22 year-olds. Yazwinski said they have men and women who are trying to graduate high school who have nowhere else to sleep coming into the shelter more frequently now.

Yazwinski said that most guests are required to leave during the day in hopes to find a job, get the help they need, go into work, or go to school.

When the weather gets to 32 degrees or lower during the day, guests are allowed to stay for the whole day, according to Yazwinski, even though the shelter is only funded by the state to run at night.

"We would like to be able to allow people to stay in all day, but the funding isn't there, but a lot of our guests are either working or going to classes during the day anyway," said Yazwinski. "Only about 25 percent of our guests are struggling to find somewhere to go during the day."

The shelter provides a work program and career center, along with a nurse who is there five days a week and a doctor who comes in once a day both provided by Boston medical center's program health care for the homeless. They also offer counselors and case management workers for the guests to utilize and help them get back on their feet.

The shelter provides a housing program that allows those living in the apartment to pay 30 percent of their income towards rent.

"We need a commitment to housing to all income levels," said Yazwinski. "We have had an 85 percent success rate in our housing program. The outcome is tremendous when they have their own key."

They provide 40 units throughout the South Shore through private landlords; providing housing for around 52 families in Quincy alone.

The guests are split up into different tracks. Track one being that they have nothing they are engaging in immediately. Track two are those who are able to come and go more freely based on their schedule, and are those who are in school or have a job. Track two guests are on their way out of the shelter and are getting back on their feet.

"People think that people who are homeless want to be," said Yazwinski. "When in fact they are people who just need a little help. What family in America hasn't had a family member who has struggled with demons? No one chooses to sleep on the floor, the majority of the people who come here just need a little help."

Yazwinski said that the goal of Father Bill's & Mainspring is to become a triage center instead of a large emergency shelter. But with the economy and cold weather, that goal is in the distant future.

"Our job is to put ourselves out of business," said Yazwinski. "Homelessness is a problem you have to take head on, not look the other way."

Mann will appear at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy to discuss her new book, "Wide Sky, Narrow Path," an inspirational account of her thru-hike of the Appalachian Trail, and the parallels to one's journey of life.

The event will be take place Monday, March 5 at 7 p.m.

Mann is a graduate of North Quincy High School and Eastern Nazarene College. She currently works as a graphic designer in Reston, VA.

Tax Tip

If you plan to charge your income taxes to your credit card, remember to factor in the convenience fee, says lifehacker.

Many people often find that they actually owe the government money and will choose to charge it to their credit card. A convenience fee will be added, and it can add up. For instance, a fee of $9.40 will be added to a $400 tax bill, while $117.50 will be charged to a $5,000 tax bill. In addition, if the fee is not paid within the credit card issuer's grace period, interest will be charged as well.

On the bright side, the IRS does have an installment-payment plan (which requires qualification).

Gas Furnace Needs Annual Maintenance

Q: I have a gas heater in my home that works very well, but my friend told me I need to maintain it and get it serviced every year. One reason I chose a gas heater was that it didn't need as much maintenance as the oil-fueled heater in my old home. Do I really need to spend the money to bring in a heater repairman every year? — Gladys J., Grand Junction, Colo.

A: Ideally, you should have a professional check your heating system once a year to make sure everything is working properly. The reason is that, like any machinery, gas furnaces have moving parts, inlet valves and other things that can and will break down eventually. Dirt can build up in the furnace system, and moisture from various sources also can cause problems. A heating professional will be able to check systems like the blower motor and exhaust stack, electrical connections and other areas that are not safe or practical for many homeowners to tackle themselves.

There are some maintenance tasks you can do yourself that will help keep the professional's visit cost-effective. The single most important thing you can do is change the filter every month that the furnace is in operation. This minimizes the amount of dust that enters the furnace itself and keeps it from gunking up the works and reducing heating efficiency (or shutting it down entirely). Keeping the room that the furnace is in free of clutter and dust is another way to maintain the unit.

You also can inspect parts of the heating system yourself. Check to make sure the pilot light is burning properly and at the right height. (Your manufacturer's manual should specify this, but if it doesn't, most pilot lights burn at about an inch in height, with a bright-blue hue at the top of the flame.) You also might be able to inspect the burners, which when operating also should have clear flames with a bright blue hue. When they are off, visually check the burners for any buildup of soot or grease.

Inspect the furnace and all visible ductwork for signs of damage or corrosion twice a year. If you see any issues with the furnace, the burners or the pilot light, or if other problems occur, such as the furnace tripping the circuit breaker, contact a heating professional right away to fix the issue.

As a final note, remember to get a written estimate from the heating professional before allowing any maintenance or repair work to take place.

HOME TIP: Be safe. Never store combustible materials near a furnace or heater, and make sure the furnace area is well-ventilated.

McNamee, Police Meeting On Modern Neighborhood Watch

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee co-sponsored a community crime watch meeting with Lt. Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Squantum School Library.

In response to continued concerns about property crimes in and around Ward 6 neighborhoods, Lt. Minton will conduct a community workshop on the "Modern Neighborhood Watch." He will specifically address proactive measures that can be taken by a community working in coordination with the police department that will deter criminal activity.

"A watchful neighborhood where residents are enlisted to be reporters of suspicious activity is the first line of defense in the modern neighborhood watch," McNamee said. "Today, one can pick up a cell phone and make a call instantly if they observe something that looks out of place. This speed of observer reporting can produce real results and in many instances stop crime before it occurs."

A Job Well Done

Through the years, as I have presented safety seminars at senior citizen buildings, the issue of "buzzing" people into their building always comes up. This should be a clear example of why it is so important not to buzz unknown people into your "home." This goes for all multi unit complexes.

LT. DAN MINTON

On Thursday, Feb. 9, at approximately 10 p.m., Officers Steve Elmes and Bruce Tait responded to a call of a "possible B&E in progress at Fax-on Commons" on Southern Artery. Upon arrival, the officers spoke to the caller, who lives in the building and works for the complex. She said that there have been several breaks over the last 3-4 months into several storage units in the complex (buildings 1035, 1027, 1047 and 1071 Southern Artery).

She said that residents were notified not to open the front security door (by buzzing someone in via doorbell) without being sure they know who they are letting in the building. She told the officers that someone buzzed her apartment and when she tried to ask who it was, no one answered.

Due to the breaks, she grabbed the keys to the storage units located on the first floor and went to check the area. As she entered the storage facility, she found a man hiding in the storage area. When she asked what he was doing there, the man fled towards 1027 Southern Artery.

The officers and the caller then proceeded to that building to locate the suspect. The officers went into the storage area and after a brief search, Officer Tait spotted the suspect hiding behind the entry door to the storage area. The suspect was then brought outside and asked if he lived in the apartment complex.

The suspect, a 50 year-old homeless man, said he did live there but he is homeless. When asked to explain this, the suspect said he has been in Quincy for a few months, sleeping in the storage facilities of a few of the buildings, bouncing back and forth between Father Bill's and the storage units. The suspect identified storage units, stating, "this one (1027), the other one he just came from (1035) and two others, but I don't know the numbers."

When asked how he gained entrance, the suspect denied breaking in, saying that the doors were left open. The caller/leasing agent contradicted this statement by saying that the storage doors are always locked and that they lock automatically.

Officer Elmes asked her if the door was locked at 1035 and she responded yes. Officer Tait then tried the door to the storage unit where they were at (1027) and found that the door was also secure. The suspect was again asked how he broke into the storage unit, but this time he refused to answer.

Officer Tait stayed with the suspect while Officer Elmes confirmed the suspect's information. Although there were no warrants, the suspect was a registered sex offender in Boston. Since he was living in Quincy and by his own admission, for a few months, he had failed to register as a sex offender in Quincy.

The suspect was placed under arrest for "Failure to Register as a Sex Offender" and "Breaking and Entering with Intent to Commit a Felony."

Nice Work!

In this case, building management has provided for a secure place to live. Having a locking door prevents those without a key from getting inside directly. For those without a key who wish to visit, the next step of security is to have a visitor ring the bell which goes directly to the specific tenant. Through an intercom system, the tenant usually can inquire who is seeking entry.

Unfortunately, too often, criminals will ring multiple bells and one tenant will allow access, putting at risk everyone's safety. This is a great example of how badly something could have gone - unknowingly having a sex offender in the building.

The next person you let in may be an arsonist!

An Inside Perspective From Head Coaches; North Quincy Versus New Bedford Tonight

Raiders, Presidents Ready To Begin March Madness

By SEAN BRENNAN

This time of year everyone has an opinion and is eager to make predictions. The state basketball tournament always brings out the so-called experts.

But to get a clearer sense of what fans of Quincy and North Quincy basketball should expect this week when the MIAA state basketball tournament tipped off, the best source of inside information came directly from the coaches that have spent three months developing these teams.

North Quincy

The Red Raiders finished the regular season at 17-3 and won their first outright Patriot League championship. North Quincy earned the No. 4 seed in Division 1 South. This team is a legitimate threat to make a serious run in the South Sectional.

But to read some of the pre-tournament previews, most pundits don't want to give the Red Raiders any chance against No. 13 New Bedford in tonight's (Thursday) first round game at North Quincy. Both the Boston Herald and ESPN Boston have the Whalers upsetting the Red Raiders.

Has either of them actually seen this team play?

North Quincy can flat out ball. Led by senior frontcourt players Tim Liuzzo and Paul Cunniff and juniors Marquis McClendon, Dan Gould and Pat Gould, the Red Raiders may not be the most athletic team in the tournament, but they play the game the right way and use multiple matchups to beat teams on both the offensive and defensive end of the court.

Guards Dan and Pat Gould are matchup nightmares and both have the ability to beat teams off the dribble and from beyond the three-point arch while McClendon has the skill to light it up from anywhere on the court. In Liuzzo and Cunniff, North Quincy has two undersized forwards who aren't afraid to get dirty. Cunniff, especially, has an innate ability to pull down key rebounds in traffic.

Coming off the bench, seniors Joe Brown, Nate DePina and Ryan Evans provide experience while underclassmen Kyle Richardson, Efthim Butka, Greg Clarke, and Aaron Anderson provide some spark.

Maybe it is because North Quincy plays in the Patriot League, a league some experts feel isn't as strong overall as say the Bay State League or the Catholic Conference, but this team has been dealing with that notion that they aren't good enough to make a serious run all year.

"It is gasoline for the fire," said NQ head coach Kevin Barrett on Monday about all the predictions coming out that his team is bound to be upset by New Bedford. "I think we relish the role of underdog. No one gave this team a chance to win the Patriot League this year, no matter what they may say now."

"It is ironic that back before the season started we were in the same position — not good enough to win the league," continued Barrett. "We feel good about having a home game and we have nothing to lose. Right now we are playing with house money."

This isn't to say that New Bedford is going to roll over tonight. The Whalers have played against some strong competition all winter. They are athletic and skilled and have a rich tradition of producing competitive teams through the years playing out of the Big 3.

But North Quincy will be ready.

"The have a tradition of success," said Barrett, "and they are skilled and athletic. It will be a challenge but I think we are going to benefit from playing at home. I don't mind people picking against us. It puts all the pressure on them."

The winner of the North Quincy/New Bedford first round game gets the winner of the Newton North/Marshfield first round game in the quarterfinals on Saturday. If the Red Raiders win tonight the game will be at NQHS.

Quincy

By the time you read this Quincy will either be home for the season or scheduled to play tonight (Thursday) against the winner of the Hingham/Wellesley first round contest.

The No. 15 Presidents (10-10 overall) started the Division 2 South tournament on Tuesday at No. 2 Randolph (18-2).

Don't be surprised if Quincy won. The Presidents know the Bulldogs well as Randolph was a member of the Patriot League up until this season and based on strength of schedule between the two programs, Quincy matched up well with independent Randolph.

"They are not totally unknown to us," said Quincy head coach David Parry on Monday. "We have been watching them and there is some familiarity with what they like to do. They have beaten some good teams and they like to mix it up on defense. You don't win 18 games and not know how to win, but we are feeling good and confident."

"If we play our game and rebound the ball on both ends of the court we should be ok," continued Parry. "The team is focused right now and we have no doubt that we can play with them."

The Presidents could be a serious sleeper in Division 2 South in large part because of the stellar play of senior forward Zerick Fadairo. Fadairo, the team's lone returning starter off last year's tournament team, played like a beast during league play. Other players to watch include guards Reggie Cesar, Tino Gonclaves, Alex Botari, Jalen Green and Jaquan Harris and forwards Brendan Cunningham, JT Bain, Dan Mongo, Nick Lepore and Peter Cedrone.

Quincy Girls

The Quincy girls are another team that doesn't seem to be getting the respect due to them.

The Presidents finished the regular season at 17-4 and earned the No. 5 seed in Division 1 South. But, like the North Quincy boys, Quincy isn't on the list of teams expected to compete for a sectional title.

Again, have any of these pundits seen this senior-laden team play this winter?

The Presidents enter the postseason winners of nine games in their final ten. Their only loss in that span was to undefeated Scituate — the top ranked team in Division 2 South.

Add the fact that Quincy starts four seniors and league all-stars in Kiley McDonald (forward), Caity Lowry (forward), Juli Tomer (guard) and Nicole Lamie (forward) along with steady sophomore Alyssa Lydon (point guard), and there is a recipe for a long tournament run.

Quincy's biggest strength when it began tournament play last night (Wednesday) against No. 12 Durfee (12-8) was its overall team defense. The Presidents like to play tenacious man-to-man defense and with the improvement of players like Lowry on the offensive end, Quincy is going to be a tough out.

"We are ready to go," said Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch on Monday. "There are no guarantees but we are ready for this opportunity. Durfee is a solid team and a good program; they played in the Garden two years ago. Last year they missed the tournament but they play in a good league (Big 3)."

"I feel like we can compete with anyone," continued Bretsch. "We may be getting overlooked but the girls are excited."

Other players to keep an eye on are seniors Maria Berberan and Emily Nguyen, juniors Alysha Dunbar, Maryssa Dwyer, Ashley Daniels and Sam McArdle and sophomores Kayla McArdle and Rachel Papile.

A Quincy win over Durfee would have set up a quarterfinal game on Friday versus the winner of the Wellesley/Madison Park first round game.

SENIOR ZERICK FADAIRO and the Quincy Presidents opened the Division 2 South state tournament on Tuesday at Randolph. A win by Quincy would have them playing tonight at either Hingham or Wellesley in a quarterfinal game.

Quincy Boys and Girls, North Quincy Boys Playing This Week In South Sectional Action State Basketball Tournament Tips Off For Local Teams

By SEAN BRENNAN

Now that the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) has finished seeding the 2012 high school state basketball tournament brackets, we can take an in-depth look at the road ahead for the North Quincy and Quincy boys' teams and the Quincy High girls' teams as these three programs get ready for potential state championship runs.

Division 1 South (Boys)

Patriot League regular season champion North Quincy, which finished at 17-3 overall, enters the Division 1 South tournament as the No. 4 seed in the field of 17. The Red Raiders ended the season with the same record as Weymouth, Newton North and Franklin, so the MIAA flipped a coin to determine which teams out the four would be seeded 3-6. Weymouth and North Quincy ended up being seeded 3-4, which means that the Red Raiders possibly could play two home games leading up to the sectional semifinals.

North Quincy gets underway tonight (Thursday) at home with a 7 p.m. tip-off against Big 3 opponent New Bedford. The Whalers finished the regular season at 14-6, earning the No. 13 seed. A victory over New Bedford would mean that the Red Raiders would host a quarterfinal game on Saturday (TBA) against the winner of the Newton North (17-3) and Marshfield (13-5) first-round winner.

For a team that finished last season at 10-10 and just squeezed into the tournament, before losing to Needham in the first-round, the potential for a two home playoff games is a well-deserved reward for an outstanding regular season. North Quincy may not be the biggest or most athletic team in Division 1 South this year, but they are well coached and fundamentally sound so, it isn't far-fetched to potentially see them playing in the sectional semifinals early next week.

The top-ten teams, according to overall records, in Division 1 South are: Brockton (18-2), Madison Park (16-2) and Weymouth (17-3), North Quincy (17-3), Newton North (17-3), Franklin (17-3), Taunton (13-3), Catholic Memorial (16-4), Barnstable (16-4), and Needham (15-5).

The rest of the field (seeds 11-17) is BC High (15-5), Marshfield (13-5), New Bedford (14-6), Mansfield (14-7), Natick (13-7), Plymouth South (11-9) and West Roxbury (9-9).

Plymouth South and West Roxbury played in a preliminary round game on Tuesday night with the winner playing at top-ranked Brockton tonight.

QHS Senior All-Stars

Division 2 South (Boys)

Different division and different gender, but if a .500 Hull girls' team can win six straight games to capture the Div. 4 state championship in 2011, it isn't impossible for a .500 Quincy boys' team to make a postseason run of their own.

The Presidents (10-10 overall) are ranked No. 15 out of the field of 15 in Division 2 South. Quincy, which finished in second place in the Patriot League's Fisher Division this winter, played in a first round game on Tuesday at No. 2 Randolph (18-2).

A win over the Bulldogs would have the Presidents playing tonight (Thursday) on the road against the winner of the Wellesley/Hingham first round game.

The top-ten teams in Division 2 South are: Falmouth (18-2), Randolph (18-2), King Philip (17-3), Stoughton (16-4), Medfield (14-6), Hopkinton (14-6), Hingham (14-7), Somerset (11-7), Oliver Ames (12-8) and Wellesley (12-8).

The of the field (seeds 11-15) is Scituate (10-8), Norwood (11-9), Duxbury (11-9), Whitman-Hanson (11-9) and Quincy (10-10).

Prediction

Semifinals: Stoughton versus Falmouth; King Philip versus Hingham

Finals: Stoughton versus King Philip

Champion: King Philip

Division 1 South (Girls)
There is a lot to like about Quincy's chances when Division 1 South tournament play gets underway this week. The Presidents enter with a 17-4 overall record hungry to redeem itself from a one-and-done performance turned in last year when they lost to Taunton in a first-round game despite being a higher seed.

The Presidents have all the ingredients of a tournament frontrunner. Quincy plays six seniors regularly and this season the Presidents have improved its team defensively; both factors become vital once the state tournament begins. There is also the motivation of the senior class to end their high school careers with a splash. Don't discount that factor.

Quincy as the No. 5 seed hosted No. 12 Durfee (12-8) last night. Depending on how the Wellesley (17-3) and Madison Park (12-9) first-round matchup played out, if the Presidents won, they would either be at Wellesley or hosting Madison Park on Friday night in a quarterfinal game.

The top-ten teams in Division 1 South are: Franklin (18-2), Braintree (18-2), New Bedford (18-2), Wellesley (17-3), Quincy (16-4), Barnstable (15-4), Marshfield (14-4), Newton North (14-6), Stoughton (13-6) and North Attleboro (13-7).

The rest of the field (seeds 11-19) is Mansfield (14-8), Durfee (12-8), Madison Park (12-9), Dartmouth (9-7), West Roxbury (10-8), Weymouth (11-9), Taunton (11-9), Whitman-Hanson (10-10) and Plymouth South (10-10).

Hosted Coyle & Cassidy In First Round Game Wednesday; Co-Champions of Patriot League North Quincy Storms Into Division 2 South Tournament

By SEAN BRENNAN

North Quincy's reward for closing out the regular season at 11-5-4 overall and as co-champions of the Patriot League with Duxbury was a Division 2 South first round home playoff game, which was played last night at the Quincy Youth Arena against Coyle & Cassidy.

The Red Raiders entered the tournament as one of the hottest teams in all of Division 2 South thanks in large part to their 7-0-1 record over the final eight regular season games, which included impressive victories over league foes Scituate (4-2 on Feb. 8), Pembroke (3-2 on Feb. 11), Quincy (6-0 on Feb. 18) and Whitman-Hanson (5-2 on Feb. 22) and a hard-fought 2-2 tie with Division 2 state power Canton on Feb. 15.

North Quincy was locked into the No. 7 seed in the South Sectional field of eleven teams. A win over the Warriors (8-11-1 overall, 7-1-0 in the Eastern Athletic Conference) would have moved the Red Raiders into the sectional quarterfinals against Canton on Saturday at the Brockton Ice Arena.

"We are coming into the tournament confident but not cocky," said NQ head coach Matt Gibbons about his program's mindset on Monday. "The team knows that they can play with anybody and I think that they have shown that over these last eight games. I see the South Sectional as being wide-open."

"To get a home playoff game at the Quincy Youth Arena is a huge bonus for the kids," Gibbons said about North Quincy hosting a playoff game at the QYA. "It should be fun."

The Division 2 South tournament is top-heavy with Hockomock League teams. Seeds 1-4: Franklin (16-2-3), Canton (15-2-3), Mansfield (13-4-3) and Oliver Ames (12-4-4) all hail from that league as does No. 6 North Attleboro. The Red Raiders lost to Franklin 5-2 last year in the quarterfinals, and a potential date with Canton this year in the quarterfinals means that North Quincy, if it wants to advance into the semifinals is going to need to beat another Hockomock League power to do so.

Both Canton and Franklin were in contention - albeit not strong contenders - for a Division 1A (Super 8) berth.

But first-things-first. Coyle & Cassidy was no slouch. The Warriors won the EAC regular season championship with their 7-1-0 league record. A closer examination of their nonleague schedule reveals the reason for their final 8-11-1 finish. The Warriors played, and lost to Super 8 participants Hingham, Springfield Cathedral and St. John's Shrewsbury as well as Catholic Conference stronghold Xaverian.

It may not be reflected in the final record but Coyle & Cassidy is one of the best 8-11-1 teams in the state.

"(Coyle & Cassidy) played an extremely tough schedule," noted Gibbons, "and they won the Eastern Athletic Conference. They played a strong nonleague schedule - it was a Division 1 schedule - and their record shows that. They don't score many goals but like us they are a tough and physical team. It will probably be a one goal game either way."

However, if North Quincy brought the physical, hard-hitting style they used late in the season, the Red Raiders should have had enough to advance.

Behind the strong play of the first line forward Shawn Grady (team-high 20 goals) and the emergence of sophomore forward Andrew Currie (nine goals), North Quincy has been scoring goals at a high rate. The Red Raiders ended the season by outscoring Quincy and Whitman-Hanson 11-2.

On the backend, senior defensemen Nick Furey and Tim Marks and senior goalie James Dunn have helped

North Quincy limit their last five opponents to two goals or less.

"This senior class has never had a (winning streak) like this one," said Gibbons. "We are really gelling together nicely and there isn't a better way to enter tournament play."

Several underclassmen could also be critical to an extended success for the Red Raiders. Junior forwards Nick McGaughey (four goals, 18 assists) and Pat Verhault (3, 5) and sophomore forward James Doherty (8, 3) bring speed and enthusiasm on every shift. Joining Marks and Furey on the backend playing well is senior Mike Adduci as well as junior Rudy Tryon (three goals, four assists).

The Division 2 South Field

Only eleven teams finished with a good enough record to qualify for the Division 2 South tournament. That means that three wins will get you into the sectional finals.

The top-11 are Franklin, Canton, Mansfield, Oliver Ames, Martha's Vineyard (12-6-2), North Attleboro (12-6-2), North Quincy, Plymouth South (9-9-2), Dennis-Yarmouth (9-9-3), Coyle & Cassidy and Dedham (3-15-2).

The first-round matchups: North Quincy/Coyle & Cassidy; North Attleboro/Dedham; Plymouth South/Dennis-Yarmouth. Franklin, Canton, Mansfield, Oliver Ames and Martha's Vineyard all received a first-round bye.

Last year, Franklin defeated Plymouth South, 5-2, to win the sectional. Franklin lost to Tewksbury 2-1 in the Division 2 state final. Coyle & Cassidy advanced into the semifinals before losing 3-1 to Plymouth South.

Patriot League Champions, Again

North Quincy surprised a lot of people last year when they earned a share of the Patriot League regular season championship with Scituate and Pembroke, finishing the season with an 8-4-8 overall record.

This winter the Red Raiders were out to prove that 2011 was not a fluke. Despite starting the season 2-3-1, North Quincy found its groove following a 3-0 victory over Scituate on Jan. 14. Momentum building wins over Scituate, again, on Feb. 8 and Pembroke on Feb. 11 put them in position to earn a share of the crown in the final regular season game versus Whitman-Hanson.

SOPHOMORE FORWARD ANDREW CURRIE is second on the team with nine goals. The talented winger has also chipped in with eight assists helping North Quincy to end the regular season on a 7-0-1 run.

Against the Panthers, Grady potted two goals as the Red Raiders won 5-2.

The Red Raiders finished 0-1-1 against co-champion Duxbury.

"Last year, even though we earned a share of the Patriot League championship and qualified for the tournament we never really got on any kind of roll because we had so many ties," said Gibbons. "We start the tournament this year playing really well. One of our preseason goals was to win the league, and we did, and now we want to make some noise in the tournament."

HOW WELL ARE YOU HOLDING UP?

With today's increasing focus on football-related concussions, most would suppose that today's helmets provide better protection to high school and college athletes than the crude leather helmets of old. However, they would be wrong. According to a recent study involving non-NFL players, polycarbonate helmets are no more effective in protecting younger players than the "leatherheads" used nearly a century ago. While the new helmets' hard shells and fairly stiff inner padding may protect heads from NFL-style hits, they offer no better protection against the low- and medium-impact hits that can lead to head, neck, and brain injuries. Football is one of the sports cited by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to be most likely to cause brain injuries.

We will do a battery of tests to assess interruption of neurologic function and rule out more serious injuries. Two dribbles, a spin of the basketball, and two more dribbles.

That's the routine eight-year old Katie North uses every time she gets ready to take a free throw. And it is a routine that has brought her all the way into the Elks National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw New England Regional, which will be held on March 24 at Deering High School in Portland, Maine.

Katie won the Quincy Recreation Department's 8-9-year old neighborhood gym-portion of the Elks "Hoop Shoot" competition at Lincoln-Hancock on Dec. 17, 2011 before capturing her second successive City Championship on Dec. 27 after making 22 out of 25 free throws.

At the Circle District final in Marshfield, North made 17 of 25 free throws to advance to the Massachusetts State "Hoop Shoot" finals in Maynard back in January. Katie won her age group by making 21 out of 25; her 21 made free throws also tied a tournament high on the girls' side. As a result, North competed in a three-way shootout for high scorer. She made four-of-five in the shootout as 12-13-year old Larsen Henken of Lexington earned the William J. Ferrick Trophy (high scorer) by successfully making all five.

But remember Larsen is four years older than North.

Katie now has her sights set directly on winning the New England Regional and moving on to the National Championship round to be held at the National Basketball Association's Hall of Fame in Springfield in April.

"I wasn't nervous at the gym and city championship," said North, a quiet third-grader at First Baptist Christian School in Weymouth, in a sit-down interview at the Sun, "but the (Circle) District made me nervous. I shoot right-handed and I aim for the middle of the rim. I have my routine and when I practice I try and stick to that routine."

Basketball has become a major aspect of North's young life. The sport runs through her veins. It doesn't hurt that her older sister Lindsey, a star AAU basketball player for the Bay State Jaguars, is always there to help push Katie's improvement. North's father, Eric, is also the coach for her First Baptist Christian School team. Katie is the team's starting point guard.

"Katie has been in Lindsey's shadow," said Eric about the sibling rivalry between Katie and Lindsey when it comes to basketball, "but Katie has really gotten into this free throw thing and now she gets to experience her big sister watching and cheering for her."

"Leading up to the individual neighborhood gym event and the City Championships, Katie practiced the same format they use," explained Eric. The Elks "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Contest consists of a ten-shot first round and a 15-shot second round for a total of 25. "So, we would practice that way. We would then take a break (between the first and second round), which was very similar to how the process works. Then we would go on to round two where all 15 shots count. We stuck with that the whole time (practicing)."

Regardless of how Katie does at the New England Regional on March 24, the experience is going to be one she won't soon forget. The Elks make sure of that. Katie and her family will be treated to a pizza party on March 23 where she and all the other participants will enjoy the Elks hospitality and get to socialize with new friends.

On the morning of the 24th, Katie will enjoy a Breakfast of Champions before boarding a bus that will take her down the road to Deering High School where she will compete against five other 8-9-year old girls from throughout the region. Following the competition, an awards banquet and dinner will be held at the Doubletree Hotel in Portland.

As a two-time Quincy champion, Katie expects to be back next year when the Quincy Recreation Department holds its always-popular event. But she would like to come back as the defending New England champ. That is the goal.

Good luck, Katie.

North wasn't the only Quincy resident to advance into the Elks "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw State Championship. In the boys' 10-11 age group, Connor McDonald finished third overall after making 17 out of 25 free throws.

McDonald finished three free throws behind eventually state champion David Bisnaw of Middleboro.

QHS Freshman Basketball Completes 20-1 Season

The Quincy High School freshman boys' basketball team recently wrapped up an impressive season on Feb. 18 by defeating North Quincy, finishing with a season sweep of the young Red Raiders.

With the final victory, the Presidents ended the season with a 20-1 overall record.

Quincy carried 18 players and all contributed in one form or another throughout the winter. Highlights of the season included wins over traditional state power programs like Brockton and Charlestown — the bus ride home from Charlestown HS will always be a memorable one. The team's only loss came against Catholic Memorial in a game that was tight and could have gone either way.

The Presidents not only won every league game, finishing 16-0 in the Patriot League, but it won every single league contest by double figures.

As impressive as this season was the news only gets better for Quincy's basketball program as the 20-1 freshman team played most of the season without center JT Bain, who played varsity basketball. The future looks bright.

Quincy Squirt B Remains Tied for First in League Play

QUINCY YOUTH HOCKEY'S Squirt Travel "B" Team is currently in a first place tie with Needham in the Greater Boston Youth Hockey League. Team members include Ryan Quirk, Josh McMillen, Will McMillen, Stephen Flynn, Jake DeFranco, Anthony Viera, Nicholas Brink, Jack Mariano, Danny Kelly, Matt Connolly, Brendan Bailey, Nick Murray, Peyton McGaffigan, Colman Gillis, Zach Holmes, John Bell, Emily Kraunelis and Abigail Kraunelis. The team is coached by Kevin Barrett.

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt Travel "B" Team remains in a first place tie in Greater Boston Youth Hockey League (GBYHL) play despite a 3-2 loss to Wellesley on Feb. 19, bringing their overall record to 14-1-4 in league play. Ryan Quirk and Josh McMillen scored in the game against Wellesley, a roughly played game with many penalties.

The other GBYHL co-leader is the Needham B3 team, which battled Quincy to a 5-5 tie last week in a game that was fast-paced and furious, with back and forth action and neither side able to gain more than a one-goal lead. Down 5-4 late in the third period against Needham, Quincy was able to net the equalizer with about five minutes left, but then had to endure a furious close by the Rockets who enjoyed a two-man advantage for most of the final two minutes due to untimely penalties against Quincy. In the end the 5-5 score held, and as the teams exited the ice both Needham and Quincy parents agreed it was one of the most competitive and spirited games of the season, almost fitting that it ended in a tie.

Led by top goal scorers Ryan Quirk, Stephen Flynn, Jake DeFranco, and Anthony Viera, the Quincy squad has outscored its opponents 134 to 45, or an average of 7.1 to 2.37. Other key offensive contributors include the ever-hustling Nicholas Brink, twins Will & Josh McMillen, Jack Mariano, and Danny Kelly. A strong defense, lead by goalie Matt Connolly (2.37 GAA; three shutouts) and defensemen Brendan Bailey, Nick Murray, Peyton McGaffigan, Colman Gillis, and Zach Holmes has ensured that the team has rarely trailed in a game, contributing to the team's stellar record.

Rounding out the roster are John Bell, and sisters Emily and Abigail Kraunelis, who have split time between offense and defense, allowing the team to remain in control in almost every game played.

Highpoint Headed For Expansion?

the preliminary stage, and a formal proposal isn't yet on the table.

"It's not as specific as 'we want to put up this building, we want to do this,' we're not at that phase," Fatseas said. "But Highpoint has been sitting there for years and all of a sudden there are people looking at it again very seriously."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin's district includes the Highpoint buildings. He said that while nothing has been formally proposed, it's likely that something will be done on the site.

"I think it's fair to say that with a site with that capacity up there, that something will happen at some point when the economy and the market drives it," Coughlin said. "Perhaps the present owner sees that this is the time to start building. If the economy is going to improve, perhaps they think that by the time they would complete whatever number of buildings that they wish to complete...by the time those structures would be completed perhaps the market would be favorable - I'm only speculating."

Currently, the Highpoint complex has five buildings each standing eight-stories tall. Construction of those buildings began in 2002 after a legal battle between the city and Congress Group Ventures, the site's developer.

A settlement between the parties allowed the project to go forward after a special permit was issued. The permit allowed for up to 1,040 units to be placed on site, though only half that number was built.

But the permit also set a deadline for final construction of all the buildings, according to Coughlin, who wasn't on the council when the original proposal was made. He said the developers originally had six years to complete construction but were granted a four-year extension in 2007 by the council in accordance with terms of the original permit.

The deadline for construction to be completed, according to Coughlin, is July 2 of this year. That means the project may once again appear before the council in its capacity as the city's special permit granting authority (SPGA).

"Substantial exterior construction on this project has to be completed by July 2, 2012 - that's the way I read the special permit and the settlement agreement," Coughlin said following Monday's council meeting. "So any proposal to do anything on that site, it is my opinion, would require a new application to come before the council."

Because he's a member of the SPGA, Coughlin said he wouldn't say if he supports or opposes expansion at the Highpoint complex. But the councillor did say he hopes any additional buildings placed on the site would better blend in with other buildings in the area.

"Aspirationally, I would hope that any project proposal would be more in harmony with the balance of the surrounding residential area as opposed to the style of construction of the buildings that are up there now," Coughlin said. "I think there's room for an improvement on the design features of the buildings and certainly that's something I'd be looking for and hope would be part of any proposal that would come forward."

THIS 90-YEAR-OLD photo shows the outpouring of people who lined the streets on April 9, 1922 to pay their respects to Cyril P. Morrisette, the first Quincy soldier to die from wounds suffered in World War I. Residents, friends and relatives lined the streets from the city square to Morrisette's final resting place in St. Mary Cemetery, West Quincy. This photo and others, taken by H.B. Allison, were found by Bob LaFleur at the Morrisette American Legion Post's former home on Miller Street. LaFleur recently presented copies of the photos in a frame to the Post named in memory of Morrisette and to the family of state Rep. Bruce Ayers, the great-great-nephew of Morrisette. Former Governor Outpolls President; Turnout 12.81%

Super Win Here For Romney

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy voters gave Mitt Romney a solid win here as the former Massachusetts governor won the Bay State and a string of other contests in Tuesday's "Super Tuesday" Presidential Primaries.

Romney received 2,944 votes in the GOP primary in Quincy, easily outdistancing his Republican opponents. The frontrunner for the GOP Presidential nomination also collected more votes in Quincy than President Barack Obama who was unopposed in the Democratic Primary.

Obama received 1,966 votes - 978 fewer votes than Romney. That margin was tempered by the lower-than-expected voter turnout. Only 7,061 voters or 12.81 percent of the city's 55,133 registered voters went to the polls in Quincy.

Track Construction Moving Forward

Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday that construction of a regulation running track for Quincy's young runners will be moving forward in the weeks ahead with bids expected to be opened this week at City Hall.

Construction is slated to begin later this spring, although preliminary site work is already underway with crews working to remove nearly 20,000 cubic yards of fill that was used to prepare the Faxon Field site for a track facility. That work, which includes sifting and screening the fill under with the approval of state environmental regulators, could take more than a month to complete, officials said.

"We are building a first-class running facility for our young people and the community, and we are doing it this spring," said Mayor Koch. "This facility is going to be a tremendous asset to the community and is part of a great makeover of the entire Coddington Street corridor that includes the new Quincy High School, the track and a new YMCA."

The 400-meter track and related facilities are being designed by Gale Associates, the Weymouth-based engineering firm that is among the country's pre-eminent designers of athletic facilities. Gale will also work with the city to monitor construction when it begins later this spring.

Progress But No Settlement Between City, Revere Road Resident

DEP To Hold Appeals Hearing On Town Brook Plan April 20

By SCOTT JACKSON

Even though mediation between the city and Revere Road resident Arline Goodman over the rerouting of Town Brook failed to produce a settlement, both sides feel progress was made during negotiations.

Paul Hines, the assistant city solicitor assigned to the matter, said the talks were both cordial and productive. "We made progress between her and myself acting on behalf of the city," he said in a phone interview Tuesday.

"We could've [reached an agreement] had we had more time," Goodman's attorney, Stuart Schrier, said Monday in a phone interview.

The work on Town Brook is a precursor to the city's redevelopment of Quincy Center. Goodman, who's lived on Revere Road for 43 years, is challenging the city's plan because she isn't happy a turn in the new culvert will be placed a few feet from the foundation of her house.

"I'm not going to let them come in and make the turn aimed right at the foundation of my house,

Quincy Girls Hoop Bows In Sectional Semis

By SEAN BRENNAN

Quincy's magical season came to a disappointing end Tuesday night in a Division 1 South semifinal game against top-ranked Franklin at Massasoit Community College in Brockton.

Quincy led 49-41 early in the fourth quarter, but the Panthers (21-3) finished the game on a 16-4 run to break the Presidents' hearts, 57-53. Quincy ended the season at 18-5 overall.

"I am so proud of the girls," said QHS head coach Jeff Bretsch following the game outside a somber Quincy locker room. "Nobody had (us playing) in this game except for us. We believed from the beginning of the season that we were going to be a team to be reckoned with in the tournament and we definitely proved that tonight. I just wish we could have pulled it out in the end."

The Presidents were led by seniors Kiley McDonald (18 points), Juli Tomer (14), Caitly Lowry (six) and Nicole Lamie (six).

A full game story will run in next week's Quincy Sun.

DEP Hearing On Town Brook April 20

right under my downstairs tenants window and kitchen door," Goodman said. Her main concern about having the turn there is the potential flooding on her property. In her appeal she stated that since the construction of the Quincy Center Concourse, water has seeped into her basement after every moderate rainstorm. She said that with the exception of a March 2010 flood that impacted the whole area, she hadn't had flooding issues at her house since work on the brook took place in the 1990s.

Goodman's challenge, and a separate one filed by the Quincy Environmental Network, resulted in the state Department of Environmental Protection issuing a superseding order of conditions. Goodman appealed that one, and the two sides went to mediation. Since mediation didn't result in a settlement, the DEP will hold an appeals hearing on April 20.

But there's some optimism that Goodman's appeal will be settled before that date.

"That's our hope," Hines said when asked if he foresees a settlement being reached in the six weeks before the hearing, "we need to reach an understanding." He also added that the sides have talked since mediation ended.

Schrier credited Hines for helping move the sides closer to a possible agreement. "Paul Hines is someone who comes across very well," he said. "If he had been involved earlier we wouldn't be here."

Schrier also credited April McCabe, the DEP mediator who presided over the mediation sessions, for bringing the sides together. "More progress was made in February in terms of reducing the animus between the sides than in the previous six months combined - I attribute it to Paul and April."

Goodman said that during mediation, the city offered to help her pay for flood insurance. "I just don't want the flooding in the first place," she said in regards to that offer.

The city also offered to alter the path of the proposed culvert by six feet, according to Goodman. But she isn't sure that's far enough, and wants to wait for a report from an engineer she hired before agreeing to any deal with the city.

Neither attorney would comment on specific concessions offered by either side during the process. But Schrier did say the city proposed "not insignificant indications they'd do certain things that would help her."

QEN also appealed December's superseding order.

Goodman is one of the 11 residents who signed onto it. She did so partly because of concerns about the design of the new culvert further up Revere Road.

"When the brook goes up the hill on Revere Road, do you know how deep it's going to be? - 29 feet," Goodman said. "You're going to need your binoculars to look down into the opening...and this is what they're calling Town Brook enhancement."

No mediation was or will be held between QEN and the city prior to the hearing in April.

The April hearing will be the final step in the DEP process. After it, a recommended final order will be issued, and DEP Commissioner Kenneth Kimmell will either reject or approve the recommendation, according to Hines. Following that, any appeal would move through the court system.

Any legal case could hinge on the interpretation of a special act passed by the legislature in 1888, which grants the then-Town of Quincy permission "to clear of obstructions, deepen and widen any brooks or streams within the limits of said town, and to straighten or alter the courses or channels thereof."

According to Hines, Quincy's argument is that the law is still in effect because no court has overturned it and the legislature hasn't repealed it. He pointed out

ARLINE GOODMAN stands next to the Town Brook's culvert located a few feet from her Revere Road home in Quincy Center. Goodman has appealed the city's plan to relocate the brook, but both parties say a settlement may be reached soon.

that the law is invoked every time the city removes shopping carts from the brook, and residents have used the law to have the city pay for work on the brook's walls and on their property. Such work was previously done at Goodman's property, prior to her living there.

Schrier's interpretation of the law differs. He notes another clause says the land in question must be "declared by the board of health of said town to be so wet or moist as to be offensive or injurious to health" before such work can be performed. He added that no one would be able to live next to Town Brook if it really was either offensive or injurious to health.

Both sides agree that Goodman owns half the brook adjacent to her property. The city could, according to Hines, seek an easement allowing use of Goodman's part of the brook and part of her property. For that to happen, the City Council would need to approve and Goodman would be compensated.

Helps Install New Hands, Gears At United First Parish Church Clock

Lester Tyrala's Knowledge Of Historic Time Pieces Is Like Clockwork

By EMILY TAFT

Over 50 people were in attendance as Quincy resident Lester Tyrala, an antique clock and barometer restorer, spoke of the history of clocks and clock making at recent "Timekeeping" presentation at the Adams Academy.

Tyrala also looked at a number of different clocks that spectators brought in or took pictures of, and described a brief history of it and in some cases an approximate value of the time piece.

The presentation was part of Time and Space program at the Quincy Historical Society that also featured star gazing two nights later from the Adams Academy lawn, along with hearing some history about them.

"I've always been mechanically inclined, and enjoyed history and antiques. This brings the two interests together," said Tyrala. "A large component of what I like is the history of a clock, but also the hand skills involved, the dial paintings, and the reverse glass paintings that are done."

Tyrala just finished completing the installation of the four clocks on United First Parish Church's bell tower.

"There are so many thoughts about time, in books and in songs. Les knows a lot about clocks and time keeping," said friend James Edwards. "Les was instrumental in getting the old decaying hands off the clocks and fitting in the new ones."

Tyrala installed the hands and gears of the four clocks and recently took his last trip up the tower to see if things were running smoothly.

"There is nothing out of the ordinary with the church clocks," said Tyrala. "These clocks have clearly been inspected and maintained throughout the years. It is a nice example of their (E. Howard & Company) tower clocks."

The E. Howard & Company, Tyrala said, was known for their accurate machine work, and that the four clocks are now driven by electric motor.

Free Tax Preparation Services For Income-Eligible Residents

With a few weeks remaining for residents to file income tax returns, Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., reminds residents to not wait until the deadline to take advantage of its free tax preparation services.

The Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program - which provides low-income taxpayers with free tax counseling and tax return preparation - is offered Thursdays, from 6 to 9 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., until Saturday, April 14.

Funded by the United Way of Massachusetts Bay and Merrimack Valley, QCAP's VITA program is a free service that utilizes IRS-certified volunteers to help residents prepare their federal and Massachusetts tax returns.

The goal is to ensure residents receive all of the tax credits and deductions for which they are eligible, including the Massachusetts Circuit Breaker Credit for seniors, Child Tax Credit, and the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), a federal income tax credit for low-income, working individuals and families that often goes unclaimed.

Last year, QCAP helped clients to claim more than $1.2 million in total refunds, and the average refund per client was more than $2,000.

To be eligible for the program, clients must reside in Norfolk County and have an income of less than $50,000, or have qualified for QCAP fuel assistance during the 2011-2012 winter season.

For more information and to schedule an appointment, contact QCAP's VITA program at 617-657-5345 or visit www.qcap.org.

Democracy In Action

Political savviness or democracy in action? Some would say it's the same thing.

Whatever you call it, the now defunct bid to build a wind turbine on Moon Island illustrates how the lack of community support can stop a project before it gets beyond the drawing board.

After determining the project fell short of broad support in the Squantum community, Mayor Tom Koch withdrew his own support for the project. The turbine had been pitched by the City of Boston which owns Moon Island but needed Quincy's blessing since it is within this city's limits.

"I did not come to this decision lightly, and I make it only out of an abiding trust I believe we have built together that is based on listening, honest dialogue and working as partners in the best interest of our community," Koch wrote in a letter to Squantum residents. "After speaking with many of your Squantum neighbors over the last few weeks, it has become clear to me that the kind of strong community consensus necessary to allow construction of a major wind turbine on Moon Island simply does not exist."

You can't fault the mayor for following the wishes of many concerned Squantum residents who opposed the turbine. Some called it an eyesore. Others questioned what benefits the city would reap from a 400-foot tower situated about a mile from the nearest residence.

But the project also had its supporters, some from Squantum and others living in other parts of the city.

Perhaps the concept of wind energy in Quincy as a whole should be put before the voters, in the form of a non-binding referendum. The question could simply ask: "Do you support the construction of a wind turbine in the City of Quincy for the purpose of providing alternative energy?"

A non-binding referendum is just that - it does not force city leaders to take action on a specific proposal. Instead, it measures public sentiment.

There are two ways to get a non-binding referendum on the ballot:

One requires a resolution supported by the city council and the mayor.

The second is a petition signed by five percent of the city's registered voters. (Today, that would be approximately 2,771 of the city's 55,434 registered voters.)

City voters have been polled on other non-binding questions in the past. In 1999, voters were asked if they supported using any Quincy shoreline for arrival or departure of casino boats. Another asked if the city shall take Lot #23 in Squantum, Marina Bay by eminent domain for the purpose of open space preservation? (Question 1 was voted down while Question 2 got a big thumbs up.)

Listening to the people is obviously the politically prudent thing to do.

Especially in Squantum.

That area of the city has been one of the top - if not the top - voting blocs in Quincy. Usually, more votes are cast in Ward 6 Precinct 5 than any other precinct in the city.

And candidates who seek city-wide office - and Ward 6 councillor - target Squantum every election in an appeal for votes. Just drive by the Squantum Elementary School on Election Day and see the gathering of candidates and supporters holding political signs. Huckins Avenue resembles a subway station platform at rush hour.

When it comes to local elections, Squantum is the California of the Electoral College. The biggest political prize of 'em all.

It can also be the difference maker in a close election.

Exhibit A: The 2001 mayor's race between incumbent James Sheets and challenger William Phelan.

Sheets - seeking an unprecedented seventh term as mayor - was defeated by Phelan - half-way through his first term on the school committee - in the closest mayoral election in city history.

On Election Night, Phelan's margin of victory was a scant 10 votes. After a recount, the final margin was a mere 15 votes.

Precinct-wise, the Sheets-Phelan mayor's race saw-sawed back and forth. Of the city's 30 precincts, Sheets won 16 and Phelan 14.

Each did well in their predicted strengths. Phelan won by 444 votes in Ward 1 where his family has deep roots in Houghs Neck. Sheets, who represented Ward 4 on the City Council for 16 years before his election as mayor in 1989 - won Ward 4 by 318 votes.

The mayor's race - it turned out - would be won in the "toss-up" precincts.

And in the end, it all came down to Squantum - Ward 6 Precinct 5. Traditionally, it's the last precinct counted on Election Night.

For election night drama, Squantum did not disappoint. Ward 6 Precinct 5 delivered a big vote for Phelan and gave the freshman school committeeman an historic win.

Phelan won Squantum by 258 votes - the biggest margin of any precinct for either Sheets or Phelan that year. Phelan polled 746 votes to Sheets' 488. Turnout in Ward 6 Precinct 5 was 63.87 percent - the highest of any precinct.

Why did Squantum deliver a decisive victory for Phelan and ultimately propel him to the mayor's office?

Some political observers believe it was Sheets' support to relocate the USS Salem to Marina Bay from its berth at the former Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. The mayor had floated the idea the previous winter because at the time it was believed the reconstruction of the Fore River Bridge would necessitate moving the Quincy-built heavy cruiser to another location.

Despite a smattering of public opposition to the relocation idea, Sheets sounded optimistic in January of 2001 that a resolution could be reached.

"We'll find a way to work those problems out. This is what a democracy is all about," Sheets said at the time.

But moving the Salem to the MDC's Squantum Point Park at Marina Bay was not popular in Squantum. The Sun reported that at least 100 residents did not support the idea. Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton also publicly expressed his opposition.

One could reason that the Salem relocation idea to Marina Bay ultimately sank the mayor's re-election bid. Had Sheets not pitched that idea, more Squantum voters may have cast a ballot for the mayor. And only a handful of votes the other way would have given Sheets a seventh term.

But give credit where credit is due. Phelan ran an aggressive, well-organized campaign. One key issue was Phelan's firm opposition to a new Quincy High School off Quincy Avenue on land determined to have toxic waste. Those who supported the site - including Sheets - said engineers could mediate the site so it would be safe for a school.

As it turned out, relocating the Salem was not necessary.

Would history had been different if the relocation issue had never surfaced before the 2001 city election?

Maybe. But maybe not.

No one knows for sure.

What we do know is a wind turbine on Moon Island will not be an issue in next year's city election.

But perhaps there will be a non-binding referendum asking voters if they support a turbine somewhere in the city.

It's just another form of democracy.

Hancock Street, Quincy, Mass.

THIS IS a 1914 postcard view of two of the early commercial office buildings in Quincy Square. On the right is the old Quincy Savings Bank building with its Greek Revival entry way. The columns are polished Quincy granite, which with all the other granite trim on the building came from the Hitchcock Quarry that was near the Elks building on Quarry Street. A slightly-bluish medium-gray Quincy granite its trade-name was The Aristocrat. A fourth floor was later added to this building that is now home to The Quincy Sun among other businesses. On the left is the English Tudor styled Adams Building built in 1890 by John Quincy Adams II, grandson of the President. The F.W. Woolworth 5&10 cent store was located on the lower right street level of the Adams Building for 50 years. In 1948, the moved up to the corner of Cliveden Street. Police Seek $5,000 Salary Attorney Francis X. Bellotti, in an eloquent plea for a pay raise for Quincy police officers that was described as "masterly," told a hearing of the City Council's Finance Committee that a telegraph delivery boy gets $16.80 in Sunday pay while a policeman gets only $11.09.

A Quincy patrolman's weekly pay of $77.63, he said, should be compared with the following wages: MDC police and registry inspectors $93.50; truck drivers $113; janitors $108; Brink's guards $101; New Haven Railroad police $112.

"I defy anyone to bring forth a more dedicated group of men," he said. "Big job, small job. In order to maintain a proper standard of living, a policeman must receive $5,000 a year."

Current police salaries were captains $5,900, lieutenants $5,250, sergeants $4,600 and patrolmen $4,050. They were seeking $7,250 for captains, $6,500 for lieutenants, $5,600 for sergeants and $5,000 for patrolmen.

George A. Yarrington, executive director of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, pointed out that the city is faced with a tax increase of $5 to $9 and asked that any increases be limited to 5 percent effective July 1.

Later, the City Council approved a record $15,538,748.48 budget for 1957 but left the salary increases for city employees for a supplemental budget.

CENSORSHIP HIT

Mrs. Ida Glasser resigned from the Quincy Literary Review Board and the two other members were considering a similar move after City Manager Edward T. Lewis said he planned to expand the board's duties from comic books to a general cleanup of the city's newsstands.

"We've done an effective job on comic books," said Mrs. Glasser. "We've done all we can. To go any further would be censorship."

Board Chairman the Rev. Peter V. Corea, pastor of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, was out of town but he was quoted by a Boston newspaper as saying he planned to ask repeal of the ordinance that created the board.

TAX PLAN DEFEATED

City Councillor Thomas S. Burgin led the fight that shot down a plan by Councillor James R. McIntyre to use $300,000 of the water reserves as a device to keep down the tax rate. Councillor David S. McIntosh called it "a very unwholesome proposition."

The Mayor Deserves Respect

I take exception to the comment that was made about our mayor being in bed with the mayor of Boston.

It sounds like a James Cagney movie back in the 1920s.

I have spoken with Mayor Koch like a lot of my neighbors have. We already had the feeling he was against the Moon Island Wind Turbine project.

Two days later he cancels his neighborhood meeting about the same subject and officially announces he is against the turbine.

Everyone has their own opinion. It doesn't help to throw spears at people because you disagree with them.

He is our mayor.

That alone deserves to be respected.

I live in Squantum, also.

McNamee: No 'Loud Demands' At Turbine Meeting

Please permit me to respond to the Readers' Forum piece, "Wants Mayor to Reverse Decision on Wind Turbine", appearing in your paper March 1.

The authors of this letter, David Reich and Martha Plotkin, assert I made "loud demands" at the Feb. 8th meeting of the Planning Board regarding Boston's wind turbine proposal.

Anyone in attendance can attest there was no elevation in the tone of my voice as the authors would have you believe.

Perhaps what they meant to say was I heard the concerns of my constituents loud and clear.

In the words of Emerson,

"every violation of truth is not only a sort of suicide by the fabricator, but is also a stab at the health of their cause" - in this case wind power.

Romney Not The Most Electable, Conservative Republican

Several weeks back, former Mayor Frank McCauley and myself penned de facto point-counterpoint commentaries on the viability of Mitt Romney as the Republican presidential nominee.

Frank is a long-time Republican leader and I have been a long-time Reagan Democrat. Our approaches to Romney's campaign showed the internal battle taking place between those opposed to the re-election of President Obama. By now, Super Tuesday is history and Romney continues on slowly toward the GOP convention. Also, continuing is Rick Santorum. This will probably all end on the convention floor.

Personally, as a Reagan Democrat, I do not consider Romney to be either the most electable or conservative candidate running. I am not ready to vote for "Anybody But Obama." Over in Michigan, Romney Republicans were furious at Santorum's folks for those robo calls to identified Reagan Democrats before the Michigan primary. If any Republican is to beat Obama, Reagan Democrats hold the key.

Case in point: Rick Santorum always had good support from conservative Democrats. However, in his last U.S. Senate re-election battle, he lost and much was due reportedly to his Democratic opponent attracting conservative Democrats back to the (D) column.

Republicans need to find strong electable candidates who are conservative enough to win those in the vast middle (independents), social conservative Democrats, white suburban women and a chunk of the rising Latino voting bloc. If a Republican can't dent this demographic, America will see Obama re-elected even though he is almost as failed as a president as Jimmy Carter was perceived to be 36 years ago.

The best hope for Republicans is to come up with solutions to our current energy crisis and show how failed the Obama Administration's policies are showing themselves to be. Jimmy Carter watched helplessly as Iran held Americans hostage in Iran.

Barack Obama is showing much the same thing as Americans have become hostage to higher and higher gas pump prices thanks to the do-nothing Obama policies.

Boston Jazz Voices To Perform At Crane Library Saturday

One of New England's premier a cappella singing groups, Boston Jazz Voices, will perform Saturday, March 10 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The group will perform a variety of jazz, swing, and popular songs, including favorites like "You Took Advantage of Me," "There Will Never Be Another You," "Every Breath You Take," "Penny Lane," and "Let's Fall in Love."

Founded almost 25 years ago as The New England Close Harmony Ensemble, Boston Jazz Voices is a mixed chorus of 18 singers, each highly experienced and specialized in close harmony jazz singing.

Unlike most a cappella groups, which are small (four to five), Boston Jazz Voices uses its 18 voices and six- to eight-part close harmonies to produce a very special sound.

The Boston Jazz Voices repertoire includes numbers from the American Songbook as well as European, British and Latin American composers, in styles ranging from jazz to ballad, pop and swing. Boston Jazz Voices performs in jazz clubs, concert halls and private venues throughout New England and took its sound to Paris in the mid 1990s.

Quincy College To Host Author Don Hussey At Library

South Shore author and former Quincy College adjunct professor Don Hussey will be the guest of honor at Quincy College's Author Night Wednesday, April 4th at 6 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy.

Hussey will give a presentation, followed by an open discussion and book signing relative to his recently published memoir, Ticket to Ride: the Promise of America.

In this gripping and unflinchingly honest memoir, military man, public school teacher, successful entrepreneur and candidate for the U.S. Congress, Don Hussey describes in rich detail how he outwitted the odds to bring home his "ticket to ride." The non-fiction work is a remarkable true story of determination built upon courage and driven by the promise of America.

Trapped in an unending spiral of poverty and abuse, Don left high school as a young teenager to support his mother and younger brother. With uncommon bravery and unyielding determination, he went on to set his own course time and time again. For every obstacle, for every setback, he found a solution and moved on.

Until one day in 1965, he was stopped cold in his tracks confronted by the one accident of fate for which no one could ever be prepared. How he responded to it is the triumph over adversity that has come to define him.

In a recent interview, Hussey was asked why he shared so much about his personal life in this book.

"If I can reach out personally and through my experience, to the many young people faced with similar circumstances, they may find their lives have much greater meaning than they realize," said Hussey. "The growing epidemic of high school and college dropouts across America is simply staggering - the emerging 'enemy from within,' which left unchecked, will continue to fuel the gathering storm of social unrest, threatening the very stability of our country."

Quincy High School SADD Works To Make A Difference

By DONNA NIOSI

Eleven members of the new Quincy High School SADD Chapter recently volunteered at the Motor Skills Event for the Quincy Special Olympics at Squantum Elementary School.

Fourth graders from throughout the city participated in events that were designed just for them. The high school "all-stars" as Dan McHugh called them, introduced the high school students and showed them how to help out in the events, play with and motivate the participants.

McHugh is the director of all of the Special Olympic Events in the city. It was a joyful and extremely entertaining event for both the participants and the "all-stars."

The SADD Chapter

strongly believes in community service, and saw this event as another different way to get involved and make a difference.

The day consisted of lots of laughs and fun for both the volunteers and participants.

All of the volunteers are looking forward to the event that takes place in June at Pageant Field.

Pauline Rankin Celebrates 102 Birthday At Hancock Park

Milton resident Pauline (Rensvold) Rankin was surrounded by well wishers as she celebrated her 102nd birthday at Hancock Park's Adult Day Health Center in Quincy.

Mrs. Rankin was born in Roxbury on Febr. 25, 1910, and at 21 married the late Ralph Lee Rankin, together raising two daughters. In her youth, she was a model for the upscale Boston specialty Boston store, Slattery's. Just last year her grand-daughter, Sandy, finally convinced her to trade in her fashionable high heels for a more comfortable shoe.

The remarkably fit and impeccably dressed centenarian attributes her longevity to her loving, extended family and her penchant for staying active.

In the past, Mrs. Rankin says she kept fit by exercising alongside the late Jack LaLanne on his television fitness program, The Jack LaLanne Show. Today, she stays in shape by participating in a variety of activities at the Quincy Adult Day Health Center.

India Slide Presentation Monday At Library

A free slide presentation by world traveler and photojournalist Barry Pell entitled "India: Tradition & Modernity Collide on the Subcontinent" will be held Monday, March 12 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

With a population exceeding one billion people, India is experiencing dramatic growth and change. Cities are expanding rapidly and a rising economic middle class is creating a consumer revolution and stress on resources and the environment.

Economic progress has not, however, spread evenly across the population, forming enormous economic class disparities. Cultural strains are also occurring as western influences are adapted and incorporated into historic cultural traditions and religious observances.

Pell's presentation will provide a panorama of life across India, ranging from religious observances and ceremonies to bustling markets and daily lifestyles.

Pell has traveled widely over the past 40 years, visiting and documenting landscapes and cultures in 157 countries. He also lived and traveled in China for two years and in eastern Europe for one year.

Pell currently lectures on international cultures at schools, universities and institutions in the Boston area.

The slide presentation is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Butternut Squash Mac & Cheese

I don't think there are many people who dislike macaroni and cheese. It is one of the most favorite dishes especially for children.

My daughter Rita makes macaroni and cheese for her family with butternut squash - and that is somewhat lower in the fat content of the dish, and very delicious and healthful.

She uses fresh butternut squash, but frozen could be used instead.

BUTTERNUT SQUASH MAC & CHEESE

1/2 medium butternut squash
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon butter
1 1/2 cups 1% milk
1 1/2 cups shredder cheddar cheese (or a favorite)
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
Breadcrumbs for topping

12 ounces of penne (or elbows or a favorite)

Cut up the squash and roast it in a 400-degree oven until soft (about 15 minutes.)

Boil the pasta and set aside.

In a sauce pan, sauté the butter and add the flour, and one cup of the milk reserving the other half for mixing it with the squash.

Add the shredded cheese and cook until sauce is thickened. Set aside.

When the squash is done, add the nutmeg, and puree it with the other half-cup of milk in a blender, or mash it until smooth.

Now add the butternut squash to the cream sauce, and cook until well blended.

In a baking pan, add a layer of the pasta, then a layer of the cream sauce and then continue until the top. Sprinkle some breadcrumbs over the top, and bake uncovered in a 400-degree oven for 20 minutes until bubbly and brown.

Banana Cream Pie With Graham Cracker Crust

My favorite piecrust ever is one made with graham crackers. For a dessert last week after a dinner get-together, I made a banana cream pie and used that for the crust.

It's pretty simple to make because the only thing baked is the crust. After that the pudding is put on top when the crust is cooled.

I've printed the recipe for the graham cracker crust today, but you certainly can use a store bought one.

GRAHAM CRACKER CRUST

1 1/4 cups graham cracker crust (mash with grahams inside wax paper with a rolling pin)
1/4 cup sugar
6 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
1 egg for the egg wash (slightly beaten)

1 large package of vanilla pudding mix (not instant)

3 bananas - enough whipped cream or topping for the top

Mix all together and then press firmly into a nine-inch pie plate. Brush with egg wash for a crispier crust. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 7-10 minutes. Cool.

Make the pudding according to directions, and cool.

Slice the bananas and place a layer on the bottom of the crust. Now add the vanilla pudding. Refrigerate for a couple of hours to set the pudding.

When ready to serve, add the cream or topping with a few scattered banana slices over the top. It's a family and friend favorite. Mine too!

Quincy Point Congregational Church Collecting Supplies To Aid Tornado Victims

Members of the Quincy Point Congregational Church are putting together "emergency clean up buckets" to help families in the Midwest and South affected by last week's tornado outbreaks.

The outbreaks, which struck on Feb. 29 and March 2-3, killed 52 people and wreaked havoc across an area spanning from Nebraska to North Carolina.

The church's pastor, Rev. Ann Suzedell, called the collection effort a great way for people in Quincy and surrounding communities to aid people trying to rebuild after the storms.

"I think everyone's heard the story about the destruction and they might be wondering how they can help," Suzedell said Monday. "This is a chance to make a response for anyone who wants."

Suzedell later added that the buckets are a "very direct, very immediate" way for people to help.

The church's mission committee planned the collection drive before the tornadoes struck as a part of its annual Lenten mission. Their goal was originally to collect supplies for ten buckets, but that goal will be raised because of the deadly twisters.

"Originally we were going for ten buckets," Suzedell said. "We will really up that total."

To help distribute the buckets, QPCC is teaming up with Church World Service. The church has worked with the group before, partnering on donation drives to collect items for hygiene kits and school kits. But Suzedell believes this year's drive will be the most challenging because of all the items needed; each bucket will include multiple scouring pads and sponges, sanitary wipes, laundry detergent, concentrated household cleaner, antibacterial soap, latex gloves, work gloves, dust masks, trash bags, non-aerosol insect repellent, and clothesline and clothespins. Those items are valued at $56, according to Church World Service's website.

Suzedell said Church World Service is great organization to partner with because of they have such a wide network. Previous kits assembled at QPCC were sent across the globe, though all of the emergency buckets put together this year will be distributed domestically.

Following Sunday's church service, volunteers will be collecting donations in the church's social hall. The necessary items may also be purchased at that time. The drive will continue until April 8, which is Easter Sunday.

REV. ANN SUZEDELL, pastor of Union Congregational Church, holds one of the "emergency clean up buckets" to aid families affected by last week's tornadoes in the Midwest and South. Below are some of the supplies the church needs to fill the buckets.

A MOST DESIRABLE SAPPHIRE

While most people think of sapphires in terms of hues of blue, the most desirable of sapphires is a mixture of pink and orange. Padparadscha, in fact, is a name derived from the Sanskrit/Singhalese word "padmaraga," which describes the color of a lotus flower. Today, many define the color of the padparadscha sapphire as a blend of a lotus flower and a sunset. If you find this mix of colors entrancing, you are hardly alone. Padparadscha ranks among the world's most expensive gemstones, with prices equaling or exceeding those of fine rubies and emeralds. Purists may regard Sri Lanka (Ceylon) as the exclusive producer of this gorgeous gemstone, but fine examples also emanate from Vietnam, Tanzania, and Madagascar.

The padparadscha sapphire is one of the most delicate and exciting gemstones. It is highly desired by those who appreciate fine jewelry. This is the place to mark the meaningful moments of your life! The Tax Refund Misconception

By MICHAEL FEENAN

It's tax season. If you haven't filed already, you're probably stressed. If you have, hopefully you also took the time to do a little planning for next year.

For most people, filing their tax return is simply an annual ritual to either get their hard earned money back from the government, or to pony up the balance of what they owe. What many people overlook, however is that this is also the perfect time to adjust your withholdings, estimated payments, and plan your personal income statement for the year ahead.

The biggest misconception going is that your annual tax refund is a nice bonus check – a gift from the IRS for being such an honest and loyal taxpayer. The reality is, a refund is just that: a REFUND! It's your money, you've just loaned it to the government for 12 months. They were able to use it to cover some of their expenses for a year, and now they're giving it back... with no interest, no less.

Of course, everyone wants the big refund check. The reality is, you are better served keeping that money in your pocket throughout the year and either living a little better, or better yet, putting a little more into savings or investments. Make your money work for you, and stop giving the government interest free loans!

Another tax saving tool many people overlook is that contributions to an IRA are tax deductible. You have up until April 17th to contribute to your IRA and deduct the contribution on your 2011 tax return.

Talk to your tax preparer about ways to minimize your tax liability, maximize your retirement savings and better plan for the year ahead. Call Mike Feenan at (617)773-1040 or visit www.feenanfinancial.com for more info.

'A City On The Move' In Real Estate Ranking Magazine Names Quincy Among 'Best Places To Live'

Calling Quincy a "city on the move," Boston Magazine named the City of Presidents one of the 14 "Best Places To Live" in Massachusetts in its annual real estate edition for 2012.

The magazine, which spoke to real estate agents, residents, and officials statewide to report the story, wrote that the City's planned $1.6 billion Quincy Center redevelopment was likely behind a recent upsurge in single-family homes sales and was creating a substantial statewide buzz about the City.

Quincy was joined by a number other city neighborhoods as well as wealthier suburbs on the Boston Magazine list, including Westwood, Medway, Scituate, and Topsfield. Boston Magazine is the second major publication in recent years to highlight Quincy: In 2009, BusinessWeek Magazine named the City the best city in Massachusetts to raise children.

"Boston Magazine is right: We are a City on the move, and we're moving in the right direction," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. "Like any City, we have our challenges and we have plenty of work to do, but I don't think there can be any doubting our community's future."

While the magazine piece noted the City's downtown renewal, Mayor Koch reiterated that the acknowledgement is a testament to the strength all of the city's neighborhoods – and its citizens – and not just about the massive economic development plan.

"We are a City of neighborhoods, and always will be. That's the true strength of this city – in our neighbors and in our people," Koch said.

Police Department Add Three New Officers

By EMILY TAFT

Three new Quincy Police Department patrolmen were recently sworn in at a ceremony held at City Hall.

The new officers are:

Mark J. Connolly of Quincy, formerly of Dorchester; Matthew F. Pantazelos of Randolph; and Daniel J. Clark of Quincy.

With the anticipation of a retirement coming, Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan said three officers were hired instead of two in order to replace the retiring officer right away.

"The department is shifting in the right direction," said Keenan. "This will allow us to make an impact on every shift."

Following the ceremony the three new officers reported to a 26-week training academy. Once they are finished at the academy they will take part in a field-training program at the department where they will learn the rules of the department and ride along with seasoned officers. After completing training, they will either become a patrol officer or dispatcher according to Keenan.

Clark, 26, is the son of a retired Quincy police lieutenant, a Marine and Gulf War veteran who served two tours in Iraq.

Connolly, 30, is a former Associate Director for Eastern Connecticut State University.

Pantazelos, 32, used to work for Roche Brothers, and has brothers who work for the Randolph Police Department and the State Police.

The officers were put through extensive tests before they were hired. Keenan said every new officer hired must take an 80-question exam, which puts high scorers, veterans, and disabled veterans on a qualified list of candidates; they are then put through physical and physiological tests, along with a drug test and physical.

"We had to downsize the last couple of years because of the budget and the economy," said Keenan. "I had a conversation with (Mayor Tom Koch) about increasing the number of patrol officers, right now we are at 146 officers."

Keenan added he is talking with the mayor about adding more patrol officers to the department, but whether or not can be done will depend if there is funding available in next year's budget.

Over 60 Years of Quality Service

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, Feb. 28, at approximately 12:15 p.m., Officer James Karvelis was assigned to the Quincy Square walking beat when he observed a male talking to a female at the entrance to President's Place at 1250 Hancock St.

This particular male caught the officer's attention because "Wanted" posters were distributed at roll call, stating that he had an active warrant for "Violation of 209A," which is a restraining order.

The couple is well-known to the Quincy Police Department, from past arrests and numerous disturbance calls at their residences. In the past year, with the help of Quincy District Court, they were evicted from apartments in West Quincy and Houghs Neck.

Officer Karvelis notified dispatch that he was about to place the suspect under arrest, so Officer Ryan Donnelly was dispatched to assist and transport the suspect. Officer Karvelis asked dispatch to determine who the plaintiff (person seeking the restraining order) on the restraining order was.

Dispatcher Brancaccio provided the Officers with the female's name, which happened to be the female standing with the suspect. Officer Karvelis interviewed the female once the suspect was transported to the station. He asked her if there was an active restraining order in effect and she stated, "Uh...yeah...I think so."

When asked why she was with the suspect after getting a restraining order against him, she said, "We were headed to the library to look for apartments to rent together." According to the restraining order, the suspect was "to stay at least 100 yards away from the plaintiff."

Officer Karvelis informed the female that in addition to the warrant for violation of the restraining order, an additional charge would be filed for him being with her, which is in violation of the order. She was advised and sent on her way, last seen headed to the library.

Back at the station, Officer Karvelis reviewed the restraining order, which is in effect until May 2012. The order stated that the suspect/defendant "is ordered to not have contact with the plaintiff." The document also indicated that the defendant "is to stay at least 100 yards from the plaintiff, even if the plaintiff seems to allow or request contact."

In most cases, the plaintiff could be charged with violating the restraining order by allowing the defendant to be with her, but in this particular case, an exception was made by the court with the additional line stating, "even if the plaintiff seems to allow or request contact."

As a result, of the pending restraining order in effect, the suspect, the 60 year-old Quincy resident was charged with the violation of the restraining order.

If It's Not .Gov, It's Not Social Security

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

When you go on a road trip, you need to follow the signs to arrive at the right place.

Going online can be very much the same.

Look for the ".gov" at the end of the web address — if it isn't .gov, it isn't the real Social Security website — www.socialsecurity.gov.

Countless consumers nationwide are victimized each year by misleading advertisers who use "Social Security" or "Medicare" to entice the public to use their services. In many cases, these companies offer Social Security services for a fee, even though the same services are available directly from Social Security, free of charge. These services include:

- updating a Social Security card to show a bride's married name;
- replacing a Social Security card; and
- getting a Social Security number for a child.

These for-profit businesses may cleverly design their websites, so when people use Internet search engines, their advertisement pops up. They may even make their advertisement look similar to the real Social Security website. And some of these sites, at first glance, appear to be affiliated with Social Security. But upon closer examination, these are for-profit companies charging individuals for a service that is provided free by Social Security.

For instance, a quick Google search on "replacing a Social Security card" brings up paid advertisements for websites that charge a fee just to get an application for a new card. That service is absolutely free from Social Security.

The law that deals specifically with misleading Social Security and Medicare advertising prohibits people or non-government organizations, like for-profit businesses, from using words or emblems that mislead others. Their advertising cannot lead people to believe that they represent or are somehow affiliated with or endorsed or approved by Social Security or the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (Medicare). But that doesn't stop advertisers from trying.

For more information, you can read our publication What You Need to Know about Misleading Advertising at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10005.html.

When you go to www.socialsecurity.gov, make sure you look for the ".gov" sign along the way. Don't be tricked into paying a fee for a service that's free. And remember: if it isn't .gov, it isn't Social Security.

BBB Warns Seniors Of Various Scams

Senior citizens continue to be a large target for scammers. As a result, the Better Business Bureau is providing education and outreach to help prevent this kind of fraud.

A June 2010 survey by Investor Protection Trust showed that roughly 20 percent of Americans aged 65 or older has been taken advantage of financially. Most commonly, seniors are shown to be affected by inappropriate investments, unreasonably high fees for financial services, or outright fraud.

Paula Fleming, vice president of communications and marketing for the local BBB, notes the four most prominent scams for seniors to avoid.

Deceptive Sales

Individuals will go door-to-door on behalf of their business and try to cause a sense of urgency. The business will lie about safety issues or the extent of the problem, hoping to inflate the prices for their services. Some of the service providers may include furnace repairmen, contractors, air duct cleaners, or door-to-door salespeople.

Sweepstakes and Lottery Scams

The sweepstakes scam normally occurs when a victim receives a letter in the mail that he or she has won a lottery or sweepstakes. The letter will tell the person to deposit an enclosed check and then wire a portion back to the company to cover taxes or administration fees. Sometimes the scammers will also say that a taxi will come pick you up to help you claim your money.

Fleming advises that if you haven't entered into something, you're never going to win.

Grandparents Scams

This scam includes a telephone call from someone claiming to be a relative stuck in a foreign country, needing money to get home. Often the caller claims to be a relative serving in the military who needs money for medical needs. The BBB advises that seniors should ask the caller for their name or other information that would be only known to a relative.

Medicare Scams

Medicare scams are easily accomplished because of the ambiguous nature of the system. Scammers claim to be with Medicare and ask for personal information. A victim may be given numerous excuses to provide information such as Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security, or bank account numbers.

Fleming said a person should never give away any information to a business without doing some research. For more information, visit bbb.org.

A computer will be available to demonstrate how to access the Registry's website and land records database.

Mortgage Help for Homeowners

If you have mortgage problems, parts of a $25 billion settlement could be coming your way. Five of the nation's largest banks accused of abusive practices have agreed to help 1 million homeowners. The banks are Bank of America, Wells Fargo, JPMorgan Chase, Citigroup and Ally Financial. Allegations included the extensive use of robo-signers (foreclosure documents were signed without even being read), failure to offer foreclosure options and incorrect handling of loan modifications.

Borrowers who are underwater (the house is worth less than what's due on it) but still holding on will get some help in the form of reduced debt, either from lowered interest rates or principal reduction. It's thought that 11 million borrowers owe more than their homes are worth, which means they haven't been able to sell or refinance.

Lenders will be required to rework loans and reduce the principal for those nearing foreclosure.

If you lost your home to foreclosure (as did 750,000 families) between 2008 and 2011, you could receive a payment of $2,000.

That's not to say all the problems are over. For some, the nightmare continues: While the investigations into alleged abusive practices were going on, some lenders just called a halt to the final steps of foreclosures. Families continued to live in their homes without making any payments. Now that the guideline are clear, lenders are likely to press forward with those foreclosures.

Neighborhoods that saw too many empty houses due to foreclosure could see many more, as not everyone will qualify for assistance. This could force home prices down even more in neighborhoods hardest hit as more bank-owned properties come on the market and investors pick up properties to turn into rentals — never a good way to stabilize a neighborhood. Ideally, banks won't release all the properties at once.

The programs funded with the $25 billion settlement are set to run for three years, but lenders are being given incentives to act within the first year.

What to do if your mortgage is in trouble: Call your lender. Ask specifically who is holding your note, as changes might have been made when loans ended up in various secondary-market packages. Take the names of those you talk to. Ask what specific programs will be available to help you. Ask for a time frame and follow up weekly.

Fruit Fly Swarm Infests Kitchen

Q: How can I get rid of pesky fruit flies? They're all over my kitchen. — Stephen F. Warwick, R.I.

A: Fruit flies, as their name indicates, love hanging out around fruit, or any sort of sweetish, sugary item. They're much more common in the summer months, but it's not unusual to see them in early spring, particularly in the kitchen, if the conditions are right. A warm environment combined with a bowl of overripe bananas often is all it takes for a few fruit flies to set up housekeeping, and in a few days, it will seem like they're everywhere.

The fastest way to get rid of fruit flies is to hunt down and get rid of items in which they live and breed: namely, overripe, fermented or spoiled fruits, vegetables or other food. They also can thrive in drains, empty containers, mops, piles of damp rags or clothing — anywhere that liquid or food has been allowed to sit and get stagnant. They can even get into your refrigerator.

Throw out old food and clean the kitchen or other infested areas. Look behind appliances, including the stove and refrigerator, for dropped food or spilled juices. Check and clean all cabinets, especially those in which food is stored (canned or fresh), in case any food has fallen out of sight and spoiled.

Treat drains, including unused or infrequently used drains, by pouring a cup of white vinegar down each and letting it sit for several minutes before rinsing with hot water.

If a thorough cleaning doesn't end the problem, talk with a pest control professional about locating other sources of the infestation and treating with a pesticide.

To prevent future infestations or minimize the impact of one (since fruit flies can be brought into the house with fruit and veggies from the store), clean the kitchen and other areas where food is eaten or stored once a week, and reduce the amount of clutter in those areas so the bugs have fewer places to settle in. Treat drains with vinegar once a month, or more frequently if needed. Store garbage in tightly sealed containers and away from entry points like windows or doors. Make sure window screens don't have holes or small tears that would allow pests through.

HOME TIP: Make a simple fruit fly trap by pouring an ounce or two of apple cider or putting a slice of banana into a glass jar, then rolling a piece of paper into a funnel shape and sticking the narrow end of the funnel into the jar. Fruit flies will be attracted down the funnel to the cider, but can't get out.

Rare Photos Of The Funeral Of Cyril P. Morrisette

FLAG-DRAPED CASKET of Cyril P. Morrisette lain in state at the American Legion Hall, Quincy Post 95, at 2 Washington St. on April 9, 1922. The Legion Hall was located near today's President Place building. Edward L. Bean, who was in charge of funeral arrangements, brought the body home to Quincy five days earlier. Morrisette was first interred in France.

FUNERAL CORTEGE of Cyril P. Morrisette left the American Legion Hall Saturday afternoon, 1922. The procession began at 2:35 p.m. The Grant Army veterans in automobiles led the procession followed by a squad of police officers, all of whom were veterans of the World War.

FUNERAL MASS for World War I veteran Cyril P. Morrisette was celebrated in Saint Mary Church in West Quincy. A large crowd gathered inside and outside as many stood solemnly on the sidewalks. Rev. Fr. Sherry gave the eulogy.

CYRIL P. MORRISETTE is laid to rest in the family plot at Saint Mary Cemetery in West Quincy. Thousands stood near the final resting spot and rifles flashed out their tribute to the dead — three rounds blank. Taps was also played, the soldier's good night. The funeral photos were taken by photographer H.B. Allison.

Post Past Commander Bob LaFleur Finds Artifacts At Former Legion Home

Cyril P. Morrisette 1922 Funeral Photos Presented To Post, Family

By EMILY TAFT

When the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post #294 home moved from Miller Street to Liberty Street, Past Commander and life member Bob LaFleur found treasured photos tucked behind a locker.

The six photos — stamped with photographer's H.B. Allison name — contain snap shots of the funeral for Cyril P. Morrisette who was the first Quincy man to die from wounds in World War I, and for whom the post is named.

"The reason I ended up with the old pictures was because we were moving the Post to a different location and while moving a locker I found these six photos," said LaFleur. "Then recently I was cleaning my basement and came across them, so I decided to do something with them before they faded away completely."

LaFleur made the pictures into a collage, made copies, and donated the collage to Morrisette American Legion Post. The framed collage was presented after the Post's 83rd Memorial Mass that honors the memories of Post members who have died.

The plaque on the bottom of the collage says that the pictures are donated in memory of the Post's former commander, and best friend of LaFleur, Charles Brooks.

"He was a treasured member of the post, and a super guy," said LaFleur. "My wife and I decided to put it in memory of him because he did a lot for the Post."

According to documents, Morrisette's death was announced Feb. 24, 1918. He was initially interred in France but his body was returned home to Quincy in 1922 after President Woodrow Wilson received an overwhelming amount of letters and telegrams asking for the bodies of loved ones be returned to the U.S.

Morrisette was 32 years old when he enlisted in 1917 as a part of Company F. of the 9th regiment in the National Guard, which later became the 101st infantry. Morrisette was wounded at the battle of Chemin-des Dames on Feb. 23, 1918, which was the site of several major battles that took place between 1914 and 1918. He was injured by a piece of German shell, which perforated his steel helmet while doing his duty in a severe barrage. He lived only a short time after the battle.

At the time he enlisted, Morrisette was employed by the State Forestry Department and had spent all his life in West Quincy. When news of his death was announced in Quincy, Mayor Joseph L. Whiton ordered the flag at City Hall to be lowered to half-staff out of respect for the soldier. In the 1920's, city officials dedicated the area of Copeland, Crescent and Furnace Brook Parkway as "Cyril P. Morrisette Square" in memory of the fallen soldier.

The images of the funeral show where he lain in state to where he was buried at St. Mary Cemetery in Quincy. The photographs follow the casket from where Morrisette's body lain in state at the American Legion Hall, to the thousands who lined the street to pay their respects as the casket made its way from the city square to the cemetery behind St. Mary Parish, to the casket being carried out of the church, and at his grave site where thousands stood around to say goodbye.

On the day his body returned to Quincy, thousands of people lined the three-mile route. Many representatives of the state and city marched in front of his casket, along with former comrades in arms and civic societies that he was affiliated with before he joined. St. Mary's Church was filled so much so that many people in attendance stood on the steps outside and on the sidewalk outside the church. Morrisette's father — as a tribute — cut the gravestone for his son. He had hoped to see his son laid to rest in Quincy but died before that happened.

"They had a big funeral for this guy," LaFleur said. "It was a big thing; a tremendous funeral for him."

For state Rep. Bruce Ayers, who is the great-great nephew of Morrisette, it was an honor to receive copies of the collage of pictures. LaFleur said he gave Ayers a copy of the pictures because he has been very supportive of veterans and veterans' issues.

Ayers said it is something that he will always appreciate and display proudly.

"They are beautiful pictures that I was thrilled to see and display in my office," said Ayers. "I wasn't expecting them at all. I don't know where he found them but they are unbelievable pictures that I have never seen before."

up, Ayers said he received some of Morrisette's Army artifacts and learned a lot about Morrisette from his parents.

"My mom had a suitcase given to her that had all of his personal belongings, his uniform, medals, and honorable discharge papers. We ended up giving them to the Post where they made a display case for the items, right when you walk in the building," said Ayers. "I remember growing up, my mom and dad would instill in me the importance of supporting our veterans and what they did and gave up for us. They would always use Cyril P. Morrisette as an example."

The Ayers family donated some of the items to the Morrisette Post. They are displayed in a glass case inside the building.

Ayers said that he and his family visit the grave of Morrisette every Memorial Day, and try to attend the Memorial Mass that's held every year.

"Soldiers of that war set an example, with their courage and bravery, fighting for our freedom," Ayers said. "It is important that we memorialize all the soldiers from past and present wars that have made these sacrifices for us and our freedom."

NQ To Play Mansfield In Div. 2 South Semifinals Friday Night At Gallo Ice Rink In Bourne

Red Raiders Rally To Beat Canton In Quarterfinals

By ALAN McCALL

When North Quincy and Canton met three weeks ago in the regular season, the host Bulldogs scored a late goal to salvage a tie. When they met again on Saturday, a late goal by North Quincy saved a season.

With the goalie pulled in favor of an extra skater, senior tri-captain Tim Marks whistled a wrist shot from the point that caught the top left corner of the goal with just forty-one seconds to play to tie the game, and the Red Raiders (13-5-4) went on to eliminate Canton 3-2 in an overtime shootout in the Division 2 South quarterfinals at Asiatic Arena in Brockton.

After a scoreless 15 minute overtime, Andrew Currie, Shawn Grady and Marks each scored in the shootout, while senior tri-captain goalie James Dunn saved three out of five Canton attempts to send his team into a Division 2 South semifinal matchup against Mansfield (Friday, 7:45 p.m., Gallo Ice Rink).

"This is a great win for our program," said North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons. "Canton is a great team and one of the teams to beat in this tournament. It's too bad that a team has to lose in a shootout, it was a great hockey game."

It appeared that it would be the Bulldogs (15-3-3) moving on in the tournament after taking a 2-0 lead on a power play goal at the 7:44 mark of the second period. However, NQ got itself back the game with a goal by Currie with just 32 seconds left in the period. Currie, who was serving an interference penalty, snuck behind the Canton defense as he came back onto the ice. Tommy O'Brien placed a perfect pass to Currie and sent him on goal alone, where he beat Canton net minder Rich Nee to the stick side to make it a 2-1 game.

"That goal was huge for us. If we entered the third period down 2-0 we would have been in trouble," said Gibbons. "It was a heads up play by both of them and gave us a huge lift."

Canton had taken a 1-0 lead five minutes into the contest as Nick O'Connor's wrist shot from between the circles was partially screened and snuck past Dunn between the pads. Brian Brooks and Kurt Leavitt were credited with the assists.

The teams played a fast paced third period as Canton attacked the net early looking to restore its two-goal lead, but Dunn (25 saves) turned back every effort to keep it a one-goal game. Meanwhile, Nee was thwarting every North Quincy attempt, especially late in the period when he made three consecutive acrobatic saves to preserve the one goal lead. With 1:10 to play, NQ pulled Dunn in favor of a sixth skater. The strategy paid off after the Red Raiders won a face-off from the right circle and fed Marks at the right point. With five black-and-red shirts crashing the net to screen Nee, Marks' shot tickled the twine in the top left corner of the goal, sending the large contingent of North Quincy fans into a wild celebration.

"We told the players that we have been a good second period team, and a great third period team all season, and we showed that again today," said Gibbons. "This is a very special group of players and we're on a special ride right now."

Both teams had solid opportunities in the overtime session, however Dunn and Nee were each solid between the pipes. "We just wanted to get the puck deep and create chances off of that," said Gibbons. "We just didn't want to give them any odd-man rushes as that is where they can beat you."

In the shootout, where each team has five break-away chances to score, Canton's Brian Brooks scored on his first attempt, which was matched by Currie for North Quincy. However Dunn stopped Canton's next two shots, while North Quincy's Grady and Marks each converted to give NQ a 3-1 lead. Canton stayed alive in the next round as Nick O'Connor scored, and Nee saved David O'Connell's bid to make it a 3-2 score with one round remaining. Dunn stopped Canton's final attempt, sending his team and fans into a game-ending celebration.

"We actually practice shootouts at the end of our practices," added Gibbons. "You can't say enough about how James (Dunn) performed today, and how poised he was in making that final save for us."

Back on Feb. 29, North Quincy eliminated Coyle & Cassidy 4-1 in a first round match-up at the Quincy Youth Arena. The Red Raiders again came from behind, after spotting the Warriors a 1-0 lead as CC converted on a power play goal at with 12:06 to play in the second period. The Red Raiders tied the game with a power play goal by Nick McGaughey, assisted by Pat Verhault at the 5:36 mark.

North Quincy, however, spent most of the second period shorthanded, after being whistled into the sin bin four consecutive times in a five-minute span. "We were just taking stupid penalties, it wasn't a result of our physical play," said Gibbons. "We just were not playing smart hockey. We wanted to play a physical style against them and get them out of their game, and for the most part it worked for us. When we stayed out of the penalty box we were able to play our game."

The hosts took over in the third period, aided by two Coyle & Cassidy penalties, owning a 14-5 shots on goal advantage, which led to three unanswered tallies. Grady got things going with a short-handed goal to give NQ a 2-1 lead just 1:20 into the period. He doubled the lead with a power play goal, assisted by O'Brien at the 7:57 mark. Both goals were a result of Grady's stick handling in the offensive zone creating space for quality opportunities. "Coach pulled me aside before the start of the period to calm me down and get me focused," said Grady. "He told me that great players step up in big games."

The Red Raiders punched their ticket to the quarterfinals with an insurance goal by McGaughey, assisted by Colin Kulig with 4:22 to play in the game.

Raiders Digest: North Quincy's win extended its unbeaten streak to ten games (9-0-1). The only blemish in that streak was the 2-2 tie at Canton...The Red Raiders were without the services of junior defenseman Rudy Tryon for most of the contest. Tryon suffered a broken finger early in the first period and did not return to the game. His status for the semifinal game is still questionable... North Quincy's next opponent, Mansfield, advanced with a 5-1 win over North Attleboro.

JUNIOR FORWARD SHAWN GRADY (#10) scored two third period goals against Coyle & Cassidy to power North Quincy to a 4-1 first round win. Grady added a shootout tally in the quarterfinals versus Canton as the Red Raiders advanced into the Division 2 South semifinals against Mansfield Friday night.

Presidents Defeated Durfee, 48-40, In A Division 1 South First Round Game On Feb. 29 Quincy Upsets Wellesley To Advance Into South Semifinals

By SEAN BRENNAN

If you followed the Quincy High girls' basketball team this season you shouldn't be at all surprised that the Presidents earned the right to play Tuesday night against top-ranked Franklin at Massasoit in a Division 1 South semifinal, with a spot in the Division 1 South championship round on Saturday at UMass-Boston up-for-grabs.

This team of six seniors and up-and-coming underclassmen was built for an extended tournament run. And that is exactly what has happened.

On the heels of their 48-40 victory over No. 12 Durfee on Feb. 29, No. 5 Quincy traveled to No. 4 Wellesley last Friday and walked off the court with a 50-44 win over the Raiders.

"They were a quality team (18-3 overall) coming out of the Bay State League but we felt like we matched up well against them despite their height advantage," said QHS head coach Jeff Bretsch. "I can't say enough about the defensive work put in by Kiley McDonald and Caity Lowry on their best player Grace Miller. They played her straight up, which allowed our guards to challenge the outside shooters all game long."

For a team that had lived and died with the 3-point shot all season, Wellesley did not attempt a single three-pointer all game.

"As well as we played defensively as a team, I have to credit Caity Lowry," added Bretsch about his senior stopper. "She was everywhere and was really that take-charge player. This was a grind-it-out win."

Lowry finished with a team-high 13 points, including three 3-pointers. Quincy had nine threes for the game.

Senior Juli Tomer chipped in with eight points while sophomore Kayla McArdle finished with ten, including a dagger 17-footer in the final minutes that closed out the home team.

"Kayla has turned herself into a big-time stopper on defense," said Bretsch about the play of his sophomore off-guard, "but her basket late in the fourth, when we were hanging on, was the final dagger."

The quarterfinal win over favored Wellesley moved Quincy into the semifinal round for just the second time in 30 years, according to Bretsch. The 2005-2006 team made it this far and, before that, the last Quincy girls' team to advance into the South Sectional semifinal round was back in 1982.

The winner of Tuesday's Quincy/Franklin semifinal gets the winner of the Braintree/Dartmouth semifinal at UMass-Boston on Saturday. The winner of that game will play early next week versus the Division 1 North champion in the Eastern Mass final at the TD Garden.

Defending Home Court

Quincy began its run to the Division 1 South semifinals on Feb. 29 with a first round home game against No. 12 Durfee. The Presidents earned the home court advantage in large part to their successful 16-4 regular season record.

Playing without the services of senior all-star Nicole Lamie (flu), Quincy got monster games out of seniors Kiley McDonald (14 points, 13 rebounds), Caity Lowry (sensational defense) and Juli Tomer (nine points including five in the fourth quarter) and breakout performances from sophomores Alyssa Lydon (nine fourth quarter points) and Kayla McArdle (starting in place of Lamie) to defeat the Hilltoppers, 48-40.

McDonald scored four first quarter points; Tomer chipped in three, and Lowry added four as the Presidents, using their suffocating half-court, man-to-man defense jumped out in front 13-8 after eight minutes of action.

"I felt like the girls came in knowing that we were going to have to win it with defense and that is what we did," said Bretsch about his team's tenacious defense. "It wasn't pretty on either end but the girls came out really focused on our half-court, man-to-man defense knowing that Durfee was a team with a lot of individual talent."

McArdle converted two free throws (15-8) and McDonald used her low-post moves to score four straight before senior Maria Berberan made one-of-two free throws as the Presidents expanded their lead to 20-8 with a 7-0 run to open the second quarter.

However, Durfee ended the quarter on a 10-0 run to close the gap to two (20-18) at the break.

A McDonald put-back stopped Durfee's scoring spree and gave Quincy a quick 22-18 lead in the third, but the rest of the quarter belonged to the Hilltoppers. Durfee outscored Quincy 10-2 over the next four minutes to go from down 22-18 to up 28-24.

The biggest bucket for Quincy in the third came from Tomer. With the momentum swinging Durfee's way, Tomer buried a clutch 3-pointer from the left side to bring Quincy back to within HEAD COACH JEFF BRETSCHE (bottom left) designs a late-game play during a timeout of Quincy's Division 1 South first round game against Durfee last week. The Presidents defeated the Hilltoppers, 48-40, to advance to the sectional quarterfinals against Wellesley. one point (28-27). Berberan then added two free throws late as the Presidents began the fourth down 30-29.

But in the fourth when the pressure was mounting, Quincy came to play, especially Tomer and Lydon.

Tomer opened the quarter with another 3-pointer that gave the Presidents a lead (32-30) they would not relinquish. Lydon followed with two key free throws and McDonald's put-back extended the Quincy lead, in a flash, to 36-30. After Durfee used a 3-0 run to get to within 36-33, Lydon sank a clutch 3-pointer to push the advantage to 39-33.

A Hilltoppers' bucket made it 39-35, but Tomer successfully made two free throws (41-35) on Quincy's next possession. Lydon continued her strong fourth by making two free throws (43-36) and, following a Durfee basket (43-38) McArdle stepped to the line and made two freebies of her own (46-38). Lydon hit two more free throws to close out the scoring.

Lydon and McArdle finished a combined 8-for-8 from the free throw line in fourth quarter.

"It feels awesome to win," said an excited McDonald after the game. "We have been waiting for this since our freshman year. We played with heart and never gave up."

"To see Alyssa and Kayla step up (in the fourth quarter) like that was amazing," continued the team captain. "They were confident and made all those free throws. I don't know if I could have done that as a sophomore."

Added Tomer: "They way that the sophomores stepped up in a huge game and put away their nerves, the noise of the crowd, and just focused on what they needed to do, they did an awesome job. We couldn't have asked for anything better."

While praise for the play of Lydon and McArdle was much-deserved, it was Tomer who sent a message to Durfee that Quincy meant business with her clutch 3-pointers at the end of the third and beginning of the fourth quarter and, according to her coach, those two shots were the difference in the final outcome.

"In the first half we didn't hit any 3-pointers," said Bretsch about his team's 0-for-9 showing from beyond the arc in the first half, "but when Juli found her stroke it really changed our whole offense. (Durfee) was finally forced to come out on us and Juli making her shots inspired Alyssa and she went and hit a couple (of 3-pointers) and that made the difference. We are pleased to get this victory."

Note: A full game story of Tuesday night's semifinal game against top-ranked Franklin will run in next week's Quincy Sun.

SENIOR JULI TOMER (#23) prepares to take free throws against Durfee. Tomer made two huge 3-pointers in the second half as the Presidents rallied to beat the Hilltoppers, 48-40.

SOPHOMORE ALYSSA LYDON (#15) scored nine fourth quarter points to help Quincy advance past Durfee and into the Division 1 South quarterfinals.

North Quincy's Dan Gould Led All Scorers With 31 Points Whalers Harpoon Red Raiders 74-66 In First Round Game

By SEAN BRENNAN

North Quincy made its bones this season in the Patriot League by playing at a slow tempo that best suited their strengths, which were accurate outside shooting and ball possession basketball.

Their style of play was successful. The Red Raiders finished the regular season at 17-3 overall and won the Patriot League regular season championship, earning themselves the fourth seed in the Division 1 South tournament as well as a first round home game against New Bedford last Thursday.

However, it was the Whalers who dictated the pace and flow of the first round game, forcing the Red Raiders to play at a faster tempo than they were used to and, the end result was a season-ending 74-66 loss that closed the book on one of the most successful seasons in recent North Quincy lore.

"Going in we wanted to pick our spots," said North Quincy head coach Kevin Barrett about his team's pre-game strategy to slow down the high-flying Whalers. "We wanted to limit theirs and get ours and I don't think we did a good enough job tonight to compete with a team like that."

"Easier said than done against a good team like New Bedford," continued Barrett. "You got a pretty good indication as to what Division 1 South is all about and just how athletic and good a team like New Bedford is. But I couldn't be more proud of my guys with the way we scraped for the whole 32 minutes. Overall I thought we played well enough to keep ourselves in the game and potentially try and steal it at the end."

The Red Raiders started fast playing in front of a packed house at NQHS, using a 6-0 run to open the game's first eight minutes. New Bedford cut it to 6-4, but a Dan Gould 3-pointer pushed the North Quincy advantage to 9-4 at the quarter's halfway mark.

But then New Bedford put the foot to the gas pedal. The Whalers, playing at a frantic pace, outscored North Quincy 13-4 to close out the first up 17-13. They wouldn't trail the rest of the way.

Up four, New Bedford scored the first nine points of the second quarter to take a 26-13 advantage. Back-to-back 3-pointers by Dan Gould (game-high, career-high 31 points) and Pat Gould and a free throw from Marquis McClendon (12 points) highlighted a 7-0 run by the Red Raiders that sliced the Whalers' lead down to 26-20. And then the pace picked up, again. New Bedford ended the first half on an 11-2 scoring run to lead 37-22 at the halftime break.

Despite being down 15 on their home court the Red Raiders never stopped fighting. North Quincy's Tim Liuzzo (11 points) sank a three to open the third (37-25) and Paul Cuniff made one-of-two free throws (37-26) before a New Bedford bucket made it 39-26.

Dan Gould buried his third 3-pointer of the game on North Quincy's next possession (39-29) before McClendon accounted for the next four points, slicing the New Bedford lead, again, down to six at 39-33. And, again, the Whalers responded quickly with a 8-0 run to go back up by 14 points at 47-33.

Dan Gould's hot shooting continued to breath life back into North Quincy. He made his fourth three-pointer while getting fouled (he made the foul shot). The four-point play brought the Red Raiders to within ten at 47-37. Following a New Bedford bucket, Gould connected again from long range (49-40) before sinking two free throws (49-42).

Two New Bedford drives, sandwiched around a Efthim Butka bucket, made the score 55-44 entering the game's final eight minutes.

Five straight North Quincy points – a lay-in from McClendon and three free throws by Dan Gould – to open the fourth brought the Red Raiders as close as six (55-49), but New Bedford's Jonathan Fortes (team-high 26) buried a killer 3-pointer to push it back to nine (58-49).

Dan Gould's second 3-pointer of the quarter finished off a 6-0-run to get North Quincy to within five points at 63-58, but a three-point play by Fortes increased the lead to 67-58. Late 3-pointers by Liuzzo and McClendon got North Quincy back to within seven at 71-64, but the Whalers had enough in reserve to end the Red Raiders' season in the final minutes.

"(New Bedford) took our best punch and to their credit they held," said Barrett about his team's second-half comeback. The Red Raiders actually outscored the Whalers 44-37 in the last 16 minutes. "A couple of times we got it to six and we just couldn't get over the hump and get it a little bit closer. That is a heck of a team. This was hands-down the best team we played this year. That was pretty evident."

Impressive Night For Dan Gould

Gould established himself as the Patriot League's best long-distance shooter during the regular season. And he didn't disappoint in the state tournament.

The junior shooting guard finished with eight first half points before exploding for 12 points in the third quarter. For the game he finished with 31 points and made seven 3-pointers and was 6-for-8 from the free throw line.

Whenever North Quincy needed a big shot, Gould delivered.

"Dan is a tough kid to leave alone," said Barrett, "and even when you think you have him defended – New Bedford made a concerted effort to take him away – he is so crafty in terms of getting around screens and freeing himself up to get open looks. It doesn't take long for him to get that shot off."

"It was just a tremendous effort by him and all my guys," Barrett continued. "As I expected, we went down swinging. We just came up a little short tonight."

Free Throws: Were They The Difference?

The final score shows North Quincy lost by eight points (74-66). For the game, the Red Raiders finished 17-for-27 at the charity stripe – that is 63%.

In a close game every point counts.

"We missed some (free throws) early and inevitably in a tight game you can't help and go back to that," said Barrett whose team shot 72% from the line during the regular season. "We missed too many but that wasn't the reason we came up short."

Final Hurrah For Senior Class

North Quincy seniors Tim Liuzzo, Paul Cuniff, Joe Brown, Ryan Evans and Nate DePina played their final high school game against New Bedford.

This core finished their final two years of high school basketball with a 27-14 record, which included two straight trips to the Division 1 tournament and a first-ever Patriot League regular season championship this winter.

Division 1 Semifinals

Last night (Wednesday) at UMass-Boston, No. 1 Brockton and No. 5 Newton North played in one semifinal while No. 2 Madison Park and No. 6 Franklin squared off in the other.

The winner of these games will play at UMass-Boston on Saturday for the Division 1 South championship.

SENIOR PAUL CUNIFF (#32) attacks the hoop against New Bedford. Cuniff and fellow seniors Tim Liuzzo, Nate DePina, Joe Brown, and Ryan Evans played in their final high school basketball game versus the Whalers.

JUNIOR POINT GUARD PAT GOULD pushed the ball up the court against New Bedford. North Quincy finished the season at 17-4 after losing to the Whalers 74-66 in a Division 1 South first round game played at NQHS last Thursday.

Presidents Lost 65-63 To Blue Devils On Feb. 28; Off-Season Program Already Underway Randolph Survives Late Quincy Rally In First Round Game

By SEAN BRENNAN

Any hope Quincy had for an extended run in the Division 2 South state tournament went by the wayside during the first 16 minutes of their first-round game at Randolph on Feb. 28.

Quincy started slow while the Blue Devils started fast. Randolph jumped all over the Presidents in quarters one and two, storming out to a 39-15 halftime lead before holding back a furious second-half comeback from Quincy to win 65-63.

No. 2 Randolph (19-3 overall) followed this first-round victory with a 58-54 loss to No. 10 Wellesley in the sectional quarterfinals. No. 15 Quincy finished the season at 10-11 overall.

Trailing by 24 points at the start of the third quarter, Quincy turned it up several notches after the break. Behind the solid play from guards Tino Goncalves and Jaquan Harris, the Presidents used a 15-4 scoring burst to cut nine points off the 24-point halftime deficit. At the end of three, Quincy trailed 48-32.

And then the offensive floodgates opened up. The Presidents dominated play in the fourth quarter, outscoring the Blue Devils by a 31-17 margin. Following a corner 3-pointer by senior Mike Ruan with just under a minute left in regulation, and another 3-pointer from senior guard Reggie Cesar on the next possession, the Presidents got as close as four points (57-53), but Randolph was clutch at the free throw line late, which kept Quincy at bay.

Two late 3-pointers from sophomore forward Brendan Cunningham brought it even closer at 63-61, but a couple of last second free throws by Randolph closed it out.

"This game was similar to our start this season," explained QHS head coach David Parry. The Presidents opened the season at 1-6 overall before closing at 9-4 to claim second-place in the Patriot League's Fisher Division for a second straight year. "(The game) really emulated our whole season. When we started out 1-6 nobody thought we could make the tournament or challenge for the Fisher Division title, but we did. We were right there but just couldn't get over the hump."

"We returned one starter off last year's team — senior Zerick Fadairo," continued Parry. "We really went with a youth movement but the season and this game were a testament to the way the kids preserved and really believed in each other. They never gave up."

Future Is Bright

The future of boys' basketball at Quincy High is bright. The Presidents say goodbye to seniors Zerick Fadairo, Mike Ruan, Dan Mongo, Reggie Cesar, Alex Bottari and Nick Lepore, but those players that remain including Goncalves, Harris, Cunningham, Jalen Green, Peter Cedrone, Dan Tran and JT Bain are already back in the gym and weight room preparing for next season.

Quincy's freshmen team — the next core of varsity players — also recently finished their regular season at 20-1.

"The returning underclassmen are already back in the gym playing and in the weight room getting stronger," said Parry whose team will begin its spring schedule in the coming weeks. "We should have four starters returning and the experience they gained playing in some pressure situations this year should only help make us a better team."

"This group is made up in the mold of basketball players," explained Parry. "If they work hard (in the off-season) and continue to play together and follow through building team chemistry we should be a good team moving forward. I told the kids that when it comes to tournament-time the difference between winning and losing comes down to how many basketball players you have."

Quincy will be looking to qualify for the state tournament for a fourth straight season next year.

Quincy Pride

Coach Parry has to look no further than the Quincy girls' program to give his young team the proof that team chemistry is vital to a successful season.

Parry coached the core of this year's girls' team — Kiley McDonald, Caity Lowry, Juli Tomer, Nicole Lamie, Emily Nguyen and Maria Berberan — when they were seventh graders playing for his Lady Presidents team. He couldn't be prouder.

"I coached these seniors when they were seventh graders with the Lady Presidents," he said. "You can see how their chemistry as translated into success this season. That is what I hope can happen with my younger players. It is what I see in that group. Those girls have been successful in the classroom and on the court because they care for each other. They are a great example of hard work paying off."

Division 2 South Update

Last night (Wednesday), the semifinal round was held at two locales. In one semifinal game played in Brockton, No. 4 Stoughton (18-4) squared off with No.

9 Oliver Ames (14-8) while in Taunton No. 6 Hopkinton (16-6) played No. 10 Wellesley (14-8) with the winners of these games scheduled to play at UMass-Boston on Saturday in the championship round.

Hopkinton is the reigning Division 2 champion. The Hillers defeated King Philip, 69-60 in overtime to advance to the Division 2 Eastern Mass finals.

The Patriot League, of which Quincy is a member, had a rocky tournament this winter. The league placed five teams in the Division 2 South bracket: No. 7 Hingham, No. 11 Scituate, No. 13 Duxbury, No. 14 Whitman-Hanson and No. 15 Quincy.

All five programs were eliminated in the first round.

Hingham lost 50-44 to Wellesley; Scituate fell to Hopkinton, 59-39; Duxbury saw Stoughton rally in the second half to win 69-63; Whitman-Hanson lost to No. 3 King Philip, 83-68, and Quincy fell to Randolph, 65-63.

'Minor' Heart Attacks Can Still Be Deadly

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband, 46, died suddenly and unexpectedly from a heart attack. An autopsy showed that he died from what the doctor said was a minor heart attack. How does a minor heart attack kill? It was a major for him and me. — C.C.

ANSWER: The pathologist who performed the autopsy must have found that only a small section of heart was involved, and only a small heart artery was obstructed. Minor heart attacks can lead to major complications, including death. They can generate abnormal heartbeats, so abnormal that the heart's pumping action stops.

You have my deepest sympathy.

The booklet on heart attacks explains why they happen and how they're prevented. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 102W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I want to get rid of a lot of expired medicines. I have heard that flushing them down the toilet or putting them in the garbage will make them end up in our drinking water. What is the proper solution? — M.S.

ANSWER: Different government agencies have different recommendations for medicine disposal. Congress is trying to resolve those differences. First, check with your drugstore to see if it has a program to dispose of medicines; many do. Also check with your town, county or state to see if it has "take-back" programs. Many do.

If you can't find a facility that accepts old medicines, mix them with coffee grounds, sawdust, kitty litter or similar materials (making them less appealing for children or pets to eat), seal them in a plastic bag and put them in your trash.

A few drugs ought to be flushed down the toilet or the sink. These drugs are mostly powerful painkillers, like morphine, fentanyl, oxycodone and Demerol. They pose a danger to children, pets and even adults if accidentally ingested. This advice comes from the Food and Drug Administration. You can find the complete list at www.fda.gov.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have an ingrown toenail that's giving me much grief. I'd like to take care of it myself. I'm out of work and have no insurance.

Will you give me some directions on what to do? — H.A.

ANSWER: You can try to handle it on your own, but be careful. Don't traumatize the toe or skin.

Soak your foot in warm, soapy water for 10 minutes. To free the nail from the corner of the skin in which it is imbedded, try to work a small ball of cotton between the nail and the skin. Dental floss hooked under the corner of the skin helps you accomplish this.

From this day onward, cut your toenails on a horizontal plane. Don't round off the edges. That's an invitation to an ingrown toenail.

If all of this is a bit overwhelming, let a podiatrist free the nail for you. Make some arrangements for a later payment.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

SMILING WIPES YEARS OFF YOUR FACE

We all know how important a smile can be when it comes to social acceptance. What you may not realize is that a smile can also make you look younger. According to recent research, people are generally judged to be younger when they smile. It seems that smiling flexes muscles around the eyes and mouth, creating temporary wrinkles that are difficult to differentiate from laugh lines and crow's feet. As a result, people generally attach a less accurate age estimate to smiling faces. Moreover, smiling faces generate a "halo effect," which means they are perceived as being more positive, attractive, and youthful. Cosmetic dental procedures that enhance your smile make you more attractive and youthful in other people's eyes. Unfortunately many of us are insecure about our teeth — so we hide our smiles. But there are solutions to common dental problems, and we can bring your smile back. If you struggle with dental problems, you can count on our caring professionals and leading-edge technology to make your smile a work of art. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our trained professional staff works as a team to make your visit pleasant. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. VOICE FOR HEALTH

HI-TECH INJURY

As more and more people use their Smartphones and tablet computers to access the Internet, new sorts of "repetitive strain injury" (RSI) are cropping up, especially among younger users. Let's start with the fact that the average head weighs about 10-12 pounds. While an ideal posture can be described by drawing an imaginary line down from the ear through the shoulder, hip, knee and ankle, users of handheld computer devices generally assume a posture of holding their heads in a forward position for long periods. As a result of this unusual posture, the head feels four times heavier, creating a strain across the entire body and causing an RSI popularly referred to as "text neck." The chiropractor can help.

Conditions such as RSI tend to be linked to both physical and mental stress. Patients suffering from back problems are usually in much better and cost effective hands with chiropractic care. For gentle, safe, and drug-free chiropractic care we ask you to call the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, at 617.472.4220. After all, your spine protects your nervous system, which controls your whole body. To be healthy, you want to make sure your nervous system is functioning at 100 percent. We offer computerized spinal scans. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Repetitive strain injuries (RSIs) include a number of ailments involving the muscles, tendons, and nerves (primarily in the neck and upper limbs), such as "text thumb injury."

'Camp Sunday' At Quincy Community United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold its annual "Camp Sunday" service Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

"Yes, Camp Sunday is unusual," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor. "The first one was held six years ago with a focus on scouting."

"The Worship Committee decided it wanted to expand Scout Sunday to include all branches of camping, such as the Camp Fire Girls and Bluebirds. Camp Sunday is the result."

The Worship Committee

developed a recyclable program for the event, which includes information about the United Methodist Church's three camps in New England, as well as a number of camp songs. Participants are asked to call out the name of their favorite camp song, and it is then sung during the worship service.

The Sunday service is lots of fun, and people are encouraged to dress in camp gear, Rev. Jarek-Glidden said.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Keep an open mind about a suggestion you see as unworkable. Give it a chance to prove itself one way or another. The results could surprise both supporters and detractors.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
News about an upcoming venture causes you to make some last-minute adjustments in your plans. But the extra work will pay off, as you come to learn more about the potential benefits opening up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
A more positive aspect grows out of your determination to reach your immediate goals. Continue to keep your focus sharp and on target by steering clear of petty quarrels and other pesky problems.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
The possibility of a new acquisition always makes those Leonine eyes light up. But be careful that what you see is what you want. Appearances can often be deceiving.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
No matter how much you might feel that you're in the right, resist saying anything that could reignite a still-unresolved situation. Let the matter drop, and move on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
Help with a personal problem comes from an unexpected source. You also find workplace pressures easing. Use this period of calm to restore your spent energies.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Details need to be dealt with before you can move on to another area. Make sure you don't leave any loose ends that could later cause everything to unravel.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
News about a change in the workplace carries with it a challenge you could find difficult to resist. Check it out. It could be what you've been waiting for.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
Allowing your artistic nature full expression will help restore your spirits and will put you in the mood to take on that new career challenge. A Libra creates excitement.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
Expect to happily plunge right into a hectic social whirl starting at week's end. Your aspects favor new friendships as well as the strengthening of old relationships.

BORN THIS WEEK: Like St. Patrick (who was also born this week), your spiritual strength is an inspiration to others.

Lester Tyrala's Knowledge Of Time Pieces Like Clockwork

clocks in Europe and the Continental U.S. for many years. When working and living in London as a minerals exploration geologist in the 1970s, Tyrala received his initial antique clock and barometer restoration instruction and training in a two-semester evening class and built his career from there. He started working with clocks and barometer repairs in 1979. He then returned to the United States and moved to Quincy in 1991. Since his recent retirement, he has devoted more time to restorations.

"My specialty is antique restoration," said Tyrala. "I say that I restore them because I use materials that fit the age of the piece."

There were many differences between the clocks of the past and present day. Earlier clocks told only the hour. The earliest documented timekeeper, according to Tyrala, was in 1600 B.C. in Egypt. Items such as sundials, hourglasses, and water clocks were all used to tell time before the clocks we know today came to be.

"The early clocks were inspired by churches," said Tyrala. "Most were more of attributed the low turnout to a contest-free Democratic ballot.

"I am disappointed by the turnout. I thought we'd get to at least 18 or 20 percent. You have to have a Democratic contest to get a bigger turnout in this community," the city clerk said. He noted the 2008 Democratic Presidential Primary between Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama helped draw 43 percent to the polls.

Here's how Quincy voted in the Republican Presidential Primary:

Romney, 2,944 votes; former Pennsylvania Gov. Rick Santorum 463 votes; Texas Cong. Ron Paul 378 votes; former House Speaker and Georgia Cong. Newt Gingrich 189 votes. Also collecting votes were former candidates Jon Huntsman (26 votes), Michele Bachmann (16 votes) and Rick Perry (8 votes).

There were 4,065 ballots cast in the Republican primary and 2,974 votes cast in the Democratic Primary in Quincy.

There were also 20 votes cast in the Green Rainbow-Party primary. The breakdown: Jill Stein (7 votes); Kent Mesplay (2 votes) and Harley Mikkelsen (1 vote.)

The voting precinct with the highest turnout Tuesday was Ward 6 Precinct 5 in Squantum with 434 votes or 19.2 percent turnout.

As The Sun went to press Tuesday, other Super Tuesday contests showed Romney picking up at least two more states with Santorum and Gingrich also cracking the win column.

Besides Massachusetts, Romney was the projected winner in Virginia and Vermont.

Santorum appeared the winner in Oklahoma and Tennessee and Gingrich getting a much-needed victory in his home state of Georgia.

Romney entered Super Tuesday as the delegate leader with 207 followed by Santorum with 86, Paul 46 and Gingrich 39.

Ten states representing 419 delegates were up for grabs on Super Tuesday.

A candidate needs 1,144 delegates to secure the GOP nomination and challenge President Obama in November.

a statement of your wealth than having a chronological instrument."

Many back then would pay to learn the time so they could set their clocks or watches accordingly. There were some businesses that would sell time to those who needed it. One woman, according to Tyrala, who was known as the Greenwich Time Lady, Ruth Belville, took over the family business of selling time.

One man Tyrala spoke in-depth about at the presentation was John Harrison, a self-educated clockmaker who invented the marine chronometer.

"He was truly a mechanical genius," said Tyrala. "He was self taught and spent 30 years trying to build a clock for these ships. He made the best time keeper of its time."

Throughout those 30 years Harrison battled with astronomers to prove that the clock was accurate.

"Astronomers had such an ancient science when it came to telling time," said Tyrala. "They found a long time ago that you could tell time by the sun. They fought strongly against Harrison's invention and believed it couldn't be done."

The oldest operating clock in the world right now, according to Tyrala, is in the South of England, and is a fully functional striking clock. It was built in 1536 by a black smith, and is made out of cast iron.

"Most clocks have something of interest to it, and certainly the older ones have more," said Tyrala. "The oldest one I have worked on and seen is one from the late 1600's - a British clock, called a lantern clock."

When it comes to knowing the history of clocks, Tyrala said he has the knowledge not because of the classes he took but because of his own interest in learning. He also said that most restoration experts like to learn about the different clocks to be able to work on them with a stronger knowledge of how they tick.

Tyrala said he used to go to yard sales and look for old clocks but the chances of finding one worth anything is one in a million.

"I prefer to go to auctions to look at clocks, that way I can get one I really want. My favorite has to be the tall case clocks, the grandfather clocks," said Tyrala. "I have never found what I would say is a true treasure, but the search can be fun."

Officials Change School Calendar Due To Rare Thursday Election

No School On State Primary Sept. 6

By EMILY TAFT

The state primary Thursday, Sept. 6 will also be a no-school day for Quincy Public School students.

The rare election day on a Thursday will be a professional development day for teachers.

School officials decided against having school Sept. 6 because many of the schools are also voting precincts. Election days are normally held on Tuesday which is an early dismissal day for students. But because the state scheduled the Massachusetts primary for Sept. 6 – the first Thursday after Labor Day – school officials had to deal with the oddity and adjust the school calendar accordingly.

"The new schedule was voted on unanimously by the members of school committee," said School Committee Vice Chairwoman Barbara Isola. "We thought that because many of the voting precincts are at the schools, it would be hard for students to be able to go to lunches, and decided to make that

$25 A Day For Refusing Access To Property To Inspect Water Meters, Pipes, Other Equipment

Committee OKs Fines For Violating City's Water Service Ordinance

By SCOTT JACKSON

A measure approved by the City Council's Ordinance Committee could lead to fines for Quincy residents and business owners for refusing to allow city workers access to their property.

The committee voted 8-0 in favor of amending the city's water service ordinance to give DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi the ability fine water customers $25 a day if they refuse access to their property for the purposes of inspecting water meters, pipes, or other equipment used for water supply. The same measure would also allow the city to place a lien on any property whose owner doesn't pay their water bill within 60 days.

Raymondi appeared before the committee to seek the measure's approval. The commissioner explained that it had been 15 or 20 years since the city's water ordinance was last changed, and that new technology – espe-

Lincoln-Hancock Pool Repair Work Set To Start

Repair work at the Lincoln-Hancock school's pool is set to begin.

On Monday, the City Council approved the transfer of $72,500 from the Lincoln-Hancock Pool Reserves account to two separate accounts to allow repair and maintenance work to take place.

Most of the money, $59,000, was transferred to the Department of Public Works Buildings and Maintenance Capital Expenditures Account. Those funds will be used to install new floors in the pool's locker rooms, at a cost of $25,000. A scissor lift, used to replace light bulbs, will be purchased for $15,000 from the account. Another $15,000 will be spent on maintenance for the pool's heating system, and the remaining $4,000 will be used to purchase new showerheads for the locker rooms.

The remaining $13,500 was transferred to the Quincy Public School Repairs and Maintenance Account. Of that, $5,000 will be used to purchase chlorine and for pool testing, $4,000 will be used for carbon dioxide tanks, $1,500 will be used to service the pool filter room, and the remaining $3,000 is for miscellaneous parts.

Funds in the Lincoln-Hancock Pool Reserve account are received from the fees charged for pool use. As of Jan. 31, there was $129,938.96 in the account.

Salvation Army Seeks Food Donations

The Salvation Army is looking to the community for help keeping its food bank stocked.

Sharon Costa, a caseworker for the Salvation Army, said a delivery from a food bank in Boston is expected this week, but in the meantime the pantry only has some juice, ground turkey, and canned peas and carrots left on-hand. "That's not enough for a family in need," Costa said.

The food pantry is looking for non-perishable items. Costa said the ones they're particularly in need of are items children tend to enjoy, such as peanut butter, SpaghettiOs, canned fruit, and dried pasta.

Costa said that despite receiving an average of 2,000 pounds of food a month from the Boston food bank, there are some items they can't get a hold of. "We never really get any SpaghettiOs from the food bank in Boston," she said.

The food bank provided food for 76 families in February, though they usually average over 100 families a month, according to Costa. They served over 110 families in both October and November, she pointed out.

The Salvation Army is accepting donations from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. They're located on 6 Baxter Ave. off of Washington Street in Quincy Point. They are also accepting cash donations, which can be made in person or by check sent to The Salvation Army, 6 Baxter Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

Eight Residents New State Troopers

Eight Quincy residents joined the ranks of the Massachusetts State Police March 9.

The eight – Michael P. Callahan, Daniel C. Close, Patrick M. Devin, Joseph T. Flynn, Michael J. Haines, Malachy Higgins, Joseph W. Paul, and Michael F. Rockett – were appointed to the rank of trooper during a ceremony at the DCU Center in Worcester.

With 208 trainees being named troopers, the graduation class was the largest in the history of the Massachusetts State Police. It was also the first graduating class since 2006, and the 80th overall. Gov. Deval Patrick, who was at the ceremony, praised the class.

"These graduates hold the honor of being the largest, most highly trained class the academy has ever produced, and the first in over five years," said Patrick.

Nearly half of the new troopers, 103 of the 208, are veterans, including 80 who served in either Iraq or Afghanistan. All of the graduates went through a 21-week training program that began in October. The curriculum at the academy included classroom study, physical training, defensive tactics, and real-world law enforcement scenarios. Lt. Gov. Tim Murray lauded the new troopers for passing the academy.

"The 80th recruit training troop represents a unique class of hard working men and women, who have endured significant academic and physical training to achieve this accomplishment," Murray said. "I am proud to join the governor in honoring all members of this class as they move forward to work together and protect communities across our Commonwealth."

The next step for the state's newest troopers will be a three-month break-in period. Each will be assigned to road patrols with a field-training officer. Since the last class graduated in 2006, some 500 troopers left the force because of attrition and the addition of the 208 new officers will increase the State Police's presence on state highways and roads, since all of them will start out as road troopers. State Secretary of Public Safety Mary Beth Heffernan said the new recruits were sorely needed.

"This is the most prepared, well-trained class the State Police has ever graduated – they are sorely needed within the ranks of the department and in the communities they will serve," Heffernan said. "We are anxious for their tours of duty to get underway."

Col. Marian McGovern, the superintendent of the State Police, said that even with all the training and preparation the class received, their biggest asset would come from within.

"Your commandant, your training directors, your drill instructors, your firearms and fitness and defensive tactics instructors have all given you the tools you need to succeed," McGovern said. "That is, all the tools but one. The final piece, the quality upon which all the skills and tools depend, is found inside each one of you."

"It is your heart that will allow you to be brave in the face of danger, relentless in your pursuit of justice, fair in your interactions with the public, and compassionate to those who look to you for help in the most vulnerable moments."

Quinn Bill Ruling Won't Impact Quincy

Last week's Supreme Judicial Court ruling on the Quinn Bill won't have any bearing on Quincy.

The SJC, Massachusetts' highest court, ruled last Wednesday that cities and towns only need to pay their share of the Quinn Bill, which gives police officers added pay if they receive college degrees. But Quincy already pays the full cost of the Quinn Bill, according to mayoral spokesman Chris Walker.

"The city's interpretation of the contract requires the city to pay the full cost of the Quinn Bill," Walker said.

The Quinn Bill is a 1970

law that gives police officers additional salaries for obtaining additional education. Officers with an associate's degree receive a 10 percent raise, those with a bachelor's degree receive a 20 percent raise, and those with either a law or master's degree receive a 25 percent raise.

Initially, cities and towns split the cost of the additional wages with the state. But in 2009 state spending for the bill's costs were cut from $50 million to $10 million and the state ceased all payments on July 1, 2011.

Boston police officers sued the city in an attempt to force it to pay the state's share. Last Wednesday, the state's highest court ruled unanimously in Boston's favor. The Quinn Bill "requires only that municipalities pay one-half the amounts specified in the payment provision, plus any amount actually received from the Commonwealth," Justice Francis X. Spina wrote in the court's opinion. "Municipalities may agree to pay more, but the statute does not require it."

Quincy allocated about $2.9 million for the police department's education pay in the city's most recent budget.

Flood Plain Topic March 22

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest will be hosting a forum next Thursday, March 22 to help residents who may be at risk for flooding. The forum, called "living in a floodplain," will be held at the Broad Meadows Middle School at 50 Calvin Road from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Laforest and Councillor Doug Gutro started planning the event as a way to help educate residents who live in a floodplain. "We were asking ourselves what can we do for residents in these areas," Laforest said in a phone interview Monday. "We can basically help them educate themselves."

Some 3,300 of Quincy's households are located in designated floodplains, according to Laforest. A plurality of those — about 1,300

— are in Laforest's ward. Ward 5, which Gutro represented before being elected at-large councillor, has 875 houses located in floodplains. Wards 4 and 6 have about 400 such houses each, Ward 3 has 170, and Ward 2 has the fewest with 54. Laforest expects her fellow ward councillors to be in attendance along with Gutro and herself. The ward councillors will also be sending out notices to residents in their wards who live in floodplains, telling them about the meeting.

Also attending will be someone from Congressman William Keating's staff, representatives from FEMA, the Massachusetts Department of Conservation, the city's conservation commission, and insurance companies. Laforest credited Keating for helping get FEMA involved with the event.

At the meeting, residents will be able to learn about how FEMA goes about designating areas as floodplains and what that designation means. "We thought we could get FEMA there to talk about the maps, how they get drawn," Laforest said. "We'll be looking at a map, showing why is a floodplain a floodplain."

Residents will also learn the basics of flood insurance, though they won't be able to purchase it at the event. Also on the agenda will be showing residents how they can prepare their houses in advance of a flood.

Laforest also noted that FEMA is in the process of redrawing its maps of floodplains. Those maps will then need to be approved by the City Council by July.

Quincy After School Child Care Receives $2,500 From Walmart Foundation

Quincy After School Child Care (QCARE) Development Associate Carole Saia recently visited Lindsey Larson, store manager of the Quincy Walmart, to present a piece of artwork done by QCARE children.

The artwork expressed QCARE's gratitude for receiving $2,500 from the Walmart Foundation.

The money will be used for The Scholarship Fund, which assists working parents with a demonstrated financial need by reducing their weekly fee for care. These are families who either may be on a waiting list for a state voucher or not eligible for one.

"Due to state and federal regulations, our agency is not able to offset tuition costs with regular operating funds, but requires that we use physically donated dollars to offer scholarships to financially eligible families," Saia said.

"We cannot offer scholarships without donations and rely on the generosity of our donors to assist us in this goal. We are extremely grateful to the Walmart Foundation and our local Walmart for their support of this fund."

QCARE is a non-profit organization that provides quality after school child care to children ages K through 13 in nine public elementary and one public middle school in the City of Quincy. They are the largest provider of after school care within the Quincy Public Schools. QCARE also offers vacation programs during February, April and summer vacation weeks. For more information about the services provided by QCARE, call 617-773-3299 or visit them on the web at www.quincyafterschool.org.

"In today's economy, the need for our Scholarship Fund has increased," Saia said. "It provides critical support to working parents who are struggling financially and are in need of quality child care to enable them to work to support their families without worry."

Anyone interested in supporting the QCARE Scholarship Fund may send donations to Quincy After School Child Care, P.O. Box 710144, N. Quincy, MA 02171.

'The Wolly': A Gift That Kept On Giving

The Wollaston Theater – in its hey-days – was a state-of-the-art entertainment venue that attracted vaudeville, musicals, comedians and Hollywood films.

But it was also an anniversary present from the man who built the 1,259-seat theater to his wife.

About six years after he completed the landmark theater on Beale Street, Edward H. Sears bought it back from the man who originally purchased it – Wollaston realtor W.W. Wilson. He then gave the building to his wife, Harriet.

The expression of love on their anniversary became a labor of love for Harriet. One could also call it a gift that kept on giving.

For 57 years she ran and cared for the theater until she sold it in 1979. During that time, Harriett earned a reputation as a generous soul who cared more about giving kids a place to enjoy than ticket sales.

But she made you earn those privileges, her family recalls.

"My mother always gave out tickets," said Harriet Sheaff of Wollaston, Harriet's daughter. "Whenever someone did something, she gave them a ticket."

The Wollaston Theater opened its doors in November 1926.

"He built it strictly for the entertainment of the Wollaston community," says Sandra Breslin, a granddaughter. "That's why Harriet wouldn't sell it over the years. She didn't sell it until she was in her 80s. She had offers back in the 1970s from a racketball club. She wouldn't sell it because Ed wanted it for the Wollaston people. She was stubborn about it."

Edward Sears was one of the city's renowned contractors in his day. Besides "The Wolly," he built the Strand Theater in Quincy Center, Quincy Neighborhood Club, the Squantum School, the Quincy Trust Building (now Alba Restaurant in Downtown Quincy), Wollaston Park Apartments, and Union Congregational Church in Wollaston.

Sears also constructed the Bradford Building in Quincy Center that was razed last year and 1240 Furnace Brook Parkway that was used as a branch of the Crane Library and today it's the home of Beacon Sporting Goods.

Under Harriet's loving tutelage, the Wollaston Theater flourished.

Stars of the day appearing on stage included Red Buttons, Henny Youngman, Jo-Anne Worley (of Laugh-in fame), the Ink Spots and Tiny Tim and his wife, Miss Vicki. Stars signed their autographs on one of the walls of the dressing room under the stage.

The cast of the musical "Jesus Christ Superstar" rehearsed at the theater in the early 1970s.

And, of course, it was also home to matinees, double-features and "Dollar Night." Lines of patrons stretching along Beale Street were commonplace.

The theater wasn't used for family functions but it did host Christmas parties for the theater staff.

"My grandmother rented a giant champagne fountain one year and stuck it in the middle of the theater," Sandra remembers. "It was one of those things that all you had to do is stick your glass underneath it."

Son Beams

But if there was one trademark to Harriet, it was her propensity to dispense free tickets to neighborhood kids.

"She used to walk around Wollaston and just hand out passes to anyone. No one really paid to get in," Sandra said.

She also gave a lot of those kids their first jobs.

"The teen-agers adored her," said Ellen Monahan, another granddaughter. "They still do. I'm still friends with some of them and they adored her as far as what she did for them and giving them trust. They really did respect her."

"These same kids would come over and put up her Christmas tree. She did as much as she could for these teen-agers. She gave them a place to go."

Sandra adds: "She really believed in helping people with kids. She wanted to keep the teen-agers out of trouble. She was an incredible lady."

When it came to family, she was equally as generous but taught the lesson of hard work first, rewards second.

"She raised us not to brag about owning the theater," Ellen said. "You worked. She was a businesswoman and she didn't just give out handouts to us. You worked for it."

But those privileges sometimes exceeded their original intent.

"Each of us were given a (movie) pass each Christmas with our name plus one," Ellen recalled. "All year you could go for nothing. And I remember going into the theater and saying 'my grandmother said I could only bring in 35 kids tonight.'"

"And they said, 'Ellen . . .'"

"And I'd say 'No, I'm serious.' And in we'd go. The whole line of kids walked in for nothing."

"She really didn't mind. As long as everyone was inside and safe."

Harriet was a bit of a renaissance woman in her time. The businesswoman was also a realtor and a mechanic.

And, a hero, too.

One day, Harriet was in her car on Beale Street near Wollaston Hill. The street was steeper than it is today. A car was parked on the hill and the brake released. It came down the hill with nobody in it into Wollaston Center.

"She saw (the car) and she knew nobody was in it so she pulled her car in front of it so it would smash into her car and not go into Wollaston and hurt anybody," Ellen said recounting a favorite family story. "The car was going down the hill at a pretty good clip and it smashed right into her car so it wouldn't go into the center and hurt somebody."

Today, the theater's fate is unclear. It was recently purchased by businessman Michael Fang who says he's seeking input from the public on what to do with the site.

In a perfect scenario, the family of Edward and Harriet Sears would love to see it rehabbed and opened again as an arts or cultural center.

"I personally would love to see it stay as some kind of arts center," Ellen says on the subject. "Inside, if it were done right, it's a beautiful building." She notes the terrazzo floor and stained glass windows that haven't seen the light of day in nearly a decade.

"It would be a beautiful place for the arts. There aren't many buildings around for things like that. It would be a shame to just see it leveled."

Sandra adds: "It would be great if it could remain a theater but there aren't too many theaters that are hanging on with just one show," Sandra adds. "Perhaps it could be a drama theater with stage productions. It would need a lot of work, though. It's pretty much fallen down."

However, both agree that parking would be an issue for a theater or cultural center use.

Asked what her parents might think of the theater's decline since it closed about 10 years ago, Harriet says, "They wouldn't like that at all. My father was very much into having everything neat and clean and well-kept."

Harriet also took pride in the Wolly's appearance.

"I remember one time some kids took the front row chairs and threw them through the screen," Ellen said. "And she bought a whole new screen. It wasn't just going to be repaired. It was going to be all new."

Edward died in 1954 at the age of 85. Harriet passed away in 1982 at age 87.

Does the family have any regrets that they didn't hold on to it?

"At the time (it was sold in 1979) $200,000 seemed like a huge amount of money. But we look back now and it's really nothing because it's not just the theater. It's the two stores to the left and two stores to the right," Sandra says.

"At the time, I was only 17 or 18 years old. I look back now and I could kick myself. Anyone one of us could have bought it."

But the timing wasn't quite right for the business to pass to another generation.

"I think the older ones in the family already had their careers in place and the younger ones were probably too young," Ellen points out.

So while the Wolly may have had its last curtain, Harriett deserves a big bow for all that she did to sustain it for nearly six decades.

"The longevity my grandmother had with the theater was amazing," Ellen said. "She really kept it going. It may not have been the most beautiful place to go, but it was someplace you could go on a very reasonable budget."

Sandra adds:

"My grandfather built a lot of things – theaters, apartment buildings, even the family home. But she ran them. She managed them. They were a wonderful team."

Harriet summed it up this way:

"It was a lot of work. She worked very hard but she loved it."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1957 real photo postcard shows two of the New Haven Railroad's Budd-Liners leaving the old Atlantic depot on their way to Boston. The stainless steel Budd-built railcars were the last passenger trains operated by the New Haven before it stopped service on the Old Colony line in June 1959. This depot and its predecessors was one of the oldest depots on the old railroad and trains stopped here for 115 years before it was closed. It was located near the end of Sagamore Street. When the Red Line was built by the MBTA it was demolished and replaced by the North Quincy station about one-third of a mile south. The shadow in the foreground was from The Carioca on Hancock Street. Today, the site of this old depot lies in the southbound lane of the Commander Shea Boulevard that runs parallel to the tracks along here. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Council Rejects Dam Land Swap

The City Council summarily rejected the town of Braintree's offer to swap land along the expressway for the city-owned Braintree Dam.

Councillor John Koegler said, "We should never sell. It might be worth a billion dollars in the future."

Finance chairman John Quinn sent the offer to the land conveyance committee with the notation "do not sell."

SCHOOL BOARD VOTES 4-3 AGAINST METCO

Mayor James McIntyre broke a 3-3 tie on the school committee by voting no on participating in the METCO program, which would have bused 20 Negro students to city schools.

Voting in favor were Dr. Edward Mann, Charles Sweeny and Dr. Charles Djerf. Voting against were Alice Mitchell, James McCormick and Frank Anselmo.

Sweeny said the experience in Wellesley showed that both black and white students benefited from the program. He said, "acceptance was a token to show we have concern."

Those opposed said the school system had no room for outside students since it was 1,000 over capacity.

GROUND BROKEN FOR DPW, CD CENTER

Ground was broken off Sea St. for the construction of a $635,937 complex for the DPW and Civil Defense.

Mayor McIntyre said the area contained the nucleus for a great municipal complex and suggested it could be the site for a new city hall.

Public works administration offices would be relocated from the city hall annex and Penn St. offices. The Penn St. land would be put back on the tax rolls. It was adjacent to the new Howard Johnson's $300,000 building, which was under construction.

READERS FORUM

Suggests Reopening The Wolly As A Niche Cinema

I read with interest that Michael Fang welcomes input from Quincy resident as to future uses for the Wolleston Theater.

Like many quoted in the story, I support the reopening of The Wolly as a cinema. I urge Mr. Fang to seriously consider the idea of creating a niche cinema that would show foreign language films of the present and past.

Access via the Red Line and the MBTA is one of the Wolly's best assets.

When I was a teenager and a college student in South Boston, I took the T to the Coolidge Corner Cinema in Brookline, to the Kendall Cinema in Kenmore Square, to the Brattle, Orson Welles, Harvard and Central Square Cinemas in Cambridge. They all had double features that were a bargain and helped to make them worth the ride. (Do your youngest readers know what a "double feature" is?)

Consider the number of international students attending universities in Metro-Boston. Then add the great and growing variety of the immigrant population in Quincy and the South Shore. Sure, these folks can watch poor quality pirate DVD's to stay up to date on the popular films back home.

Is it possible that they will pay to see sharp images upon the very big screen of the Wollie? Advertise that the films have English sub-titles and I will be right in line for a Bollywood, Chinese or Middle Eastern film.

For some of us old film buffs, we would be thrilled to watch classic films of Renoir, Kurosawa, Lang, Bergman, Ray, Rossellini, et al.

The recent success of The Artist - a silent movie produced by French filmmakers that was filmed entirely in Hollywood - proves the universality of film.

To Mr. Fang, I suggest that The Wollie is a golden opportunity to reach underserved audiences.

130 Students Participate NQHS Holds 54th Annual Science Fair

By KRISTINA KALABOKAS

North Quincy High School recently hosted its 54th annual science fair continuing a tradition of education, curiosity, and exploration.

Almost 130 students participated in this year's event, which was made possible, in part, by contributions from Roche Brothers, The Quincy Parent Advisory, and by the efforts of the NQHS Science Department.

A group of 53 judges assessed projects based on individual students' scientific approach, note-keeping, thoroughness, ingenuity, and knowledge of their subject. Members of the judging panel included Lowell Hall Ph.D., the Chemistry Department Chairperson of Eastern Nazarene College; Marc McGuigan of the BU Physics Department; and Hartmut Wohlrab, Senior Scientist at the Boston Biomedical Research Institute, along with NQHS science department staff.

After several hours of deliberation, sophomore Nisreen Abo-Sido was named the first place winner for her project titled, "Lemon-Aid." Second place was awarded to eleventh grader Amanda Lee for her project, "The Effects of Subfreezing Temperatures on Plants." Tenth grader Sarah Tran came in third for her project, "Using Microbial Fuel Cells and Bacteria to Generate Energy."

Honorable mentions went to Vicky Chan, Toan Nguyen, Emily Luu, Nicholas Burt, Marcus Giang, Eliza Song-Givens, Celeste Dang, Yvonne Fong, Li Sheng, Evelina Ceca, Yufeng Wang, and Hilary Chen.

Nicole Kymissis, who teaches advanced and standard biology at NQHS, says students know about the science fair well in advance to their deadline. "They know about it from the first day in September," she said.

"This is a student driven activity," said Anna Bouchard, a tenth grade biology teacher. "Most of the experiments are carried out at home by the students. The students design the experiments, make their procedures, do all of the background research themselves on their own time. It's supplementary to the curriculum that they're learning in their science class."

Students who place in the competition are eligible to compete against their peers at the district and state levels.

NISREEN ABO-SIDO

els. They can then advance on to the International State Fair, according to Kymissis.

Abo-Sido attributes her first-place win to Kymissis. "I really have to give all my credit to Ms. Kymissis. She was my supervisor."

"I love biology, everything to do with biology," said Abo-Sido, who plans on pursuing a career in the sciences. "Bacteria is a good place to start for me."

SARAH TRAN

Lee chose her subject due to her interest in cryogenics. "I thought it would be interesting. Cryogenic treatment is commonly used by scientists to preserve specimens," she said.

When asked about why she selected her topic, Tran stated that "it had a lot to do with industrial waste water treatment. That could be applied to real life now, since we spend so much money on waste water treatment."

In a message issued by

NQHS principal Dr. Earl F. Metzler II, students and school staff were praised for participating in the fair. "We continue to be proud of all our student's achievements and the accomplishments of our alumni who return to participate in this event," he said. "The dedication and commitment of North's Science Department to knowledge, character, and service will continue to make our science fair a very special event, and one we can all be proud of for many years to come."

Free Lecture At The Crane Library Tonight 'On The Side Of Mercy: John Adms And The Boston Massacre Trial'

On the evening of March 5, 1770, British soldiers opened fire on a crowd that had gathered to harass a sentry on guard in King Street (now State Street) in Boston.

The Boston Massacre inflamed a population already disturbed by the long-term presence of troops in their midst. In the face of extraordinary public hostility, John Adams, an outspoken supporter of the Patriot cause, nevertheless agreed to defend men who were accused of murder and also the symbols of oppressive royal authority.

The trials that followed were landmarks in American legal history.

What made John Adams, in spite of his personal beliefs, such a zealous advocate for his despised clients? How did he serve justice by arguing for mercy?

Explore these questions at a free lecture by Peter Drummey, the Stephen T. Riley Librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society in Boston, tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Founded in 1791, the Massachusetts Historical Society is an independent research library that collects and preserves manuscripts—the unpublished letters and diaries of individuals and families—that document the entire course of American history.

John Adams's personal and legal papers are housed at the Society.

This lecture is presented as part of John Adams Unbound, a special program and exhibition series about John Adams and his library.

The series has been made possible through a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the American Library Association.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

Library Film Matinee 'The Plaboy's' Friday

A free screening of the 1992 drama "The Playboys" will be shown Friday, March 16 at 1 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The film stars Albert Finney, Aidan Quinn, Robin Wright and Milo O'Shea.

It's 1957 and Tara, the most irresistible woman in a small Irish village, is also the most scorned, when she refuses to reveal the identity of her baby's father. Under pressure by Constable Hegarty to accept his hand in marriage, Tara rejects his proposal and falls instead for a dashing actor. But as their affair heats up, a jealous Hegarty threatens to expose Tara's secret...and destroy the only happiness she's ever known.

The 133-minute film is rated PG-13 for scenes of sensuality and brief, strong violence.

The screening is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library. For more information, call 617-376-1316.

Marie's Kitchen

Corn Meal, Potato Pie And Irish Soda Bread

Almost everyone who cooks a St. Patrick's Day boiled dinner with smoked shoulder or corned beef usually serves corn bread with it.

My favorite is one that my mother used to make and I also do. It's a cornmeal piece and it's a lot easier to make than corn bread.

The recipe is:

CORN MEAL, POTATO PIE

1 cup cornmeal
3 medium potatoes, boiled and mashed and cooled
1 tbsp black pepper
1 tsp salt

In a bowl, place the mashed potatoes and the rest of the ingredients and mix until well blended. Place in a slightly greased pie plate pressing firmly down. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 25-30 minutes until lightly browned on top.

And what would a boiled dinner be without Irish soda bread... My daughter Rita recently gave me a recipe for authentic Irish soda bread.

IRISH SODA BREAD

1 cup raisins soaked in hot water for 5 minutes

3 cups of white flour
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 tbsp baking powder
1 tsp baking soda
1 1/2 tsp salt
1/2 tsp cinnamon
6 tbsp brown sugar (packed)
2 tbsp granulated sugar
1 tbsp caraway seeds (optional)
6 tbsp cold butter cut into small pieces
2 eggs beaten
1 1/4 cups of buttermilk

Combine dry ingredients and cut in butter. Add the wet ingredients then the raisins. Dough will be soft and moist. Knead on a floured board briefly and let it rest for 10 minutes. Form an 8-9 inch round ball and cut a letter "x" figure on top. Dust with flour or cornmeal and bake at a 375-degree oven for 40-50 minutes.

cially new electronic meters being installed throughout the city as part of an $8 million initiative - was a reason why the changes were needed.

"Recently we've had about an $8 million investment in water meters with the automated reading from the homeowner and the business owner through receptors and into city hall to get accurate and update readings each and every day," Raymondi said at the meeting. "The system is changing and obviously things that might've been codified 15 or 20 years no longer serve our customers in the modern era."

The commissioner went on to add that it's in everyone's best interest for DPW employees to have access to private property so they can look for possible tampering of water mains - the cost of water used in the city but not charged to a particular customer is borne by all customers. The liens would also be used to help protect customers, by insuring that they won't be responsible for splitting the cost of large, overdue bills.

"If we don't have the ability to assess, charge, interest, and lien, the ratepayers may be left holding the financial bag for scofflaws," Raymondi said. "There's an entity on Quarry Street - love it, I was born there - but when they transitioned there were some water bills that weren't paid. We had no ability to lien on that asset. That's a multi-million dollar asset, the hardworking ratepayers of Quincy shouldn't subsidize that kind of situation."

Raymondi also proposed charging customers up to $100 a quarter for not upgrading to the new electronic meters as a manual meter reading fee. He expects that between 1,000 and 2,000 customers won't upgrade from the old meters to the new ones, and said it's unfair for customers who did upgrade to pay the cost of having a DPW employee manually read the old ones.

The proposed charge for customers who don't upgrade, and more than three dozen other proposed charges, remained in committee. Raymondi had proposed measures authorizing himself to set the charges, taking the power away from the City Council.

In order for that to happen, the council needed to adopt a section of state law authorizing department heads to set charges.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee expressed reservations about adopting the law, Section 22F of Chapter 40, because he would rather the power remain with elected officials.

"This would be fine if we had an elected water and sewer board," McNamee said. "You'd want them to have the power to set those fees because they then would be ultimately answerable to those actions on their election dates. I'm not prepared to give the DPW commissioner this much power... sorry Mr. Commissioner I just don't want to confer that much discretionary power at your hands without a little bit more accountability."

Councillors Joe Finn and Doug Gutro also questioned whether the committee should recommend adopting Section 22F. They were both concerned that doing so could allow other department heads to charge fees without council approval.

"It seems kind of a backdoor thing of changing the very structure of the relationship of this body to the setting of fees," Finn said. "Again, we may want to have some sort of robust debate on it, but it strikes me that that's a larger issue than simply the amendment the commissioner has been before this evening with. It's clearly a significant, significant change of precedent."

"I don't know how I feel about it, I want to understand it a little better," Gutro said. "At first blush it sounds like were giving up an extraordinary amount of discretion and oversight and we're doing it under the guise of providing flexibility to our department heads to use their discretion in public works, but it may well have far-reaching implications that frankly take this body out of setting fees or approving fees across the spectrum of departments."

Raymondi said he interpreted the law differently. He believes adopting Section 22F would only allow a department head to set charges for items enumerated by the council.

"It opens the door for other departments to participate, because you have approved the statute, but you still have to go through the charges individually," Raymondi said. "So if the council's concerned that once you vote for 40, 22F that the fire department, the city clerk, and everyone else can automatically start tomorrow morning issuing charges that they deem appropriate, the statute's very clear. The reason there are 38 charges before you, is that the law requires the City Council A) to adopt the statute and B) to adopt the individual specified charge."

The issue could be heard again at the next Ordinance Committee meeting, scheduled for April 23.

day a Professional Development day for the teachers."

School will now open for grades 1-9 on Wednesday, Sept. 5, and for grades 10-12 on Friday, Sept. 7. Kindergarten and pre-kindergarten classes will commence Monday, Sept. 10.

"We thought it would be a very positive way to begin the school year by using that day as a Professional Development day for the entire city," said School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. "They will use that day to talk, among other things, about the new common core curriculum and plan some of the changes they will have throughout the school year."

According to Isola, the development day would normally be held at the end of the school year but they changed the dates around to accommodate the voting.

"We thought of a lot of different ways to approach it," DeCristofaro said. "We reached out to everyone to see what they thought. It will be a very unique beginning to the school year."

Normally the state primary, which allows voters to determine the nominees for Congress and State Legislature, falls on a Tuesday, which would be an early dismissal day at all city schools, and was originally set for Sept. 18, but was moved to the earlier date to comply with Federal Military Overseas Voter Empowerment (MOVE) Act. The MOVE act requires states to mail absentee ballots to service members and other citizens outside of the country 45 days before a general election. But it also allows states to apply for waivers with the department of defense, which allows them to mail their ballots in at a later date. Massachusetts and four other states were granted waivers in 2010.

The new date had forced Quincy officials to take a second look at the school calendar because nine of the public schools are used as polling precincts. Those schools are Merrymount School, Wollaston School, Beechwood Knoll (two precincts), Atlantic Middle School, Montclair School, Squantum School, Lincoln-Hancock School (two precincts), and North Quincy High School.

"I think it's a wise move, I think it will help a lot," said City Clerk Joe Shea. "For them (the school department) to accommodate us is very generous."

RECYCLING OLD DIAMONDS

If you inherited an older diamond piece that you never wear, you may want to consider "recycling" the diamonds in a newly designed piece of jewelry.

Among the older cuts you might find in heirloom pieces is the "old-mine" cut, a precursor to the modern round with a rounded-square "cushion" shape. While old-mine diamonds may lack the brilliance of modern stones, they often exhibit considerable fire. "Cushion cut" diamonds are similar to old-mine stones, but are more elongated, and the "Asscher cut" is more or less a square emerald cut. Both of these latter two diamond cuts display fiery personalities, distinctive looks, and classic character. They deserve to be perpetuated for more than nostalgia's sake. Extraordinary older diamonds are becoming increasingly more popular. We have a knowledgeable and professional staff that will work with you to choose the best diamond, with consideration to her style, the size of her finger, the size of your setting, and your budget. Come in and browse our huge selection of diamonds at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where we strive to make your visits with us friendly and relaxing. Contact our store at 617-773-3636. Quincy's Planning Director Elected To Regional Committee

Quincy Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington has been elected to the Executive Committee of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC).

The election was held at the recent MAPC Winter Council Meeting.

MAPC is a regional planning agency serving the people who live and work in the 101 cities and towns of Metropolitan Boston. Its mission is to promote smart growth and regional collaboration.

MAPC is governed by representatives from each city and town in the region, as well as gubernatorial appointees and designees of major public agencies. The Executive Committee oversees agency operations and appoints the Executive Director.

Harrington has a Bachelor of Arts degree in History from Boston College, and received his Juris Doctorate from Boston University School of Law, and is admitted to the Massachusetts sets and Federal Bars. He is a former Assistant District Attorney (1969-1973) and Quincy City Councillor (1974-1977), and served as Assistant City Solicitor in the City of Quincy from 1978-1981.

Prior to being appointed Planning Director in 2004, Mr. Harrington was a practicing attorney for twenty-one years, specializing in Real Estate Development Law, representing area landowners and developers as counsel with respect to local, state and federal permits related to land use and construction projects.

In his role as planning director, Harrington has promoted greater involvement of Quincy to various state and regional organizations that influence planning policy and federal and state funding priorities. It is in the best interest of the City of Quincy to have a voice on the Executive Committee representing cities in the MAPC region.

Quincy has worked with MAPC over the past several years on their bicycle rack procurement project, obtaining over 100 bicycle racks for installation throughout the city. The cost of the racks was reimbursed to the city by MAPC.

The City of Quincy has looked to MAPC for assistance with the emerging "Smart Growth" policies. To that end, the City Council has adopted the MAPC Boston Region's Pedestrian Transportation Plan 2010.

The city is benefitting from an ongoing MAPC Pedestrian and Bicycle Planning Network project with the Boston Consortium for Sustainable Communities that includes Quincy in their regional study on connectivity.

The City is currently working with MAPC on a minority outreach program centered in North Quincy, and the city plans to participate in MAPC's upcoming regional Climate Adaptation and Sea Level Rise initiative.

Additionally, Harrington's department will be submitting a grant application to MAPC for a feasibility and funding study on "Cool Roofs" under their Sustainable Cities program.

Mayor Visits Quincy College Class

By EMILY TAFT

Mayor Thomas Koch recently visited Quincy College to talk with students about the plans for the new downtown and how the college will be a part of it.

Koch's visit was a part of government day at the college. Other speakers included state Sen. John Keenan and City Council President Michael McFarland.

"It is important to share the information of what will be happening to the city with the students," said Koch. "It is all relative to them and important that they know what is happening with the downtown."

"We want Quincy College to be a part of the project."

Keenan spoke at an American Government class and McFarland spoke at a U.S. History I class, with both discussions open to the public. Koch's appearance focused mainly on the downtown area with the exception of some questions asked by the public that were in attendance, and wasn't geared towards a certain class.

Koch talked with the students and the public about the plan for the downtown area and how he would like the college to be involved in the plans.

The Academic Division of Liberal Arts organized and hosted the event with the assistance of former Mayor and Liberal Arts adjunct faculty member Jim Sheets.

Koch stated that the taxpayers are not paying for the costs and improvements in the downtown.

"All utilities are in need of repair right now," said Koch. "Those costs are a liability to the Quincy taxpayer, but they won't be when this project is completed."

Koch added that there will be a number of different companies and components that will help make the new downtown a reality. He said that he hopes there will be a medical component in the downtown, and that there is talk with companies in Boston about moving part of their businesses to Quincy.

In 1990, Koch was appointed as the top aide to Sheets after his successful run for mayor in the fall of 1989. Their friendship was one of the reasons Sheets invited Koch to speak during government day.

Koch said he was invited by Sheets to speak and was happy to talk with students about his ideas for Quincy.

"Mayor Koch is a man of integrity and honor," Sheets said to a classroom packed with students and Quincy citizens. "He stands for the values that made this country great."

Quincy College is among four recipients of a $5 million grant from the Department of Labor.

The funds from the grant will be used to train hundreds of Greater Boston workers and students for careers in life sciences and health care. The grant is funded by fees for H-1B visas, which are used by US companies to temporarily employ foreign workers with biotech, technology, and other skills.

The grant will underwrite the Metro Boston Skilled Careers in Life Sciences Initiative, a four-year program to train 360 residents of more than 80 communities, along with support for student internships and career counseling for some 3,000 individuals.

Quincy College, Boston University, Partners HealthCare, Vertex Pharmaceuticals Inc., and Local 1199 of the Service Employees International Union are among the organizations that will offer training under the program.

The Massachusetts Life Sciences Center, a quasi-public agency charged with implementing the state's 10-year, $1 billion Life Sciences Act of 2008, wrote the grant with the city and will get $800,000 to expand its internship program.

So far, the center has placed 600 students in internships with more than 200 companies across the state, with 100 of those positions turning into full-time jobs, according to the center.

"Being involved in this grant is very exciting for Quincy College. It will provide the opportunity to train 80 students in a four-year time span to enter into the laboratory field and will help fill the anticipated vacancies of those that plan to retire in the next few years. The grant will also make people aware that a lot of what happens in health care is behind the scenes. Although medical laboratory technicians are not seen by the public, they play a vital role in health care," said Rebecca Silva, chairperson of the Medical Laboratory Technician Program at Quincy College.

Quincy College's Medical Laboratory Technician Program provides a quality curriculum and innovative instruction to students who will, upon graduation, serve local, statewide, and national healthcare communities.

The MLT program consists of didactic and campus laboratory courses designed to progress the student through a two year program and provide them with entry-level knowledge and skills to perform medical laboratory procedures in chemistry, hematology, microbiology, immunohematology, immunology, and phlebotomy. This training is enriched when the students will have the opportunity to apply previously acquired knowledge and skills in a supervised working environment. Clinical affiliate laboratories in and surrounding Quincy within an approximate 60-mile radius will be utilized for the clinical experience.

Upon successful completion of the program, an Associate of Science Degree in Medical Laboratory Technology is awarded. Graduates are eligible to take the national certification examination for Medical Laboratory Technology offered by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists (ASCP) Board of Registry.

Larger Location To Provide Students With Better Educational Environment Quincy College Moving To Presidents Place

By EMILY TAFT

Quincy College students will soon be able to enjoy the convenience of having their classes and their administrative offices located in one place.

By this fall, the college will be consolidated into two buildings: Saville Hall, which is already a part of Quincy College; and Presidents Place, which is where the remainder of classes will be held, along with offices for administration, financial aid, and the president and vice presidents' offices.

"The College's motto, 'Focused on Teaching and Learning, One Student at a Time' is literally and figuratively represented in our move," said Director of Strategic Marketing and Brand Management Taggart Boyle. "This larger location will provide students with a better educational environment, more classrooms, new technology, and convenient access to all student and academic services."

The college will be moving out of two of the buildings they currently occupy: Temple Hall located on Temple Street and Newport Hall, located in North Quincy on Newport Ave. The construction and building will begin within the next two weeks and will cost upwards of $3 million, according to Boyle.

"It makes sense educationally and operationally to have the college all in one area. This will allow students access to all services they need," said Quincy College President Peter H. Tsaffaras. "This is something I have been planning since the day I came here, about a year ago. It is clear that having space for educational needs is important. We are building classrooms that are as good as the education we offer."

The college recently began moving some classes and offices and will continue, along with the construction, through the end of July. The construction in Presidents Place will increase the rent by half a million dollars a year for the college, according to Tsaffaras. The college will be taking over one-third of the Presidents Place building at 1250 Hancock Street, with everything residing in the North Tower. Currently there are a number of classes, offices and departments located in Presidents Place to make room for more classes and labs to be constructed in Saville Hall.

The exercise science program, which has already moved from Saville Hall to the basement level of Presidents Place, takes up half of the basement level, along with classrooms that

GETTING OVER THE HUMP

The age-related pronounced curve of the upper spine often seen among seniors is medically known as "hyperkyphosis," but most people refer to it as "dowager's hump." Although this condition is quite common (conservative estimates show that 20 percent to 40 percent of people over the age of 60 have an abnormal curvature of the spine), no one really knows what causes the condition. While some link hyperkyphosis with small fractures in the vertebrae, not all people with this abnormal curvature of the spine display vertebral fractures, and not all people with vertebral fractures develop "dowager's hump." However, there is evidence that maintaining spine flexibility and the strength of back muscles may help avert abnormal spinal curvatures.

Let us help you to maintain spine flexibility and therefore your back muscles. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC,

At First Church Of Squantum

Star Of Sea Faith Community To Hold Easter Sunday Liturgy

The Friends of Star of the Sea announce that a Catholic liturgy will be held at noon Easter Sunday at the First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Quincy.

The liturgy is called a "Celebration in the Absence of a Priest" and has been approved by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) and the Vatican for use in American dioceses. The liturgy will include communion, using hosts consecrated by a Roman Catholic priest in good standing in the Archdiocese of Boston.

The Celebrations in the Absence of a Priest guidance states, "For their part, it is the right of the lay faithful, barring a case of real impossibility, that no priest should ever refuse to celebrate Mass for the people or to have it celebrated by another priest if the people otherwise would be able to satisfy the obligation of participating at Mass on Sunday or the other days of precept."

The Friends say they are extremely disappointed that their request for an Easter Mass has been denied by Cardinal O'Malley for the second year in a row, but they are pleased to be able to offer this alternate form of worship to the members of Star of the Sea's faith community. This alternative has been particularly important to the large numbers of elderly, for whom getting to Mass on Easter - or any other Sunday - is difficult, if not impossible.

Guidelines for this service encourage the faith communities using this liturgy to think of themselves not as a community without a priest, but rather, as an "assembly in expectation of a priest."

The Friends say the use of this liturgy is not a permanent fix, nor can it be called a Mass. However, they point to guidance from the USCCB that says this liturgy does serve as a substitute for Mass on an interim basis. The Cardinal and his administration have long argued that the suppression of parishes has resulted from clergy shortage. The Celebrations in the Absence of a Priest are specifically designed to provide for worship "in the absence of a priest."

A collection will be taken to help support the efforts of the Friends with their ongoing Canonical appeals. In a related story, the Associated Press and Catholic News Service reported last week that a Vatican court has overturned 13 Decrees of Suppression issued by Bishop Richard Lennon to parishes in the Diocese of Cleveland. Lennon is a former Vicar General of the Archdiocese of Boston ("RCAB") and the architect of "Reconfiguration" in the RCAB, though which Star of the Sea was suppressed in 2004.

Quincy After School Child Care will present Ride with K-Rob Wednesday, March 28 from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at Broad Meadows Middle School gymnasium, 50 Calvin Rd.

Stringent Solar Panel Regulations Sought

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin wants Quincy to step up its regulation of solar panels within the city.

Coughlin proposed a set of regulations for solar panels at the Feb. 27 council meeting. But the issue perked up after a Reservoir Road resident built 50-foot-wide by 16-foot-high solar array in his backyard. Solar arrays of that size couldn't be built if Coughlin's ordinance passes.

"It would probably not be allowed," Coughlin said in a phone interview Tuesday. "I think I can say a structure of that height, that width wouldn't be allowed."

Coughlin's proposal would cap the height of solar arrays at six feet. It would also limit the square footage of solar arrays to 1.5 percent of the square footage of the lot it's placed on, minus the square footage of any improvements on the lot. The largest a solar array could be on a 5,000 square foot lot with a 2,000 square foot house is 45 square feet, for example. The proposed ordinance also makes the Planning Board the permit granting authority for small-scale solar panels.

Besides the appearance of solar panels, Coughlin is also worried about safety. He pointed out that firefighters are at risk of being shocked by solar panels placed on roofs when they attempt to tear down roofs during fires.

Solar thermal systems, where water is heated by the panels, could also scold firefighters, according to Coughlin. He said he's gotten positive feedback from a firefighter regarding the issue.

Coughlin said drafting the ordinance was complicated because of all the issues involved. "Doing this was like peeling an onion," he said. "The more I got into the more issues percolated."

Coughlin also pointed out that he's not against solar energy and that he's even considering installing solar panels on his own garage. He would just prefer the city put reasonable regulations about solar panels on the books.

Coughlin's proposal was referred to the Ordinance Committee during the Feb. 27 meeting. It wasn't on the agenda for Monday's meeting of the Ordinance Committee because a public hearing is needed since it represents a change in the city's zoning law.

Planning Board Elects Officials

By KRISTINA KALABOKAS

The monthly meeting of the Quincy Planning Board took place last Wednesday at City Hall.

The continued public hearing regarding the Moon Island Wind Facility Proposal, meant to take place at the March 7 meeting, was canceled following the City of Boston's official withdrawal from the project.

The session continued as planned with an executive decision regarding the addition of six parking spaces to the site plan of two, four-unit condominium complexes to be located on 38-46 Gilmore St. Residents of Gilmore and the surrounding streets had voiced concerns over possible increases in traffic and parking availability during a

Feb. 8 meeting of the board.

A permit, allowing for the construction of the condominiums with the additional spaces, was granted.

The final item on the evening's agenda was the annual election of the chair, vice chair, and secretary clerk of the Planning Board.

Chairman William Adams voluntarily stepped down following seven years of service. Taking his place, with a unanimous vote, will be William Geary, a current member of the board.

Elected vice chairman and secretary clerk were Board members Coleman Barry and James Faye respectively.

"I'd like to thank Mr. Adams for his chairmanship," said fellow board member Richard Meade. Planning Board Director Dennis Harrington also expressed gratitude to Adams. "The staff appreciate your attendance," he said.

The meeting concluded with Adams saying his years as chairman had been a "wonderful learning experience."

North Quincy High School Students Traveling To Italy

Zumba-Thon Fundraiser March 24 At School Gym

By EMILY TAFT

Fourteen students from North Quincy High School will be traveling to Arezzo, Italy for a 12-day exchange program from April 10th to the 22nd to learn the culture and see the sights.

A fundraiser will be held on March 24 to raise money that will go towards the cost of the trip.

"Students will take day trips to places in the surrounding areas of Arezzo and live with a host family while they are there," said NQHS Foreign Language Department Chair Aliza Schneller. "This will allow them to be a part of society rather than just a tourist."

In past years, students held a car wash to raise some of the over $2,000 apiece they pay to make the trip.

This year, they will hold a Zumba-thon event in the NQHS gym Saturday, March 24th from 10 to 11:30 a.m. The community is invited to attend.

All money donated will go towards the expenses for this year's trip and any remaining will be put aside for the program in the future. Those in attendance can also buy raffle tickets in hopes to win prizes such as Italy themed baskets, gift certificates, a scrap booking kit, and many other items.

The fundraiser is being held with help from a student's mother who runs Body For H.O.P.E. in Quincy.

North Quincy High School has participated in the exchange program every other year for three years. Each year they participate, the school welcomes around 15-20 students from Italy who come to Quincy for a 10-day exchange program. The exchange students arrive in October and in return NQHS sends students who have been taking Italian classes to Arezzo for a chance to learn outside the books in the classroom.

"This is an equal exchange program which allows the students to broaden their horizons," said NQHS

Italian teacher and chaperon on the trip Tiffany Murphy. "They can sit there and learn about what it is like in Italy but until they are immersed in it they can't fully understand it."

North Quincy High School also sends students on trips to other parts of the world such as France and China, but the Italian program is done entirely different, according to Principal Earl Metzler.

"The language programs are a big part of the culture and fabric of our school," said Metzler. "The Italian program is unique because Italian students come and visit here and then we send students over to Italy to live with them."

"It has taken off in a powerful way and it teaches students that learning another language is practical and that they will use it outside of the classroom."

Murphy, who is new to the district and the program, spent four years in Italy after graduating college. She will bring experience to the trip.

"When I lived in Italy, I learned a lot about Italian culture, history, art, food, music, language and the way that true Italians live, work and go to school," said Murphy. "I also learned a lot about myself and the experience helped to broaden my horizons and to learn to embrace other cultures. It was one of the best experiences of my life and I am so incredibly happy and thankful that I did it."

Murphy said she plans on taking the students to some of the places she enjoyed while living there.

"I am going to take the students to the Colosseum, Roman Forum, Palantine Hill and Vatican City in Rome. They will also go to Siena and Cortona to experience the beauty of the two unique cities," said Murphy. "The students are to keep a journal while they are in Italy to experience documenting their experience."

Murphy added that they would also be making stops in Venice to St. Mark's Square, and to Dorsoduro. The students will also be able to stop at a mask making shop to make their own Carnevale masks.

"As we look to hire someone new we not only look at the university they attend but the experiences that they have outside of a college classroom," said Metzler. "It is almost as valuable as a degree for a teacher to have experience, especially in a language. For her to pick up the program as a first year teacher shows us we got the right person."

Murphy will be staying with teachers from the school they have been in contact with. In order for a chance to take the trip, students have to be enrolled and participating in the Italian classes held at the high school. According to Murphy, most of the students who will be taking the over 10-hour flight are juniors at the school.

"I hope that the students will have a better appreciation and understanding of the Italian language and culture," said Murphy. "It's a very authentic experience and the students will be completely immersed in the daily life of an Italian."

Students will stop in Rome for a day before heading to their host families in Arezzo. While there they will attend school, and make day trips to see different cities, museums, libraries, churches and schools.

"I had a daughter go to Italy with her school, (not NQHS), five years ago, and she had a lot of fun. At the time she couldn't tell me how the experience of going to Italy had on her. However, I could tell she had changed," said mother of a NQHS student and owner of Body For H.O.P.E., Jackie Batchelder.

"I wasn't expecting her to return with some incredible epiphany even though she visited various churches and even visited the Vatican. But a mother knows when an experience has had a life long effect on her child. The trip to Italy was one of the best things that happened to her."

"It's one thing to study about a culture, it's another to live it even if it's only for a week."

A Tribute From Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro

Dr. Carol Lee Griffin: A Legacy Of Leadership And Compassion

By RICHARD DeCRISTOFARO,
Ed.D., Superintendent,
Quincy Public Schools

Dr. Carol Lee Griffin brought a calming presence and significant expertise to all aspects of her lengthy career in the Quincy Public Schools, where she served as Director of Pupil Personnel Services and Assistant Superintendent for close to thirty years.

One of Carol Lee's outstanding characteristics was thoughtfulness. Above and beyond her invaluable contributions to the Quincy Public Schools, this incredible woman would always find the time to write personal thank-you notes. Carol Lee's notes, all written in her inimitable handwriting and always from the heart, were expressions of gratitude and congratulations.

As I share thoughts about her professional life, it is certainly appropriate that they are in the form of thank you's.

First of all, thank you to Carol Lee for staying in Quincy after graduating from the Quincy Public Schools and attending Boston University. After earning a Bachelor's degree, Master's degree, and eventually, her Ph.D. at Boston University, Dr. Griffin interned at the Veterans' Administration Hospital in Brockton and the South Shore Mental Health Center. Carol Lee began her eventual connection with the Quincy Public Schools as a Mental Health Consultant in 1966.

She was hired as the Quincy Public Schools' Director of Pupil Personnel Services in 1968. In this role, Carol Lee shared her vision, passion, and extraordinary leadership and was rightfully recognized for her dedication to the children and families of the Quincy Public Schools.

A scholar, writer, and author, Dr. Griffin was published in several magazines and educational journals. She wrote on topics ranging from At-Risk, Pre-Kinder-garten Children to Counseling Leadership and Supervising, sharing research and her insightful analysis with the education community.

Thanks is also due to Carol Lee for committing so much of her energy to the community where she was raised, worked, and resided. While working tirelessly for the Quincy Public Schools, Dr. Griffin found the time to be a member of the Kiwanis, serve on the boards of Quincy Teen Mothers, Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore, Protestant Social Services, Hough's Neck Congregational Church, and serve on many City of Quincy boards at the request of past Mayors of Quincy.

Dr. Griffin was also once deservedly named "Woman of the Year" by the Quincy Business and Professional Association.

Thanks are due to Carol Lee for collegially mentoring hundreds of professional staff members, paraprofessionals, and administrative staff in the Quincy Public Schools over the years. When I was a new Assistant Superintendent, she always made time to share valuable administrative perspective and advice.

Numerous School Committee members, superintendents, principals, teachers, guidance counselors, and other staff members knew they were held in the highest esteem and supported by her advocacy and caring manner.

My last thought is a thank you and farewell to an Assistant Superintendent who was a master architect and builder in the development of Quincy Public School's foundation of curriculum, positive school culture, camaraderie, and community. Dr. Carol Lee Griffin, friend, mentor, colleague, scholar, administrator, author, and inspiration, has been missed by the Quincy Public Schools since her retirement in 1997.

The City of Quincy and the Quincy Public Schools are saddened by her passing but are richer for the legacy she leaves behind.

Volunteers Assembled Over 300 Easter Baskets For Children Of Food Pantry Clients At Interfaith Social Services

Easter Arrives Early At South Shore Food Pantry

The Easter holiday is Sunday, April 8th this year, but volunteers at Interfaith Social Services are already working hard to make sure that all of the children of their food pantry clients will receive Easter Baskets in time for the holiday.

Since January, volunteers have been gathering candy, toys and other donated goods to be assembled in Easter baskets for local children whose families are clients of Interfaith's food pantry. In a frenzy of plastic eggs and chocolate bunnies this past Saturday volunteers assembled over 300 Easter Baskets.

"Every year we have such a great time putting these baskets together," said Interfaith's Executive Director Rick Doane. "The best part is how involved all of the kids are. To have seven year-olds and three year-olds doing something charitable for other kids is very heart warming. We are grateful for all of our Easter Bunny's helpers."

Interfaith Social Services is a non-religious multi-service center for local families and individuals. Last year their counseling center, food pantry, homelessness prevention program, thrift shop, career closet and other programs assisted more than 25,000 South Shore residents. Their Pantry Shelf food program distributed over 400,000 pounds of food to hungry families.

Volunteers are integral for all Interfaith's programs

They sort clothes, distribute food, answer phones and help clients. Hundreds of local residents and teams of employees from South Shore businesses volunteer at Interfaith every year. Some of those groups assisted with this year's Easter program.

They conducted Easter drives at their offices and sent volunteers to help with basket assembly. State Street's Global Operations division as well as J. Calnan & Associates, both located in Quincy, collected items and assembled baskets.

National Amusements Theaters in Norwood donated boxes of candy.

A local mother's playgroup from Cohasset gathered small toys for each basket in addition to bringing a group of kids to help assemble them.

"Assembling the Easter baskets brings together friends, family, and community members to help less fortunate families" said Quincy resident and State Street volunteer Cristiana Amara. "What a great sense of satisfaction to take part in a project that will light up a child's face on Easter morning."

"There's really nothing as fun as planning an event which you know will result in many, many kids having smiles on their faces. It's amazing what a couple of hours volunteering will accomplish," said Quincy resident and J. Calnan & Associates volunteer Annie Ballem.

"The team at JC&A has a very good understanding of how much help we received from our community in our 15 years of business. We have successfully grown from a start-up company to an industry leader and are extremely cognizant of how instrumental our community has been in helping us to realize our goals.

"Organizations like Interfaith continue to inspire us every day to be the very best we can and we feel strongly that it is our obligation to return that support," said Maureen Rystrom, director of Marketing, J. Calnan & Associates, Inc.

"Interfaith has afforded our employees the opportunity to get involved with so many different activities that directly tie back to our South Shore community. Spending the morning to create Easter baskets was extremely rewarding and such a wonderful experience."

"We look forward look forward to our continued involvement with this organization."

nization."

"Since 1947 Interfaith Social Services has been working to ease the suffering of South Shore families who need a little extra help," Doane said.

"These Easter baskets are one of the ways that we can lift people's spirits while providing them with some much needed emergency assistance."

A Job Well Done

On Monday, March 5, at approximately 5:35 p.m., Officer Dan Parisi was dispatched to Copeland Street to assist Officer Bill Plant on a motor vehicle stop. Upon arrival, Officer Parisi met with Officers Plant, Jay Borden and Patrick Calabro, who had a motor vehicle stopped.

According to Officer Plant, he and the other two motorcycle officers were on patrol on Copeland Street when they observed two males in a parked vehicle slightly hunched over towards the center console. Officer Plant also observed that the passenger had a marijuana cigarette tucked above his ear.

LT. DAN MINTON

When the officers approached the vehicle, the driver immediately jumped out of the driver's seat without being directed to. Officer Plant stated he observed a pill bottle sticking out of the pocket of the driver's sweatshirt, with a substance he believed to be marijuana inside. When Officer Plant asked the driver to empty his pockets, the driver began removing his lighter, cigarettes, phones - everything but the pill bottle.

Officer Plant reached over and removed the pill bottle from the driver's pocket, then discovered deeper in the pocket two small glassine bags of marijuana, along with several pill bottles containing a variety of pills that had different colors, shapes, and sizes. The Officers recognized the pills as a package commonly referred to as a "party pack," which commonly contains amphetamines and several other types of narcotics.

The officers placed the driver under arrest and removed him from his vehicle.

While conducting a motor vehicle inventory of the driver's property, Officers located a small digital scale with marijuana residue on it, two Chinese throwing stars (a dangerous weapon per se), two Jaguar stainless steel Shuriken's and a spring assisted knife with two blades.

A further check revealed the driver's wallet with a Dedham Police Department badge inside. Once the suspect arrived at the station, Officer Parisi determined that the pills the driver/suspect had were Alprazolam, Clonidine, Clonazepam (2 types) and 20mg Amphetamines.

The suspect, a 36 year-old Walpole resident, was charged with Carrying a Dangerous Weapon, Possession of Class B, Possession of Class C, Possession of Class E and Possession of Class D with Intent to Distribute.

Nice Work!

CON MEN BACK IN TOWN: Police information is that 4 Hispanic males may be in the city using an old ruse of knocking on your door and identifying themselves as meter readers or power company reader.

Be cautious of these people who request entry into your house to read a meter. Once in the house, they scan for valuables and may pre-occupy you with a task so that they can gather items of value.

Best action is to call the Quincy Police Department BEFORE letting anyone in your home. This means inquiring through the locked door who someone is and then determining if it safe to allow access into your home.

Remember, when in doubt, call "911" and let us check people out.

Seminar Focuses On Pedestrian Safety Tips

Executive Director Steve Buckley of the North Quincy Community Center recently hosted a "Pedestrian Safety" seminar.

Betty Yau of the Mayor's Office and Quincy Police Lieutenant Dan Minton reviewed safe walking tips in congested areas.

In the United States, there are over 6,000 pedestrians killed each year and thousands more are seriously injured.

This city has changed over the years. There are many more cars but the roads have remained the same over the years. Many cars pass through the city on their way to and from work from other communities.

The population has grown too. Some of the key points of the seminar were:

- Use the crosswalk.
- Wait for the traffic light to turn red and yellow.
- Wait for the white "walk" light to go on. If you are halfway across the street and the light says, "Don't Walk", continue to the other side.
- Look left, then right, then left again when crossing.
- Keep your head up as you cross the street for possible danger.

- When no crosswalk is available, drivers may not expect pedestrians to cross. Use extra safety when emerging between cars.
- Walk on sidewalks or paths. If there are no sidewalks, walk facing traffic.
- Avoid using headphones or texting when crossing. Even telephone conversations can distract you from concentrating on traffic flow.
- Looking and listening are key to crossing the street safely.
- When crossing a 4 lane road, if one car stops to let you go, be sure the other lanes are clear of traffic.
- Watch for cars backing out of driveways or parking spots. Look for the white back-up lights.
- At night, pedestrians can be hard to see. Wear light colored clothing or have reflective materials on.
- Wet pavement requires extra time for cars to stop and is slippery for walkers.
- Most importantly, look at the driver's eyes to determine if he/she sees you. If the driver is texting or preoccupied, he/she may not see you. Don't assume because you can see the driver, that they can see you.

Even Insulated Pipes Can Freeze

Q: Regarding your recent column on pipe insulation and freezing: You blew it this time. As a chemical engineer who has worked with construction and operation of various facilities, I can categorically tell you that pipe insulation will not prevent pipes from freezing – particularly where power and heat are not available.

Pipe insulation will slow the transfer of heat and cold into or out of piping. However, if heat is not available for a sufficient time, the water in the pipe will freeze if the surrounding air temperature is below 32 F. It might take awhile, but it will freeze.

The simplest method for preventing damage to piping systems is to drain the piping as fully as possible, thereby keeping any remaining water from damaging the pipes when it freezes. The freezing water will simply expand into the voids and not split or break the piping.

When heat is again available, the warming will melt the frozen water. Adding water back into the piping will permit it to operate as usual, eventually. I had this experience in my house back in the '80s during a massive and long power outage. I drained the water and heating lines as best I could. When power came back I started the boiler, after pressuring that system, and waited. Slowly, the three heating zones came back into operation – except for about 20 feet of heating pipe in the uninsulated space in the attic. That took days and the sun's heat to return to normal operation.

However, in a heated garage with pipe insulation, leaving the garage door open (accidentally) in 15 F weather did not protect the piping. Luckily only a split in a 2-foot length of pipe needed replacement.

I worry that your column will give a false sense of security to homeowners who are not engineers or tradespeople and will find frozen and split lines after an outage. – Ralph M., via email

A: You told them, Ralph, and I thank you! While pipe insulation slows heat or cold transfer – keeping hot water inside the pipes from cooling more quickly as it travels through unheated spaces – it should not be relied upon to prevent pipes from freezing during prolonged cold spells. Always check the entire run, including insulated sections, when monitoring for frozen pipes.

HOME TIP: As spring approaches, double check pipe runs for damage before turning on water to sections that were shut off for winter, such as exterior spigots.

Presidents Finish Season At 18-5 Overall; Six Seniors Played Final High School Game QHS Bounced By Franklin In South Semifinal, 57-53

By SEAN BRENNAN

Down 55-53 with 16 seconds left in last week's Division 1 South semifinal game against Franklin at Massasoit Community College, the play out of the final timeout was for Nicole Lamie to fight through a high screen and find her sweet spot beyond the three-point line.

Quincy executed the play to perfection, but Lamie's shot went in-and-out. Caity Lowry grabbed the rebound in heavy traffic but her contested put-back attempt also went in-and-out and the Presidents' season came to a heart-breaking end as the Panthers sank two late free throws to win 57-53.

It was an unfair end for this Quincy team.

But as Boston Celtics coach Doc Rivers likes to say, basketball is a make-or-miss game and, the Presidents just missed advancing into the program's first-ever sectional final.

"I am so proud of the girls," said QHS head coach Jeff Bretsch following the semifinal loss. "I just wish we could have pulled it out in the end."

Quincy had entered the Division 1 South tournament with a 16-4 record, but nobody outside of those who had followed this team for the past two years gave the Presidents much of a chance to win even one game. But this team was resilient. It was loaded with senior experience and underclassmen talent, and that combination shut up the doubters. It also brought Quincy to the forefront of which programs need to be in the discussion among the best teams in the area.

"Nobody had us playing in this game except for us," Bretsch said. "We believed from the beginning of the season that we were going to be a team to be reckoned with in the tournament and we definitely proved that tonight."

The Presidents used an aggressive team defensive scheme to knock off No. 13 Durfee 48-40 in the first round and then shook up the bracket with a 50-44 upset of No. 4 Wellesley on the road in the quarterfinals to set up last Tuesday's semifinal matchup with top-ranked Franklin.

The Panthers were the heavy favorites but the Presidents came out swinging in front of a large contingent of Quincy fans. Paced by six quick points from senior Kiley McDonald (18 points), the Presidents raced out to a 7-6 lead. Franklin battled through the Presidents' half-court, man-to-man defense to retake the lead at 8-7, but senior Juli Tomer (13 points) sank a 3-pointer to give Quincy back a 10-8 advantage.

The teams traded baskets late in the first quarter with McDonald and Lowry finding space down low. Franklin's Kristi Kirshe gave her team a one-point lead (15-14) with 22 seconds left in the quarter, but sophomore Kayla McArdle beat the clock with a pretty 10-foot banker to give the Presidents a 16-15 lead at the end of one.

Lamie (nine points) extended the lead to 17-15 with a free throw, but Kirshe tied it with two freebies of her own. McDonald continued her first-half scoring spree with a put-back (19-17) and Franklin's Kaitlin Copponi put the Panthers ahead 21-19 with a jumper and free throw. Tomer drove the paint and was fouled on Quincy's next possession; her two free throws brought the Presidents back to even at 21-21 with five minutes left in the quarter.

Two Franklin free throws – the Panthers finished a remarkable 20-for-22 from the charity stripe – and a Lamie elbow jumper kept it tied at 23-23, but the Panthers used a 4-0 run to grab a 27-23 lead with three minutes left in the half.

However, Quincy showed its mettle with a 10-0 scoring binge, which was highlighted by another Lamie 3-pointer and two 3-pointers and a free throw from Tomer as the Presidents took a surprising 33-27 lead into the break.

Tomer built the Quincy lead to 35-27 with a free throw to open the second half.

Then the Presidents hit a scoring drought and Franklin capitalized. The Panthers outscored Quincy 7-2 over the next three minutes to slice the lead from 35-27 to 37-35.

But the Presidents got right back on track. McArdle started a 5-2 run with a soft floater (39-35). McDonald's lay-up made it 41-37 and after Lowry drained a 3-pointer, Quincy held a 44-37 lead to the delight of a pumped up Quincy fan base.

Franklin scored the next four points (44-41) as Quincy turned the ball over on consecutive possessions. But another Lamie 3-pointer made it 47-41 and, after McArdle fought for a contested bucket the Presidents led 49-41 late in the third.

And then Quincy went cold, offensively. Over the next nine minutes – the final minute of the third and the last eight minutes of the fourth – Franklin outscored the Presidents 16-4.

The run began with a 9-0 scoring spree that brought Franklin from down 49-41 to up 50-49 in the fourth quarter. McDonald gave Quincy a 51-50 lead on the next Presidents' possession, but Franklin took the next three points for a 53-51 advantage.

With time winding down, McDonald cleared out space and tied the game at 53. Franklin, with under a minute remaining in regulation, could not get a decent shot off and Quincy got the ball back with a chance to take the lead. Tomer brought the ball to midcourt and seemed to get bumped by the Panthers' Catie Phelan. Instead of a blocking call on Franklin, the sideline referee called Tomer for a travel, giving the ball back to the Panthers.

Phelan broke the late-game deadlock with an acrobatic runner in the lane with just 29 seconds on the game clock, forcing Bretsch to call a timeout. Quincy got two decent looks but it just wouldn't go down. Two Franklin free throws closed out the scoring.

"We turned the ball over a fair number of times (in the second half)," said Bretsch. "Franklin was tough and they never quit with their aggression all night. The story was the turnovers in the second half. We broke it in the first half and then we got a little sloppy in the second half. We also had a number of fast breaks that didn't go our way. We just weren't able to finish them and that hurt us a little."

While untimely turnovers, missed scoring opportunities and questionable calls by the officials made things difficult in the second half for the Presidents, an important subplot was the performance of Quincy and Franklin at the free throw line.

The Presidents made just 4-of-14 free throws. Franklin on the other hand couldn't miss. The Panthers made 20-of-22 from the line.

"We missed a ton of free throws tonight and they were unbelievable from the free throw line, give them credit,"

Bretsch said. "That is the game right there. In a game like this to come out and make 90% is unbelievable. Hats off to them."

This loss is going to sting, as it should. Quincy will be back but the landscape is going to be completely different when they do. The Presidents say goodbye to a senior class that just went 35-9 over the past two seasons.

Replacing the leadership, experience and know-how of Kiley McDonald, Nicole Lamie, Caity Lowry, Juli Tomer, Emily Nguyen, and Maria Berberan will not be possible.

"They are an unbelievable group of girls; they are class all the way," a reflective Bretsch said about his seniors. "I have never coached a finer group of individuals. They believe in themselves and they believe in each other. They trust in their coaches and try to do the right thing."

"They are all heart, you can just see it out there (on the court). They are a group that was just so focused on what matters, not on all that other nonsense. I am going to miss those seniors like crazy."

JULI TOMER connects on a 3-pointer in the first half of Quincy's season-ending 57-53 loss to top-ranked Franklin. The Presidents led 49-41 late in the third quarter but saw Franklin use a 16-4 run to end the game.

KILEY McDONALD (#34) defends the basket versus Franklin. McDonald finished with a team-high 18 points for the Presidents.

Red Raiders Lost To Hornets, 5-3; Finish Season At 13-6-4 Mansfield Ices North Quincy In Division 2 South Semifinals

By ALAN McCALL

The last time the North Quincy boys hockey team lost a game, it was mired in a mid-season slump, not sure of where its season was going or if it would make it to post-season. Then the Red Raiders went on an eleven game streak with out a loss (10-0-1) on their way to a Patriot League co-championship and two exciting Division 2 South state tournament wins.

North Quincy was up 3-2 on Mansfield and was 3:26 away from extending that streak to twelve games in the Division 2 South semifinals.

Enter the Eric Foley show.

The freshman phenom from Mansfield showed why he is considered one of the top players in Eastern Mass by scoring twice and assisting on another goal in the final four minutes of the game as the Hornets rallied to sting North Quincy 5-3 on Friday night at Gallo Ice Arena in Bourne.

Mansfield advanced to Sunday's Division 2 finals on Sunday where the Hornets were eliminated by Hockomock League rival Franklin, 5-2. The Panthers will play North champ Wilmington on Sunday at the TD Garden for the state title.

"That kid number six (Foley) is an exceptional player," praised North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons. "He just took over and made the plays that they needed."

With North Quincy leading late in the third period, Foley collected the puck behind the Red Raiders net and cleverly bounced the puck off the back of the leg on North Quincy goaltender James Dunn and into the goal to tie the game at 3-3 with 3:26 to play. Mansfield (15-4-3), which twice trailed by two goals, completed the comeback as Foley fed teammate Jason Collins at the left point; Collins' wrist shot was deflected in front of a screened Dunn to give the Hornets their first lead of the contest (4-3) with 1:22 to play in the game.

Foley put the game on ice for Mansfield with an empty net goal in the final seconds.

After an evenly played first thirteen minutes of the game, North Quincy (13-6-4) suddenly struck with two goals just fifteen seconds apart in the final two minutes for a 2-0 lead at the end of the first period. Nick McGaughey started the scoring by winning possession of the puck in the far right corner then skating along the goal line and tucking the disc under Mansfield goalie Rich Shipman to the short side with 1:24 remaining on the clock. Tommy O'Brien was credited with an assist on the goal. The Red Raiders doubled the advantage on their next trip down, after Shawn Grady found space between the circles and tested Shipman with a low shot to the lower left corner of the cage. The junior net minder was able to get his pad on the puck, but left a juicy rebound for Andrew Currie, who poked the puck into the wide-open right side with 1:09 to play in the period.

The all-important next goal of the game would go Mansfield's way, as the Hornets cut the lead to 2-1 just 1:12 into the second period. Brendan Murphy led a two-on-one break and was able to draw the defender far enough away to be able to slide a perfect pass to Kevin Flynn, who redirected the puck between Dunn's pads.

Less the three minutes later, North Quincy restored its two-goal lead on a brilliant play by Grady. The junior team leader in points this season took a feed in the left slot. Rather than taking a quick shot on goal, he held the puck to take the defender and Shipman out of position before placing a no-look backhand pass to the opposite side of the net to Pat Verhault, who beat Shipman to the top right corner.

Mansfield came out aggressively in the third period and had several chances early, but Dunn was able to maintain the two-goal lead until the final 3:24. "We were expecting them (Mansfield) to come at us in the third period and we withstood the pressure for most of the period," said Gibbons. "Seeing that tying goal by them go in was a back breaker, but there was still over three minutes to play so we just tried to settle the kids down and go out there and try to get the winning goal. They got the big goal, and we didn't. We had two power play opportunities late in the third period and a chance to end the game, but it didn't happen."

With the sting of defeat still very fresh, the coach gave credit to his team. "I could not be prouder of my players," said Gibbons. "Nobody gave us a chance to get this far in the tournament and here we were just three minutes away from a chance to play in the Boston Garden."

Farewell to the Senior Class

The turnaround from a team that used to be a post-season afterthought to one that seriously challenged for a spot in the Division 2 state final is in large part due to the performance and leadership of the senior class.

North Quincy says goodbye to seniors Colin Kulig, PJ Gorman, Nick Furey, Tommy O'Brien, Michael Adduci, Tim Marks, Davy O'Connell and James Dunn.

Foundation Is Solid

The Red Raiders will have a difficult time replacing the production of skaters like Dunn, Marks, Furey, O'Brien, Adduci, O'Connell, Gorman and Kulig, but the core of returning players should keep North Quincy in contention for another deep playoff run next season.

North Quincy was eliminated from the post-season for a third consecutive year by a member of the Hockomock League. Previous to 2012, the Red Raiders were knocked out the past two years by Franklin.

Fundraiser March 24 at J.J. Foley's Café in Boston

Patrick Foley Running For Soldiers Overseas

By EMILY TAFT

Quincy resident Patrick Foley will be running for soldiers overseas in his seventh Boston Marathon on April 16th. Foley is running and raising money for the non-profit organization CarePacks, and at the age of 29, he hopes to be crossing the finish line for the sixth time.

After his younger brother Jeremiah joined the United States Marine Corps, during his senior year of college, Foley decided it was time to start running for a cause.

"I said, well my younger brother is doing something incredible, I need to do something to help," said Foley. "My mom had attending a CarePacks drive shortly after he had joined, when she came home from the drive she told me all about it. That's when it really kicked in for me and I decided to run for the organization."

Since that day four years ago Foley, along with the help of his parents and seven siblings, have raised over $67,000 for CarePacks.

"It was a way for all of us to help. The men and women overseas deserve these care packages," said Foley. "In a way we turned something that could have been a rough couple of years with Jeremiah being deployed into some positive energy."

The organization is dedicated to sending care packages to U.S. troops in Iraq and Afghanistan. It was founded in 2004 and their goal is to provide soldiers with supplies to help improve their morale, mental health, and quality of life, but also to remind them that people remember them back home. The packages contain food, undergarments, books, and magazines, among other things. Each package also contains a letter or card from a child, so that the soldier who receives it has a personal connection to someone in the United States.

Foley's fundraising has developed over the four years since he started. During his first year he raised $25,000 by just mailing out letters and reaching out to friends and family. The second year Foley decided to hold a fundraiser that continues now each year. The fundraiser, held at J.J. Foley's Café in Boston on March 24th from 7:00 p.m. to 2 a.m., offers those in attendance a chance to bid in a silent auction, win raffle prizes, and enjoy music and food. Last year Foley said they had around 55 raffle prizes and hope to have even more this year.

PATRICK FOLEY is running in the 116th Boston Marathon on April 16. Foley is running again this year in support of CarePacks.

"There are a lot of us hustling around trying to get as much as possible," said Foley. "I have been studying for the bar so my family has been doing the leg work, but now it is the fourth quarter and I have to make things happen."

Foley said that the event has something for everyone, from tickets to sporting events to hair salons and hotel stays, and much more in between. He added that the event is growing again this year and people are continuing to donate even with the tough economy.

The goal for this year is to raise $33,000 to make the total they have raised for all four years $100,000. Foley believes that their fundraising amounts are at the same level as groups of runners raising money together for one organization.

"It is a sign of hard work and dedication that we are right up there with the top guys," said Foley. "Everyone in my family does a little something to help out. I am blessed to be around such good people and have such a tight group when it comes to my family."

Even though last year Foley was unable to finish the race, due to an injury and dehydration, he is confident that he will finish this year and said that if anything it motivates him that much more knowing he was unable to finish last year.

"I was disappointed that I only had a half mile to the finish line last year and was unable to do it," said Foley. "Everything happens for a reason, and as soon as all that had happened, I knew I wanted to do it again this year."

The one thing that motivates Foley when it comes to certain hard points in the 26.2-mile marathon is the fact that he is doing this for a cause that hits close to home.

"There are a lot of things that motivate me to do this but most of all is that I am doing this for the troops overseas," said Foley. "I am especially doing this for the city of Quincy and those kids who are 18 that enlist. It speaks volumes about the unselfishness of the people in this city."

Rick Beach Onboard As New Head Coach

Morrisette Jr. Legion Team To Begin This Year

By SEAN BRENNAN

The success of the Morrisette Post 294 Senior American Legion baseball team last summer – that team advanced to the state finals for the first time since 1995 – brought on a new era of baseball in Quincy.

As was the case last year, Morrisette will again be the only Senior American Legion team in the city when the 2012 season begins in mid-June. However, the opportunity for local ballplayers to get involved with Legion Baseball this year has expanded with the newly formed Morrisette Junior American Legion team.

The junior program will offer youngsters between the ages of 15-17 the opportunity to play against some of the best junior talent from District 6 East. The program is also expected to become the feeder system for the Morrisette Senior Legion team, preparing players who may not yet have what it takes to compete at the highest level of legion baseball.

"This will be the first of many years for a Morrisette Junior Legion team here in Quincy," said Senior Legion Manager Steve Maze last Friday. "It is a baseball program for kids ages 15-17 who may be a year or two away from Senior Legion to play baseball at the legion level."

"This is also an opportunity for (Morrisette) to build a feeder system," continued Maze. "This team will follow the same rules and regulations as the senior team. And it will be run under the same system the we use at the senior level."

The Junior Legion program is for ballplayers who have playing high-level baseball as a top priority. As Maze said, the team will be an extension of the Senior Legion program.

"It is very important for Morrisette to develop as a program," Maze said. "This is for the kids in Quincy who are serious about baseball. We are excited about it. Junior Legion is the way baseball is going in the area."

"The junior team will play whenever there are fields and times available," continued Maze. "When we can practice together (senior and junior teams), we will. This level of competition is going to be similar to AAU."

The Morrisette Junior Legion team will be coached by Rick Beach. The current varsity baseball coach at Randolph High School, Beach has been involved with the sport in Quincy for years. Last summer Beach was the coach of the Quincy Youth Baseball Junior League team that advanced all the way into the 2011 Junior League Eastern Regional in New Jersey.

"We wanted a coach that was baseball first," explained Maze about the selection of Beach as the new Junior Legion coach, "and who had a knowledge of the younger ballplayers in Quincy. Rick is well respected in the baseball community and he is on-board with coaching the team under the Morrisette rules."

For Beach, accepting the position was a no-brainer.

"(Morrisette) is a good organization," he said. "You want the younger kids to step up and play a more challenging form of baseball. I have coached this next group of Quincy ballplayers since they were nine. They are a great group of kids and, very talented. I think the Junior Legion program is a great idea."

Tryouts for Junior Legion will coincide with the tryouts for Senior Legion. Morrisette Legion will begin its tryout process at O'Rourke Field beginning the first weekend in May.

Senior Legion will select 18 players while Junior Legion will take 15. Three players will be allowed to be double rostered between the two programs.

"Anyone who wants to play Junior Legion has to try-out with Senior Legion when tryouts start in May," Maze noted. "Our senior team will have 18 players and our junior team will roster 15. Three players will be able to play for both the senior team and the junior team."

Note: Last month, The Quincy Sun reported that Quincy Legion Post 95 was searching for a head coach for a Junior Legion team they had hoped to start up this summer. However, since then Post 95 had decided to hold off on starting a team in Quincy this year. Morrisette Legion will be the only legion baseball program – both Junior and Senior – in the city in 2012.

Half Marathon March 18

The third edition of The Half of Quincy, Historic Quincy's Half Marathon, as featured in Runner's World Magazine the bible for all things running, will take place Sunday, March 18.

This great community event is a marriage of a city's historic significance and its embrace of healthy, recreational activity. The City of Presidents, sits on Boston's southern border, nestled along the Atlantic, it's regarded as the gateway to Massachusetts' South Shore. The city has many road racing opportunities, not the least of which is the Squantum 5 Race of Champions held annually the last Thursday in June, on its roster of fun, healthy and competitive road racing events. The Half Marathon, previously missing from the line up is a welcome addition to the city.

The race will give runners a unique opportunity to cruise Quincy while testing their fitness level for the 13.1-mile trek. Starting at the newly minted Quincy High School just outside Quincy Square, the race travels by Mount Wollaston Cemetery through Merrymount along Wollaston Beach, around the Squantum Peninsula and Marina Bay, along the Neponset River by the State Street South Complex, through Montclair, Wollaston, West Quincy on Adams Street by the Adams National Historic Park and back to the High School through Quincy Square, passing by Quincy City Hall, The Hancock Cemetery and United First Parish Church, final resting place of the two presidents.

The race is in good position to provide a time trial to all those taking on the Boston Marathon on April 16. The race is enthusiastically welcomed by the city and will generate funds for the running programs at the two high schools and four middle schools in the city as well as the Quincy Track Club, The South Shore YMCA and The Dana Farber Marathon Challenge.

Runners receive technical shirts specifically designed for the race by Keezer Sportswear and will be hosted by Quincy High School with registration and number pick-up in the school's gymnasium with bag drop off and pick up after the race as well. Pre-race registration and pick-up is available at the South Shore YMCA on Saturday the 17th from 10-12. Post race replenishment in the cafeteria is provided by the culinary arts program at QHS. Members of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce restaurant league are offering special discounts to the runners as well.

Mite A's Capture Cape Cod Tournament Championship

The Quincy Mite "A" team is the 2012 Lower Cape Cod Classic Hockey Tournament Champions.

The 10th annual tournament was held in Orleans during the weekend of March 2-4. Quincy got off to a fast start with a big win over the Hetland Panthers by a score of 7-0. The victory was powered by a hat trick for Ben Wines and one goal each by Kevin Salmanowich, Cooper Hernon, Charlie Maher and Brett Collins. Assisting on those goals were Ty DeGust, Daniel Bellotti, Michael Gorman, Timmy Kelly and Barry Page. Brody DeGust had a great game in net to secure the shutout.

The following day, Quincy continued with a high-powered offense display by beating the Coastal Stars "A" 9-4. Quincy continued with a strong first period putting in six quick goals. Salmanowich had a four-point night (3 goals, 1 assist), followed by Ben Wines with two goals and an assist. Sam Stone kicked in with a goal and an assist while Asher Wines, Page and Maher had a goal each. Brody DeGust had his second straight win in goal.

Already securing a spot in the championship with a record of 2-0, Quincy played their eventual finals opponent Reading "A" in the next contest. It was a physical game with nine penalties being called. Asher Wines played fantastic in net, but Reading played hard and won the game 9-2.

The championship game was expected to be a tighter match between Quincy and Reading. Quincy went back to DeGust in the net and their normal lines to match up against Reading's offense. Reading got out to a first period lead of 2-1.

Hernon had the goal, assisted by Maher and Lucas Hooley.

The Quincy defense

stepped up their game the rest of the way lead by Michael Richardson, James Hooley, Collins and Gorman and Quincy tied the game 3-3 after two periods with goals from Hernon and Salmanowich.

The third period was rough with a total of six penalties called but eventually Quincy broke the tie with a goal from James Hooley assisted by Salmanowich. Quincy extended the lead to two with a goal from Stone and another assist from Salmanowich.

Reading came back with a goal to cut the lead down to one and then pulled their goalie with over a minute left in the game.

Quincy needed every save from DeGust and timely plays by Richardson, Collins and Gorman in the defensive zone to keep the lead. Salmanowich put in the empty netter with 12 seconds remaining to secure the title with a 6-4 win.

THE QUINCY MITE A's recently won the Lower Cape Cod Classic Hockey Tournament March 2-4 in Orleans. Quincy defeated Reading 6-4 in the championship game. The Mite A's are an affiliation of Quincy Youth Hockey. Team members included Ben Wines, Kevin Salmanowich, Cooper Hernon, Charlie Maher, Brett Collins, Ty DeGust, Daniel Bellotti, Michael Gorman, Timmy Kelly, Barry Page, Brody DeGust, Sam Stone, Asher Wines, Michael Richardson, Lucas Hooley and James Hooley. Ralph Richardson coached the team.

Tom Maloney and Pat Maloney coached the team.

powered by a stronger defense and excellent goaltending, only 11 goals in 22 games. Quincy's hopes rested on Thomas Richardson having a great game in net and capitalizing on any scoring chances.

Dedham started the game strong with a 2-0 lead at the end of the first period. Matt Keohane started the Quincy scoring with a goal in the second and Griffin Batson added the tying goal in the middle of the period off an assist from Kieran O'Driscoll.

Dedham retook the lead with a goal early in the third period, but the Quincy defense settled in for the remainder of the game. Timely defensive plays from Colin MacDonald, Jack O'Brien, Rhys Foster and Ronan Hurley kept Quincy in the game.

Keohane's second goal of the game tied it at 3-3 and with 1:46 remaining in regulation O'Driscoll scored the game-winner assisted by Keohane.

Richardson did the job in goal down the stretch to secure the 4-3 title victory as Quincy played a man down for the final 43 seconds.

In the league semifinal round on Saturday, Quincy fell behind Hyde Park A 1-0 in the first period, but came roaring back. Quincy first goal was scored by Keohane unassisted. John Riley added another goal off an assist from Bobby Dunn and Liam Foster later in the period as Quincy took a 2-1 lead into the second.

In the second period, Quincy took a two-goal lead on a goal from Aiden Mc-Donnell with a helper from Batson. Aggressive plays by Daniel O'Leary, Tommy Page, Tom MacPherson and Foster never allowed Hyde Park's offense to get going.

Quincy was able to seal the 5-1 win in the third period with unassisted goals from O'Driscoll and Will Scola.

Tom Maloney and Pat Maloney coached the Quincy Squirt A's.

Norfolk County Sheriff's Summer Youth Academy Registration March 19

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti's summer Youth Leadership Academy returns this year, and registration for the extremely popular program will begin March 19.

This year for the first time, the registration process will take place online. Interested families should visit the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office website at www.norfolksheriff.com for complete information. The online registration form will be available as of March 19.

People with questions may email them to youth@norfolksheriffma.org or call 781-751-3501.

Also for the first time this year, there will be a $75 per-child fee to attend the academy in order to help defray the cost of the program. The fee is reduced to $25 for children who qualify for school lunch assistance programs.

"Every year, we receive fantastic feedback from parents and kids about how much they like the Youth Leadership Academy," Sheriff Bellotti said. "The academy is designed so that kids learn important life lessons while having fun at the same time."

The academy, which is open to children ages 10-14 that live in Norfolk County, is centered on the aerial ropes course at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Braintree Public Safety Complex. Specially trained instructors use the course to teach teamwork and build confidence and accomplish feats they never thought possible.

The academy also includes anti-bullying presentations, instruction of fire safety and demonstrations from one of Sheriff Bellotti's K-9 units.

The academy will be held in seven separate Monday-through-Friday sessions, beginning July 2 (the first session is only four days because of the July 4 holiday) and ending Aug. 17. Each session is capped off by an awards and graduation ceremony and family cookout.

"We look forward to seeing new faces and familiar faces at the academy this summer," Sheriff Bellotti added. "The kids have so much fun, they barely realize how much they are learning."

QUINCY COLLEGE Offices of the president and vice presidents will be located on the seventh floor in the North Tower of Presidents Place, Quincy Center. The large empty room will be home to a boardroom, the president's office along with three vice presidents' offices.

Quincy College Moving To Presidents Place

will be used for a variety of subjects. Students who are studying nursing will be moving from Temple Hall to the fourth floor of Presidents Place as of the beginning of the new school year, according to Tsaffaras.

Most of the floors and areas the college is taking over will be remodeled and made into classrooms. They have been gutted and are awaiting construction. The classrooms on the basement floor have windows cut into the rooms looking out into the halls to give the illusion that you aren't in a basement, but also for emergency and security purposes. According to Bill Hall, Director of Campus Services and Facilities, all classrooms will be equipped with a phone for emergency calls.

Tsaffaras said the college will take most of the basement, most of the first floor, all of the third and fourth floor, part of the fifth floor, and a small part of the seventh floor, which is where the president, and the three vice presidents' offices will be, along with a board room.

Tsaffaras said the new location has its benefits. He noted students will be able to enjoy everything in mainly one location, and the commute will be a little easier.

"This is a great opportunity for the college and when it is all finished it will be wonderful," said Tsaffaras. "It is going to all be close to the T-station and there will be parking available behind the campus."

The college, founded in 1958, also holds courses at their Plymouth campus, and is home to approximately 4,000 students. They offer 32 associate degree programs and 11 certificate programs in a variety of disciplines, including those within Business and Public Service, Liberal Arts, Natural and Health Sciences and Nursing.

"Our student body is growing quickly, along with our staff," said Tsaffaras. "In the last year alone we have increased our faculty by 21 percent."

Tsaffaras and Boyle said that the campus is becoming a place where students from all over want to come and learn.

"Our highest percentage of students are Quincy residents," said Boyle. "We are becoming a destination campus, where students are taking all types of transportation because they want to come here to learn. Our focus is on teaching and learning one student at a time."

A Bronze Star recipient was honored at Quincy's 17th annual St. Patrick's Day Celebration. Bill O'Brien, a Hospital Hill resident and lieutenant colonel in the Massachusetts Army National Guard received a special commendation at Friday's event.

The 46-year-old O'Brien, a Quincy native who attended the Montclair School, is a lieutenant colonel in the Massachusetts Army National Guard. He returned from Afghanistan in February after serving a yearlong tour of duty in the country. The commendation he received Friday came as a complete surprise to O'Brien — he planned on attending the event at the Elks Lodge but didn't know he was going to be honored.

"It was awesome, I was really surprised," O'Brien said in a phone interview Monday. "For all I knew I was part of the roast when they called me up."

$18M Bond Issue For Old City Hall, Coddington School

By SCOTT JACKSON

Old City Hall (officially the James R. McIntyre Government Center) and the Coddington School could soon be getting an $18 million overhaul.

Mayor Tom Koch submitted a bond request to pay for the restorations at Monday's City Council meeting. Old City Hall would be used for public meeting space and the Coddington School would be used to house the School Committee and the School Department.

A major goal of the restoration, according to Mayoral Spokesman Chris Walker, is to consolidate city offices onto city owned property and stop paying to lease office space.

The City Clerk's office — which would be moved to the New City Hall building — is currently housed in the Munroe Building across McIntyre Mall from City Hall. The school de-

The Houghs Neck Community Council and Life Community Church of Quincy invites the public to attend a drug and alcohol abuse awareness program Sunday, March 25 from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy.

The evening will focus on the drug and alcohol abuse epidemic in the local community.

one who thinks, it can't happen in their neighborhood or in their family are fooling themselves. It can and it will if you are not aware and prepared."

The night will consist of personal stories from families that have been affected, presentations from local organizations, as well as free pizza and child care for all those in attendance.

In addition, Life Community Church will be flying in key note speaker Vivian Winters. Winters is the Wing Director of Psychological Health at the 179th Air National Guard Unit and adjunct faculty in the Human Service program at NC State College. She holds a Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Cincinnati and a Master of Social Work from The Ohio State University.

She is licensed in the State of Ohio as a Licensed Independent Social Worker and Chemical Dependency Counselor.

Before assuming the position at the 179th, Winters was the Adult Program Director for an agency that serves approximately 5,000 individuals a year who experience abuse/addiction and mental health illness.

She lives in Richland County which has one of largest rates of opiate use in the nation.

Organizers said the event was started in the hope that through creating awareness the people of Quincy would work together to make their neighborhoods a safer place.

"Through awareness we feel we can beat the odds and make sure that Houghs Neck as well as any other neighborhood in Quincy is not going to be another statewide statistic," said Houghs Neck Community Council president Jim McCarthy. "That's why we are hosting this event."

Raising Children With Challenging Behaviors Topic

"Come To Think of It," a parent-to-parent information and support group for those raising children with challenging behaviors, will meet Tuesday, March 27 at 6:30 p.m. at Christ Church, 12 Quincy Ave.

The discussion will be moderated by Linda Perry, a ThinkKids Certified Mentor.

Challenging behavior has traditionally been thought of as willful and goal oriented, which has led to approaches that focus on motivating better behavior using reward and punishment programs.

The discussion is geared towards parents who have tried these strategies and they have not worked.

Come to Think of It utilizes strategies aligned with the Collaborative Problem Solving Approach, which provides a new way of understanding and helping kids who struggle with behavioral challenges.

For more information, contact Linda Perry at lperry0181@comcast.net.

Lawsuit Not Expected To Impact Central Construction

By SCOTT JACKSON

A federal lawsuit filed over Quincy's 2010 "responsible employer ordinance" isn't expected to adversely affect the city's construction of the new Central Middle School.

The lawsuit filed by the Merit Construction Alliance contends the ordinance's requirement that one-third of workers be Quincy residents is unconstitutional, according to City Solicitor Jim Timmins, as it violates the U.S. Constitution's "privileges and immunities" clause, which prevents a state from discriminating against residents of another state.

The group also claims another requirement in the ordinance, mandating workers receive healthcare, is in violation of the Federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA), which doesn't mandate healthcare for employees. Under federal law, a local ordinance or state law can't pre-empt a federal act.

Timmins was asked to comment on the lawsuit and its implications at Monday's City Council meeting. The suit was filed last Monday and a preliminary hearing was set for Wednesday. Rya Zobel, the judge presiding over the case, could issue an injunction at the hearing, which would bar the city from enforcing the ordinance. But Timmins said the Central Middle School project won't be sidetracked if that happens.

"We were aware that this was flowing around out there and that it was coming," Timmins said. "We have a built-in time buffer and it's not going to adversely impact — we hope — the flow of the project."

Timmins also added the process would only take a couple weeks to re-open bids if the injunction is granted.

The lawsuit filed by Merit after a similar one by the Utility Contractors' Association of New England (UCANE) over a similar Fall River ordinance. Fall River lost that case, which was also presided over by Zobel. Timmins said that Quincy has a stronger argument than Fall River because it will show Zobel why the ordinance was enacted.

"What Fall River did was they told the judge we're not going to enforce it," Timmins said after the meeting. "So when they went to court in that court case, they didn't give any explanation about why they enacted the ordinance and why it was good. So the judge never analyzed that about Fall River — that was the problem. Quincy has some reasons for why we enacted the ordinance and we're going to put that in play with the judge and see what she thinks of it."

'Restoring Quincy's Town Clock And Bell Topic

Architect and Historical Society president James Edwards and antique clock expert Les Tyralla will give an illustrated presentation on their recent restoration project of the clock and bell in the tower of Quincy's United First Parish Church, at the next Quincy Historical Society program, Wednesday March 28, at 7:30 PM in the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

Although located in the tower of the Church of the Presidents, the bell and clock are the property of the City of Quincy and were intended historically to mark the passage of the day and, for the bell, to mark events of significance or to alert for emergencies such as fire. In the case of the bell, this function extends back more than two and a half centuries; for the clock, more than a century and a half. Both clock and bell had fallen on hard times, when the City determined to undertake a restoration in conjunction with the Church's own tower restoration project.

The presentation by Edwards and Tyralla will take the audience through the whole story of the restoration and will feature some spectacular photos detailing all the steps in the process.

Everyone is welcome to attend. Admission is free.

Special Ed Subcommittee To Meet

Subcommittee members include Chairperson Anne Mahoney, Dave McCarthy and Paul Bregoli.

Parents and guardians of children with special needs are welcomed to attend to keep abreast of special concerns.

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible?

This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 15-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard, VP/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750. Or apply online at colonialfed.com. (Have another loan or term in mind? Rev. Sheldon Bennett Bidding UFPC Farewell

When the Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, Ph.D., began his ministry at United First Parish Church in December, 1986, he soon realized the historic building needed a lot of work.

Now, 25 years later, much of that restoration work is complete.

And Dr. Bennett believes his work at the church is done, too.

Rev. Bennett, who was installed as the church's 22nd minister Jan. 11, 1987, will officially retire June 17.

"It just seems like the right time to begin a new chapter of my life," says Rev. Bennett, who celebrated his 70th birthday Feb. 25.

The church is planning a public celebration of Rev. Bennett's ministry Sunday, April 1 at 4 p.m. at the church. There will be a number of community leaders and colleagues offering remarks at the church.

Among those scheduled to speak is the Rev. John Buehrens, minister of First Parish Church of Needham and former president of the Unitarian-Universalist Association.

Rev. Bennett's ministry had been progressive, innovative, inspiring and challenging.

He has been active as a leader in support and advocacy of community programs, dealing with substance abuse, human rights, support for gay and lesbian youth, civil rights for bisexual, gay, lesbian and transgender people; marriage equality, domestic violence, homelessness, affordable housing, inclusionary zoning, and No Place for Hate.

During his ministry, United First Parish Church became a founding member of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization, hosts the Prison Book Program, conducts English as a Second Language program, and holds peace vigils in times of war.

One of his proudest achievements is helping transition the congregation from an aging, venerable demographic to a younger, more contemporary group. In early 1987, there were about 186 members but many of those people were retired or lived out-of-state. Some were in nursing homes. About 35 attended worship on a Sunday.

Today, the active membership is about 150, including children. Of the present congregation, only six were members when Rev. Bennett began his ministry.

"Over my ministry, the congregation has evolved. It's become younger, it's more contemporary in its interests," Rev. Bennett said during a recent interview. "Given the size of the congregation, we've had a very strong public advocacy ministry for various progressive social programs here in Quincy such as affordable housing.

"We've had public vigils for peace. It's been a place for people with progressive social views to gather for various things including marriage equality."

In 1988, the church partnered with the City of Quincy and Quincy Public Schools to organize the first citywide Martin Luther King, Jr. breakfast. It's also been a strong supporter of affordable housing in Quincy. Today, there are about 100 such units scattered throughout the city.

Major church events have happened during Rev. Bennett's ministry. One of the more notable is the $1.7 million restoration of the roof and sanctuary in 1999 and 2000. The major component of the work was installing 16 new roof trusses because the pine trusses had weakened to the point that engineers said the roof would collapse from the weight of one more heavy snowfall.

The money also helped renovate the ceiling, new interior paint, carpeting and window work.

To fund the project, that congregation made a unanimous decision in 2001 to auction off 11 pieces of colonial silver dating back to the 1600s. The original owners were members of the church.

The most expensive piece of silver was a wine cup given by Richard and Alice Brackett, early members of the community who had come from Boston in 1642. Richard Brackett was a deacon of the church and he and his wife gave the cup to the church.

The cup sold for $700,00 at auction.

But not all the silver left Quincy.

Local attorney and former Norfolk County district attorney George Burke stepped up to the auction plate in a big way. Burke submitted bids by telephone for a silver tankard that was produced after the death of Colonel John Quincy for whom the city is named. John Quincy — who also served as speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives from 1729 to 1741 — left money in his will to produce the tankard. It was crafted by Daniel Henchman, a Boston silversmith.

Sotheby's estimated the tankard would sell for between $30,000 and $50,000.

But the bidding escalated. Burke's final bid of approximately $200,000 was the winner. The tankard is on loan to the city and is on display in City Hall. Burke has provided in his will to gift the tankard to the city.

In all, the auction raised $2.7 million for the church. Besides financing the restoration, the auction proceeds also left the church with a sizable endowment.

Selling the silver wasn't an easy decision but Rev. Bennett and the congregation determined it was the right decision.

"We spent a lot of time — about a year — talking about that. We discussed it within the congregation and we finally had a meeting of the congregation. It was a unanimous decision. But there were strong feelings about it,"

Rev. Bennett said.

"We really didn't know how much work the church required," he continued. "We had people who came in and pointed things out and told us the work would cost about $2 million. So we figured we needed to raise about $3 million. We didn't have a clue on how to do that. We started talking about it and we finally decided to sell the silver.

"We knew the collection was worth $1 million but we weren't sure how much more."

Rev. Bennett said the silver auction was a "big event in the life of the church."

"The discussion was that these pieces of silver had been given by members of the church over the period of a hundred years or so and it was an asset to the church to support the church. They may or may not have been used regularly for communion. They were household kind of items — tankards, cups, beakers — but they were nicely done.

"They left it to the church to support the church and here the church was in need and by selling the silver we kind of converted that asset that was lying dormant in a bank vault to assure the on-going life and ministry of the congregation and the church building.

"The question we put forth was: 'are we a museum or are we a living church congregation? And we are a

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1915 postcard was published when granite quarrying was still an important Quincy industry. This view of Swingles Quarry when it was at a depth of 225 feet shows how dangerous the work was particularly in bad weather. Note the precariously placed ladders. Swingles Quarry was open for over 100 hundred years and was the last working quarry in Quincy when it shut down operations in 1963. By that time, it had reached a depth of 350 feet, 200 of it below sea level. After it closed, it became known as a notoriously dangerous swimming hole and 10 years ago the quarry was filled with dirt from the Ted Williams Tunnel. The granite from this quarry was known as Swingles Extra-dark. It was named for its owner, Jonathan S. Swingle, who was widely known as the "Standard Bearer" of Quincy granite. The near black and very hard stone was perhaps the most prized of the seven shades of granite quarried throughout Quincy. Large pieces of it were difficult to extract from the quarry, but two fine examples that can be seen locally are the Granite Gazing Ball at City Hall and Jonathan Swingles' gravestone on Greenleaf Street in Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Austin Calls For Programs City Can Afford

City Councillor Edna B. Austin, chairwoman of the Finance Committee, called for the adoption of a five-year capital improvements program for the city based on what Quincy can afford rather than what it wants.

"The city of Quincy is in a jam, a financial jam, caused largely by the big school construction program," she said.

"Our first stop must be to find out just how much money the city has to spend on new improvements for the next five years and then to get a clear picture of just what improvements are needed and their relative necessity."

Mrs. Austin noted that the city has a borrowing capacity of about $5 million and that much is committed to the proposed school construction program. The city has a list of other projects that would cost about $4 million.

"In the face of these figures," she said, "it is obvious that we have to make some drastic decisions. We certainly can't buy $9 million worth of improvements when we have only $5 million to spend."

YARD STICKS TO SHIPS

General Manager Sam Wakeman of the Fore River Shipyard told members of the Boston Propeller Club that the Bethlehem Steel Company will not consider any other type of work for the yard until all hope is abandoned of obtaining more ship contracts.

He said the new planer-milling machine at the yard, one of the two largest of its type in the world, is evidence that management has faith in the future of shipbuilding. There are also plans, he said, to modernize the yard.

City Manager William Deegan told the Quincy Lions Club that taxpayers are facing a $2 to $3 tax increase in 1955 and a $1.50 hike in each of 1956 and 1957, adding that the city is "up against a financial wall."

Doubts Progress On The Downtown

It's really great when a nobody tells Beal/Street Works they do not have to honor the contract that states they have to pay a penalty of $25,000 if they miss any more benchmarks.

How many cooks are in the kitchen with the mayor and the city council? I want to know who gave Mr. Hines the power to make such a dumb statement it's all right for StreetWorks to tell we the people we have to move the Town Brook, make a park for Father Bill's patrons between City Hall and the Church of the Presidents and build a bridge less than a hundred feet from Granite Street.

You can't move on Burgin Parkway as it is. Can you imagine adding another

ENC Theatre Department To Present 'Painting Churches'

The Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department will present the play "Painting Churches" Thursday through Saturday, April 19-21 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center on the college's Wollaston campus.

Written by playwright Tina Howe, the play tells the story of Maggie Church, a successful portrait artist living in New York who comes home to Boston to help her parents, Gardner and Fanny Church, pack up their Beacon Hill home and move to a cottage on Cape Cod. While there, she attempts to paint a portrait of her parents while dealing with long unresolved family issues and the worsening Alzheimer's Disease of her father, a Pulitzer Prize-winning poet.

"Tina Howe is one of the great absurdist of contemporary playwriting and her play Painting Churches is a perfect depiction of what she herself calls 'a fascination with the dailiness of women's lives, but on an operatic scale," said Director and Producer Tara Brooke Watkins, noting that the play's frank examination of a parent struggling with Alzheimer's may make it more suitable for an adult audience.

"I think audiences will be glued to the story not only because of the constant changes in mood, but because it's one everyone can relate to: a child not feeling fully appreciated by her parents, a wife struggling to keep the house together, a father fearing his family will forget him... a family feeling close but distant."

In preparing for the play, Watkins had an opportunity to meet with Howe.

"She shared with me that she rarely sees productions that get it right and was happy that I chose to contact her to understand the truth behind her writing," she said. "I will be trying as best I can to honor her actual story and concept."

Watkins also discovered a Quincy connection to the play. "(Howe's) parents are buried in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, and her family has a connection to the Quincy Family."

Some of the Quincy familial connections, in fact, are echoed in Painting Churches. Tina Howe's late father, Quincy Howe, was a former Simon & Schuster editor and CBS News commentator who moderated the final Nixon/Kennedy presidential debate in 1960. Her grandfather, Pulitzer Prize-winning biographer Mark Antony DeWolfe Howe, married essayist Frances "Fanny" Huntington Quincy, the daughter of Josiah Quincy III. The Josiah Quincy Homestead is located just steps away from the gates of Eastern Nazarene College.

Tickets for Painting Churches are $10 general admission, $7 for students. For tickets or more information, call 617-745-3715.

'Songs From On, Off Broadway' Concert Saturday At Library

Take a walk down the "Great White Way" at a free performance of ballads, up-tempo and showstoppers from the best of Broadway by vocalists Bobbi Carrey, Will McMillan and pianist Doug Hammer Saturday, March 24 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Like Tin Pan Alley, Hollywood, and even Motown, Broadway has long been a central part of our musical culture and a major source of memorable songs that cut across time and place. Think of "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man" from Showboat, "Something's Coming" from West Side Story, "I'll Cover You" from Rent, and the list goes on and on.

Bobbi Carrey's prior musical experiences have ranged from folk singing to summer stock, from Reno Sweeney in Anything Goes to soloist with the Mystic Chorale, from Christmas Revels to a women's vocal trio called "The Mood Elevators." She has performed throughout New England, and has recorded two CDs.

Will McMillan has emerged as a leading exponent of the passionate, intimate, lyric-driven art of cabaret singing. A singer, songwriter, producer and founding member of BACA (Boston Association of Cabaret Artists), McMillan hosted Will & Company — a series highlighting local singers and songwriters — for three years at the Cambridge Center For Adult Education and earned a 2002 IRNE award from the Independent Reviewers of New England for Best Cabaret Show in a small venue. He has produced five recordings, including "If I Loved You" with Bobbi Carrey.

Doug Hammer is a highly sought-after musician, composer, producer, arranger, and engineer. Doug's music has been getting internet, satellite and radio airplay all over the world, including Australia, Spain, The Netherlands, Romania, Canada, and all over the US. His sheet music is popular with pianists as well. Doug's music has been featured regularly on Soundscapes, a Music Choice channel and Pandora. He is also featured on Whisperings Solo Piano Radio.

The concert is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

'Project Nim' At Crane Library Tonight

The 2011 documentary feature 'Project Nim' will be shown tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Nim is the chimpanzee who in the 1970s became the focus of a landmark experiment which aimed to show that an ape could learn to communicate with language if raised and nurtured like a human child.

Following Nim's extraordinary journey through human society, and the enduring impact he makes on the people he meets along the way, the film is an unflinching and unsentimental biography of an animal we tried to make human.

Directed by James Marsh the 93-minute documentary is rated PG-13 for some strong language, drug content, thematic elements and disturbing images.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

'Some Mother's Son' Matinee Friday

The 1996 drama "Some Mother's Son" starring Helen Mirren will be the free movie Friday, March 23 at 1 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Kathleen Quigley has managed to stay clear of it, devoting herself to her three children. Yet in a single moment, the war claims her as one of its living victims. Kathleen is caught in an inescapable political cross-fire when her son, actively involved with the IRA, is jailed by the British.

Directed by Terry George, the 122-minute film also stars Fionnula Flanagan. It is rated R for language and some political violence and suffering.

Receives Award From Majority Leader Ronald Mariano Quincy's Michelle Young Honored As Stars Preschool 'Teacher Of The Year'

A top Massachusetts legislator had an opportunity to witness firsthand the important role early childhood educators play in a child's life when Mass. House Majority Leader Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy) recently visited the Stars preschool program in Weymouth for "Teacher Appreciation Day."

Mariano, a former elementary school teacher in the Quincy Public Schools, toured the center's preschool and kindergarten classrooms before presenting Center Director Michelle Young of Quincy with the program's "Teacher of the Year Award."

"I heartily congratulate Michelle Young on being named Teacher of the Year," Mariano said. "With teachers like Michelle, the Stars preschool program is able to provide the highest quality early education for children across the South Shore. These exceptional and dedicated teachers are crucial to setting children on the right path - I know, as a former educator, quality early education is a proven indicator for future success. I am honored to be here today to present the award to Michelle."

Young has been with the Stars program for 18 years. A single mother of two children, she began as a teaching assistant in Stars' Quincy center. Since then, she has gone on to receive both an Associate's degree in Early Childhood Education from Quincy College and a Bachelor's degree in Human Services from Cambridge College.

Young's daughter, Amanda, recently received her nursing degree while her son, Dylan, is majoring in engineering at the Franklin Institute in Boston. She has also served as a foster parent to more than 30 children and is in the process of adopting a 6-year-old girl.

"Michelle is a perfect example of the dedicated, skilled teachers who work with children every day as early childhood educators," Stars Executive Director Sheri Adlin said. "She is especially skilled at working with children who have significant social, emotional and developmental concerns."

Adlin said the Teacher

Appreciation Day grew out of a desire to recognize early childhood educators like Young, who dedicate years of service in what is traditionally a low-paying profession.

That is particularly true of programs such as Stars that serve low-income children, Adlin noted, as state reimbursement rates for such programs have not increased in five years. The Massachusetts Association for Early Education and Child Care is currently advocating for the state to allocate $25 million to reimburse rates - an increase the association says would boost the average salary of early childhood professionals in Massachusetts to approximately $25,000 a year.

"Any rate increase would go straight to increasing the salaries of our teachers, who are hard working parents just like the families we serve," Adlin said. "We are so pleased that House Majority Leader Mariano - a former teacher himself - was able to come here today to see firsthand how important skilled, professional teachers are to a child's future."

Nancy's Easy Chicken Pot Pie

When you think of making a chicken pot pie, it seems like a lot of work.

But this recipe from my daughter Nancy is a quicker and easier way, as you will note in today's recipe. Instead of a pastry crust, she used biscuits.

She made it from leftover roasted chicken, but if you want to make it from scratch, you may use three cups of either cooked chicken breast or boneless chicken thighs or a mixture.

CHICKEN POT PIE

- 1 onion (chopped)
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Pepper to taste
- 3 cups chicken stock
- 3 cups cubed chicken
- 1 package frozen mixed vegetables

- 3 tablespoons butter or oil
- 1 package of Pillsbury's Grand Biscuits (for top)

In the butter or oil, sauté the onion until tender. Blend in the flour, salt and chicken stock and cook stirring until thick and bubbly. Add the vegetables and stir until well blended.

Pour into a casserole dish and defrost the biscuits. They have layers so take them apart, and place layers of the biscuits all over the top of the casserole.

Bake uncovered in a 350-degree oven for 20-30 minutes until top is brown.

If you choose to use a pastry crust, roll it out until it is 1/4 inch thick, and place it over the top of the casserole. Use an egg wash and brush it over the top of the pastry crust to give it a browned finish.

Wollaston's Agnes Mullay Celebrates A 'Young' 100

By EMILY TAFT

At 10-months old, the parents of Agnes Mullay, of Wollaston, were told she wouldn't have long to live.

That was 100 years ago.

On March 12, Mullay celebrated her 100th birthday surrounded by her three children, 12 grandchildren, 32 great-grandchildren, 24 great-great grandchildren and one great-great-great grandchild.

"When people ask me what the secret is to making it to 100, I tell them I drink, I smoke, and I run around," joked Mullay. "I do run around and I like my raw meat with salt on it. I've been doing it all along and I am still here."

Mullay celebrated her birthday with three different parties and six cakes throughout a span of six days. She received a message from Mayor Thomas Koch congratulating her on the milestone and declaring March 12 Agnes Mullay Day. She even received a card from President Barack Obama, but says she is humbled by it all.

"I got a message from the President (Bill Clinton) when I turned 80," said Mullay. "I don't really think anything of it, I am sure others are getting the same treatment."

Born on March 12, 1912 Mullay said she never expected to live such a long life after facing death numerous times.

"I told my kids when I got to 65 I was going to be gone," said Mullay. "I said to them I was going to shrink and shrink until I disappeared. Now they say to me 'you were suppose to be gone a long time ago but your still living!'"

Even with her fair share of near death experiences she has outlived everyone in her family.

"I never thought I would get here," said Mullay. "When I was little I was very sick. I had every sickness a kid could have. When AGNES MULLAY of Wollaston celebrated her 100th birthday on March 12. The celebration featured six cakes over the course of six days.

I was 10 months old I was taken to the Floating Hospital in Boston."

Mullay said doctors at the floating hospital, which back then was on a boat, had to remove two ribs and drain her lung until she started getting better. Then at the age of 31 she came down with Tuberculosis (TB).

"My sister came down with TB the same time I did. She went to the Sanatorium, I didn't," said Mullay. "I stayed home and just got over it. She died of it at age 33. I am still living and I don't know how or why."

Mullay was born in Boston and moved to Cambridge in the 1930's. She then lived in Billerica with her husband John Mullay, Jr. After the death of her husband and mother, Mullay moved to Wollaston to be closer to her family. She has lived in the same apartment for almost 22 years.

Mullay was married to John for 60 years; they were married after only two months of dating. Mullay said she never appreciated how good of a husband he was until he was gone.

"He was a good man, and he treated me right," said Mullay. "He did everything for me."

The two lived in Billerica for 20 years up until his death, and it was Mullay who initially decided to buy the house in Billerica where they spent most of their married life. After driving around one day the pair passed a house for sale. Mullay said she stopped and knocked on the door and put a deposit down on the house right then.

"One day I was out with my husband, riding around, and we saw this house in Billerica that had just put a sign up for sale," said Mullay. "I said to my husband 'look at that yard, it looks so pretty, the grass looks so nice,' so I went in and asked them how much. I put a deposit down and moved in."

Doing what she wants and not giving in is something Mullay has done all her life.

"If I have a hard time doing something I am going to do it anyway. I don't like to ask for help," said Mullay. "I go out every day. I walk, and I get up on ladders. I do what I want, I'm not frail I am tough. It makes me mad when I have a hard time doing something, but I do it anyway. I don't care what happens."

Turning 100 hasn't slowed Mullay down. She continues to go out for walks almost everyday, takes trips with her neighbor to CVS, plays Bingo every Monday, goes to spaghetti dinners, and takes monthly trips to Foxwoods, among many other things she likes to do each week.

"She is a wonder women, she is amazing," said long time friend Rita Keaney. "I call her the ever ready battery. She has never complained about anything, and she has all her marbles too!"

Mullay said her birthday was just a normal day for her; she took her daily trip to CVS, and played Bingo that night. She added that she would continue to take walks and stay active as long as she can. For Mullay, turning 100 is something she doesn't brag about it was just another Monday.

"I always say God don't want me and the devil won't take me so I guess I'll stay here," said Mullay.

"What else am I going to do?"

Ryan Mock And Jay Newman Reflect On Their Experience Impact Quincy Peer Advocates Attend National Forum

In early February, Impact Quincy was pleased to send Arlene Goldstein, Program Coordinator and 2 Coalition Peer Advocates, Ryan Mock and Jay Newman to the CADCA (Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America) Forum.

Here are Jay and Ryan's thoughts on their experience:

Jay Newman, Junior,
Quincy High School

To say being provided the opportunity to attend CADCA's 22nd National Leadership Forum was astounding would be an understatement.

Networking with fellow youth from all corners of the U.S.A., learning the ins and outs of a successful coalition, and attaining exclusive knowledge of the skills needed as a youth leader was a whirlwind tour de force – to say nothing of the overall programs and experiences the forum offered. Case in point: on Wednesday, attendees pioneered from the breathtaking Gaylord National Hotel to the august Capitol to discuss substance abuse issues with their respective state representatives.

For the Massachusetts coalitions, this meant an appointment with the likes of Sen. Scott Brown, Cong. William Keating, Senator John Kerry's Office Director, and Cong. Stephen Lynch's Senior Policy Advisor to explain the important of Drug Free Community (DFC) funding.

Despite the frigid rain, the Impact Quincy delegation trudged back and forth from either side of the Capitol building to these meetings. Spending four days in the nation's capital for intellectual wisdom was much, much more than one could expect. Although I miss the friends I have made there as well, I am glad now I can put my newfound-knowledge to practice back home in my community.

Ryan Mock, Junior,
North Quincy High School
Washington, D.C. was an amazing opportunity for everyone. I can only speak for myself in saying that I thought it was very interesting. When we first arrived the fun began with a state wide meeting to get everyone acquainted. A major reason for all the states to come together was to make connections.

Once you had met everyone from your state, the real fun began. The workshops at the CADCA conference were very stimulating. As an attendee of the conference I was able to choose from many different topics and subjects; not to mention the different types of people that were presenting their views.

While at the workshops, I was able to hear a lot about what other coalitions are doing. We were able to get a lot of fresh new ideas that I am eager to put them into action.

Half way through the trip, we got to meet with some of the "movers and shakers" on Capitol Hill. This was important because we were able to convey our message to people who can make change.

We also were privileged to meet a lot of new faces from other states. I was able to make a lot of good connections that I know will last a lifetime.

All in all, DC was an amazing experience and an opportunity that does not end just because we are home.

Maria Droste Services Fashion Gala May 4

The Good Shepherd's Maria Droste Services will host its annual fundraiser – The Darlene Sheehan Fashion Gala – Friday, May 4 at Lantana's in Randolph.

Proceeds benefit the services of psychotherapy, substance abuse counseling, and holistic therapies that Maria Droste offers to individuals and families in the Greater Boston area and South Shore.

Many of the people served by Maria Droste fall into the low income bracket and have difficulty accessing such services because they lack adequate health insurance or do not have the funds to cover the cost of their co-pays. Requests for services has increased significantly, but incomes have not increased.

Maria Droste is seeking sponsors for its fashion gala. Advertisements are also available in the program book.

How To Speed Up Your Disability Application

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

If your disabling condition is preventing you from continuing to work, you may want to apply for disability benefits through Social Security.

In most cases, doing so involves a thorough process of determining your eligibility, medical condition, and ability to work. Because we look so carefully at so many cases – more than three million each year – it can take us three to five months to determine whether you are eligible.

Processing times on that initial claim can vary depending on several factors, but primarily on:

- the nature of your disability;
- how quickly we obtain medical evidence from your doctor or other medical sources; and
- whether we need to send you for a medical examination in order to obtain evidence to support your claim.

There are things you can do to help speed up the process. The more information you provide up front, the less time it will take us to obtain the evidence we need – and the faster your claim can be processed.

What type of information do we need?

- Any medical records or documentation you have is helpful. We can make copies of the records you have and return your originals;
- The names, addresses, and phone numbers for any doctors, medical facilities, treatment centers, or providers related to your disabling condition;
- The names, addresses, and phone numbers for previous employers and the dates worked for each employer;
- Workers' compensation information, including the settlement agreement, date of injury, claim number, and proof of other disability benefits awarded;
- Names and dates of birth of your minor children and your spouse;
- Dates of marriages and divorces (if any);
- Checking or savings account number, and the bank's 9-digit routing number, so we can deposit your payment electronically;
- Name, address, and phone number of a person we can contact if we are unable to get in touch with you.

If this disability application is for a child, we need the name, address, phone number of the schools attended and any school records you can provide.

We also ask you to sign release forms that give us permission to obtain the information needed from third parties to make a decision on your claim.

The best place to start is online at www.socialsecurity.gov/disability. Select "Disability Starter Kit" in the left column. There, you'll find more information and starter kits for both adults and children.

You can apply online for disability benefits (the easiest method), or you can make an appointment by phone or in a Social Security office. The choice is yours. (For Supplemental Security Income (SSI) disability benefits, you cannot apply online, but you still can complete the Disability Starter Kit to prepare for the interview and speed-up the processing time.)

If you're considering an application for disability benefits, the place to go is www.socialsecurity.gov/disability.

$18M Bond For Old City Hall, Coddington School

partment has rented office space on Burgin Parkway since the department moved out of its offices in the old Quincy High School. The city is paying $280,000 for the school department's offices and $180,000 for the clerk's office.

The city plans to fund the bond payment through Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds; $900,000 of the expected $1 million to $1.2 million annual bond payments would come from CPA funding and the rest would be paid out of debt service.

Walker noted that while the price seems steep, it's not because the city recently completed paying $900,000 annually to another CPA bond used to purchase open space and the remaining money paid out of debt service would be less than half of what the city pays to lease office space.

The Old City Hall building would be renovated at a cost of $8.2 million. The second floor would house the "Great Hall" - a 181-seat space to be used by the City Council. The third floor would be converted into a balcony overlooking the chamber. The first floor of the building would feature exhibit space and two meeting halls, one of which would seat 85 people and be used for the license and zoning boards and the conservation commission.

The Old City Hall building was built in 1844 and might be the oldest functioning city government building in the country. Architect Solomon Willard designed the building; Willard was a scion of Quincy's granite industry and is best known for designing Charlestown's Bunker Hill Monument. The facade of Old City Hall was modeled after Boston's Merchants Exchange Building, which is no longer standing.

Old City Hall was closed last year after inspections found it to be in poor shape. Jim Edwards, the architect who designed the plans for the restoration, told the council he was happy the building is no longer in use.

"I felt so much at better at night going to sleep knowing no one was going to be in that building," Edwards said. "It was unsafe, it was not a good working environment. To think about somebody getting hurt when the mayor knew of these conditions was unconscionable."

Edwards presented pictures to the council showing damage done to the building over time. The roof's main truss was damaged by beetles causing water to leak; ceilings, pipe insulation, and windows were deteriorating; and some of the building's wiring was left open and in poor condition.

The building had housed the City Council chambers and the City Clerk's and Election Department's offices. The City Council was relocated to the New City Hall building and the other offices moved to the Munroe Building.

The way in which the city financed moving the clerk's office raised some eyebrows at a City Council Finance Committee meeting held immediately prior to the regular council meeting. City Solicitor Jim Timmins said the money had been taken from an escrow account relating to the city's agreement with Honeywell. The money, according to him, was set aside for capital improvement related to the agreement. Approximately $1.1 million was placed into the capital projects fund, and about $723,000 in interest from the account went to the city's general fund.

According to Helen Murphy, the mayor's director of operations, about $295,000 was spent on costs related to the move. Another $313,000 or so was taken from those funds and used to upgrade and repair equipment, primarily at schools.

Councillors Brian McNamee and Doug Gutro both questioned the decision to pay for the costs out of the account.

"I can tell you that I didn't vote on any council order for a broad energy capital improvement plan to provide energy savings to the city to have any of those moneys used for the renovation of

Basics Of Flood Insurance Part Of Program Flood Plain Topic Tonight At Broad Meadows School

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest will host a forum tonight (Thursday) to help residents who may be at risk for flooding.

The forum, called "living in a floodplain," will be held at the Broad Meadows Middle School at 50 Calvin Rd. beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Laforest and Councillor Doug Gutro started planning the event as a way to help educate residents who live in a floodplain.

"We were asking ourselves what can we do for residents in these areas," Laforest said. "We can basically help them educate themselves."

Some 3,300 of Quincy's households are located in designated floodplains, according to Laforest. A plurality of those - about 1,300

- are in Laforest's ward. Ward 5, which Gutro represented before being elected at-large councillor, has 875 houses located in floodplains.

Wards 4 and 6 have about 400 such houses each, Ward 3 has 170, and Ward 2 has the fewest with 54. Laforest expects her fellow ward councillors to be in attendance along with Gutro and herself.

Also attending will be someone from Congressman William Keating's staff, representatives from FEMA, the Massachusetts Department of Conservation, the city's conservation commission, and insurance companies.

Laforest credited Keating for helping get FEMA involved with the event.

At the meeting, residents will be able to learn about how FEMA goes about designating areas as floodplains and what that designation means.

"We thought we could get FEMA there to talk about the maps, how they get drawn," Laforest said. "We'll be looking at a map, showing why is a floodplain a floodplain."

Residents will also learn the basics of flood insurance, though they won't be able to purchase it at the event. Also on the agenda will be showing residents how they can prepare their houses in advance of a flood.

Laforest also noted that FEMA is in the process of redrawing its maps of floodplains.

Those maps will then need to be approved by the City Council by July.

Bill O'Brien Honored At St. Patrick's Day Celebration

O'Brien was also unaware that his wife Christine or daughter Devin would be at the event.

While O'Brien has served in the National Guard for 23 years, his recently concluded deployment was his first tour of duty. He had been slated for deployment previously, but a fight with cancer prevented him from going overseas. O'Brien said he was happy to be deployed this time around after his illness. "I really felt blessed to continue to serve after the cancer," he said.

O'Brien, who runs a construction company in Boston, serves in the 26th Maneuver Enhancement Brigade, part of Task Force Yankee. His experience running a construction company earned him the assignment of construction and engineer work in the Kabul area. O'Brien worked on 11 different bases around Kabul, Afghanistan's capital and largest city.

"We did everything from housing to force protection, entry control points, and wastewater treatment," O'Brien said.

Aside from work on bases, O'Brien's unit also worked on rebuilding the war-torn nation as part of the Commander's Emergency Response Program. That work included working on schools, district centers, literacy projects, and wells. The work was also done under the auspices of the Aghan First Program, which O'Brien was awarded the Bronze Star for the work he did in Afghanistan. He also received a Joint Commendation Medal, a Combat Action Badge, an Afghan Campaign Medal, and a NATO Medal.

Now that he has returned home, O'Brien is awaiting his next assignment. He said there is usually a two-year period between deployments.

Friday's event was a $50-per plate affair organized by the Quincy Partnership. Proceeds from the event are used for the city's Flag Day parade in June.

The Early American Restaurant was established in 1988. Owner Jeff Barcelo, who was born in Quincy, thought the name of his restaurant was in keeping with all of the historical landmarks that the city holds.

Eighty percent of the customers are local, loyal diners who stop in time and time again.

Everything on the Breakfast and Lunch menu is made to order with the freshest, never frozen ingredients! The pancakes are always "made from scratch," as well as the homemade famous corned beef hash.

Jeff has sold 237,120 dozen of eggs over the years.

Maybe the "Early Bird Special" of two eggs, home fries, toast, bacon or sausage, with juice or coffee, served 7-9 a.m. every day for just $4.95 has something to do with that. You can't go wrong with charbroiled steak tips (from Prevites), two eggs, toast and home fries for $10.95.

The Early American Restaurant is the home of the one-pound burger. Each one is made of fresh, never frozen lean ground beef by hand and cooked on a flame broiler. Club sandwiches are very popular as well. Try a hamburger, turkey, hot pastra-mi, corned beef, and ham & cheese or tuna club, all served with fries or potato salad.

You will find all of your favorites on the menu: omelets, French toast, pancakes, egg sandwiches, waffles, burgers, sandwiches, and salads at the Early American Restaurant.

SALUTE DURING rifle volleys, the playing of Taps and the National Anthem.

Morrisette Post Holds 83rd Annual Memorial Mass

The Cyril P. Morrisette Post No. 294 of the American Legion held its 83rd Annual Memorial Mass for Deceased Members at St. Mary Parish in West Quincy on Presidents Day.

A formal military honor-guard remembrance ceremony was led by Post Commander, Heikki Pakkala, and featured color guards from the Post, Squadron 294 of the Sons of the American Legion, The Morrisette Auxiliary, AL Post No. 382 from Squantum, The William R. Caddy Detachment of the Marine Corps League, and the North Quincy High School Junior AFOTC. Rifle volleys, Taps, and the National Anthem honored those members in particular who passed away in the previous year and whose names were read aloud during the ceremony.

The Mass was celebrated by Father Jean Pierre Aubin, with soloist Kelly Graeber and organist Dan Sullivan providing the music. Sons Commander Paul Moody and Auxiliary President Pam Norton led the honored guests in the opening procession. The contingent included The Commander of the American Legion Department of Massachusetts, John Linotte, Past Department Commander Frank McDonald, and Department Vice-Commander Charlie Towers.

Also present were many elected officials, including Cong. Stephen Lynch, Mayor Thomas P. Koch, several city councillors, along with State Sen. John Keenan and state Reps. Tacky Chan and Bruce Ayers (a direct descendant of Cyril P. Morrisette).

A luncheon was held at the Morrisette Post following the Mass with Past Commander Larry Norton acting as emcee.

Congressman Lynch addressed the guests assembled and remarked that he was deeply moved by the Mass and ceremonies and proud that if re-elected in November he would represent Quincy in Congress beginning in January.

It was at the luncheon that Past Commander Bob LaFleur presented the pictures of Cyril P. Morrisette's funeral that were featured in The Quincy Sun's March 15th edition. The 84th Annual Memorial Mass will be held Monday, Feb. 18, 2013. All are encouraged to attend.

$18M Bond For Old City Hall, Coddington School

City Hall," McNamee said. "That's a totally different undertaking."

"I'm flabbergasted, quite frankly, at the utilization of this Honeywell escrow account unrelated to any energy efficiency improvements," Gutro said. "It may well be legally permissible, but I'm extraordinarily surprised."

Coddington School

The other $9.8 million would be used to restore the Coddington School, located near Quincy High School on Coddington Street. A new permanent home for the School Committee, including television facilities, would go on the first floor. The second floor would house the Superintendent's office and other school offices as well storage for school records. Space on the third floor is unassigned other than the area allocated for mechanical equipment. The lower level would be used for both the school department's and the city's IT departments and the city's print shop.

Coddington School, also known as Coddington Hall, was built in 1909. It was designed by Charles Brigham, the architect who designed the First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston and co-designed Boston's Museum of Fine Arts. When it was built, the Coddington School replaced another school of the same name which stood nearby. Its namesake is William Coddington, who was the treasurer of Massachusetts Bay Colony before leaving for what is now Rhode Island and becoming the first governor of that colony. When he departed for Rhode Island, he donated all his land to what is now Quincy, Braintree, and Randolph.

The building served as an elementary school and then was used as part of Quincy College's campus. After the college moved out, it was temporarily used to house classrooms and school department offices during the construction of the new Quincy High. The building is now vacant.

A report presented by architect Steve Wessling at Monday's meeting showed a laundry list of issues with the building. They include: missing shingles, buckled shingles and roof leaks; eroded and cracked mortar joints; deteriorated wood doors; cracked plaster in the interior; asbestos and lead paint; and failure to comply with various codes and regulations.

Despite the issues, Wessling told the council the building was structurally sound. "It's in good condition on the outside in terms of it can be saved," he said.

Gutro questioned why the city would spend the money to restore the building, when it could just raze it and build a new office building at the site.

"I grew up here, I never perceived this to be one of those historical assets where if I was giving someone from out of town a tour I'd stop at this building and explain it to them," Gutro said.

Wessling said the building was a perfect complement for the new downtown. And Walker pointed out that since the building is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, there are serious limitations on demolishing the building.

Gutro also asked why the mayor was focusing on this project instead of others, including a possible new Sterling Middle School. The councillor said the issue of replacing Sterling has always been pushed back since he took office 10 years ago.

"Sterling Middle School, since I got here in 2002, has been a subject of 'Sterling's next, Sterling's next, Sterling's next.' But here we are, instead of talking about a bond for Sterling we're talking about a bond for the administrators in the school department and potentially city hall employees," Gutro said.

Walker said Sterling has been on the mayor's mind and that Koch would be meeting with State Treasurer Steve Grossman, the head of the school building authority, on the matter soon.

"It is on the mayor's radar," Walker said. "He'll be meeting, whether it's this week or next week, with the state treasurer and the new head of the school building authority to talk about just that, about how we get moving on these other school projects. We spent so much time focused on the Central and the new Quincy High School...but at no point in time has the needs of Sterling or the other school needs been lost on this mayor's mind."

Following the presentation, the bond issue was referred to the finance committee. Edwards said the city plans to begin work on the project in the fall. But because buildings are registered historic places, they will need additional approval before work can begin.

Quincy Partnership's St. Patrick's Day Celebration

IRISHMAN OF THE YEAR — John Gillis (left), the longest serving Quincy city clerk and current Norfolk County commissioner, was honored as the 2012 Irishman of the Year at the 17th annual Quincy Partnership St. Patrick's Day celebration. The tribute to Gillis noted his service to the country as a Marine during World War II and as a husband and father. City Clerk Joseph Shea presents Gillis with an Irish walking stick.

WARD 1 COUNCILLOR Margaret Laforest's stand-up routine got some encouragement from Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti who reminded patrons to laugh during her skit. Laforest took it in stride, as did other guest speakers whose jokes were somewhat "comically-challenged" at times.

WARD 5 COUNCILLOR Kirsten Hughes sings "Danny Boy" with musical accompaniment by Mark Carey on guitar at the Quincy Partnership's St. Patrick's Day Celebration.

CONG. STEPHEN LYNCH (left) and House Majority Leader Rep. Ron Mariano of Quincy were among the elected officials who served up some one-liners at the Quincy Partnership 17th annual St. Patrick's Day Celebration.

PUBLIC WORKS COMMISSIONER and former City Councillor Daniel Raymondi was a "target" of some political barbs at the Quincy Partnership's St. Patrick's Day Celebration. The green jacket with a bullseye on the back was presented by Mayor Tom Koch who had worn the same jacket several years ago. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, who sits in Raymondi's old seat in the Council Chamber, quipped: "I didn't realize just how long Raymondi had been on the Council until I was cleaning out his desk and found a stage coach ticket."

St. Patrick's Day Celebration Quotes And Quips

A traditional boiled dinner was served but the main course was public officials trading humorous barbs at one another at the Quincy Partnership's 17th annual St. Patrick's Day Celebration March 16 at the Tirrell Room, 254 Quarry St.

Political figures including Cong. Steve Lynch, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, Mayor Tom Koch and several city councillors served up some one-liners to the amusement of the 300 guests. Even Democratic Senate candidate Elizabeth Warren tossed a few barbs at her opponent, Sen. Scott Brown, who was invited also but unable to attend.

Here are some of the more notable — and quotable — jokes and quips from the event.

Cong. Steve Lynch

The South Boston Democrat said that "Michael Morrissey has encouraged me to move to Quincy. He told me Squantum is the Wampanoag word for off-street parking."

• "Tim Murray couldn't be here with us today. He's being honored as the driver of the year by NASCAR."

• "State Treasurer Steve Grossman is a Democratic candidate for governor. One of his slogans is "He'll put Goober back in Gubernatorial."

Mayor Tom Koch

• "(City Council President) Mike McFarland called me and said he didn't want to speak. I asked him if he meant at today's luncheon or at the council meetings."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci

• "I want to welcome our two new city councillors Kirsten Hughes and Brad Croall to today's event. Or as my council colleagues call them 'Councillor Barbie and Councillor Ken.'"

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest

• "If you ever took a fishing pole to Seaworld . . . you might be a (Houghs) Necker."

City Clerk Joseph Shea (aka "The Amazing Shea-Zak")

• (Answer:) "Happy department heads, no snow this winter, shorter council meetings."

(Question:) Three benefits of Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi."

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti

• "Lt. Gov. Tim Murray called and told me he was coming today. He's in Worcester and he'll be here in 10 minutes."

Comedian and Quincy resident Steve Sweeney poked fun at the "not-quite-ready-for-prime-time" amateur talent.

"They should make a film of this and show it to the prisoners at Guantanamo Bay. This is so awful. . . . Please don't invite me to this event again."

That joke got one of the loudest roars.

Other Sweeneyisms:

• "When I was a kid there were two places that don't exist anymore that I had a shot at going to: they were called purgatory and limbo."

• "It's been a very big year for me. My house was in such a mess that I crashed at Occupy Boston. And I shared a tent with a guy named Willy the Whino. What I learned at Occupy Boston is that in order to change the economic structure of our country, we have to drum. It's important to get drums and drum for two or three hours a day."

The St. Patrick's Day Celebration is among the most anticipated social events in Quincy. And it's all for a very good cause. This year, a portion of the proceeds will benefit Quincy's 61st annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration, considered the longest-running Flag Day parade in the nation.

REV. JAMES HAWKER gave the invocation at the Quincy Partnership's 17th annual St. Patrick's Day Celebration. He also quipped: "This will be the shortest part of today's program."

WARD 4 COUNCILLOR Brian Palmucci's monologue material included this quip: "It looks like a Koch fundraiser here. I've never seen so many city employees in one place."

AMONG THOSE ATTENDING the Quincy Partnership's 17th annual St. Patrick's Day Celebration were (from left) Stephen McGrath, the city's director of Human Resources; Jim Fatseas, executive secretary for Mayor Thomas Koch; Don Uvanitte of Eastern Insurance and Robert Galligan, Louis Restaurant, Houghs Neck. Uvanitte and Galligan are also members of the Quincy Partnership.

Brianna McCombs 'Going Bald' For Childhood Cancer Research

QHS Freshman Raising Money For St. Baldrick's Foundation

By EMILY TAFT

Last year, 15-year-old Quincy High freshman Brianna McCombs decided to shave her head to raise money for childhood cancer research.

This year, on Saturday, March 31st McCombs will take to the clippers for a second time to shave her head for the cause she believes so strongly in, the St. Baldrick's Foundation.

"When Brianna shaved her head it was one of the most moving things I've ever seen," said event organizer Mike Anello. "She had a huge impact on everyone that was there last year, you couldn't find a dry eye."

McCombs will join hundreds of thousands of others around the world, again, to shave her head for the volunteer driven charity. St. Baldrick's is committed to funding the most promising research to find cures for childhood cancers and give survivors long and healthy lives. The non-profit organization started shaving heads in March 2000 where 20 "shavee" recruits raised over $104,000. Now over 12 years in, and 186,660 volunteers later, they have raised over $117 million for life saving research.

The idea of shaving her head came after seeing a video posted online showing a friend's friend shaving their head for the foundation. In previous years, McCombs had cut her hair for Locks of Love but after seeing the video and being inspired by the cause she asked her mom if she could shave her head instead of just cutting her hair.

"She came out of her bedroom and initially said she wanted to do Locks of Love again and I said sure, and she went back into her room," said mom Lisa Forte. "A couple minutes later she reappeared and said she wanted to shave her head, my initial reaction was 'What's wrong?' and then I asked her why."

McCombs told her mother she wanted to raise awareness about childhood cancer, and show kids her age that there are kids, just like them battling cancer that can't play sports or participate in school activities because they are going through chemotherapy or in the hospital. After her mother's blessing, McCombs went online and was the first to sign up for Anello's event.

"I am only 15 and I know I will be ridiculed and made fun of but it is a risk that I am willing to take to help save the life of someone and find a cure for cancer," said

McCombs. "This means so much to me and it's one of the easiest decisions I've had to make in my life."

McCombs set a goal to raise $700 this year, which is up from the $500 she set for last year's event. With the help of her mom, McCombs exceeded her goal last year, raising over $2,000. To raise the money she sets up tables outside of large stores such as Stop & Shop and Kmart with products to sell. The products range from pins, homemade items, to tee shirts and the cost is no more than $10, but McCombs said those who are donating are giving more than what the items are priced at.

During her fundraising she said she has met many people impacted by childhood cancer, and found that they appreciate what she is doing and want to keep in touch.

"Before working with St. Baldrick's I didn't know a single child with cancer," said McCombs. "Now, my second year doing this, I have three kids I know struggling with the disease. It just makes me want to fund raise even more."

According to Anello, over 250 people attended last year's event, with 40 of them shaving their heads. Anello said he hopes that this year they are able to get 50 people to shave their heads and over 300 people to attend throughout the day. He added that their hope is to have cancer survivors attend this year to show those in attendance how much of an impact the fundraiser has on research and recovery.

Even after facing her fair share of looks and comments when she shaved her head, some good and some bad, McCombs still signed up for the event again this year.

"My hair will grow back, I don't care about that," said McCombs. "What's more important is raising awareness."

Forte received similar looks and remarks because she also shaved her head last year, as a last minute decision. Forte said that this year's outcome might be a little different.

"I didn't plan on shaving my head last year but after seeing her (Brianna) go through it, and meeting a little girl with cancer I had to do it," said Forte. "I don't plan on shaving it again this year, but things might change when I get there. If I do decide to participate I don't think I would shave BRIANNA AND HER mom, Lisa Forte (right) both shaved their heads last year for the St. Baldrick's Foundation. They raised over $2,000 for childhood cancer research.

the whole thing, I might shave half or do something different, something bold."

McCombs said that she has been getting the word out to as many people as possible. She said she invited as many friends as she has, posted information on Facebook, and was also able to get her school involved, with the help of her Principal Frank Santoro.

"My friends are excited to go, and some are just excited for me," said McCombs. "My mom and I made a bet that I wouldn't be able to get my principal to shave his head, I am still working on it. He told me he would think about it."

Santoro said he is willing to help McCombs any way he can, but as for shaving his head, that is something that is still up in the air.

"Although I will assist her in anyway possible, I myself am not sure if I will participate in that way," said Santoro. "I know we will get great things out of her. I want to be able to help her and encourage her to continue in this or any other programs she might become involved in. It is great to have students committed to community service outside of this school."

This isn't the first bet the two have made when it comes to raising money or getting people involved in a cause they feel strongly about. McCombs said that there have been a number of times while raising money that she would bet her mom she couldn't get a certain dollar figure in an allotted amount of time, and in most cases McCombs said she would win the bet.

McCombs began giving back around two years ago on her 13th birthday, which is during the holiday season, when she asked for donations towards the Quincy Animal Shelter in lieu of presents.

"I did it because I am an animal lover and I rescued my cat Harry from there," said McCombs. "People think of people during the holidays, but people don't think of animals."

She received over $600 from family and friends and was able to purchase every item the shelter had listed on their website.

"This girl is incredible. To want to have your birthday gifts, at 13, be a donation to the animal shelter is just unheard of," said Anello. "You can't find kids like that, who are just so selfless."

Since then McCombs has been raising funds for the human populations, whether it is helping her mom collect money for the Avon Walk, cutting her hair for Locks of Love, or shaving her head and collecting money for St. Baldrick's, she has become an inspiration to everyone she comes in contact with.

"She's an inspiration to me," said Forte. "She's challenged me to do things I would never have done in my life, like shave my head, and I hope that continues."

McCombs said that this year would be her last year to shave her head, at least until after she graduates high school.

"I want to be able to have long hair for the prom and graduation; maybe after graduation I will shave my head again. Either way though I am going to stick with it," said McCombs. "I would like to have my future family shave their heads, it would be cool to have a whole family participate."

McCombs will continue to raise money for St. Baldrick's Foundation, and continue to work on different fundraisers and events. Her plans consist of helping her mom raise money for her team in the Avon Walk for Breast Cancer, and next year she hopes to walk in it herself.

"I am going to be doing this for a very long time," said McCombs. "I want to make a difference in this world and in the lives of others."

The event begins at 3 p.m. Saturday, March 31st, at Dillon's Bar & Grill 955 Boylston St., Boston. For more information on St. Baldrick's Foundation, or to donate to McCombs visit <http://www.stbaldricks.org/participants/mypage/514238/2012>.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

WHAT YOU KNOW MAY SAVE YOU

The good news is that deaths from mouth and throat cancer have declined since the early 1990s. Unfortunately, this benefit has largely been limited to non-smokers and those with access to timely health care. In the interest of more widespread cancer prevention, readers of this column are advised to give up the smoking habit if they are currently smokers. Beyond that, everyone should know that a simple visual check of the mouth during a regular dental exam can prove very useful in detecting oral cancers when they are most treatable. Mouth and throat cancers cause symptoms such as persistent sore throat or care pain, trouble swallowing, and/or a lump in the throat that lasts longer than a couple of weeks. When was the last time you had your teeth examined by your dentist? If you need answers to your questions about dental health concerns, don't hesitate to contact us. We feel that dental visits should be positive experiences. Keeping teeth and gums healthy will contribute to overall health and enjoyment of life. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where teaching you how to preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime is our primary goal. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a full trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Aside from smoking, alcohol abuse and the human papillomavirus (HPV) have been linked to mouth and throat cancers.

FLAT ON THEIR BACKS

Since the American Academy of Pediatrics recommended placing babies to sleep on their backs in 1992, the incidence of "sudden infant death syndrome" (SIDS) has decreased by more than half. However, since then, the occurrence of "positional skull deformity" has risen to about 13% of healthy singleton babies. While orthotic helmets may be recommended for babies with severe cases of positional skull deformity, or for those whose skulls do not improve after six months of age, parents can take a simple step to prevent or resolve this problem. To avoid the exertion of pressure at the back of the head, place the baby on his or her stomach for 30-60 minutes while he or she is awake and closely monitored.

Today's informative column has been brought to you as a public service. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe in natural healing: a comprehensive approach to chiropractic care which features adjustments, rehabilitation, therapy, and the balance of proper nutrition. It's wise to visit your chiropractor periodically in order to maintain better body alignment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we serve the needs of the entire family by providing professional chiropractic care. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The chiropractor can recommend neck exercises that can be performed during a baby's diaper changes that will help relieve torticollis ("wryneck"), which is a stiff neck associated with muscle spasm.

Tips for Hiring A Home Contractor

Better Business Bureau advises consumers to follow this smart shopper checklist before choosing a home contractor:

Be picky and have lots of options. Seek at least three bids from prospective contractors based on the same specifications, materials and labor needed to complete the project. Homeowners should discuss bids in detail with each contractor and ask questions about variations in pricing. The lowest-priced contractor may not be the best.

Make sure they are certified and insured. Consumers should ask whether the company is insured against claims covering workers' compensation, property damage and personal liability in case of accidents. Consumers should obtain the name of the insurance carrier and call to verify coverage. Ask whether the contractor meets licensing and bonding requirements set by the state, county or city. Check with local authorities to find out whether permits are needed before proceeding with the work. The contractor also should be aware of any required permits.

Get everything in writing. Ask whether the contractor will provide a lien waiver upon completion of the job. A lien waiver is a statement by the contractor that all suppliers and subcontractors have been paid for their work. Read and understand the contract before signing. Get all verbal promises in writing. Include start and completion dates in the contract.

Remember the rule of thirds and follow it. Pay one third at the start of the project, one third when work is 50 percent completed and one third after completion. BBB has Business Reviews on more than 100,000 general contractors across North America, available for free at bbb.org/search.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, March 9, at approximately 2:25 p.m., Officers Mike Brandolini and Brian Flaherty were dispatched to the area of 285 Whitwell St. on a call of a disorder.

Upon arrival, the officers observed a male and a female surrounded by several onlookers. The female, who was clearly pregnant, was lying on the ground. Several onlookers at the scene pointed at the male and were screaming that he had pushed her.

LT. DAN MINTON

One witness approached Officer Brandolini and stated that he had witnessed the male assault the female. Officer Flaherty detained the male until more information could be gathered.

Officers John Grazioso and Paul Jackson also arrived on scene while Officer Brandolini interviewed the witness. The witness said that he was driving his vehicle on Whitwell Street when he observed the male push the pregnant female against the house at 285 Whitwell Street. The male then spit into the face of the female. The witness then called the Police.

Officer Flaherty questioned the male suspect, who admitted to pushing the female, but "I only did because she had pushed me." The suspect confirmed that the baby was his. Based on his statement, the suspect was placed into custody for Assault and Battery on a pregnant female. Upon seeing the suspect being arrested, the pregnant female became highly agitated and soon after reached hysteria. She began screaming at the officers to let "my boyfriend go." The female was calling the officers, "f@#$%^& pigs."

At one point she yelled to her boyfriend, "Get out of the f@#$%^& cruiser" as she charged toward the cruiser. Officers' Grazioso and Jackson had to physically restrain her from opening the cruiser door. Fallon ambulance responded to the scene to check out the female, who was still very upset at what transpired.

The officers attempted to determine the female's identity but she repeatedly yelled, "F@#$ you pigs" and left the scene. The officers cleared the scene and Officer Brandolini went to the station to file his arrest report. He attempted to speak with the suspect, but he refused to cooperate.

A few minutes later, the female came into the police department lobby to bail her boyfriend out. Officer Brandolini met with her. She gave her name and address and then told the story of what precipitated the incident.

She said that they were at her apartment and had made plans for the evening, but she was not ready on time, which angered her boyfriend/suspect. He left in a fit of rage, taking her cell phone with him. She said that she caught up to him at 285 Whitwell St. and attempted to get her cell phone back. The suspect then smashed the phone on the ground which led to a physical confrontation.

The suspect threw the female against the house and then spit on her. She added that she is 38 weeks pregnant, gets highly emotional, lost her temper and hit her boyfriend. She said the police arrived at that point.

The female declined medical attention as well as a restraining order.

In addition to the assault charge, the 25 year-old Quincy resident was also charged with "Malicious Destruction of Property under $250."

LOOKING TO RENT AN APARTMENT OR HOUSE?

A recent scam involved a house that was for sale in Quincy for over a year. A citizen reported that she found a house for rent on Zillow.com, so she called the phone number listed. The citizen said that she thought the deal was too good to be true so she was apprehensive. When the contact person said that she (the citizen) would have to mail a check to England and he would then send her the keys to the place, she knew it was a scam.

Even women who are drawn to a more muted look in their necklaces and earrings are showing no signs of being bashful when it comes to wearing eye-catching bracelets. Retro designs that recall the 1970s are also quite popular, with mixtures of beads, brushed metal, and colorful bangles. When stacking bracelets, it's popular to mix metals as much as styles and sizes to achieve an eclectic, bohemian mix on the wrists. In fact, wrists that dangle

Quincy Babe Ruth Baseball, Inc, Ends League; Several Other Options Still Available

Around The Horn: Youth Baseball In Quincy

By SEAN BRENNAN

Quincy is a big city, but it maintains that small town feel.

Word spreads like wildfire. And sometimes truth and fiction blend together.

A recent development in local baseball circles, one that affects kids between the ages 13-15, has been banded about over the last ten days. It is time to set the record straight before any additional false information rears its ugly head.

Quincy Babe Ruth Baseball, Inc, which just two years ago had eight teams and approximately 105 kids; a league that had successful hosted three Babe Ruth World Series (2003, 2005 and 2008), as well as nine Massachusetts state tournaments and three New England Regional tournaments, has pulled up its tents and folded.

There were just not enough interested players to keep the once-thriving league afloat. Demand did not meet supply.

"We are sorry that Quincy Babe Ruth League will no longer be in the city," said former president Dick Lombardi in a phone interview with The Quincy Sun this week, "but due to the lack of player participation we could not adequately supply the number of players needed to field enough teams. It became an impossibility."

"We are all sorry to see it go," Lombardi concluded. "We had a great time (running the league)."

There are reasons Quincy Babe Ruth League could not get enough numbers to field a league. Baseball in the city has serious competition from other sports, most notably lacrosse and spring soccer. There will also be two other baseball organizations in Quincy this spring - Quincy Youth Baseball's Junior League/Senior League/International (13-16) and Morrisette's new Junior Legion program (15-17) - that plan to cater to that age bracket.

What does this mean for interested players looking to play high level baseball this spring? Here are your options.

Quincy Youth Baseball is open for business. As is the new Morrisette Junior Legion program. Both organizations are preparing for a busy spring season.

"We currently have 1,050 kids signed for our baseball and softball programs," said QYB President Mike Lynch on Monday. Quincy Youth Baseball starts at age 6-7 with an Instructional League; the Junior League is for kids age 8-9 followed by the Cal Ripken League for kids ages 10-12, with the Junior League/Senior League/International for players age 13-16.

"It really starts with communication and reaching out to families in the city with kids ages 6-16," Lynch said about his league's high numbers. "We have also been successful these past few seasons at the district and state levels and I believe that people are making the decision on which league to play for with the success we've had being part of that."

In 2011, Quincy Youth Baseball's 15-16 program and 13-14 program both won state titles and advanced to the Eastern Regional in New Jersey. The players on these teams played for Quincy Youth Baseball's house league before being selected to play on the league's travel All-Star teams once the city season was completed.

"Our house league begins this year on April 21," Lynch noted before adding, "and in our league everyone gets a chance to play. The house schedule ends around mid-June and after a couple of weeks off we hold a tryout for the summer travel teams and they continue playing baseball."

Despite the fact that QYB spring registration closed on March 15, Lynch said that the league would still accommodate any player who was still searching for a place to play baseball this spring in Quincy. Visit www.quincyyouthbaseball.org or www.quincyyouthsoftball.org for additional information.

The newest option for 15-year olds looking to compete against high-level competition is Morrisette Legion's inaugural Junior Legion program.

Junior Legion is the new fad among cities and towns that offer American Legion level baseball. This 15-member team is expected to become a feeder system for Morrisette's Senior Legion team, which is currently the only legion baseball team in the city.

"(Morrisette) has always had a great rapport with Dick and Quincy Babe Ruth Baseball and we are sad to see them go," said Morrisette Manager Steve Maze about Quincy Babe Ruth League's decision to close shop. "They always provided us with good players and (Dick) ran that league for a long time. I played for the league as did all of my coaches."

The 13 and 14-year old ballplayers will have to wait their turn, but any interested 15-year old should come to the Morrisette tryouts when they begin the first weekend in May at O'Rourke Field, Maze said.

For additional information about the Morrisette program, email morrisettebaseball@aol.com.

Another league, one that does not fall under the same age requirement as Quincy Youth Baseball, Morrisette Junior Legion or the now defunct Quincy Babe Ruth League is the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth League out of South Boston, run by Bob Griffin and Steve Reardon.

Senior Babe Ruth is for players age 16-19. In previ-

This season Sacred Heart played local teams from the North End, St. Agatha's, Dorchester and even traveled to Yonkers, New York to play in a tournament.

ous seasons, the league has fielded two teams - Wollaston Black and Wollaston Blue. Depending on numbers, according to Griffin on Monday, the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth League will, again, have at least two teams competing against some of the best talent from Marshfield to South Boston.

"We will have as many teams as there are kids who can't play Legion Baseball," Griffin explained. "We are always looking to make ourselves available to high school and college kids who want to play baseball at a high level. Our teams play other towns that do not have legion baseball, like South Boston. We start tryouts (at O'Rourke Field) the first weekend of May."

Paul Fitzpatrick Pilots Boston State To Best Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

It isn't often a team enjoys its best season, wins a New England championship and goes on to the national playoffs with an interim coach, but Boston State's basketball team did just that with a Quincy coach who was supposed to give up the reins to the regular coach after just six games.

This Week
1977
35 Years Ago

Jim Loscutt had brought State to the top of NE Div. 3, but took a sabbatical and, in his place selected one of his former players, Quincy's Paul Fitzpatrick, who excelled for State in 1970-71 and went on to create a basketball program at Mass College of Pharmacy, to coach the team.

When Loscutt returned he found State, under Fitzpatrick who had captained Quincy's 1965-66 Tech Tourney team, with a 6-0 record.

"What could I do?" asked Loscutt. "He was doing a hell of a job and I couldn't just walk in on the team, my ego couldn't handle that. Besides, Paul had created his own rapport with the team and he developed his own coaching philosophy."

All Fitzpatrick, a lifelong Quincy resident and physical education instructor in Quincy, did was lead State to a 23-2 regular season record, defeat Suffolk, 83-73, and Brandeis, 95-69, to win the New England NCAA Div. 3 crown, before losing 82-71 to Oneonta State in the national quarterfinals.

"This was a great opportunity for me," said Fitzpatrick. "Jim paid me a big compliment in doing this. I would have favored whatever his decision was. He is a sound man ethically."

20 COMPLETE DIVING COURSE

Twenty residents between the ages of 8-12 recently completed a 12-week diving course sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department.

Held weekly as part of the department's programs at the Community School Pool, the course was taught by Ms. Joanne Kussman a water safety instructor and member of the QRD staff. The classes featured the fundamentals of diving while emphasizing the elements of safety and procedure.

Bishops Cheer Team Wins Div. 4 State Championship

The Archbishop Williams High School 2011-2012 cheerleading team defended their Division 4 state title on March 11 at Fairhaven High School. This was the third consecutive year for the Lady Bishops to bring home the state title.

"It is hard to win one championship, let alone three in a row," remarked Joe Francis, Athletic Director. "Congratulations to the coaches and cheerleaders on their 3-peat."

The Archies' cheerleaders will next compete at the US Spirit National Championships later this month in Orlando, Florida. The 19-member team is thrilled to be preparing for another rigorous season and to have the opportunity to compete at the national level for only the second time in school history.

Quincy residents Bridget Durkin, Ali Fareri, Callie Baker, Jenna Tobin, Victoria Galvin and Taylor Stewart were integral members of the Div. 4 state championship squad.

The accomplishments for the Archbishop Williams Cheer Team include: the MIAA Silver Academic Excellence Award winner with a team GPA of 2.85; placed third at the MA State Competition; placed second at the South Regional Competition; won the Catholic Central League competition for a fifth consecutive season, and placed second at the Braintree Invitational.

Quincy Residents Excelling At Collegiate Level

Several Quincy residents are making waves on the collegiate baseball scene already this year. Unlike high school baseball, which begins the first week in April, college baseball got underway late last month and Quincy's baseball talent is thriving at the next level.

LeBel Slowed By Injury

Mike LeBel of the University of Rhode Island, a major league prospect and a finalist for the prestigious Lowe's Senior CLASS Award, has been slowed by an injury to his left shoulder.

Baseball America predicted in the preseason that LeBel, who is co-captain and career home run leader for the Rams, to be the Atlantic 10 Conference Player of the Year and the publication listed him as a top-five major league prospect from the conference.

LeBel is one of 30 finalists, and the only player from the Atlantic 10 Conference, for the Lowe Award that recognizes collegiate seniors in four areas of excellence: community, classroom, character and competition.

Before his injury, LeBel was dominant in Rhode Island's first five games. He batted .538, had a home run and a slugging percentage of .923. LeBel has not been able to play over the past two weeks due to a sore shoulder.

Division 1 Updates

In addition to Mike LeBel, there are six other Quincy residents playing Division 1 baseball.

Glenn Misho is the ace pitcher for the University of Massachusetts-Amherst pitching staff. His battery mate is Tom Conley, who has caught every inning of the Minutemen's first six games.

Scott Warwick, a starting pitcher for Fairfield University is off to an excellent start this season. He has posted a 2.35 ERA, has a 1-1 record and has struck out 12 batters in 15 innings.

Kevin Magoon, a relief pitcher for Sacred Heart University, leads his team with five relief appearances.

At Northeastern, Ricky Salvucci and Matt Goreham played an exhibition game against the Boston Red Sox. (Editor's note: Read more about Salvucci and Goreham below.)

Division 3 Updates

Three other residents are playing Division 3 baseball: Kevin Keith, a pitcher for Colby Sawyer College, Matt Rodrigues, a catcher/infielder for Curry College and John Ainsley, an infielder/catcher for St. Lawrence University. Keith has had an excellent start as he was named the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Pitcher of the Week. He has a 0.64 ERA, 2-0 record and struck out 10 batters in 14 innings.

Northeastern vs. Red Sox

Five Residents Running Boston Marathon For Dana-Farber

On April 16, Quincy residents Emily Hanson, Sinead McGlynn, Jordan Moore, Kara O'Toole and Mark Porter will be running the 116th Boston Marathon to help conquer cancer as members of the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge team.

These five, along with Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge teammates from across the United States and around the world, will run the historic marathon route from Hopkinton to Boston with a goal to raise $4.8 million for cancer research at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

One-hundred percent of the funds raised by Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge team members benefit the Claudia Adams Barr Program in Innovative Basic Cancer Research at Dana-Farber, which funds basic research in its earliest stages, providing scientists with critical resources to test their innovative ideas.

Since its inception in 1990, the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge has raised more than $52 million for the Barr Program. Dana-Farber Trustees Delores Barr and Wayne Weaver founded the Barr Program in 1987 to honor Mrs. Weaver's mother, Claudia Adams Barr, who lost her battle with cancer in 1957.

To contribute to the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge or to support a Quincy runner, go online to www.RunDFMC.org or contact the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge office at 617-632-1970.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Put your restlessness to good use by indulging the Arian love of exploring new places and seeking new challenges. There also could be a new romance waiting to be "discovered."

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surprise message from someone in your past could lead to a long-awaited reunion with a once-close friend. Also, look for a workplace problem to be resolved in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your self-confidence is rising, and that should be a significant factor in helping you adjust to a new social situation, as well as adjusting to a series of changes in the workplace.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Turnabout could be lots of fun when someone who previously accepted your tender, loving care without question now suggests that he or she wants to start taking care of you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Put the lessons you learned from past disappointments to work in planning your future. The way ahead opens to opportunities "purrrfectly" suited to the adventurous Lion.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to renew contacts with family members and/or old friends who somehow slipped off your personal viewing screen in recent years. Travel also is favored.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Most problems surrounding that recent personal situation have been resolved, and that means you should move on to other things that are important to you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Spend this weekend recharging your physical and spiritual energies. When you return to your workaday world, you'll be ready to take on that new project.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Be careful how you advise a troubled friend. Even your wise counsel could be misunderstood. Better to suggest that he or she seek professional help.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family problems once again dominate and, once again, everyone seeks your guidance in these matters. Later, you can indulge in some much-needed relaxation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some mixed signals create confusion in the workplace. Best advice: Ask for explanations before you attempt to deal with any of these matters on your own.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A patch of roiling water in the workplace could be threatening, but stay the course and you'll soon be clear of it. Then go out and have a great time with loved ones.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your extraordinary leadership qualities mark you as someone people can turn to for guidance in difficult situations.

church, not a museum. We couldn't display the silver – it was too valuable. We're not organized like a museum. We couldn't afford to insure it. We didn't have the security and institutional support.

"We have a mission in the community and we want to be able to live that."

Other key church dates during Rev. Bennett's ministry include a congregational resolution in support of marriage equality (May, 2004); "People of Faith Marriage Equality" banner dedication ceremony April, 2006 and the recently completed $600,000 restoration of the bell tower.

"One of the reasons I accepted the call to become the minister of the church was the liberal religious faith as a congregation but there was the historical aspect of the building. We have a role to preserve and make open to the public a major asset of our national heritage," Rev. Bennett said.

The church first gathered in 1636 as a branch of Church of Boston. During its 376 years, the congregation of historic First Parish has played an important part in the building of the city, state and the country, Rev. Bennett noted. Two U.S. Presidents – John Adams and his son John Quincy Adams – were lifelong members of the church. Their tombs and the tombs of their wives – former First Ladies Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine – are located in the crypt of the church.

The Rev. John Hancock – father of Patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence John Hancock – served as a minister at the church. John Hancock was baptized by his father at the church.

"The members of the congregation and the ministry played a very important role in the founding of our country," Rev. Bennett said. "The whole movement to independence and the establishment of modern republican democracy began long before 1776. The conversations were going on at least two decades before and led in large measure by some of the clergy – but not all the clergy."

"They were leading a progressive movement within their congregational churches that ultimately evolved into American Unitarianism. But it was all happening in the early 1770s. The ideas that led to independence had if not their actual birth had an important locus within many of the congregations but not all."

Rev. Bennett said the Quincy church was on the progressive side of the debate. Today, there is a proud reminder of that liberal religious philosophy.

He notes wording on the new bronze bell atop the church includes a quote whose context is from a sermon given by the Rev. John Hancock on the occasion of the church's centennial. The quote reads: "Above all things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. This is the bond of union, the cement of societies."

"Rev. Hancock gave two sermons that day," Rev. Ben-

"I AM PROUD of what we've been able to achieve," says the Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, Ph.D., as he reflects on his 25 years as minister of United First Parish Church.

nett explains. "The quote that's on the bell comes from the second sermon. He was talking about how the congregation had reached out to the Christ Church Episcopal that was just getting organized. They had received their first minister – Ebenezer Miller – who began in 1727."

"At that time," Rev. Bennett continued, "the First Parish churches were supported by public taxation. Everyone who lived in the town paid a tax to support the minister of the First Parish as a public teacher of religion, piety and morality. But this congregation went out of its way to make sure that members of the Episcopal Church receive their fair share of the taxes."

"This was not the rule nor the common practice. There were often some animosity or suspicion between the colonial First Parish churches and the Church of England while we were moving toward independence."

"Quincy was very welcoming and Quincy has always had quite good relationships with other religions so when other churches came, no problem. When the first Catholic priest came to town, John Adams invited him over the house. Then he helped him set up the first Mass."

Rev. Bennett said Rev. Hancock was one of his role models.

"When I first came, I read the story of Rev. John Hancock and what he spoke about in that sermon – those friendly relationships with the Church of England."

"In that centennial sermon, Rev. Hancock wanted people to continue that spirit of brotherly love. So that inscription – 'Above all things, put on charity which is the bond of perfectness, this is the bond of societies. So this was about what holds society together. It's the spirit of goodwill.'"

That spirit of goodwill has been a recurring theme during Rev. Bennett's ministry.

"It was partly that and it's something that Unitarian-Universalists do generally. We look to build relationships with other religious traditions. We're not an exclusive sect. We respect the different religions of the world and it's part of who we are as Unitarian-Universalist ministers to foster ecclesiality and respect among different religions."

Looking back over the past 25 years, Rev. Bennett says he is proud of the progress the church and congregation has made.

"I am proud of what we've been able to achieve. For a congregation to go through a major transformation in terms of demographics, it's a slow, hard process. It just takes time. I think the church is well poised. We have young new leadership. We have very few people over age 65. Some of the people who joined 20 years ago are now nearing retirement but now they will have more energy for the church – and they're still young."

Has his ministry exceeded his expectations?

"Yes. I feel it's been a very satisfying and challenging ministry. I envy my successor in that I think the church is very healthy. It's thriving. It's small but growing. It's ready for new leadership."

"The city is going through an exciting transformation with the (downtown) redevelopment as well as demographically. It's becoming very diverse with people moving here from all over the country and world."

He says the prospects for United First Parish Church are bright.

"If I were a young minister, I would see this as a very attractive opportunity. I'm proud of my ministry and I'm proud of the congregation. I've often told the congregation how proud I am of them for some of the hard things that have occurred, such as this building restoration. That's a major undertaking for a small congregation. It stresses the leadership."

Rev. Bennett may be retiring from the church but he'll remain in Quincy with his wife, Molly.

"We'll continue living here but I will not be active in the congregation. It's probably my responsibility to my successor and the interim minister to withdraw at least temporarily from the congregation for a period of time. I'll probably become active in another Unitarian-Universalist congregation probably in Boston."

He admits 25 years has passed "pretty quickly."

"I came here and I knew we had a little roof restoration and that took 25 years in stages. There's still more work to do. There are some windows to restore, there are doors. But the major work is done."

The timing, he says, is right for his departure.

"The congregation is in a good place to move forward with new leadership. The congregation is quite united in their sense of mission. The church has a strong sense of purpose with energy and commitment. It's a small but very strong committed congregation. It's ready for new leadership."

"They did it themselves but I feel as their minister I played an important role in that, sometimes in spite of myself. Not all of my visions were shared and sometimes we were in relative strong disagreement about things but we stayed together as a community and we worked through it."

After Rev. Bennett retires, the church will appoint an interim minister for probably two years to work with the congregation and preparing them to call a new pastor.

"The interim minister will also provide a transition from my ministry to the next ministry," Rev. Bennett said. "It's always wise to have a one or two years in between. We use the word settled."

"I was a settled minister. The interim minister was not a settled minister. It's deliberately and intentionally a short-term ministry. It's a specialized ministry and they are most effective when everyone know they are just there for two years. They have a job to do. It's to help the congregation get ready to call a settled minister. They have work to do in terms of organization and some things they have to work through."

The interim minister will be known by May and begin in August.

His words of wisdom to his successor:

"Serve the people, serve the community and live our faith."

Lawsuit Challenges Local Hiring Preference; Mayor Maintains School Opening In 2013

City's Residency Rule Defense Won't Delay Central Timetable

Mayor Thomas Koch's decision to defend a City law that requires a hiring preference for Quincy residents on public projects is not expected to delay the new Central Middle School's scheduled 2013 opening, the mayor's office said Tuesday.

A special interest group from outside of Quincy - the Merit Construction Alliance - has filed a lawsuit in United States District Court challenging the local law that sets employment standards for major public projects in the City called a Responsible Employer Ordinance.

The law requires contractors working on major projects in the City to hire a percentage of Quincy residents if possible, provide fair wages and benefits to employees, and to provide a certified apprentice program for young workers seeking to become tradesmen.

Mold Concerns Aired At QHA Board Meeting

By KRISTINA KALABOKAS

Issues regarding possible mold contamination took center stage at last Wednesday's meeting of the Quincy Housing Authority Board of Commissioners.

The session began with a formal complaint presented by Regina Jones-Jenkins, commissioner of the Harborview Residents' Committee, regarding the alleged presence of mold in several units of the Snug Harbor and Riverview complexes.

According to Jones-Jenkins, a tenant was recently hospitalized due to a respiratory illness resulting from exposure to toxic mold present in her apartment. "Mold is severe," she said. "It makes people very sick." She stated the resident no longer feels safe in her unit and has chosen to stay with an acquaintance during her recovery.

Jones-Jenkins, a psychotherapist, went on to say that prolonged exposure to mold has not only adverse effects on one's physical well-being, but can also cause mental health issues such as anxiety and clinical depression.

She then told board members that during a recent visit to one of the units, she witnessed pieces of the mold-covered ceiling crumble onto a kitchen counter, contaminating all nearby food. The resident of

Modest Price Increase Also Seen

School Lunches Dietary Changes Coming

By EMILY TAFT

The prices and food served during school breakfasts and lunches in Quincy Public Schools will be changing drastically starting next year, according to the Director of Food Services Joanne Morrissey who presented the changes to school committee members at its March 21st meeting.

The new nutrition requirements take effect July

1. According to Morrissey, the schools have already been slowly implementing the new regulations since the new nutrition standards were published in January.

Along with the changes in food there will be an increase in the price per meal, but Morrissey said that she doesn't see the increase exceeding more than 10 cents, which is the average for most schools. Presently, the regular price for the elementary school lunches is $1.25, for the middle school $2, and for high school students $2.50.

"From what I gather when the new regulations come into effect we are maybe looking at a mandated five cent increase," said School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. "The reduced lunches and free lunches I believe

Keynote Speaker's Message At Fifth Annual Drug, Alcohol Abuse Awareness Night Co-Hosted By Houghs Neck Community Council 'Drug Use Doesn't Discriminate'

By KRISTINA KALABOKAS

The Houghs Neck Community Council and Life Community Church of Quincy hosted their fifth annual Drug and Alcohol Abuse Awareness Night on Sunday at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Discussion focused primarily on educating Quincy residents about various types of drugs, their effects, and how to seek help for friends or family members with substance abuse problems.

The evening's key note speaker was Vivian Winters, the Wing Director of Psychological Health at the 179th Air National Guard Unit, and a licensed independent social worker and chemical dependency counselor.

Winters, herself a recovering addict, began with a message which proved to be the underlying theme to her lecture:

"One thing I will tell you about drug use which probably is not new to you is it doesn't discriminate," she said. "It doesn't matter what race you are, it doesn't matter what gender, it doesn't matter what social economic class you're from. Once it gets you, it gets you."

VIVIAN WINTERS

Winters presented slides, illustrating a variety of drugs, and spoke briefly on the consequences associated with their abuse. Included were stimulants such as cocaine, inhalants such as gasoline, opiates such as heroin and prescription pain-killers, and relatively new designer drugs known as "bath salts," which are a mixture of potentially lethal amphetamine-like chemicals distributed in a crystalized form.

Winters, who was flown in to speak from her hometown of Mansfield, Ohio, advised the crowd to be vigilant in recognizing new trends in drug use, stating that "bath salts" could become the next trend amongst local addicts.

"I have been through many ups and downs in my recovery, and you'll hear most people who are in recovery say it's a lifelong process," said Winters in concluding her presentation. "Whether it's drugs and alcohol, whatever you may be recovering from in your life, it goes on for many years. I am very blessed to be able to stand up here because it could have been me that died. It could have been me that spent my life in prison."

Speaking on behalf of EDAN, a non-profit organization aimed at providing support to individuals and families struggling with drug addiction, were Nancy Holler and Kathy Deady.

"We decided we need to help people. We need to be proactive and educate people, and prevention is key" said Holler. "We exist to create a safe, drug-free community through training and support."

Deady commended the Quincy Police Department for their procedure known as "therapeutic arrest," wherein a police officer escorts an individual suspected of being on narcotics to a nearby emergency room or a holding cell for the evening. "They will help you find help for this person," she said. "They won't arrest them. They won't press charges against them, especially if it's a drug type situation."

Also discussed by Deady and Holler was the City of Quincy's Drug Task Force, whose website can be found at www.quincyma.gov/Government/BOARD/COM/DrugTaskForce.cfm. The task force, commissioned by Mayor Koch in April of 2008, meets monthly to discuss ways in which to combat the spreading drug epidemic in Quincy. Their website provides links to programs and resources dedicated to the treatment and management of substance abuse, and to support groups for addicts and their families.

Rose and Mary, who wished to have their last names omitted, represented Learn 2 Cope, a non-profit support group started in 2004. "Unfortunately, the need for this type of resource is growing on a daily basis," said Rose. "We support our own recovery, as well as helping our loved ones into recovery as well."

Message boards, a blog detailing upcoming events, and a listing of all Narcotics Anonymous and Alcoholics Anonymous meetings in the Metro-Boston area are available on their website, learn2cope.org

Houghs Neck Community Council member Aaron Cavin said he wants to make a difference in the city of Quincy.

"This is an issue that affects everyone...whether we choose to acknowledge it or not, it's happening," he said. "We desire, as the Houghs Neck Community Council, to make a blue print for the rest of the city, for other councils, for other schools, and for other organizations around the city who will participate in this and shed a lot of light on the issue at hand, which is the abuse of drugs in our city."

Financing City Hall, Coddington School Projects On Council Agenda Monday

How the city plans to pay for proposed renovations of Old City Hall and the Coddington School will be on the agenda for Monday's City Council meeting.

Mayor Tom Koch has proposed using bonds to pay the $18 million cost to rehab the buildings. During Monday's meeting, officials from the mayor's finance team will brief the council on the bonds' details, according to Council President Mike McFarland.

"At the next council meeting we have our city's financial advisor and our bond counselor and our chief financial officer coming in to explain to us how the payment system would basically work," McFarland said.

McFarland expects that the bond matter will then be brought up at the council's next Finance Committee meeting in April.

The city expects to pay between $1 million and $1.2 million annually on the bonds, according to mayoral spokesman Chris Walker. Walker presented the renovation plans to the council at its March 19 meeting.

The mayor is seeking to have most of that amount - $900,000 - charged to the city's Community Preservation Act (CPA) fund. CPA funding comes from a surcharge on property taxes and can be used for open space protection, historic preservation, affordable housing and outdoor recreation. The mayor needs approval from city's community preservation committee before he can charge the project to that account. Recently, the city paid off a $900,000-a-year CPA bond used to purchase open space.

The remaining amount, between $100,000 and $200,000 depending on interest rates, would be paid by debt service. Walker said the city would end up saving money because it currently pays $460,000 to rent space for offices that would move into the renovated buildings.

If the council approves the project and designs are finalized, the city will apply for grants to help pay for renovations, according to Jim Edwards, the architect who planned the new design for City Hall.

"Once we know what some of the historic renovation efforts will really entail we can start to talk to people, 'hey can you help us out,'" Edwards said. "We plan on looking high and low for grant money for this project when it's time."

After $8.2M In Renovations Turn Of 20th Century 'New Look' For Old City Hall

By SCOTT JACKSON

While the plan to restore Old City Hall isn't set in stone just yet, the building will likely end up looking as it would have around the turn of the 20th century.

Mayor Thomas Koch proposed spending $8.2 million to renovate the building, formally known as the James R. McIntyre Government Center, at last Monday's City Council meeting. At that meeting, mayoral spokesman Chris Walker and architect Jim Edwards released blueprints for the building; plans by architect Steve Wessling on a related project to renovate the Codrington School at a cost of $9.8 million were also unveiled at the meeting.

In an interview Friday, Edwards said the designs are 95 percent done, but they're holding off on some of the finer details until the project receives final blessing.

"We've already started on stair details and roof details and our mechanical and electrical engineers have started all their studies," said Edwards, the president of architectural firm Holmes & Edwards, Inc. "We didn't feel it was appropriate to have those go much farther until the city as a whole – the council, the mayor, our restoration committee – gives this plan final approval. Then we really charge hard to get the details accomplished."

Some details are already coming to fruition, however. The proposed City Council chamber, referred to as the Great Hall, will span the width of the building as it did prior to the installation of council offices

Council Commends Tom O'Brien

Auto Dealer Praised For Charitable Work, Hiring Local Residents

The City Council recently honored retired car dealer Tom O'Brien.

For 40 years, O'Brien owned a car dealership on the corner and Washington Street and Southern Artery in Quincy Point. Earlier this year, he sold his business to Prime Motor Group, which is owned by a friend of O'Brien. O'Brien still owns the land the dealership is on, however, and his daughter will still manage the dealership.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall presented the commendation to O'Brien, praising him for being able to stay in business through both high and low periods in the economy. He also thanked O'Brien for hiring neighborhood residents.

"One of the neat things you did as a partner in the community was hire local residents, people living in Quincy Point," Croall said. "That's an important thing."

Croall went on to praise O'Brien for the work he did for the Jimmy Fund. "He's very involved in the Jimmy Fund," he said, "he's stays active, not only with his resources but with his time guiding and working with kids struggling with cancer."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin told his colleagues he once called O'Brien on behalf of a constituent who had issues with a car. "He accepted my phone call and got right to the heart of the matter," Coughlin said. "Within days the problem was resolved because he is a man who believes in customer service."

O'Brien, a Lynn native, said he was thankful for all he'd gotten from Quincy.

"When I came to Quincy

40 years ago, coming from a great city – 'Lynn, Lynn the city of sin' – I thought 'what the hell am I doing here? This city is crazy,' but I was soon to realize everything I had hoped for in my hometown in Lynn was happening here in Quincy and it was not happening there," O'Brien said. "I've gotten so much more from the City of Quincy than I ever gave."

O'Brien also drew some laughs with a couple jokes.

"The only two things that I wished that had happened," O'Brien said, "I only sold Mr. (Dan) Raymond one car, I wish I had a chance to sell him one more and the other thing is one of these days I'm going to play golf with Joe Shea, and I'm going to let you know how bad he is."

Following the presentation, Croall presented O'Brien an oversized key on behalf of Quincy Point and Ward 2 residents.

Kiwanis Junior Heroes: Making A Difference

They are an inspiration, role models and exceptional students.

And you can find them at any local school.

Right here in Quincy.

They are this year's class of Kiwanis Junior Heroes.

And while excelling in the classroom, they also stand out in their community service endeavors.

For the seventh consecutive year, the Kiwanis Club of Quincy recently recognized 26 local elementary, middle and high school students for making a positive difference in their community and the world. The honorees received the Junior Hero Award named in memory of Patrick To-land White, who was also a hero in his own right.

Patrick, who was afflicted with a rare form of cancer, touched many lives, especially other children with cancer. He passed away at the much-too-young age of 15 in 2005.

Every spring, the Quincy Kiwanis Club remembers Patrick's courageous life and brief-but-shining legacy of helping others by presenting its Junior Hero Awards. The recipients - like Patrick - possess the qualities of honesty, compassion for others and selflessness.

Here are profiles of this year's award recipients with excerpts taken from the Kiwanis Junior Hero Breakfast program.

It contained: approximately 33,000 books at various levels, 450 athletic balls, 3 computers and many board games, puzzles and educational toys. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 4, 1812, President James Madison fires an economic salvo at the British government and enacts a 90-day embargo on trade with England. The embargo did little to forestall war: The British refused to cease harassing American ships, prompting Madison to lead America into the War of 1812.

• On April 3, 1860, the first Pony Express mail simultaneously leaves St. Joseph, Mo., heading west, and Sacramento, Calif., heading east on a 1,800-mile journey. On April 13, the westbound packet arrived in Sacramento, beating the eastbound packet by two days.

• On April 7, 1891, American showman Phineas Taylor Barnum dies in Bridgeport, Conn. The 81-year-old showman's sense of humor never deserted him. He requested that a New York newspaper run his obituary before he died so he could enjoy reading it, and the paper obliged.

• On April 2, 1902, the first American theater devoted solely to movies opens in Los Angeles. Housed in a circus tent, the venue was dubbed "The Electric Theater." Admission cost 10 cents for a one-hour show.

• On April 5, 1931, Fox Film Corp. drops John Wayne from its roster of actors. Wayne had played bit parts but failed to impress the studio. In 1939, Wayne finally had his breakthrough in "Stagecoach." He went on to play in dozens of movies, including "True Grit," for which he won an Oscar in 1969.

• On April 6, 1970, Sam Sheppard, a doctor convicted of murdering his pregnant wife in a trial that caused a media frenzy in the 1950s, dies of liver failure. After a decade in prison, Sheppard was found "not guilty" in a second trial in 1966. "The Fugitive" television series and movie were rumored to have been loosely inspired by the story.

Quincy School, ATLANTIC, Mass.

THIS IS AN old postcard view of the Quincy Elementary School on the corner of Botolph Street and Newbury Avenue in Atlantic. The picture was taken shortly after the school was built in 1909. This building was distinguished by the polished Quincy granite columns adorning its unique porticos. There were a few classrooms in a small wing in the rear when the school opened, but several more classrooms were added in a large addition to the building in the 1940s. Declared surplus by the city in the early 1980's, the school was sold and converted into condominiums. The original Quincy Grammar School was a wood frame building that was on a site now the East Squantum Street side of North Quincy High School. It was demolished when this school opened. Mother Nature Kicks Up Her Heels

High seas, raised by gale force winds, isolated large areas of homes in Houghs Neck and Squantum and caused an estimated $500,000 in damage on the South Shore, largely in Quincy and Hull.

Tides three feet above normal put the Squantum Causeway under one foot of water and homes in the Rhoda and Rockland Street sections of Houghs Neck were flooded. Winds were clocked at 53 mph at the Blue Hill Observatory.

Fire Chief Thomas F. Gorman ordered a ladder truck from the Atlantic station to standby duty in Squantum and assigned extra men to the Houghs Neck station, which was all but inaccessible from the outside.

'ILLEGAL' SIGNS HELP

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa reported the new "walk" and "don't walk" signs put up in Quincy Square have been effective in reducing automobile-pedestrian accidents. Unfortunately, he said, the signs are illegal.

Della Chiesa, who is also a state representative from Quincy, spoke in support of a bill that would legalize the signs before Legislative Committee on Highways and Motor Vehicles.

QEN Begins Spring Membership Drive

Since its founding 11 years ago, the Quincy Environmental Network has changed the face of environmental activism and politics in the city of Quincy.

QEN is made up of a large group of people who work tirelessly to make environmental issues a priority for our elected officials and city administrators. QEN members have contributed to creating an informed citizenry through regular informational meetings, public environmental advocacy, candidates' nights on the environment and a fantastic web site at www.QENET.org. QEN has supported environmental education, promoted recycling, advocated for the protection of land for open space, worked to create more parks and recreational trails, and have led the way towards decreasing Quincy's carbon footprint.

Each spring QEN looks to the community to support its work, and to its members to renew their membership.

Steve Perdios of the QEN Executive Committee reports that "QEN operates on a tiny budget with minimal resources."

If you feel QEN is doing important work, consider supporting them by sending a check payable to Quincy Environmental Network at PO Box 690184, Quincy MA 02269 or go on line to the QEN web site for more information about donating and volunteer opportunities.

Make supporting the Quincy Environmental Network a top priority. Time again to think globally, act locally, start with the city of Quincy.

150 signatures; the mayor explained then that as far as the Winfield Elm was concerned, nothing had been finalized.

Ward 5 Councilor, Kirsten Hughes also has just received a copy of the first round of petitions. We can only hope that through this public outcry; a solution that includes the saving of the tree will be found.

At the end of this month the final round of petitions will be delivered to the mayor's office. If there is anyone still holding on to petitions; they should be mailed as soon as possible to: Friends of the Winfield Elm, PO Box 147, Wollaston, MA 02170.

If you want to let the mayor know how you feel about the Winfield Elm it is never too late to contact his

'John Adams & The American Experiment' Series Continues At Crane Library

Newbury College Professor of History Dan Breen offers a close look at the life and career of John Adams at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The free series combines film clips, readings and discussions.

A key participant in almost all of the major events of the revolutionary and early republican periods, Adams thought as deeply about the nature of America's experiment in self-rule as any of his associates in the founding generation. His experiences offer a matchless sense of the obstacles faced by that generation not only in breaking away from the British Empire, but in forging a new political arrangement likely to stand the test of time.

Session Three, "The White House Years," will be held Tuesday, April 3 at 7 p.m.

Adams prided himself—perhaps excessively so—on his devotion to the "common good" regardless of selfish party programs. In the violent partisan atmosphere of the 1790s, President Adams would find that cherished self-image sternly tested, as the young United States found itself on the brink of war with its former French allies. In stepping back from the brink and opting for peace, Adams both lived up to his own sense of what a statesman should be, and prevented a war that might have led to the early disintegration of the union.

Session Four, "The Long Retirement," will be held on Tuesday, April 17 at 7 p.m.

For 25 years, Adams, his public career at an end, lived a quiet life in Quincy. It was in these years that he renewed his friendship with Thomas Jefferson, with whom he had bitterly quarreled during his tumultuous presidency. The series takes a close look at that correspondence to see what it reveals about Adams' mature views about republican government, while looking also at the blossoming career of John Quincy Adams, Abigail and John's precocious son.

Local Author Kevin Glennon's First Novel Released This Week

Local author Kevin Glennon's first novel, "Vikings, Vampires, and Mailmen" hit bookshelves this week. The book is a military-fiction, action-adventure piece that brings horror back to horror stories.

"I understand the popularity of books like Twilight," Glennon notes, "But sparkly vampires? Monsters are to be feared — they eat people! What happened to the monsters from Creature Double Feature on Saturday morning television?"

The book is about a group of vampire hunters who work for the Postal Inspectors office, the police arm of the United States Post Office. They are called in when a vampire outbreak hits a rural town in Alabama, and threatens to grow out of control.

"They work for the Post Office because nobody notices mail trucks," said Glennon. "If they flew in on black helicopters everyone in the neighborhood would come running, but if a big mail truck drove down the street, you wouldn't look twice."

Glennon, a former Emergency Medical Technician, interviewed countless military personnel and federal and local police officers to add a gritty sense of reality to his work. "Vikings, Vampires, and Mailmen" is as technical as a Tom Clancy book, but is more about the story of the characters, much like the television show, Rescue Me.

A book release party will be held Saturday, March 31 at the new Presidents Rock Club in Quincy Center. The event is open to the public from 4 to 8 p.m.

The book is published by Macropop Press, and is available online in eBook and print formats.

'What Did John And Abigail Eat?' Topic

Find out about American foodways of the 18th and 19th centuries at a free presentation entitled 'Dining With My Dearest Friend: John & Abigail at Table' tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

In their illustrated talk, Keith Stavely and Kathleen Fitzgerald will outline these diverse strands in New England cooking during the lifetimes of the Adamses. Stavely and Fitzgerald will also show how they themselves have prepared several of the representative recipes from that time period that are included in their recent book, "Northern Hospitality: Cooking by the Book in New England."

Stavely is a writer, scholar, and former library director whose interest in the Puritan influence on American and English culture has resulted in a number of critically-esteemed books and articles. He has been a Guggenheim and American Council of Learned Societies fellow and a winner of the Modern Language Association Prize for Independent Scholars. The place of food in Anglo-American culture is a more recent passion.

Fitzgerald holds a Master of Divinity degree and a Master of Library Studies. She has worked as a college chaplain, a soup kitchen coordinator, and for many years as a public librarian in urban settings. A native New Englander and an avid cook, she has a deep interest in the region's complex social and culinary history.

Independent scholars Stavely and Fitzgerald are also husband and wife. They have written two books together: Northern Hospitality: Cooking by the Book in New England (University of Massachusetts Press, 2011), and America's Founding Food: The Story of New England Cooking (University of North Carolina Press, 2004). They make their home in Jamestown, Rhode Island.

This program is presented as part of John Adams Unbound, a special program and exhibition series about John Adams and his library. The series has been made possible through a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the American Library Association.

For more information, visit thomascranepubliclibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

'President And Mrs. Adams' Children's Program Saturday

On Saturday, March 31st from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., President John Adams (Thomas Macy) and Mrs. Abigail Adams (Patricia Bridgman) along with their friends and neighbors invite families with children 5 and older to spend a day in the 18th century.

Various stations will be set up on the ground floor of the Main Library in Quincy Square where children and adults can learn about life during John Adams' lifetime.

Try on 18th century clothing. Learn about colonial money and how to use a counting board. See an Aesop's fable performed by shadow puppets. Learn to write with a quill pen and how to play 18th century games. Drill with the local militia and more as you spend the day in the 18th century. At noon President Adams will hold a news conference. Students from the Woodward School will take on the roles of 18th century journalists, asking President Adams questions about the events of his time and his involvement in the creation of the new nation.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Pot Roast With A Twist

While talking to my son Jim who lives in New York, we were talking about food (naturally), and on weekends he loves to cook up something different.

And so this time, he had made a pot roast with a twist (his wife Suzanne's recipe). He used tomato paste, and it changes the flavor in a good way.

And it sounded so good, because everything is made in one pot. I asked for the recipe for today's column.

He used a Dutch oven pan because he cooked it on top of the stove, but it can be done in the oven also, or a crock-pot.

POT ROAST WITH A TWIST

3-4 pounds beef (he used top of the round)
3 medium sized potatoes (cut in halves)
3 carrots (cut up)
2 garlic cloves
1 onion (sliced)
1 can of tomato paste (plus 2 cans water)
1 cup brown gravy
½ cup Burgundy wine (optional)
Salt and pepper to taste
1-cup chicken stock
3 tablespoons oil for bottom of pot

In a pot, place the oil on the bottom. Add the onion and garlic; season the roast with salt and pepper and any favorite herbs. Add all vegetables, then the roast, and then add the tomato paste (mixed with the water,) the gravy, wine and chicken stock.

Cook on medium heat from 3-4 hours depending on the size of the roast.

P.S. When I have made a pot roast, I like to serve it with a popover. They're pretty easy and wonderful with the roast.

POPOVERS

2 eggs
1-cup flour
1-cup milk
1-tablespoon vegetable oil
½ teaspoon salt

In a mixing bowl, beat the eggs with a beater or electric mixer, add the flour and the milk, oil and salt. Beat until smooth.

Fill 6-8 well-greased tins ½ full. Bake in a 475-degree oven for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 and bake 25-30 minutes longer or until firm and browned.

A few minutes before removing them from the oven, prick each one with a fork to allow steam to escape. Serve hot.

Quincy Police Arrest Suspected Drug Dealer

By LT. DAN MINTO
Quincy Police Crime
Prevention Officer

On Thursday, March 22, the Quincy Police Drug Unit executed a search warrant at an apartment of 50 Harrington Avenue in Quincy.

During the month of March, detectives conducted an investigation into the occupants of the apartment and determined that the tenant, Keicia Williams, was selling crack cocaine. As a result of the investigation, Detective Coen applied for and was granted a Search Warrant for the apartment.

At 5 p.m., the Drug Unit along with Community Police Officer Matt Miller entered the apartment and found Williams and her boyfriend home. Once they were secured, a thorough search was conducted.

A search of the kitchen revealed a box of plastic sandwich bags inside a cabinet. Inside the sandwich box was a razor blade which had a yellowish white residue on it believed to be crack cocaine. Another razor blade with the residue was found inside a kitchen drawer.

A medal spoon was found on top of a kitchen cabinet and this had a brown residue believed to be heroin. There was also a cuff sheet found indicating past drug sales and money owed.

As a result of the items found during the search warrant, Keicia Williams was placed under arrest for Possession of Class A (heroin) and Possession of Class B (cocaine). The brown residue located on the medal spoon was field tested using an opiates test kit and the results were positive for heroin. The razor blade located in the kitchen drawer was field tested using a cocaine wipe and this also tested positive for cocaine.

The suspect, Keicia Williams, was transported to the station for booking, but due to her hostile behavior was unable to be booked immediately.

This is not the first run-in Ms. Williams has had with the Quincy Police Department. In September 2011, with the assistance of the landlord and Quincy District Court, Officer Miller was able to get Ms. Williams evicted from her apartment on Whiton Avenue due to the amount of calls (24 in a year) as well as the seriousness of the incidents, which involved domestic violence and assaults. The peace of the neighborhood was restored. Ms. Williams moved out of the city, but only briefly, returning in December 2011.

It didn't take long before officers were responding to her new address of 50 Harrington Avenue for the same type of calls. Based on her past history, Officer Miller contacted the landlord, who said he was unaware of past problems that Ms. Williams caused but was willing to work with the Quincy Police.

After the third call for police services, the landlord, at the direction of the Police, served her with a notice of warning. During this time, the Drug Unit and the Community Policing Unit worked to gather information to support a search warrant.

Now that the arrest has been made, the landlord, who held off on the eviction notice at the Police department's request, will go forward with the notice. This is the second residence in Quincy that Ms. Williams will face eviction for, so Boston Housing (which oversees her) will be notified in hopes of barring her from living in Quincy.

Although this is just one case in many, it shows how the cooperation of the landlord(s), Quincy District Court Judges and the Police Department are able to restore peace and safety to a neighborhood.

Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan commented on the success of the current program involving Quincy District Court, the landlords and the Police.

"This is a unique approach to resolving repeat visits by Officers to bad tenants," Chief Keenan said. "Often times, landlords are unaware of the problems at their properties, so the Community Police Officer will contact the landlord and review calls there. A plan is created based on the degree of the problem and if eviction appears to be the only alternative, the officer will go to Quincy District Court with the landlord, testifying about the amount and severity of calls during a hearing."

"The Judges have been very supportive of restoring peace to the neighborhood."

For more information on this program or if you are living next to a disruptive neighbor, contact Lieutenant Dan Minton of the Crime Prevention Unit at (617) 745 5719.

Mold Concerns Aired At QHA Board Meeting

the unit reportedly no longer cooks in her kitchen due to this incident.

"This is very, very upsetting," she said. "There are obligations from the landlord which are due to the residents and there are obligations due from the residents to the landlord." Jones-Jenkins said she felt that the Quincy Housing Authority, or QHA, was failing in its role as landlord to provide safe housing to its residents.

"We've had our staff in there [Riverview] extensively over the last couple of weeks," said Executive Director Joseph A. MacRitchie. He said the installation of a new heating system at Snug Harbor provided "a substantial reduction in mold issues...we do still have steam heat in Riverview and that still continues to be a problem."

"It's certainly something we're very concerned about," said Commissioner Deacon John Menz.

The QHA agreed to investigate the matter further and to discuss any decisions made regarding the alleged mold issue at a subsequent meeting.

Also discussed was the motion to authorize the entrance of the QHA into a contract with Quincy College to provide job readiness training to residents of family housing and Section 8 housing who are currently unemployed and wish to reenter the workforce. Services to be offered include computer and occupational training, life enrichment, and an afterschool homework program.

MacRitchie said he was excited to "move forward" with the proposal, which calls for a one-year contract with Quincy College, at a cost of $79,973 per year, with the option to extend the agreement for two additional one-year terms.

The QHA has worked the previous four years with Operation A.B.L.E., providing similar job-preparedness training to Quincy residents. According to MacRitchie, entering into a contract with Quincy College as opposed to Operation A.B.L.E. would save the board upwards of $20,000 a year.

The motion was approved through a unanimous vote.

One of the final items on the evening's agenda was the authorization of the entrance into a contract with Kone, Inc. for the full replacement of an elevator at the Drohan Apartments. According to building managers, the elevators are outdated and the previous replacement of a major mechanical element was insufficient in keeping the elevator fully operational.

The construction would prove difficult as the Drohan Apartments have no additional elevators and no handicap accessibility. Disabling the use of the elevator "will be problematic," said MacRitchie, in regards to second and third-floor residents who use wheelchairs, walkers, and canes.

"We will be working with the residents to make sure this is accomplished," he said.

The motion is pending approval as building managers find a way to resolve any possible accessibility limitations during the proposed elevator replacement.

Young Workers, Spring Into Action!

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

If you're a young worker, retirement probably seems like a lifetime away. In fact, you may wonder if your contributions to Social Security, deducted from your paycheck, actually cover you for anything right now. The answer is yes, they do. And the time to learn about Social Security and what it can do for you is now.

By working in a job covered by Social Security, you are earning disability and survivor insurance protection. For example, a worker under age 24 paying Social Security taxes for as little as one and a half years may be insured for disability and survivors benefits.

If you're like most workers, you probably don't have private long-term disability insurance. But you do have disability protection through Social Security, which provides coverage to you and your family if you become disabled. About one in four of today's 20-year-olds will become disabled before reaching age 67 — so it could happen to you. The average disability benefit paid in 2012 to a worker with a spouse and two children is $1,892 a month.

Social Security also provides valuable survivors benefits. It is a sad truth that about one in eight young Americans can expect to die before reaching age 67. Social Security's survivors insurance pays an average monthly benefit in 2012 of $2,543 for a spouse and two children of a young worker with average wages who dies.

Social Security provides you and your family with protection now. But it's good to think ahead to retirement, too.

Young workers, spring into action and learn more about your own retirement! A good way to start is by checking out the Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator. Using this online tool, you can get an instant, personalized estimate of your own future benefits. That will be a big help in deciding how much you need to save for a comfortable retirement.

For more information on how Social Security protects younger and older workers alike, visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Boy Scout Troop 24 Community Pancake Breakfast Saturday

Boy Scout Troop 24 will hold a community pancake breakfast Saturday, March 31 from 8 to 10 a.m. at the First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Squantum.

Proceeds from the breakfast will go to support local Troop 24 members in attending summer camp at T.L. Storer in Barnstead, N.H. Summer camp is important for the development of Scouts, as they learn valuable skills which they bring back to their Troop and community.

Troop 24 is represented by boys from Squantum and North Quincy and is run by Scoutmaster Karl DeBisschop. In the past few years the Scouts have preformed valuable community service including building a handicap ramp for the First Church of Squantum, cleaning of community parks, and assisting Father Bills in "Spread the Bread."

The suggested donation is $5 per person, and all are welcome to attend.

Tickets will be available at the door.

Those who cannot attend but would like to make a donation, can send a contribution to: C/O Karl DeBisschop, 39 Wedgewood St., Quincy, MA 02171.

A Message From Councillor Coughlin: Donors Beware

With spring seemingly present by virtue of May like temperatures as I write this, the urge to do some spring cleaning comes to mind.

As the seasons change, many of us may consider what to do with clothes and shoes that are outdated, or just don't fit anymore.

In a drive by world, (drive up tellers, fast food, coffee shops, and even weddings ;yes you can married in Quincy by one local JP without stepping from your car) the easy thing to do is to look for one of the those convenient donation bins populating parking lots throughout the city. No need to go down to the Goodwill Thrift Store or the Salvation Army or wait for Big Brother/Big Sister to come to your home.

But are all organizations that place bins in our city the same?

It might not be the case.

Some organizations like Goodwill and the Salvation Army, as well as Big Brother Big Sister have a solid and stable history of converting the donations they receive into local use and in a cost effective manner.

The Salvation Army for example converts 84% of its charitable donations into programs for those in need. Goodwill converts 89% of its funds for programs while Big Brother/Big Sister's rate is 86%.

The balance of funds is understandably consumed by administrative and fund raising costs. These three non profits consistently receive the highest ratings from the Better Business Bureau's Wise Giving Report. They are true non-profits.

Controversy still remains however about other organizations like Planet Aid. A recent Charity Watch audit by the American Institute of Philanthropy showed that only 34% of their revenues actually go to programs serving primarily third world countries. Translation, when you donate an article of clothing only 34 cents of each dollar of its value is converted into a benefit.

It makes sense to be circumspect when you donate so that your rags, (so to speak) do not become an organization's riches rather than serving a worthy purpose. Similarly, concerns have also been raised about the connection between the non-profit Reading Tree and Thrift Recycling Management a for-profit which resells many of the donated books on Amazon.com.

Nationally only about 25% of the books donated go to non-profits. Once again it pays to do your homework and donate to local libraries, book clubs, schools and locally based non-profits.

As a footnote, directly related to the concern over ensuring the public benefit of these donation bins is the need to regulate their placement and maintenance within our city.

As their numbers continue to grow and multiply, with no present mechanism in effect, I have crafted an ordinance, not unlike the City of Boston and other municipalities, to regulate donation bins and provide a data base for enforcement so that they don't become blighted structures.

It is clearly important to support true charitable endeavors and environmentally we as citizens save on our solid waste costs when no longer used textiles are recycled rather than placed in the trash.

We just need to make sure it is all done responsibly.

Kevin F. Coughlin
Ward Three Councillor

Thank You Coach Brian Buckley

I heard the news the other day that Quincy native Brian Buckley, varsity girls' basketball coach of the Scituate High Sailors, is retiring from coaching.

Just a couple of weeks ago, Coach Buckley led his Scituate Sailors to the Eastern Massachusetts State Championship game against Reading which was played at the Boston Garden. It brought back great memories for me as I brought my daughter Amanda to the game.

I first met Coach Buckley as a small, eight-year-old kid while going to Saturday morning recreation at the old Central Junior High School gym. He was my first basketball coach and he, along with Mr. Coughlin, taught me how to play basketball and most importantly, to have fun playing sports.

He did more than just coach. He helped build my self esteem and confidence in that old gym. Isn't that what coaching is all about?

He would announce every kid's last name like "Johnny Most" when we dribbled the ball and would keep track of how many points you scored on that particular day.

He taught me how to run the "weave" and to dribble with both hands. "You need to do that to be a double-threat, Coach Buckley would say. He would show up next week and our names were posted on walls of Central Junior High, like we were important, special, and difference.

Because of him, I too was able to play on the parquet floor of the Boston Garden when Central played Montclair for the Quincy City Basketball Championship. Think about it. Quincy kids playing basketball on the same court as the Boston Celtics.

I could not wait to go to Quincy Recreation on Saturdays. Coach Buckley connected with every kid who entered that gym by giving the best gift a coach can give a player, by believing in you.

He kept the game fun and made me want to play harder and compete at a higher level. The beauty of sports is that self esteem and confidence can be carried into the real world when you get older.

Simply put, thank you Coach Brian Buckley.

School Lunches Dietary Changes Coming

The last time meal prices increased was for the 2010 school year. At that time the high school prices then separated from being the same as the middle school prices. When the increase occurred there was no change to the elementary school lunches or breakfasts. Middle school lunch prices stayed the same and their breakfast went up by 25 cents, while the high school breakfast went up 50 cents and lunches went up by 25 cents.

The new standards are a part of the new federal law Healthy Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010 (HHFKA) and the state law Massachusetts School Nutrition Bill of 2010. The HHFKA impacts the national school lunch programs, school breakfast programs, and summer food service programs for children, and requires updates on meal patterns and nutrition standards for school lunch and school breakfast programs. The act set guidelines for establishing meal charges for paid student meals, and requires review of local policies on meal charges.

When all changes are implemented school lunches will offer only low fat or fat free milk. There will also be increased whole grains, increased serving size of vegetables, and an increased serving size of fruits.

Each lunch served will have to meet five required meal components set by the federal government. For the different grade levels there will be different quantities of those foods required, but each grade level will have the same components. Before the new regulations, Morrissey said that fruits and vegetables were combined. Now they will be considered two separate components.

"The vegetable category is the one changing the most. There is a pretty big increase in what is being served," said Morrissey. "The challenge with any category is going to be the serving sizes."

With both the vegetables and fruits served the regulations specifies how much of each will be served during the week. The regulations give both fruits and vegetables subgroups that schools have to provide from each week; those groups are dark greens, red/orange, beans/peas, starchy, and other. A daily serving of vegetables at lunch must reflect variety over the week. Before the new regulations there were no specifications as to the types of vegetables that had to be served.

"The dark green category is hard to pass off to the younger kids," said Morrissey. "The new guidelines will focus more on fruits and vegetables and less on the meats and protein."

Morrissey added that even though the focus will be on fruits and vegetables the new guidelines encourage a variety of meat and meat alternates such as Tofu and soy yogurt.

Even though there have been guidelines set that may be difficult to meet, Morrissey said that they allow for a variety of preparation methods, including fresh, frozen, and canned products, and the USDA (United States Department of Agriculture) foods offer a variety of no salt added or lower sodium products. For fruit products schools are allowed to select from fresh, frozen without added sugar, canned in juice/light syrup, or dried fruit options, but according to Morrissey there are some restrictions.

Morrissey said that the grain category won't change much but that 50 percent of grain products sold must be whole grain and beginning in 2014-2015 the program will require all grain products to be whole grain-rich. Whole grain-rich products must contain at least 51 percent whole grains. Schools must offer the daily and weekly serving ranges of grains at lunch.

Some other major changes to the diet will be the requirement of zero grams per serving of trans fats and maximum limits on sodium, which will be implemented gradually according to Morrissey. The nutrition label or manufacturer's specifications must specify zero grams of trans fats per serving, or less than 0.5 grams per serving.

"We have already been implementing the zero trans fats in out foods for about two years now," said Morrissey. "It is such a dangerous thing to have in a diet; that it is a good thing to get rid of it."

Morrissey said that different rules would apply to competitive foods sold at the school during school hours. The HHFKA key provisions require the USDA to establish national nutrition standards for competitive foods sold and served in the schools at any time during the school day. The Massachusetts competitive food standards will take affect in September.

Competitive foods and beverages are those provided in school cafeterias offered as a la carte items, school stores, snack bars, vending machines and concession stands, school booster sales, fund-raising activities and other school sponsored or school-related events, school buildings and any other locations on school property, including classrooms and hallways. Standards will apply to all foods and beverages sold or provided to students that are not a part of the reimbursable breakfast or lunch meals during the school day, including 30 minutes before and after the school day.

"We will be losing that component of a fun snack on occasion to reward a student," said school committee member Emily Lebo. "It is unfortunate that we are losing those opportunities."

Competitive foods come with very strict guidelines for both food served and beverages served. The only beverages available as competitive items are milk that is eight ounces or less, with no more than 22 grams of sugar per eight ounces, fruit juices that are 100 percent fruit juice and can only be in four ounce servings or less, and water with no added sugar, sweeteners or artificial sweeteners, but they may contain natural flavoring or carbonation. Morrissey added that drinking water must be available to all students at no cost throughout the school day.

"Many foods we serve as a la carte items right now we will not be able to sell next year," said Morrissey. "It is going to be a little complicated when it comes to meeting those standards."

Some complications will include not allowing students to buy chocolate milk as a la carte items but being able to purchase it if they buy reimbursable breakfasts and lunches.

"We are going to have to take a look at certain situations when they occur," said DeCristofaro. "I am not sure if we can change things outright, but I am sure there are going to be situations that will require a lot of discussion state-wide."

Morrissey told the school committee members that the change in food guidelines would impact the budget significantly because healthier food usually costs more. Students who bring brown bag lunches from home do not have to follow the new regulations. School committee member Paul Bregoli asked Morrissey about how it will impact food costs and waste. Morrissey said that cost would all depend on what the student takes and that will take time to see what the cost impact will be.

"It isn't going to be a simple task for food services or the parents when it comes to transitioning to the new guidelines," said DeCristofaro. "The more information we are able to get out to parents the better. The communication we supply to parents on what the new menu will look like compared to the old menu will help with the transition."

Along with taking on the Peer Leader Initiative, Yvonne and Minh Thu help every day with the after-school program. They are the first ones to arrive in the cafeteria and set up the teachers' attendance, the share table and snack table.

They oversee and help students start their homework. They do everything and anything a staff member asks them to do without hesitation and with a smile. They are kind in their tone and always look to do more for others. They are both outstanding girls.

Both girls enjoy singing, baking and sports and they are both leaders on the Robotics team.

Daniel Nguyen - 12th grade, Archbishop Williams High School.

Daniel is involved with Campus Kitchens Project, a nationwide organization whose members collect fresh and unused foods and reprocess them for healthy meals for the hungry in the community.

After the school year in 2011 ended, Daniel and Grace Rosario were offered an internship which he was honored by the privilege and accepted. During July, Daniel was promoted to a different job. He packed bags of snacks for kids at a camp called Camp Shiver, a camp program that was close to the UMass campus. He volunteered every Tuesday and Thursday.

At the end of the summer, Daniel realized, even though his deed seemed small, he had offered his time and morning to provide snacks to those kids.

Daniel also volunteers at St. Coletta's and at East Boston Central Catholic School.

Nadia Maloof - eighth grade, Point Webster Middle School.

Nadia is a selfless young woman. She said she feels "that it is others' duty to help those in need. It truly feels amazing when you get a chance to give back."

Nadia works very hard with her school's community service programs. She is dedicated to "Patients for Penies," "Coats for Kids" and collecting canned goods for a local food pantry.

She also volunteers at the "Boston Rescue Mission" where she dedicates one Sunday a month to help feed and spend time with the program's recipients. Though Nadia is thrilled with feeding the Rescue Mission's needy, her favorite part is when she has a chance to talk with each and every person there.

Madison McBirney - 12 grade, North Quincy High School.

MADISON

Madison works in the Special Needs Learning Center for her internship, but she also spends her free study there as well. She assists the teacher, working with the students on an individual or small-group basis.

Moreover, Madison helps these students in her free time, for no additional credit or recognition. For example, she brought several students to the movies on a Friday afternoon to see a new release.

When NQHS has new students enrolling during the middle of the year, we ask Madison to be their "buddy," guiding them not only physically through the halls but socially, until they learn to negotiate their way.

It is heart-warming to see the students with disabilities greeting Madison in the hallway and making her thank-you cards.

Emily McDonough - 12th grade, North Quincy High School.

Emily gives up a free period every day to work in the Special Needs Learning Center. She assists the teachers with their lessons and also assists the students with various works related skills.

Emily is a cheerleader and a role model for the younger students at NQHS. She maintains an above average GPA and is a member of SADD.

Hats off to this year's Kiwanis Junior Heroes.

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy also extends congratulations to the parents, teachers, counselors and principals of all these students for their contributions in helping to mold these young people.

These individuals have made a difference in these students' lives, as they have in yours.

Hats off to the 2012 Class of Quincy Kiwanis Junior Heroes.

They are well on their way to becoming responsible, civic-minded adults and our leaders for tomorrow.

Koch: City's Residency Rule Defense Won't Delay Central

ly providing Quincy jobs for Quincy workers," said Mayor Koch. "The taxpayers of our community pay for these important projects - and they deserve a chance to be employed on the work-sites. I make no apologies for fighting this lawsuit."

The lawsuit is in a preliminary stage in which a Federal Court judge will rule on whether to issue an injunction that would require the City to apply certain rules to the construction bids for the project. While the bidding process has been extended by several weeks to allow for court proceedings, the project timetable has enough built-in flexibility that completion of the new school should not be affected, officials said.

The suit is one of a number of similar lawsuits being filed by interest groups in cities across Massachusetts claiming that such Responsible Employer Ordinances are contradicted by federal law.

The Central project, expected to create several hundred construction jobs, is being built as the first middle school being built under the state's Model School Program, which will see the City be reimbursed for 80 percent of the building's cost - the highest state payback of any new school in Massachusetts.

South Shore Mental Health Receives $15,000 Grant For Eastern Bank Foundation

South Shore Mental Health has received a $15,000 grant from the Eastern Bank Charitable Foundation in support of their "Building Hope, Changing Lives" campaign.

The campaign, through the sharing of client stories, promotes awareness and educates members of the community in an effort to reduce the stigma and barriers accessing mental health services.

"Eastern Bank is a true community partner of South Shore Mental Health," said South Shore Mental Health President and CEO Harry Shulman. "The foundation's grant is an investment in SSMH's 'Building Hope, Changing Lives' initiative to educate people about the programs and services we provide, create viable partnerships and to raise sustainable funding to meet the increasing demand for our services."

Eastern Bank President and COO Bob Rivers said:

"Eastern Bank is proud to support South Shore Mental Health. We are committed to giving back to the communities we serve through our employee volunteers, sponsorships and Eastern Bank Charitable Foundation grants."

Tina Cahill, William Griffin Library Trustees

Quincy Mayor Thomas P. Koch recently appointed local residents William Griffin and Tina Cahill to the six-member Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Previously serving trustees Harold Crowley, Lawrence J. Falvey, Jr., Janet DiTullio and Mary Reed were also appointed to the Board.

Trustees are appointed annually by the mayor for a term of one year.

Griffin, a longtime Quincy resident, and his wife Linda raised three children in Quincy, and still have two children and two grandchildren residing in the city.

He was an elementary school principal in Milton and Canton for 24 years, after 11 years as a classroom teacher. He is a former board member of the Mass. Elementary School Principal's Association and the South Shore Elementary School Principal's Association; member of the Parish Council at St. Mary Parish in West Quincy; and a volunteer at the Long Island Homeless Shelter and St. John's Food Pantry.

"I'm excited at the opportunity to serve the city as a member of the library board", Griffin said "and look forward to working with library administration to continue to improve ser-

Regulating Donation Bins OK'd By Ordinance Committee

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin's plan to regulate donation bins in Quincy passed its first hurdle Monday night.

Coughlin proposed regulating bins during the Feb. 6 City Council meeting, and that proposal was referred to the Ordinance Committee. On Monday, the committee approved the measure by an 8-0 vote.

Several changes to the ordinance were made at the meeting.

The original proposal limited the number of bins in the city to 50, but that restriction was taken out of the text by Coughlin at the behest of a memo from the City Solicitor's office. Two amendments were made at the meeting itself.

The first increases the annual fee for each bin from $50 as proposed to $150. The second mandates that each bin in the city be operated by a not-for-profit organization as recognized by the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee proposed the amendments and the committee approved both by an 8-0 margin.

Currently, donation bins in the city aren't regulated. At the meeting Monday, Coughlin stated the goals he wished to achieve by regulating them.

"You all see these things popping up at every parking lot - liquor stores, supermarkets, every other available spot," Coughlin told his colleagues. "My hope was that we could implement some regulations that were reasonable, set some standards in terms of location in particular zoning districts where the bins would be located on lots where they are not abutting residential property, that they not take up parking spaces required by particular zoning [regulations], that they do not block access or egress from a parking lot or block site lines."

Coughlin also expounded on other points in the proposal. One of them, for example, dictates the type of bin to be used, requiring each to be designed so that people can't access the bin. He explained that there have been occasions where people have gotten stuck in bins and died, including a New York woman who was asphyxiated earlier this month after her neck was trapped in a bin.

The Ward 3 councillor then explained why applicants would have to undergo a Criminal Offender Record Information (CORI) check before being granted a license. He noted that an exposé on Canadian national television called "Bin Wars" highlighted some negatives associated with for-profit bin collection in Ontario.

"It's become such a war on turf that they have had assaults between drivers who are collecting clothing from the various bins up there," Coughlin said. "It occurred that that ought to be something that we have a CORI check done on the applicants when they come in before the licensing board."

Some questions were raised at the meeting. McNamee wanted to be sure that the licensing board was ready to enforce the regulations. City Clerk Joe Shea, who is the chairman of the board, said they are prepared to step up to the plate.

"I'm sure the great Licensing Board can administer the bin program," Shea said. "It's been discussed for a long, long time."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes asked whether certain groups could apply to have the application fees waived. She was particularly concerned about charities that primarily focus on Massachusetts, such as the Red Cross of Massachusetts.

"I want to make sure that charities still put the bins out because I think it's important," Hughes said. "I don't want to regulate it so much or make it so difficult for ones that are really actively working in the community."

Shea said that could "be left to the wisdom of the Licensing Board," and noted that the board has waived license fees in the past for non-profits seeking one-day licenses for events.

Councillor Doug Gutro asked if it was permissible for the city to regulate which type of organizations can or cannot place bins within the city. Janet Petkun, an assistant city solicitor, said no state law forbid the city from doing so.

"This is not an issue which is presently regulated by state law, so I see no reason why you cannot pass it with the amendment [restricting bins to non-profits]," Petkun said.

"Ultimately, somebody could challenge it and perhaps argue it's some type of Commerce Clause violation or some would make a First Amendment argument in terms of stretching things. But I think any ordinance is always subject to any type of challenge if someone wants to do something. It's not presently regulated by the state so I think it's in your purview."

Coughlin had proposed regulating bins during the council's previous term. He earned praise from his colleagues for taking the initiative on the matter.

"I very rarely praise you, Councillor Coughlin, just so when I do it means something," McNamee said before motioning to give the measure a positive recommendation. "I think you did a great job on this and I want to thank you very much."

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, St. Patrick's Day, March 17, Officer James Sullivan was working the detail at a local bar in Quincy Square. At approximately 11:15 P.M., he was positioned by the front door, to keep the area clear so patrons could exit the bar freely.

The officer observed a male wearing a green t-shirt looking at the various beer bottles placed on the shelf near the entrance. This is the area patrons put their beverages so they can go outside to smoke. The male then started picking up random beer bottles and drinking from them. Once finished with one beer, he would go to the next bottle.

LT. DAN MINTON

When Officer Sullivan confronted the male suspect and told him to stop, the suspect took a few steps and bumped into a table, appearing to have difficulty standing. The suspect drank from beer bottles on the tables and then started to bump into people, almost knocked over a few smaller females that were sitting down near the corner of the bar.

Officer Sullivan made the determination that the suspect was inebriated and approached him with the intention of getting the suspect a taxi ride home. Officer Sullivan told the suspect, "Its time to go....you need to leave now." The suspect gazed at the officer but did not move towards the door. The officer again told the suspect, "Listen buddy....you need to leave....you cannot be drinking other people's beers...its time to go."

The suspect then started to walk toward the exit, followed closely by the officer. As the suspect exited the first exit door, he looked over his right shoulder and yelled at the officer, "Go f@#$ yourself....you f@#$%^& f@#$%^.....and go f@#$ your mother."

Officer Sullivan then grabbed the suspect from behind to lead him out of the bar, but the suspect suddenly turned on the officer, attempting to put him in a headlock. Officer Sullivan grabbed the suspect by the neck and guided him outside the entrance of the bar.

The suspect continued to struggle and grabbed the officer by the waist near his gun as the fight erupted on the sidewalk. The officer kept telling the suspect to stop but the suspect then began punching the Officer. Officer Sullivan wrestled the suspect to the ground to gain control, but was then blindsided by another male, who assaulted the Officer by pushing him to the ground. As this second suspect fled, Officer Sullivan still held onto the suspect's arm.

After a brief struggle, the officer was able to twist the suspect's arm and flip him face down with his stomach on the pavement. Officer Sullivan was unable to get to his police radio to call for assistance until he was able to handcuff the suspect.

At this time, Officers arrived to break up the crowd and transport the suspect to the station. Officer Sullivan then attempted to find the other suspect who assaulted him. The doorman said he was able to push the second suspect off the officer, adding that the suspect fled down Hancock Street.

The suspect, a 21 year old Milton resident, was charged with "Disorderly Person, Assault and Battery on a Police Officer, Willful/malicious Destruction of Personal Property over $250.00 (uniform) and Knowingly Resisting Arrest."

Officer Sullivan suffered lacerations to his knees and hands, but remained at work.

A CERTAIN SYMMETRY

If you are shopping for April's birthstone, carefully consider how well the diamond is cut. The degree to which a faceted diamond is properly cut and proportioned has great bearing on its fire and brilliance. With this in mind, look at the gemstone through the "table" (top face). When viewed at this angle (from which the diamond will be most often looked) the stone should sparkle across its entire top expanse. There should be no dead spots where the diamond seems dark and dull. Take notice of the symmetry of a round diamond's table edges, which should be straight, regular, and parallel to one another, and make sure they meet in sharp points. A good cut brings out the best in a diamond.

Six Move To State Level At MIT May 3-5

13 QHS Science, Technology Fair Projects In Regionals

Over 250 students presented to approximately 400 spectators at the recently held fifth annual Quincy High School Science and Engineering Fair.

The event featured 148 projects from grades 9-12 and spanned fields of biology, chemistry, environmental science, physics, and engineering.

Students worked individually or as a team to investigate topics such as subliminal messages, microgravity environments, biofuel development, and antioxidant levels of fruits and vegetables. The in-depth project work has helped QHS students build career and life skills for success in 21st century careers, such as critical and creative thinking, communication, teamwork, and ethical decision-making.

Quincy High School students work one-on-one with teachers and professionals year round to follow their natural curiosity and explore "real world" science and engineering problems. Much of the science fair's success is due to the overwhelming support from our community with over 90 volunteers from science and technology fields donating their time to judge projects. Project scores were then tallied and weighting based on scientific approach, creativity, understanding, and presentation.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT Peter Guinta and Eoin Moriary with their project "In Vitro Modelling of the Efficacy of Probiotic Inhibition on Eschericia Coli." They advanced to the State Competition at MIT and are currently being published by the Harvard University Journal of Emerging Investigators.

Each year, Quincy High School shows a great diversity of projects and the student's enthusiasm carries the evening as they get to celebrate their accomplishments with the community.

Boston College High School Lost to Malden Catholic, 3-1, In Super 8 Championship Quincy Residents Contribute To Eagles' Run To Div. 1A Hockey State Final

SUN SPORTS

By SEAN BRENNAN

The hockey tradition at Boston College High School comes with an expectation of excellence.

Year-in-and-year out, the all-boys Jesuit high school located in Dorchester is known for churning out top-rate hockey talent. This winter was no different.

The Eagles ended their regular season with a 10-5-5 record, which was good enough to qualify them for inclusion in the prestigious 2012 Division 1A tournament, better known as the Super 8.

The ten most-deserving teams (seeds 7-10 must go through a play-in round to determine seeds 7 and 8) in Massachusetts, as decided by a tournament committee, begin play with an Olympic-style pool format with four teams in each bracket playing three games against each other. The top-2 teams from each side move into the semifinal round.

BC High is no stranger to this tournament — having won it back in 2007. Last year, the Eagles lost in the Division 1A semifinals, but this winter, with Quincy residents Brian Furey and Michael Brooks playing integral roles, the Eagles took it a step further.

The Eagles advanced all the way to the Division 1A championship game before losing to top-ranked and defending state champion Malden Catholic, 3-1, at the TD Garden on March 18.

It wasn't the finale either Furey or Brooks was hoping for, but the journey was still a memorable one. And that journey began years ago on the rinks in Quincy.

"Brian and I have been on the same team since Mites," said Brooks a junior center this season for BC High. "We went from the Mite A team to Squirt A, and then we played on a select team, the Terriers."

Their paths diverged when Furey, a senior defenseman and team captain this season for the Eagles, began his high school career at the Dexter School in Brookline. The Brooks-Furey combination reunited on Morrissey Boulevard the next year.

"I transferred midway through my sophomore year from Dexter because BC High offers you academics and athletics at a competitive level," explained Furey about his decision to change schools. "There is a lot of tradition at BC High, so there is a lot of pressure to live up to that, which is why you try and bring your best day in and day out."

For Brooks, the decision to attend BC High was a lifelong dream.

"Every sense I was little I always wanted to play hockey for BC High," he said. "I have been on the team for three years, and my freshman year we didn't even make the tournament and then last year we made it to the (Super 8) semifinals. Obviously that was a stepping-stone, so our goal this year was to make it back and win the Super 8. We took it a step further and next year we are hoping to win it."

Brooks will get that opportunity next winter when he laces up for a fourth year, but for Furey this was the last stop in a solid high school career. He finished his senior season with four goals and nine assists playing on BC High's the top-defensive line. But his most important role was that of team captain and leader.

"I just led by example and tried to do the right thing at practice by helping kids out if they weren't understanding things," he said about his year as co-captain along with Matt Sullivan of Duxbury. "I just hopped on stuff the coaches wanted us to do."

"I'd like to think I brought some offense to the ice," Furey added about the role he played once the puck dropped. "I tried to be a puck-moving defenseman. We had some really talented forwards on this team, so my job was to just get them the puck and let them do their thing."

Brooks earned his stripes for the Division 1A finalist as a crafty center iceman. His five goals and six assists helped BC High to a 3-3-3 record in the ultra-competitive Catholic Conference. Brooks' strongest assets were his ability to dominate in the face-off circle and shutdown opposing teams' best players.

"Against some teams my line's job was to shut down their best line and in other games it would be to work my hardest and try and get the puck in the net," explained Brooks. "As a center my biggest goal in every game was to win every faceoff. You want to try and win every draw."

Playing on Garden Ice: A Lifelong Dream

The Super 8 Olympic-style pool play round is held annually at Merrimack College's Lawler Arena, as is the crossover semifinal round. It is not until a team reaches the Super 8 final that they are given the opportunity to play at the TD Garden.

No. 5 BC High went 2-1 in pool play. The Eagles opened the Super 8 with a 4-2 win over No. 4 Hingham before dropping a 3-1 decision to No. 1 Malden Catholic. BC High edged No. 8 St. John's Shrewsbury to earn a date with No. 3 St. John's Prep in the semifinals.

Brooks and Furey helped the Eagles slip past their Catholic Conference rival and last year's state finalist, 3-2. Malden Catholic punched its ticket to the Super 8 final with a 4-0 shutout of No. 7 Central Catholic.

In the championship game, the Eagles got the early jump on the Lancers when sophomore Sam Topham scored just two minutes into the contest, but Malden Catholic would eventually tie it with a second period goal before getting the game-winner with 6:58 left in regulation.

It was a disappointing end, but both Brooks and Furey appreciated the chance to take center stage on Causeway Street.

"I played at the Garden in the sixth grade but this was my first time in high school," said Furey. "It was a great experience, not everyone gets the opportunity to play in a game like that. It was something I'll remember for the rest of my life."

"Just the whole thing, going over there and walking into the locker rooms was special," added Brooks. "Then when you come out and you are ready to go it takes it to a whole different level. It is like 'wow I am actually playing at the Garden.'"

For a team that had only four seniors on its roster, the Eagles could have been content with just making it to the finals since not many believed they would even make it that far. But that wouldn't be the BC High way.

"(Malden Catholic) has one big line and we were trying to keep them off the board and limit their opportunities," explained Furey about BC High's defensive game plan. "We thought if we could limit them and capitalize on ours we would be in good shape. We wanted to get up early because then all the pressure would be on them. No one expected us to win."

This year may not have been BC High's time to shine, but with 14 freshmen and sophomores returning along with five juniors, including Brooks, the Eagles should be considered in an early favorite to be back on Garden ice next season.

Furey is undecided on what he will be doing next year but for Brooks the preparation starts now for his final go-around at BC High.

"Hockey has pretty much been year-round since I was five," he said. "Over the summer I usually skate three times a week and work out. After the season ends you have to keep working. In the Catholic Conference you know the teams are going to be good, but even outside the conference the teams are all shooting for us."

18 Athletes, Three Coaches To Be Enshrined

Inaugural QHS Women's Hall of Fame Class To Be Honored Friday

By SCOTT JACKSON

History will be made tomorrow (Friday) when the Quincy High School Women's Hall of Fame inducts its inaugural class at a dinner reception at the Neighborhood Club.

In the past, male athletes at Quincy High had a shot at making their sports respective hall of fames. But women never had that chance, according to Frank Santoro, principal of Quincy High and a member of the Hall of Fame committee. "Typically what happened is people have their own hall of fames," he said Monday. "Those have been going on for years, but women were never really considered."

Female athletes who attended North Quincy High already have their own hall of fame. Santoro said the committee decided to follow North's example and have an umbrella hall of fame for all of women's sports at Quincy High.

Plans for the hall of fame have been in the works for years, according to Christine Barrett. Barrett, the principal at Sterling Middle School, is part of the committee with Santoro. She credited him for getting the ball rolling.

"I think it's something that had been tossed around for a few years," Barrett said Monday. "Credit goes to Mr. Santoro. I remember I had met with people years ago, but Mr. Santoro made it come to fruition."

Barrett, who graduated from QHS in 1991, is one of the athletes being inducted. She was an outstanding volleyball player who won a state title in 1988 and while she said she was honored to be included, she thinks the first spots should've been reserved for athletes from the 1970s who helped set the stage for later female stars at the school.

"When we were talking with gender equity and Title IX, they gave athletes like me in the late 80s and early 90s a chance to compete," Barrett said.

Santoro also agreed that honoring the athletes from the 1970s was important. "Women didn't compete much until the 1970s," he said, "these people are like pioneers."

Michelle McDonald and Carol Lynch joined Santoro and Barrett on the committee. Together, the four of them researched which athletes and coaches to honor. That wasn't an easy task, according to Barrett, since newspaper coverage of women's sports was sparse then.

"We thought we can check newspapers on microfilm and microfiche," Barrett said. "We realized there were no articles on women's sports from the 70s."

Santoro said the group relied on networking to find the various nominees. "The biggest issue is contacting people," he said. "We contacted every women's coach we had. It wasn't easy, the committee tried to get leads and we did some investigating seeing who knew who and calling different people."

In all, 18 athletes and three coaches will be enshrined as part of the hall of fame's first class. Barrett said there might be some people who they missed, but she thinks the committee did a good job nonetheless.

"It's not perfect by any means, but it's a start," Barrett said of the first class. "We want to try to get the earliest groups in."

Joining Barrett in the inaugural class are: Cindy Tozzi (1976), Kelly Sparks Gaffey (1976), Claire Oliverio (1977), Lois Malvesti (1977), Susan Callahan Milone (1978), Paula Parker Costas (1978), Maureen Maher (1980), Laura Miller (1980), Nancy McDonald Krue (1982), Cynthia Morrell O'Callahan (1984), Karen Marnell McPartlin (1985), Colleen Dunn (1985), Marlo LeVangie (1987), Amy Guidice Short (1988), Patricia Morrell Madore (1988), Gayle Morrell Sullivan (1988), Nancy Laitinen McPartlin (1989). Coaches Tom Henderson, Ray Whithouse, and Barbara Webster will also be recognized at the event.

Sports Memories

North Quincy Has Good Potential

By SEAN BRENNAN

When the North Quincy baseball team opens its season, third-year coach Leo Donovan will be hoping to improve upon last year's 5-14 record with a young team that includes only four seniors.

"We are young but we have good potential," said Donovan. "We have a sprinkling of veterans and some very promising newcomers up from the junior varsity."

North's pitchers include veterans Mark DiMattio and Billy MacDougall, Eric DeBoer and Steve Kohler. Catcher Jeff Calvert is back behind the plate and backing him up will be Jim Bryan.

Chris Baker, Bob Hubbard, Billy Wysocki, Tony Anderlioni, and Mike Ainsley should see time in the infield with MacDougall, Kevin MacDougall, Steve Rabs, Jimmy Glenn and Mike Walsh manning the outfield.

"We will again be competitive, but we are in an awfully strong league and also play some outstanding Greater Boston League teams. I think we will hit well and if our pitching comes through, we should hold our own."

QUINCY HAS VETERAN NUCLEUS

Coach Bob Sylvia saw his team miss qualifying for the Eastern Mass Tournament by one win each of the last two years, as the Presidents finished at 11-9 both seasons.

This year Sylvia has several veterans to build around.

"We are going to have to battle all the way again this year as we are in awfully strong league," said the coach about playing in the Suburban League. "We have some fine veterans but we are young."

Three veteran pitchers, Wayne Chambers, Jim Dennis and Joe Taylor will be joined in the rotation by Steve McInnis, Rich Kissell, Bob Austin and Rich Burns. Brian Taylor is back catching and the infield returns Nick Dragone, all-star shortstop Dan Biagini and Sean Thompson.

Scott Logan, Greg Chambers and John Balzano will also see time in the infield while veteran Ed Flavin will be joined in the outfield by Dennis, Chris Beatrice, Joe Taylor and Billy Campbell.

"I can promise you that we will be competitive again this season," said Sylvia. "We have the talent but we play as tough a schedule as any team around."

MORRELL TWINS DOUBLE STANDOUTS FOR QUINCY GIRLS

The Quincy High girls' basketball team had only a 5-13 record this season, but coach Doug MacFarlane had one of the outstanding sister combinations in the state in senior two tri-captains Patti and Gayle Morrell.

Patti, a first-team Suburban League all-star, led the team with a 14.8 PPG and rebounding at 11.4 a game; she scored a school record 41 against Brockton, while Gayle, a second-team all-star, was second in scoring with a 14.6 average and second in rebounding at 10.5.

"These girls were just outstanding all season long," said MacFarlane. "They are very unselfish and, despite their scoring records, they are team players."

The baseball machine in Quincy keeps turning its gears.

Following last week's announcement that Quincy Babe Ruth League was folding, questions about the status of Babe Ruth Baseball in the city and the expected Babe Ruth 15-year old New England Regional tournament, which has been scheduled for August 2-8 at Adams Field, came to the forefront.

Within the past week, these questions have been answered in the affirmative – at least for this year.

Babe Ruth Baseball will be back this summer in Quincy and, the 15-year New England Regional Babe Ruth tournament will be played at Adams Field; both will be handled under the direction of Quincy Youth Baseball & Softball, this according to Mark Matanes, Babe Ruth Baseball Commissioner for Eastern Massachusetts.

"Quincy Youth Baseball will be taking over the process," Matanes said last Friday. "They reached out to me by email to see if they could be considered for the charter. They were awarded it and so they are the new recipients of the official Babe Ruth charter in Quincy."

"We hope that they can pick up where Dick (Lombardi) and Quincy Babe Ruth League left off," continued Matanes. "Dick did a great job and it was a shame (the league) had to come to an end."

"Quincy Youth Baseball will now take over and they will be hosting the 15-year old New England Regional, featuring teams from all the New England states, on August 2-8. The winner of this tournament will move on to the 15-year old Babe Ruth World Series in Van Buren, Arkansas on August 18-25."

This is great news for the city – business owners, hotels and restaurants should also be happy since the expected turnout for the early August tournament should be a boon for Quincy's economy.

But let's take a closer look at what it means for the young baseball players of the city; they are really the most important part of these sudden changes.

Here is the new breakdown:

Quincy Youth Baseball will continue to hold its spring House League from mid-April to early June. Following the 12-game house league and playoffs, Quincy Youth Baseball will begin a 13-15-year old Babe Ruth House League (sign-ups will be held in May) in mid-June, ending in late July.

The Quincy Youth Baseball Babe Ruth House League will include a minimum (expect more) of four teams with 48 players. This ten-game season will conclude with a playoff schedule.

The 15-year old New England Regional team – Quincy will be the host team – is then selected. Any player who participates in at least 50% of their Babe Ruth House League games (no exceptions) will be eligible to make that roster.

Quincy Youth Baseball will also continue to field its Senior and Junior summer tournament teams. Players will be able to play for both the Babe Ruth House League as well as the Senior or Junior tournament teams, provided they are signed up for the QYB spring house league.

Anyone who chooses not to tryout for the summer tournament teams will have another option: They can play for a Quincy travel team against other towns in a South Shore travel league.

Quincy Youth Baseball's Response

"We heard through the grapevine that Quincy Babe Ruth League was not obtaining the Babe Ruth charter," said QYB President Mike Lynch on Monday. "Through emails and phone calls with Mr. Matanes, we were offered the opportunity to host the 15-year old Regional tournament. We went back to our board and we made the decision that hosting the tournament would be good for the city and more importantly for the kids."

"Dick Lombardi did a great job hosting those three Babe Ruth World Series and we want to bring that same excitement back to Quincy," Lynch noted about Quincy Babe Ruth League's success in hosting the 2003, 2005 and 2008 Babe Ruth World Series.

Just don't expect to see Quincy Youth Baseball change the name of its league – at least not in 2012.

"We are going to continue to remain Quincy Youth Baseball & Softball," explained Lynch. "We are still chartered under Little League Baseball, so we have a Junior League and a Senior League. Our spring league is going to continue to run the same as it did last year. Kids will still have the opportunity to play in the junior and senior summer tournaments like they did last year. The difference being is that we saw an opportunity presented to us to host the Babe Ruth Regional that had been on the table for a few years."

"That was one of the things we asked Mark," Lynch said about his league's desire to remain Quincy Youth Baseball & Softball. "We have had a lot of success with Little League and we didn't want to walk away from them. When we spoke to Mark we asked if it would be possible to hold both charters and he said, absolutely, as long as we met our Babe Ruth requirements: Four teams, 48 players, and a ten-game season."

"As a board we made that decision to move forward and obtain the Babe Ruth charter," continued Lynch. "Now under Quincy Youth Baseball & Softball we will have the Little League charter and the Babe Ruth charter."

"The Junior and Senior League will play their house league in the spring and that will run from late April until early June. At that point we will then start our Babe Ruth season," said Lynch. "We are required to have four Babe Ruth teams and 48 players but we don't anticipate that being a problem. Kids from the Babe Ruth House League will also have the opportunity to try out or be selected to be on our tournament teams (Senior and Junior select); kids that do not play or choose not to play on the tournament teams will have an opportunity to play in a South Shore travel league."

Looking Forward To August...

Over the past decade, Adams Field has become the premier destination for Babe Ruth tournaments in New England. Quincy's centralized location among the New England states makes it a viable host site for a regional event.

Having to relocate the 15-year old Babe Ruth Regional Tournament was an option that no one wanted to deal with.

"(Quincy Youth Baseball) never expected this," said Lynch about his league being offered the chance to host the 15-year old Babe Ruth Regional, "because Dick had had success for so many years. But once that league ended, Babe Ruth understood the strength of the area and how centralized Quincy is located."

"The (Babe Ruth) folks know Adams Field and they have had a lot of success there," continued Lynch. "We will be looking for sponsors, but right now we are just trying to get the logistics down, but (the tournament) is coming. We will be very busy, but we are trying to make it up to everyone and make it a great summer. It should be fun."

...And Beyond

In 2012, Quincy Youth Baseball will affiliate themselves with Babe Ruth Baseball – if only so the kids and the city have the chance to be a part of a such a special and prestigious tournament.

Moving forward, however, Quincy Youth Baseball will have a decision to make: Do they continue to be affiliated with Babe Ruth Baseball or not? It is a decision that will be made after the August event.

"We are going to let this year play out," Lynch said. "Babe Ruth stepped up to the plate and made us some offers we couldn't refuse and, at some point we need to make a decision for what is best for our league in the future. We are now chartered with Babe Ruth for softball and Cal Ripken Baseball, which is under the Babe Ruth umbrella."

"But that doesn't mean we will stick with Babe Ruth for 13-15-year olds moving forward," Lynch explained. "Whether or not we want to do this every year – is having a Babe Ruth house league worth it to us next year – we will see. We will have that conversation later. I am not saying that we are married to Little League or Babe Ruth, but we will see what works best and make that decision."

At least for now you can be assured of two things:

Babe Ruth Baseball will be part of the baseball landscape in Quincy this summer and, the 15-year old Babe Ruth New England Regional tournament will be played at Adams Field in August.

Is it a perfect solution? Not really, but sometimes you just have to make the best of a muddled situation.

Quincy Youth Participate In Annual 'Kick Butts' Day Event At State House

Students from North Quincy High School recently joined over 250 young people from across the Commonwealth to gather at the Massachusetts State House for a Kick Butts Day event to celebrate their role in reducing the influence of the tobacco industry in their communities.

While at the State House the youth visited with lawmakers, attended a rally with U.S. Surgeon General Regina Benjamin, and a closing event with Massachusetts Department of Public Health Medical Director Dr. Lauren Smith.

The young people used their time with lawmakers to discuss the ways the tobacco industry continues to target young people:

through a range of new non-cigarette tobacco products, cheap prices, flashy packaging, and product placement in venues young people visit, including convenience stores near schools.

The industry then prices the products cheaply to encourage impulse buys by youth. At the rally, each participant received a citation from the United States Surgeon General recognizing them for their efforts in fighting big tobacco in their communities.

"It is important for our lawmakers and the public to know that the tobacco industry is continuing to target our communities and youth," said John Nguyen, statewide planning committee member for The 84.

"The 84 Chapters from across Massachusetts are working hard to highlight the dangers of tobacco use and to ensure that young people never start."

North Quincy High School is a member of The 84 Movement, which helps mobilize youth to take action to protect their communities from the influence of the tobacco industry. The event celebrated the work these young people are doing to fight back against the tobacco industry's influence in their communities.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School students Lisa Marie Flora and Ryan Mock and adult advisor Kerry Ginty recently attended the recent "Kick Butts" Day at the State House along with other youth to celebrate their role in reducing the influence of the tobacco industry in their communities.

SENIOR NEWS LINE

Yoga Research

It isn't often that our Western-medicine physicians will suggest we take an alternative route to health. Boston University scientists have done some research, however, that points to an Eastern form of exercise that will help with a big Western problem: Yoga is theorized to help reduce stress.

Specifically, their research shows that yoga can help treat and prevent high blood pressure, cardiac disease and anxiety. Yoga, they believe, helps to restore balance to the nervous system. Imbalance can come from stress. In one study, participants were split into two groups: walking versus yoga. Only those in the yoga group had a rise in gamma amino-butyric acid (GABA), a neurotransmitter that produces feelings of calm.

Researchers took a big step (for Western medicine) when they suggested that specific yoga practices should be created as a way to help with stress-related conditions. The theories now will be tested in clinical studies.

Yoga classes are easily found, but for seniors, a class that is specially geared to us is safer. Muscles get weak, and osteoporosis can result when we sit too much. Yoga itself isn't a strenuous exercise, but it's best to start with slow, gentle movements and a skilled instructor.

With yoga we can learn deep breathing and mild stretching ... with quiet Eastern music playing in the background. Doesn't that sound peaceful?

Look for senior-friendly yoga classes at the senior center, churches, assisted living centers (even if you don't live there) and fitness centers. Yes, those fitness gyms are starting to figure out that there are a lot of us, and we'll use their services if they provide what we need. Sometimes that can include special classes, like yoga for seniors.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

WHEN AGE THROWS YOU A CURVE

Worsening posture may be just as inevitable as sagging skin when it comes to aging. In fact, both outward signs of aging can be at least partly attributed to gravity, which can actually push the spine into a more rounded position and tighten the muscles around the hips. As a result, there can be a chain reaction of tightness, weakness, and instability that reverberates throughout the rest of the body. There is likely to be less mobility in the hips and upper back, as well as weakening of surrounding muscles, which further limits mobility and increases the risk of falling. To counter these effects, regular visits to the chiropractor help free up back joints, reduce muscle tightness, and improve flexibility.

At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we stress the importance of posture and its relationship to good spinal and nervous system health. Your posture is of the essence, poor posture can cause pain. It's wise to visit your chiropractor periodically in order to maintain better body alignment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we serve the needs of the entire family by providing professional chiropractic care. We are currently accepting new patients. Regular chiropractic adjustments are your body's best insurance for a healthy place to live for the rest of your life. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Chiropractic treatment addresses the underlying causes of muscle tightness and reduced flexibility in the back by placing vertebral joints back into proper positions and encouraging surrounding soft tissues to relax.

Gain Control Over Dandruff

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: How does one eliminate dandruff? I have had it for months and have tried many, many shampoos without making any progress. I can't wear a dark suit coat. I look like I've just come in from a snow blizzard. Please give me some sort of program that I can follow. — H.H.

ANSWER: Dandruff's official name is seborrheic (SEB-uh-REE-ik) dermatitis. "Dermatitis" indicates skin inflammation. Seborrhea is an overproduction of oil, sebum. Many with dandruff deny they have an oily scalp. They say their scalp is dry. That can be the case, but seborrheic dermatitis flourishes on skin with an abundance of oil glands. The scalp is one of those places, but not the only place. The flakes that land on your shoulders are sloughed-off skin cells. Dandruff usually is quite itchy. Scratching dislodges the dead skin cells.

A yeast with the name Malassezia contributes to the problem. It's probably not the actual cause, but it aids and abets the dandruff process.

I'm sure you have tried many shampoos. Let me suggest ones that contain salicylic acid, zinc or selenium. Scalp-icin, Head and Shoulders and Selsun Blue are three brand names. There are others. The way you use the shampoo is as important as your choice of shampoo. Wash your hair daily with one of these products. Massage it into your scalp, and let the shampoo remain on your scalp for five minutes. Do this for a minimum of three weeks. If you have an improvement, you can cut back on your shampooing to every other day.

If there has been no improvement, then get a shampoo that attacks the Malassezia yeast. Nizoral A-D (1 percent ketoconazole) is a brand name you can find easily. Do the daily shampoo drill with one of these for three weeks.

If after all this you still have dandruff, you need a doctor's intervention. The doctor can prescribe more powerful agents, ones that have cortisone that can calm the inflamed skin.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:

My husband has just been told he has spasmodic dystonia. He has had two Botox injections. They made it worse at first but then better. Friends and family have never heard of it. Would you give us an explanation of it in layman's terms? — T.W.

ANSWER: Spasmodic dysphonia messes up the voice. People often believe they have laryngitis from a virus. They don't; they have a cramping of the muscles that control their vocal cords. Their voices crack while saying a word, or become weak and breathy, or sound as though they are being choked. Sometimes it seems like the affected person has developed a stutter. The condition usually arises between the ages of 30 and 50. Its cause is unknown.

An ear, nose and throat doctor can make a diagnosis by viewing the affected person's vocal cords and seeing how they are misbehaving. Botox can put an end to the vocal muscles' spasms. Treatment lasts for about three months, and then another injection is given.

Contact the National Spasmodic Dystonia Association (www.dysphonia.org or 800-795-6732) for detailed information and for notifications of any new treatments.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Palm Sunday Service At Quincy Community United Methodist

The most important week of the Christian Church's year, Holy Week, will begin with a special Palm Sunday service April 1 at Quincy Community United Methodist Church.

The service, which will begin at 10:30 a.m., will open with the traditional scripture reading. The congregation will then sing the opening hymn, and, as the congregation sings, the Sunday School students will walk up the church's center aisle carrying palms.

Later in the service, the palms will be given to the congregation.

The service will continue with Scripture lessons, hymns, and the dispersal of palms. It will conclude with a ceremony, which is traditionally a part of the on Maundy (Holy) Thursday worship service: the stripping of the altar. In this ceremony, which symbolically depicts the Passion, all candles, flowers, altar cloths, and even the Bible are removed from the altar area. Everyone will be invited to participate.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church invites everyone to share in its life: whoever you are, and wherever you may be on your journey of faith, you are welcome at Quincy Community United Methodist Church.

Star Of Sea Faith Community Easter Sunday Liturgy At First Church Of Squantum

The Friends of Star of the Sea announce that a Catholic liturgy will be held at noon Easter Sunday at the First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Quincy.

The liturgy is called a "Celebration in the Absence of a Priest" and has been approved by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) and the Vatican for use in American dioceses. The liturgy will include communion, using hosts consecrated by a Roman Catholic priest in good standing in the Archdiocese of Boston.

The Celebrations in the Absence of a Priest guidance states, "For their part, it is the right of the lay faithful, barring a case of real impossibility, that no priest should ever refuse to celebrate Mass for the people or to have it celebrated by another priest if the people otherwise would be able to satisfy the obligation of participating at Mass on Sunday or the other days of precept."

Guidelines for this service encourage the faith communities using this liturgy to think of themselves not as a community without a priest, but rather, as an "assembly in expectation of a priest."

The Friends say the use of this liturgy is not a permanent fix, nor can it be called a Mass. However, they point to guidance from the USCCB that says this liturgy does serve as a substitute for Mass on an interim basis.

A collection will be taken to help support the efforts of the Friends with their ongoing Canonical appeals.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be careful about doing someone a favor when you don't know the full story behind the request. Don't rely on someone's unsubstantiated assurances. Insist on all the facts before you act.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That workplace problem still needs your attention before you finally can close the book on it. Meanwhile, a long-anticipated reunion gets closer to becoming a happy reality.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might be demanding more from others than they can give. Best advice: Have a long and frank talk to determine what the facts are. Tensions should abate as the week winds down.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Aspects are favorable throughout this week for making contacts that could be important to your career plans. Meanwhile, an old friend offers the advice you're seeking.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's time to stop licking your wounds from past mistakes. Get up and get going toward your future. Loyal friends will be there to help the Lion get back into rip-roaring shape.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Take time out to go over what's expected of you before you begin your new project. Otherwise, you run the risk of pushing yourself harder than you need to.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An unusual request could put you in an awkward position. Best advice: Deal with it immediately. The longer you delay, the more difficult it will be to get out of it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You should feel recharged and ready for whatever your workaday world holds for you. The same positive energy spills over into your personal relationships.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A prospect might be less than it appears to be. Like the Archer in your sign, you always aim for the truth. And this is no time to settle for less than full disclosure.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Start doing some serious thinking about a career move that could entail more than just changing job sites. Some lifestyle changes also might be involved.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) With tensions easing at the workplace, a more positive environment once again encourages the free flow of ideas so typical of the always-innovative Aquarian.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Show some of that usually hidden steel-strong Piscean backbone, and stand up for yourself if you hope to make a case for that promotion you know you deserve.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy doing new things and staying ahead of the crowd. You would make a fine sports coach or military leader.

Turn Of 20th Century 'New Look' For Old City Hall

in the 1920s. That would more than double the seating capacity in the chamber from 80 to 181. Décor in the Great Hall will mirror that of the early 20th century. Edwards said that his team did research into the building, and found a photograph of the chamber from 1919. Elements found in the photo appeared in a rendering of the chamber presented at the City Council meeting.

"We do see some of the details of how the wainscoting (paneling) worked and how the painting looked, what some of the light fixtures looked like," Edwards said. "Those ones in that rendering came from that picture. We're just trying to replicate in some spirit what we see."

Some more demolition will be needed to find other historic details in the chamber. Edwards said his team would start to undertake that task if the council approves funding the project.

Edwards is also set on tearing down a stucco-clad addition in the building's rear, where the connection from the all-glass New City Hall enters. The addition was first added in 1902 and used for toilets, and was expanded as the city needed more space. "It's functionally inappropriate, historically inappropriate," Edwards said. "It's coming down." In its place will be a new addition made of concrete and sheathed in granite. Not only will it be more aesthetically pleasing, it will also help brace the building against seismic activity, since the building will need to be brought up to earthquake requirements in the state building code.

The design of the first floor isn't so certain. Edwards said his team is working on getting a better understanding of the second floor's framing system before plotting out where they'll place new columns. To do so, they've been taking down the ceilings put in place over time, but they haven't yet reached framing of the second floor. The blueprint presented to the council shows an 85-seating meeting room, to be used by the licensing and zoning boards and conservation commission, and historical exhibit space on the first floor. Details haven't been laid out for those spaces yet. As is the case with the Great Hall, demolition will take place following council approval and then designs will be finalized.

Offices in the New City Hall building would also be shuffled under plan. The City Clerk and other offices which were once in Old City Hall and are now housed in spaces leased across McIntyre Mall in the Munroe building will be moved to the all-glass annex. This means some departments will be moved to space created at the Coddington School, but Edwards said which would be moving hasn't been decided yet, though Wessling's plans for the school has the IT department in the lower level of the renovated Coddington School.

No major construction will take place in the New City Hall, though Edwards thinks the conference room used as a temporary council chamber in the building would be converted into something different. HVAC work will also take place in the all-glass building, because Edwards said the current system there isn't very comfortable.

"The air conditioning, heating systems are in poor conditions," Edwards said. "I'm not saying anybody did a bad job way back when, I'm just saying that they're late 1970s versions of a lot of the layouts that these ducted systems were intended to serve aren't that way anymore. The big open offices are now a series of offices so it's very uncomfortable for people."

Changes to the Old City Hall's exterior will also take place. New windows will be installed, which will more closely match those that the building originally had. The entrance to the building on Hancock Street will be redone, to allow for a taller door more closely resembling the original door.

McIntyre Mall will see some changes too. Edwards wants to see the space opened up more, to allow for better views of City Hall. To that end, his plan calls for the removal of cherry trees currently standing on the mall.

"If you go out there and look now, there are four or five cherry trees that are in bloom," Edwards said. "They look very handsome and colorful, in two weeks they're not going to be. What they'll also be is a blocking element and you're not going to see that side of City Hall until October or so when the leaves fall off those trees, so those are gone."

Depending on the trees' health, it is possible they will be re-planted somewhere else, Edwards added.

In their place, Edwards said he wants to put smaller plantings in so the building stands out more. He said he's been coordinating with the landscaping design firm Halvorson on the landscaping part of the project. Halvorson is the company responsible for designing the proposed Adams Green project.

If the council approves the project, Edwards said it would take another four months for the designs to be finalized. He hopes to have everything ready to go out to bid by the summer, with construction starting in the fall. He estimated that construction would take about a year to complete.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett Honored For 25 Years Of Service At United First Parish Church

By KRISTINA KALABOKAS

Clergy members, city leaders, friends, and family gathered to celebrate the retirement of the Rev. Dr. Sheldon W. Bennett, after 25 years of service as the senior minister of the United First Parish Church on Sunday.

Those paying tribute praised Bennett, who has served as minister since 1986, not only for his leadership in the church, but for his advocacy of social justice, his public service, and his dedication to the preservation and restoration of the church itself, which houses the burial tombs of John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Abigail Adams, and Louisa Catherine Adams.

Rev. Burns Stanfield, of the 4th Presbyterian Church of South Boston, a sister congregation to the United First Parish Church, was the first to address the crowd. He spoke of working with Bennett to bring affordable housing to the citizens of Massachusetts. Together, Bennett and Stanfield secured a $100 million Affordable Housing Trust Fund for the Commonwealth. The duo also worked to bring affordable health care to Massachusetts.

"Some years ago, we claimed a whole lot of credit for the Massachusetts Affordable Care Act," said Stanfield. "We secured a bill to make sure that 98 percent of the

City's Financial Advisor Suggests Raising Taxes

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's financial advisor has suggested the city raise taxes.

Cinder McNerney appeared before the council Monday night to give a rundown of the city's finances. She suggested that it's time to tap into the approximately $19 million in the city's untaxed levy, the amount of money the city could've taxed but didn't. In December taxes were raised by an average of $98, but the city could've hiked taxes by over $600 on average, for example.

AG's Office Alleges Lottery Ads Created To Boost Ex-Treasurer's Bid For Governor

Cahill: 'Running Ads Appropriate, Legal For Lottery'

Former State Treasurer Timothy P. Cahill was indicted Monday on public corruption charges for his alleged role in orchestrating an advertising campaign for the State Lottery, funded with taxpayer dollars, that was intended to assist his 2010 campaign for governor.

Cahill said in a statement that it was "entirely appropriate and legal for the Lottery to run its ads in response to the Republican Governors Association's attack ads on the integrity of the lottery."

"It was the right thing for them to do. Knowing what I knew then and even what I know today, we'd do it again because it was the right thing to do," Cahill said.

Cahill's attorney, E. Peter Parker, said his client retained an outside attorney during negotiations over the Quincy Center land disposition agreement (LDA).

During the meeting, Coughlin cited the legal dispute that ensued after the council initially rejected the Highpoint project – a permit for the site was eventually granted, and plans to add more buildings onsite are in the pipeline – as a reason for the council to retain outside legal help.

"Sitting in this well, I didn't live the Highpoint permit process...talking to those who were present here during that process there were a number of missteps along the way that perhaps independent legal counsel might have been able to be of assistance," Coughlin said.

Gutro also spoke about the need for outside counsel. He mentioned the negative experiences of Highpoint and C-Mart, where a settlement was eventually reached forcing fellow Councillor Brian McNamee to recuse himself, and the positive experience of working on the LDA as inspiration for the resolve.

"In the wake of Highpoint, in the wake of losing a voice on C-Mart and the favorable experience we had on Quincy Center, I think it's incumbent on us to try and get every conceivable benefit when we make decisions that will impact some of these lagers parcels and the neighborhoods that surround them."

The resolve asking for legal assistance was referred to the mayor's office.

Prior to their meeting, the council held a special session sitting in its capacity as the SPGA. The meeting was scheduled so the councillors could better understand the process.

During the SPGA session, city Planning Director Dennis Harrington urged the council to adopt measures allowing them to create a list of outside firms who could conduct reviews at the expense of the applicant. According to Harrington, the Planning Board already has a list of firms they use to conduct reviews and the council has the authority to create such a list, they just need to authorize it. He said the professional reviews should take place as soon as possible after an application is received.

"As soon as the chair of the special permit granting authority (Council President Mike McFarland) or the city clerk gets notice of such an application they should immediately look toward a professional review," Harrington said. "These things are much to complicated for a small department or part-time elected officials. They should be looked at professionally."

By a 7-0 vote, the council approved a motion to that effect. Harrington said he'd work with the council to help draw up the criteria to create the list. After the criteria are completed, quotes would be accepted and reviewed and the council would reach agreements with firms to retain on the list.

An additional motion passed during the SPGA session. It calls for a short SPGA session to be held before the first council meeting of each month so SPGA matters could be quickly discussed. Formal hearings on SPGA matters would be scheduled for separate times.

Using CPA Funds For Long-Term Projects Concerns Councillors

Financing City Hall, Coddington School Projects Questioned

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors Monday questioned the proposed plan to finance renovations of Old City Hall and the Coddington School.

The city would issue a bond to finance the $18 million project. As part of a presentation on the city's finances at Monday's council meeting, financial adviser Cinder McNerney presented the council with a spreadsheet showing the bond's anticipated payment schedule. It projects a 30-year bond being issued. The payments on the bond are projected to total over $30 million - $18 million in principal and $12.3 million in interest.

Most of the bond would be paid using money from Community Preservation Act (CPA) funding. As proposed, a majority of money spent annually would go towards paying off the bond; the city would pay $900,000 a year towards the bond from CPA funds. Councilor Doug Gutro questioned whether it was common for communities to tie up the fund for one project over such a long period of time.

"While there will be public policy questions that we will debate, while there will be legal questions, where there will be community is-

GOV. DEVAL PATRICK and a host of local public officials recently toured the BlueFin Robotics facility at the former Fore River Shipyard. The group was shown a number of different robots that BlueFin employees are currently working on. BlueFin Robotics moved to Quincy's Fore River Shipyard in 2008 after looking for a new facility to consolidate its engineering, manufacturing and marine operations teams. The Patrick-Murray Administration's Massachusetts Office of Business Development met with BlueFin Robotics in the spring of 2009 to discuss assistance for the expansion of the company's facility. Today they are operating from their 55,000 square foot facility in Quincy and employ over 90 people. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On April 13, 1742, George Friedrich Handel's "Messiah" premieres in Dublin. Although singing the oratorio has become a Christmas tradition, the Messiah received its world premiere during the Christian season of Lent. Handel composed the score for Messiah in just 24 days.
- On April 14, 1818, Noah Webster, a Yale-educated lawyer with an avid interest in language and education, publishes his American Dictionary of the English Language. The dictionary, which took him more than two decades to complete, introduced more than 10,000 "Americanisms."
- On April 12, 1861, the Civil War begins when Confederate shore batteries under General P.G.T. Beauregard open fire on Union-held Fort Sumter in South Carolina's Charleston Bay. During the next 34 hours, 50 Confederate guns and mortars launched more than 4,000 rounds at the poorly supplied fort.
- On April 10, 1906, O. Henry's second short-story collection, "The Four Million," is published. O. Henry was the pen name adopted by William Sydney Porter. Porter began writing in the late 1880s but didn't apply himself seriously until 1898, when he was jailed for embezzling from a bank in Austin, Texas.
- On April 15, 1924, Rand McNally releases its first comprehensive road atlas. The first version was called the Rand McNally Auto Chum. Today Rand McNally is the world's largest maker of atlases in print and electronic media.
- On April 11, 1945, the American Third Army liberates the Buchenwald concentration camp near Weimar, Germany. Buchenwald will be judged second only to Auschwitz in the horrors it imposed on its prisoners. Among those saved by the Americans was Elie Wiesel, who would go on to win the Nobel Peace Prize in 1986.
- On April 9, 1969, the Chicago Eight, indicted on federal charges of conspiracy to cross state lines with intent to incite a riot at the 1968 Democratic convention in Chicago, plead not guilty. The trial turned into a circus as the defendants and their attorneys used the court as a platform to attack President Richard Nixon, the Vietnam War, racism and oppression.

Four Quincy Marines were killed in action in one of costliest battles in the Pacific Campaign. One of those Quincy Marines, PFC William R. Caddy, made the ultimate sacrifice for his comrades and was presented the Medal of Honor posthumously for his unselfish actions. A collation at the William R. Caddy Detachment #124, located at 111 Newbury Ave., North Quincy, will be held following the ceremony.

Pretty Quiet On The Election Front

This fall's state election could go down as one of the quietest in years.

Unlike 2010 when there were open seats for Congress, Norfolk County district attorney and two local legislative seats, it appears all incumbents are staying put this year.

So the only real question is: will anyone challenge them either in the primary Thursday, Sept. 6 or in the final election Tuesday, Nov. 6?

The state primary is five months away but already political observers believe there may not be any contested races for Quincy voters to decide in the state primary.

The city's four state legislators are all Democrats and they're all running for re-election this fall. It's expected Sen. John Keenan and state Reps. Ron Mariano, Tackey Chan and Bruce Ayers will not have any competition in the primary. It's possible they may draw a Republican opponent in the final election but so far it appears no one from the GOP (or unenrolled candidates) will step up to challenge the city's State House delegation.

Other Democratic office holders seeking re-election this fall are Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell and County Commissioners John Gillis of Quincy and Fran O'Brien. O'Donnell, Gillis and O'Brien will likely have smooth sailing for their party's nomination and not have opposition in the primary. It remains to be seen if a Republican (or Independent) jumps into any of these races for the final election.

Even the "open" race for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate appears to be a "shut" case.

Frontrunner Elizabeth Warren, who has made various appearances in Quincy over the last several months, may have a clear path to the Democratic nomination and the opportunity to challenge Sen. Scott Brown, a Republican, in the final election Nov. 6.

Up until two weeks ago, there was a three-way race for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination. But one of those contenders - James King of Dover - dropped out March 21. That leaves only Marissa DeFranco, an attorney from Middleton, as the only candidate in Warren's path to the nomination.

Even if she remains in the race, DeFranco faces the hurdle of the state convention where she would need 15 percent of party delegates to appear on the state primary ballot.

It's plausible that the 2012 state primary will be quieter than 2008.

City Clerk Joseph Shea has a word for it: "dulls-ville."

In 2008, there were two Democratic races on the state primary ballot but neither were local.

Incumbent Sen. John Kerry defeated Edward J. O'Reilly for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate. Governor's Councillor Christopher Iannella, Jr. defeated two fellow Democrats, one from Hull and another from Abington.

Circumstances of the 2012 state primary could evolve into a "perfect storm" of low turnout.

First, the state primary will be held on a Thursday - not the traditional Tuesday. That's because the state re-scheduled the primary from Tuesday, Sept. 18 to Thursday, Sept. 6 to comply with the Federal Military Overseas Voter Empowerment Act. MOVE requires states to mail absentee ballots to service members and other citizens outside of the country 45 days before a general election.

Thursday, Sept. 6 also happens to be just a few days after Labor Day and the week that school starts in Quincy. (Sept. 6 will not be a school day, however, as voted by the School Committee.) Election Day may be the last thing on voters' minds so close to the "unofficial" end of summer and start of the school year.

But the biggest factor is the lack of local races. In the 2008 state primary, with all Quincy incumbents unopposed, turnout was 13.36 percent of 53,967 voters.

Turnout in the 2004 state primary was 15.96 percent of 53,390 voters. That year there were four contested races in the Democratic primary, but only two opponents were from Quincy.

State Rep. Bruce Ayers defeated a Democratic challenger from Randolph; Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell defeated Anthony McDonnell from Quincy; Norfolk County Commissioners John Gillis and Fran O'Brien of Dedham defeated Stephen Harold of Quincy and Susan Rogers of Canton; and Governor's Councillor Christopher Iannella, Jr. defeated a challenger from Hull.

The turnout was even lower in the 2000 state primary: only 14.8 percent of 51,552 registered voters. The lone local contested race that year was for the open Register of Deeds post created by the retirement of Barry Hannon of Braintree. Three candidates - including two from Quincy - sought the Democratic nomination. Paul Harold, former state senator and city councillor, won the nomination defeating Norfolk County Commissioner Peter Collins of Milton and Mary Ellen Cronin of Quincy.

Voters hoping for some heavy-weight election bouts may have to wait until Nov. 6. That's the day voters will decide the Presidential race and the contest for the U.S. Senate seat presently held by Republican Scott Brown.

This fall will also mark the first time that Quincy voters choose a congressman representing the newly-redrawn 8th district. Cong. Stephen Lynch is running for re-election in that re-drawn district that includes Quincy. So far, one Republican challenger has emerged: Quincy Republican Matt Temperley.

It will also be the first time that voters in Ward 3 Precinct 3 vote for a new state representative in a Boston-based district. Ward 3 Precinct 3 was placed in the Boston-based district - currently represented by Dorchester Democrat Martin Walsh - because of re-districting.

SPEAKING OF LYNCH, the Democratic Congressman has named Quincy's Katherine Shea as a district representative. Shea will act as Lynch's liaison for the towns of Dedham, Medfield, Norwood, Westwood, Walpole and Canton as well as handle matters pertaining to small business, environment, energy and trade and commerce and postal issues.

KATHERINE

Shea most recently served as a Superior Court Administrator for Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey's Office. She has also worked for the Quincy Recreation Department and has volunteered as a youth soccer coach and an after-school tutor.

Katherine is a graduate of Quincy High School and Providence College, where she majored in political science and minored in business studies and public administration. A lifelong Quincy resident, she is the daughter of City Clerk Joseph Shea and Josephine Shea, a member of the Norfolk County Retirement Board.

"We are fortunate to have Katherine join our staff," Lynch said. "We have a very busy office and she brings a great deal of energy, intelligence and enthusiasm to her position. Katherine is a wonderful addition to our office."

Scenes From Yesterday

2734 Baker Yacht Basin, Quincy Point, Mass.

THIS IS A 1912 postcard view of the Baker Yacht Basin and the deep-water channel in the Town River at Quincy Point. Lorenzo D. Baker of Wellfleet had bought the land next to the river on the right of here to build a dock facility for his United Fruit Company to unload bananas in Quincy rather than in Boston. He died before he could begin construction of the facility. His son then operated a boatyard here for many years after. The building on the right with the two smokestacks was at the time the Eastern Mass. Street Railway's coal fired electric power plant. It was built in 1888 to provide electricity for Quincy's first electric trolleys. Next to it was the Sheppard Coal Company's coal wharfs and storage yards. Both companies required deep water access for arriving ships. In the late 1930's the Proctor and Gamble Company brought the land a new plant was built on the site of those buildings. Now known as Twin River Technologies, the plant continues to be dependent on deliveries by large ships. This view was from today's Bay Pointe Marina. Police And Fire Layoffs Possible

There was no confirmation from Mayor Joseph LaRaia's office this week concerning rumors that the proposed layoffs of city workers would include police and firemen.

Police Chief Francis Finn said, "I've only heard rumors; no official word. I don't know whether there will be layoffs in the police force, but I would hope that would be the last thing that would happen."

Fire Chief Edward Barry was equally in the dark about layoffs and asserted he could not afford any personnel cuts and still provide the same quality of fire protection.

PUSH TO REGAIN

MERRYMOUNT PARK ACRES

The Park and Recreation board called upon Congressman James Burke in their effort to regain 6.6 acres of Merrymount Park from federal use.

The board wanted the congressman's help in relocating the Infantry Brigade that has occupied the parkland since World War II. The board's executive secretary, Richard Koch, noted that while relations with the infantry group have always been cordial, there was a compelling need by the city to regain the needed acreage for recreation uses. Koch suggested that the Army Reserve unit be moved to available space at Fort Devens.

BEETLE MANIA!

The influence of ancient Egyptian culture continues to reassert itself on our own every few decades. New archeological discoveries during the Victorian era resulted in an upsurge of interest in all things Egyptian, as did King Tutankhamen's world tour in the 1970s. When it comes to jeweled expressions of this heightened interest in Egyptian jewelry, interest often turns to amulets with beautiful representations of the scarab. This tiny beetle was highly regarded by the Egyptians as a symbol of renewal and rebirth. Egyptian revival scarab jewelry featuring gold and gemstone representations of this favored talisman has included rings, pendants, brooches, necklaces, earrings, stick pins, and other pieces that are deemed timeless. These pieces are as classical as pearls and diamonds.

Ancient Egyptian jewelry offers a fascinating look into a world of long ago. Step into our store at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to view all of our fabulous jewelry. Quincy High Places Fifth In State Academic Decathlon

Quincy High was among the 16 schools that recently competed for the state championship title in the 2012 Massachusetts Academic Decathlon, held at Westwood High School.

Local, regional and state competitions culminate in the national finals that will take place in New Mexico in April. This was the first year in which Quincy High School advanced to the March State competition.

The United States Academic Decathlon was created to provide opportunities for high school students to experience the challenges of rigorous team and individual academic competition.

Each team competes in 10 events: economics, language and literature, art, music, mathematics, history, science, essay, interview and speech. Each year the science or history is used as the Super Quiz topic.

A new theme of study is established every year with topics that are relevant, current and challenging. This year's focus is the Age of Empire. The science topic is physics.

"Quincy High School's core values are: Think, Work, Share, and that's what Aca Dec is all about," Coach Evelyn Ryan said. "Competition provides a wonderful incentive to study these subjects in depth. The students gain a remarkable amount of knowledge and important study skills in their daily preparation for the contest. There's really no way to lose taking part in an event like this."

At the State competition, gold, silver and bronze medals are awarded for individual events, along with trophies for the three highest-scoring teams. Overall individual winners are recognized, as are champion teams.

"Once again Michaela Walker proved to be our Most Valuable Player," Ryan said. "She had the highest score on the team and she took silver medals in Art and the Interview."

"Molly Cunha also performed superbly, taking a gold medal as well as the Coach's gold for getting a perfect score on the SuperQuiz. The team also won the distinction of third place in the SuperQuiz."

"But best of all," Ryan added, "was the team spirit. The team pulled together, helping each other learn during practice sessions, and cheered each other on throughout the competition. The entire school is very proud of the academic accomplishments of these young scholars."

Peppers, Zucchini Mix Over Couscous

I had invited my granddaughter Lauren for lunch. And she is on a gluten free program, so I pondered over what to make that would be appealing to her.

I decided to make a mixed vegetables dish and serve it over gluten free couscous.

PEPPERS, ZUCCHINI MIX

- 1 large green pepper
- 1 large red pepper
- 2 medium sized zucchini
- 1 onion (sliced)
- 2 garlic cloves (chopped)
- 1-cup tomato sauce
- 1-2 tablespoons goat cheese
- ½ teaspoon oregano and basil

3 tablespoons olive oil

Cut up the peppers and slice the onions. Cut the zucchini in halves, then in bite size pieces.

In the hot oil, sauté the onion and garlic, and then add the peppers and the zucchini, salt and pepper, herbs and cook covered. Add the tomato sauce and cook on medium heat until done.

Cook the couscous according to directions. Instead of water, I used chicken stock, which gave it a much better flavor.

When serving, place the couscous first, and then pour vegetables over it. Sprinkle grated cheese if desired.

City's Financial Advisor Suggests Raising Taxes

taxed more," McNerney said, "but in terms of the long-term interest of the city - and I know it's easy for me to do this, I do this every time I speak to you - I would suggest that the city tax some of that unused levy capacity."

The benefit of raising taxes would be twofold, according to McNerney.

For one, it would increase the city's cash reserves, the amount of unexpended money the city has available. Doing so could help boost the city's credit rating. The city is rated by Moody's Investors Services as Aa3, the fourth best rating they give.

Council Finance Committee Chairman Joe Finn asked what was keeping the city from having a higher rating, and McNerney said it was low cash reserves.

"Your unused levy capacity, you don't get as much credit for it because it's not taxed," McNerney said. "The cash reserve is the only area where the city is weak, the rest of the city is very strong - stronger than Aa3. The city's accomplished a whole lot in the last several years. You've got an opportunity right now to deal with the one and only thing that needs to get rebuilt is the reserve position."

McNerney said about four percent of the city's general fund revenue is currently free cash. She suggested that the city needs to increase that to five and eventually ten percent to better its credit rating. The more cash reserves the city has, the more financial flexibility it would have, something rating agencies consider favorably.

"The more flexibility you have the more credit you get when you're rated," McNerney said.

"You can withstand downturns in the economy, you can withstand cuts in state aid, you can withstand a low interest rate environment where all of a sudden you've got all this cash but you can't earn anything with it, you can withstand your losses in local receipts - motor vehicle excise and other kinds of revenue sources that all of a sudden now aren't there."

In addition to boosting cash reserves, the increased money could go towards currently unfunded future liabilities. McNerney said the city had about $300 million in unfunded pension liabilities on Jan. 1, 2010. That amount needs to be funded by 2040. The city has another $250 to $450 million of unfunded OPEB (other post-employment benefit) liabilities.

"Both the pension and the OPEB are ascending numbers, and they're ascending at a scary rate," McNerney said. "You've got to plan way ahead so that if you start to fund it sooner than when you have to you'll be less up against when the time comes."

McNerney added that rating agencies might soon begin to factor in a community's unfunded liabilities when they rate.

"The rating agencies, they used to look at historical trends, and that was basically the last five years,"

McNerney said. "And now they've changed to look at what are you facing and what are you dealing with prospectively, and are you dealing with it, are you proactive with regard to what you have to take on including OPEB and pension."

Officer Faces Disciplinary Action

A Quincy Police officer suspended for 30 days for misconduct is facing additional disciplinary action, officials confirmed.

Officer Joseph McGunigle is now serving the month-long suspension stemming from the most recent issue in a long-running conflict with his Quincy neighbors. The dispute that prompted the suspension related to the placement of a traffic cone in the neighborhood.

An independent hearing officer recommended the suspension and anger management classes, which was ultimately ordered by Mayor Thomas Koch. Police Chief Paul Keenan followed up the suspension with a subsequent allegation.

In the most recent complaint, Keenan alleges that McGunigle failed to comply with a direct order to stay away from the police station, entering it in October at the same time a witness in the original case was in the station, according to officials.

The complaint will now follow the same process, with a hearing officer making a recommendation to Mayor Koch on potential disciplinary action. In addition, Chief Keenan has revoked McGunigle's gun permit.

Through his receptionist, Paul T. Hynes, McGunigle's attorney, declined to comment on the case Monday.

"Mr. Hynes does not talk to the press about pending cases," she said.

Cahill: 'Running Ads Appropriate, Legal For Lottery'

was surprised to hear about the indictment that was announced by state Attorney General Martha Coakley.

"I have seen no evidence of criminal conduct by anybody, which does not surprise me because the truth is that nobody did anything wrong," Parker said in a statement.

Cahill, age 53, of Quincy, was indicted by a Suffolk County Grand Jury on one count of violating the State Ethics Law (Use of Official Position to Obtain Unwarranted Privilege) and Conspiracy to violate the State Ethics Law. Cahill was also indicted on one count of Procurement Fraud and one count of Conspiracy to Commit Procurement Fraud.

Scott Campbell, age 41, of Quincy, Cahill's former Chief of Staff at the Treasury and former Campaign Manager, was also indicted on similar charges. Campbell was indicted on one count each of Conspiracy to violate the State Ethics Law, Procurement Fraud, and Conspiracy to Commit Procurement Fraud. In addition, Alfred J. Grazioso, Jr., age 57, of Quincy, the Lottery's former Chief of Staff, was also indicted today on two counts of Obstruction of Justice.

"We allege that Treasurer Cahill abused his position to launch a television advertising campaign at the Lottery that was carefully coordinated to promote his own campaign for Governor," Coakley said. "This was more than a million dollars in taxpayer money that was intended to benefit the public and the Lottery. We allege that the timing, amount budgeted, and coordinated messages of the Lottery ads all point to a decision made by Treasurer Cahill to abuse his position of trust and put his own political ambitions over the best interests of the taxpayers he was elected to represent."

Parker dismissed Coakley's claims that the lottery's advertising campaign was geared to promote Cahill's independent bid for governor in 2010.

"Permission ads were run by the Lottery in response to the (Republican Governors Association) ads attacking the integrity of the Lottery. The RGA attack ads had undermined public confidence in the Lottery and hurt sales measured year over year," Parker said.

Cahill launched his independent gubernatorial bid after changing his party affiliation from Democrat. He was among three major candidates for governor two years ago along with incumbent Deval Patrick, a Democrat, and Charles Baker, a Republican.

Parker also said "not running the ads because the RGA or an overzealous attorney general might later question whether the ads might have benefitted the treasurer politically would have been the wrong thing to do."

"Treasurer Cahill had

Statement From Former State Treasurer Timothy Cahill

"The attorney general has alleged that I used public resources to run a campaign ad. I did not. My job as treasurer was to maximize revenue for the Lottery, which we did, which I did, and that was my job and I performed that duty with or without a campaign.

"It was entirely appropriate and legal for the Lottery to run its ads in response to the Republican Governors Association's attacks on the integrity of the Lottery. It was the right thing for them to do. Knowing what I knew then and even what I know today, we'd do it again because it was the right thing to do.

"And again I would just ask you to respect my privacy, I'm no longer a public official, my family's privacy, my neighbors' privacy.

"We will fight these charges and do whatever we have to do to clear my name and my reputation."

an obligation to maximize Lottery revenues. He and the Lottery made the right choice to run the ads.

"We are confident," Parker added, "that a jury will agree and in the end, the Attorney General will have wasted an enormous amount of time, energy and scarce resources to bring criminal charges that never should have been brought."

The indictments follow a comprehensive investigation by the AG's Office that examined the timing and reason for Lottery TV and radio ads that began airing in September 2010. When the AG's office began its investigation in October 2010, it requested, and the Lottery agreed, to immediately take down the ads pending the completion of the investigation. Dozens of witnesses were interviewed and thousands of electronic communications examined to determine the purpose behind the $1.5 million ad campaign. As a result of that investigation, the AG's office alleges that a series of advertisements were procured by Cahill, with Campbell's assistance, for the purpose of aiding Cahill's struggling campaign for Governor, rather than to simply boost the Lottery's image and sales.

The AG's Office alleges that a series of Lottery "permission" ads were approved at Cahill's direction and with Campbell's assistance, even though sales at the Lottery were already on the way up after a brief slow period in July 2010. These ads are typically intended to give potential buyers "permission" to purchase Lottery tickets by demonstrating that the money spent is being put to good use through increased local aid. While similar ads had been run in the past, "permission" advertising had been cut significantly in FY 2008 and FY 2009, with no "permission" style television ads running at all in either FY 2009 or FY 2010 (July 1, 2009 through June 30, 2010). Due to state budget constraints, the Legislature in FY 2010 drastically cut the Lottery's advertising budget from $10 million to $2 million, and television advertising was eliminated. The advertising budget for FY 2011 began July 1, 2010 and was also set at $2 million.

According to Coakley, the investigation determined that at the end of July 2010, the Cahill campaign identified through a series of focus groups that promoting Cahill's strong management of the Lottery was a key campaign theme that could influence voters. This issue was allegedly identified at a time when campaign contributions to Cahill were falling. The day after the focus groups, a campaign staffer allegedly met with Cahill. Following the meeting, the campaign staffer sent a series of text messages that read in part, "I just got the go ahead on everything we discussed. Yes on Lottery ads and he has plenty of money...Cahill thinks most of the two million is there... We just found a million for extra publicity. But Cahill can't be in the ad...But we run ads about the lottery being well-run and putting money back in communities. I'm going to speak with the ad company about copy Cahill agreed."

The following day, Coakley said the investigation determined that Cahill allegedly had direct contact with the advertising agency, and that same day the agency began plans for by far the largest "permission" ad campaign the Lottery had ever run. Ultimately, as a result of the focus groups, a series of television and radio Lottery ads were allegedly planned and authorized by Cahill to run at a cost of $1.5 million in taxpayer funds.

Furthermore, the AG's Office alleges that the script for the ads was modified in order to specifically tout the Lottery as "the most successful in America" and to credit that success to "a consistently well-managed Lottery," language that had never before been used in "permission" style ads. Despite serious objections raised by Lottery officials, the ads were allegedly again approved and authorized by Cahill to run from late September through November 2010. During a portion of this same time, the Cahill for Governor Campaign was running its own television ads that promoted Cahill's skill in managing the Lottery.

Finally, the AG's office contends that the Lottery's ad campaign would have almost entirely wiped out the Lottery's advertising budget less than halfway through the fiscal year. This would have severely reduced funding for advertising during the critical holiday period, which typically generates the Lottery's highest sales figures, as well as funding for "jackpot awareness" ads, which the Lottery has long relied on to stimulate player excitement and boost sales whenever jackpots soar over the $100 million level. As a result of the ad campaign being suspended at the AG's request in mid-October 2010, about $1 million of the planned $1.5 million was saved and spent on more traditional forms of Lottery advertising.

As a result of changes to the Massachusetts' ethics reform laws in 2009, the ethics indictments returned against Cahill and Campbell are now felony charges rather than civil violations.

In addition to the indictments returned against Cahill and Campbell, a Suffolk Grand Jury also indicted Alfred J. Grazioso, Jr., for allegedly obstructing justice during the course of the AG's investigation. Prosecutors allege that Grazioso, in August 2011 and while still Chief of Staff for the Lottery, intimidated and harassed two witnesses prior to those witnesses being interviewed by the AG's office for this investigation.

All defendants are expected to be arraigned on these charges at a later date. The charges are allegations, and the defendants are presumed innocent until proven guilty, Coakley said.

This case is being handled by Jim O'Brien, Chief of Attorney General Coakley's Public Integrity Division, along with Assistant Attorneys General Peter Sacks, Jason Cofield, and Sarah Bookbinder, Financial Investigator Sally Ann Nelligan, and Massachusetts State Troopers assigned to the Attorney General's Office. The Attorney General's Forensic Lab conducted an extensive forensic analysis of the evidence seized during the investigation.

Financing City Hall, Coddington School Projects Questioned

sues about the value of community preservation funding beyond the usage for City Hall...how many communities literally use it as a mechanism to mortgage one building renovation and if you see that as being financially riskier than using the general fund," Gutro asked McNerney.

McNerney said she sees that "happening all the time." When asked if other communities used 30-year bonds for the projects, she noted the legislature passed the Municipal Relief Act, communities couldn't take out 30-year bonds.

Chris Walker, the mayor's director of policy and information, reiterated that using CPA funding for the bond would leave roughly the same amount of money in the account as was available before, because the city recently finished paying $900,000 annually for a bond used to finance the purchase of open space.

"We will be talking about this in Finance Committee," Walker said, "but draining of the CPA fund to any extent that's different now is not what the plan is. It's to keep that level where it has been for the last several years going forward."

In response, Gutro noted that $900,000 represents more of the money in the account now than it did in the past because state funding has fallen over several years. In 2008, the state matched funds at 100 percent, but the match for this year was only 26.6 percent, according to Auditor Susan O'Connor.

Along the same vein, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked what would happen if the amount available for CPA funding declined, since at most 80 percent of annual expenditures from the account can go towards one project.

Rick Manley, the city's bond counsel, said that if the account declined too much, the city would be obligated to find other sources to pay off the bond in order to spend from the account correctly.

"As long as you leave the CPA in place, you're still obligated to maintain certain levels of funding in the various discreet categories that CPA allows you to spend money in," Manley said. "You're not allowed to spend it all in the same place...you would need to look elsewhere in the city budget to find the difference."

CPA funding comes from a one percent surcharge on property taxes. The surcharge was approved in a referendum by voters in the city, and can be revoked by a similar initiative. Gutro asked what would happen to the fund if residents voted to eliminate the CPA surcharge after the bond was issued but before it was fully paid off.

Manley explained that under Department of Revenue guidelines, residents would still be saddled with the surcharge as long as the bond was being paid off.

"If the community decides to get out of having the Community Preservation Act in place, that's fine," Manley said. "They will insist that the tax remain in place for the term of any outstanding bonds that are to be paid with those revenues...you're still going to be keeping the tax in place until the bonds are paid off."

Manley would later clarify that the rule that a project could only receive 80 percent of the fund's annual expenditures would no longer apply since the surcharge would only be used for paying the bond. The surcharge would also be reduced to fund only the bond.

The proposal to renovate the buildings will now go to the Finance Committee. May 7 is its next scheduled meeting.

Quincy To Mark Community Development Week

Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington announce Quincy will join other communities across the nation in celebrating "National Community Development Week" from April 9-14.

This weeklong celebration provides the opportunity for Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) communities to showcase CDBG-funded projects and programs, and to educate residents, local businesses, and community groups about the programs administered by the city's Department of Planning and Community Development.

The CDBG program is a flexible program, overseen by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), that provides communities, such as Quincy, with resources to address a wide range of unique community development needs.

Locally, CDBG funds are used to support activities and services such as community center programs; emergency food centers; housing rehabilitation activities; code inspections; the creation of affordable housing units; and also supports economic activities such as public works projects and assistance to small businesses for jobs creation.

Each year, the city's administration of the CDBG program directly benefits about 13,000 Quincy residents.

Since 1975, the CDBG program has provided over $75 million to the City of Quincy for community development programs.

"The CDBG program continues to strengthen our city by channeling Federal funds directly through our Department of Planning and Community Development to address crucial neighborhood issues," said Mayor Koch. "From youth, family, and senior programming to street and sidewalk repair, the CDBG program is a vital and effective tool to assist us in meeting the needs in our community."

The main event of Quincy's participation in Community Development Week will be the celebration of an affordable housing project for families, which is currently under construction, at 45 Winter Street. The event will be held on-site Tuesday, April 10 at 11 a.m.

The project is being developed by Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore (NHS), which is one of the city's community housing development organizations. The project consists of 24 energy efficient units, which will be offered to low and moderate-income families.

Questions about housing placement should be directed to NHS at 617-770-2227. Funding for this project is being provided by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development through the city's Department of Planning and Community Development. Other funding sources include the City of Quincy and MassHousing Affordable Housing Trust Funds and the Mass. Department of Housing and Community Development.

ALBA DELI, located at 1089 Hancock St., Quincy, offers hors d'oeuvre platters.

Alba Deli is family owned and operated. The family, originally from Albania, brings Mediterranean style cooking to Quincy.

"Mom" prepares her famous family entrees daily, such as stuffed peppers and eggplant parmigiana. Once inside Alba Deli, the aroma of slow roasted turkey, roast beef, pastrami, corned beef and brisket in the air is a warm welcome. All are available to purchase by the pound.

A relaxed, upbeat atmosphere with many tables and a large breakfast/lunch bar with stools makes Alba Deli a great spot to have breakfast, lunch or dinner.

The $3.99 "Breakfast Special" 2 eggs any style, bacon or sausage, home fries and toast served Monday-Friday is popular. The 3 egg "Meat Lovers Omelet" with salami, sausage, hamburger and bacon with your choice of cheese is another favorite as well as the "Tuscan Breakfast" 3 eggs any style, beefsteak tomatoes, Gorgonzola cheese, pancetta and spinach. All omelets and breakfast specials are served with home fries or hashbrowns and toast.

Pancakes, french toast and breakfast sandwiches are also available.

Deli sandwiches hot or cold are made fresh to order. The Soprano is prosciutto, mozzarella, beefsteak tomatoes and pesto on focaccia bread. The Rachel is corned beef, coleslaw and Russian dressing on grilled rye.

The Gobbler is turkey, dark or white meat, stuffing, mayo, cranberry sauce and gravy on a sub roll. Try the Antipastos Italiano (for 2) premium Italian cold cuts and cheeses over mixed greens with homemade bread.

Classic Italian dishes like Chicken Marsala, Veal Saltimbocca, Chicken Broccoli Alfredo, Steak Tips and Baked Haddock round out the menu at Alba Deli.

CCC, Blue Hills Reservation Documentary

The Civilian Conservation Corps and Blue Hills Reservation will be the topic of a documentary film program Wednesday, April 11 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The film explores the story behind one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, and its impact in Quincy.

In March 1933, President

Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed in the Great Depression. He proposed a Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests, parks, and farms, marking the emergence of modern environmentalism and national service.

The CCC program in Massachusetts was concerned with improvement and development of state park resources. Approximately 28 camps, including Camp SP-1 in the Blue Hills Reservation, enrolled nearly 100,000 men.

The 60-minute American Experience documentary that interweaves rich archival imagery with the personal accounts of CCC veterans plus a 15-minute silent film about the CCC in the Blue Hills, made in 1933 by Albert S. Genaske. After the film screenings, meet and chat with Eddie DeSantis, a New England CCC worker, about his experience.

The program is sponsored by the Thomas Crane Library and the Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures program.

iPad Keeps Seniors In Touch

Staying connected. Learning new skills. Surfing the Internet.

A new iPad class recently debuted at Allerton House Assisted Living Community at Hancock Park in Quincy and residents couldn't be more excited.

Just as Apple Computer began selling the latest version of the iconic tablet, seniors at Allerton House were adopting the technology for fun and learning.

They composed music on the keyboard display; played the Scrabble-like game "WORDS with friends;" checked for weather and news updates and asked a lot of questions.

Part of the assisted living community's Computer & Technology Club, the new iPad class is led by Resident Services Director Christine Nash. She says seniors adapt easily to cutting-edge technologies because they want to keep mentally challenged and up-to-date on "what's new." Next up for the weekly iPad class: new magazine subscriptions to be read on the mobile device.

Neighborhood Housing Services Director:

Israel, Massachusetts Share Similar Affordable Housing Challenges

Massachusetts may be more than 5,000 miles away from Israel, but the two share many similarities when it comes to the issue of affordable housing.

Robert Corley, executive director of Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, had an opportunity to learn first-hand about those similarities last week when he was one of 16 affordable housing leaders from Greater Boston to travel with the Jewish Community Relations Council to meet with affordable housing leaders in Haifa and Tel Aviv, Israel. The delegation spent the week of March 17-25 traveling throughout Israel, participating in affordable housing seminars and learning how their Israeli counterparts are addressing the same challenges faced here in Massachusetts, including a limited affordable housing stock, gentrification, access to mass transit and regulatory issues. Projects the delegation visited included the Bat Galim housing project in Haifa and a "Port Campus" revitalization project that is transforming the city's once derelict port district into a university campus and lively student quarter.

"For me, this trip reinforced the economic importance of safe, affordable housing for any city or state," Corley said. "A comprehensive affordable housing strategy must be paramount in order for any municipality to continue to grow and be vibrant."

As part of the week-long visit, the Massachusetts delegation met with Israeli government officials as well as affordable housing leaders to discuss ways in which the public and private sectors can work together to create more affordable housing. Corley noted that, like Massachusetts, many young Israeli families are forced to leave their hometowns in order to find housing they can afford.

"In Israel, you have a generation of people who literally risked their lives in order to create a safe place to call home," he said. "Now, these same parents are watching their children leave behind all they fought for because there is no affordable place for them to live in the urban centers, where all the quality jobs are located."

"Just like here on the South Shore, Israel needs to focus not only on job creation and business development, but also on having high-quality, affordable housing options for young people," Corley continued. "Providing this type of housing will continue to be one of our main goals at Neighborhood Housing Services."

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, March 27, at approximately 3:30 p.m., Officers John Leuchte and Terrence Hack were dispatched to Boston Audio Design at 659 Southern Artery for an unarmed robbery that just occurred.

The dispatcher stated that a male approximately 35-40 years old wearing a black hoodie and a white hat just took the register drawer and ran out of the store. The caller stated that the male ran up Pond Street.

Multiple cruisers began playing the area of the store as Officer Hack went to the store to get additional information. According to the store employee, he was out back and when he returned to the front of the store, he found the suspect behind the counter taking money out of the cash register. When he confronted the suspect, the suspect fled out of the store, dropping the $300-$400 on the ground.

The employee chased after the suspect through the liquor store parking lot, where the suspect hopped the fence into the parking lot of the apartment building, then hopped another fence into a neighbor's yard. The employee said that the suspect got his pants caught on the fence and fell to the ground, believing that he heard pants ripping. The employee lost the suspect in the yards behind Pond and Mill Streets.

Soon after, an anonymous caller told the Police dispatcher that the suspect may have ditched his hoodie and was now wearing a grey shirt. Officer Leuchte was driving on Mill Street when he observed a male fitting the description, but with a blue t-shirt on, carrying a grey shirt in his hands. He was sweating profusely.

As Officer Leuchte drove past the suspect, the officer called Officer Hack for an updated description. Officer Hack stated that he reviewed the video from the store and determined that the suspect was wearing a black hoodie with a grey shirt underneath, which may have red lettering on it. Officer Leuchte turned around and headed towards Washington Street to find the male, informing the other Officers that the suspect may be in the immediate area.

Officer Leuchte then spotted the suspect getting on the MBTA 222 Bus heading towards Weymouth. The officer activated his blue lights and pulled the bus over at Chubbuck Street. Officers Leuchte and Declan Breslin boarded the bus, located the suspect and escorted him to the street, where they asked him where he was coming from. He stated that he was in a local tavern. When asked if he was on Mill Street, the suspect said he wasn't. Officer Leuchte said that he saw him there, but the suspect again denied this, claiming that it was not him and that it was someone that looked like him.

Officer Leuchte pat-frisked the suspect and found 26 white pills (no container) in the suspect's pants pocket. The suspect said that they were Percocets. In his hand was a grey shirt that was inside out, with the red lettering concealed. Officer Leuchte, having probable cause to arrest, placed the suspect into custody for possession of the pills. The suspect was informed that he matched the description of a male involved in an incident and he was being transported back to the scene of the crime so that witnesses could determine if he was involved.

As the suspect got into the cruiser, his jeans ripped in the crouch, so he said, "Before you accuse me of hopping fences, you saw my pants rip." Once at the store, the witness said that he was 80-90% sure that it was him. Officer Donnelly arrived on scene and stood by the suspect while the other Officers gathered more information.

While waiting to be transported to the station, the suspect asked Officer Donnelly what he was being charged with. Officer Donnelly, not directly involved in the case, suggested that it might be unarmed robbery and possession of pills. The suspect then said to the officer, "Isn't it larceny from a building - not robbery - I didn't rob anybody - just the store."

The Officers reviewed the video and were able to slow down the sequences to identify the first red letter on the suspect's shirt as a "P." The suspect's shirt he held in his hand had the word, "Patriots," in red lettering across the chest.

Based on this evidence and confirmation by the witness, the suspect, a 39 year-old Dorchester resident, was also charged with "Larceny from a Building" along with the initial arrest for "Possession of a Class B substance."

Nice Work!

'Hiking The Appalachian Trail' Topic At Library

Hiker Roger Tetreault of Boxborough chronicles the many sights and sounds of the Appalachian Trail during a presentation Monday, April 9 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Tetreault took the phrase "take a hike" literally when he decided to walk the 2,176.4 miles of the Appalachian Trail. It took Roger five and a half months—from March 25 to Sept. 7—to hike from Springer Mountain in Georgia to Mount Katahdin in Maine.

During the hike he encountered temperatures ranging from 18° to 100° plus snow, lots of rain, deer, wild horses, wild long horned cattle, wild boar, mountain lions, bears, snakes, and many wonderful fellow thru-hikers. After the presentation, Roger will take questions and lead a discussion.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library. For more information, call 617-376-1316.

18-Member Class Enshrined At Ceremony QHS Inducts First Women's Athletics Hall Of Fame

By LAUREN BROOKS

Eighteen deserving women were inducted into the 1st annual Quincy High School Women's Athletics Hall of Fame last Friday in a moving ceremony at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Representing some of the best student-athletes from the 1970s through the 1980s, and including three longtime coaches, the inaugural Hall of Fame class was the culmination of an extensive search by a dedicated Hall of Fame Committee with the help of the Quincy High community.

"We opened a search to the community so that family, friends, teammates, and the citizens of Quincy could nominate potential Hall of Famers," said committee member Christine Barrett about the nomination process. Barrett (QHS Class of 1991), a star volleyball player for the Presidents was among the 18 inductees. "We then ironed out criteria for these athletes to meet before finalizing our first class of inductees."

"Many of these athletes," continued Barrett, "have gone on to be college athletes, coaches and moms, but most importantly productive citizens in the community."

It was months ago that Hall of Fame committee members Frank Santoro, Christine Barrett, Carol Lynch, and Michelle MacDonald embarked on the mission to finally recognize the importance female athletes have had at Quincy High. The time had come to honor these women with their own Hall of Fame.

"The creation of the Hall of Fame and the induction ceremony for female athletes was long overdue," explained Barrett. "We have several male athletic hall of famers, and there have been so many tremendous female athletes that have come through the doors of Quincy High, so we feel like it is about time that the female athletes become recognized."

Thanks to the immense amount of effort, hard work, and dedication put in by the Hall of Fame Committee and the community at-large, Quincy High was finally able to announce its first official Women's Athletic Hall of Fame class.

The ceremony was a success and after congratulating the new inductees, current Quincy Public School Athletic Director Jim Rendle added, "The work ethic that you have brought to the courts and to the fields, is the same work ethic the young ladies have now. What you brought, what you started, in Quincy Public Schools, as far as that tenacity, that hard work, the competitiveness, for women's athletics is still carrying on."

"These young women that are playing athletics now to the level that you set for them is because of the hard work you have put in the past," Rendle continued. "I just want to tell you, from the current athletic director, and the young women that are competing in the athletics in Quincy and North Quincy High School today, we want to thank you very much for what you did in the past to bring women's competitive sports to where it is."

Rendle went on to say that through the generosity of Bob McPherson there would now be a new plaque outside of the Munroe McLean Gymnasium at QHS, next to the Men's Athletics Hall of Fame plaque, that lists all 18 members of the Women's Athletic Hall of Fame class.

The 18 inducted into the Women's Hall of Fame included: Cindy Tozzi (1976), Kelly Sparks Gaffey (1976),

Franklin Pierce Hockey Has A Quincy Connection

Hockey is one of the more competitive sports to play at the collegiate level.

Many high school hockey players travel across the country and world to play in junior leagues with the hope of playing Division 1, 2 or 3 college hockey. It is very rare to have two kids from the same town or city on the same college team, but to have four kids hailing from the same city, on the same team, doesn't happen often, or at all.

But Quincy residents Patrick Dunn, Sean Dunn, Teddy

Walsh, and Kyle Craig pulled that (hat) trick this past season for the Franklin Pierce University (Rindge, New Hampshire) hockey program. What is even more interesting is that all four players were key members of the Quincy 67's Under-16 team in 2006 that won the state championship and almost won the nationals before losing to eventual national champion Michigan in the semifinals.

All four skaters contributed to a team that finished with an overall record of 6-13-5, including a 4-5-2 record in the Northeast 10 Conference. And next season should be even better for Franklin Pierce as the Ravens lose only two seniors to graduation.

Head coach Jamie Harrington expects his team to drastically improve next year, and he also expects the Quincy-quartet to play important roles on the ice in 2012-2013.

"While each of these guys bring individual qualities to our program," Harrington said in an email, "I think that it is significant to note that they all come from Quincy. These four players have established themselves as vital pieces to our program rebuild. They all possess an incredible work ethic, commitment, passion, and desire to lead our program."

"All four were specifically recruited for these qualities and they have yet to disappoint," Harrington continued. "I feel these players embody what it means to be student-athletes in the NCAA. All four players, to me, represent Quincy in their work ethic, pride, and dedication. I am extremely proud to coach these boys and I look forward to recruiting more players of their caliber."

Both Patrick and Sean Dunn transferred to Franklin Pierce from Utica College (New York) after playing for the Pioneers during their freshman and sophomore seasons following time spent skating for New Hampton Prep (New Hampshire), where they won the New England Prep Championship.

Sean Dunn is a speedy forward who registered four goals and five assists; he finished sixth on the Ravens in scoring this season.

"(Sean) is a dynamic forward who has a combination of speed and skill," noted Harrington. "When Sean is on his game he is a huge part of our offense. His work ethic is what makes him a good player. Sean isn't the most vocal guy, but he leads by example. We expect Sean to come in next season and be a significant contributor offensively."

Patrick Dunn was one of three Franklin Pierce goaltenders that helped form one of the best goalie rotations in the Northeast 10 Conference.

"Pat has emerged as a leader of our goaltending core," Harrington said. "His maturity and experience was evident in his leadership throughout the season. Pat will certainly be looked upon to take the reins in the crease next season."

Teddy Walsh, a fast and physical forward, is a former All-Scholastic at Quincy High. Walsh took his talents to the Bay State Breakers in the junior hockey-level following his high school career. He was pivotal this season for Franklin Pierce on the power play and penalty kill, and was very tough to play against in the corners and in front of the net.

"Teddy is one of the hardest working players we have at Franklin Pierce," said Harrington. "He is a great two-way forward for us. One of Teddy's strengths is the consistency of his approach on a daily basis."

Kyle Craig, a 6'1" smooth skating defenseman is another former Quincy High all-star who left after his sophomore year to play junior hockey full-time for the South Shore Kings and Boston Bulldogs of the Atlantic Junior Hockey League (AJHL).

Craig finished second in defensemen scoring for the Ravens this season with a goal and six assists.

"Kyle possesses the attitude and determination to help our program become conference contenders," Harrington noted. "He overcame a significant injury this season and was one of our top defensemen. I expect Kyle to be one of our top defensemen next season and I feel his leadership abilities will be relied on as we continue the growth of our program."

Plans On Running 26 Sunday Marathons In A Row

Hassan Haydar Wants To Inspire People Through Running

By SEAN BRENNAN

Hassan Haydar has some sage advice for anyone out there who wants to start running.

"Anyone who is thinking about running and haven't done it yet — don't waste anymore time," he said. "Get your shoes on and with time your mind will be clear not only during the run, but also your mind is clear before the run and after the run. There is pain along the way, but you will begin to look forward to it."

"Running is almost like life. If you are climbing a hill just remember the hill will end sooner or later. When you face difficulty in life, just remind yourself that that difficulty will get off your shoulders soon enough (as well)."

"The human body is made to run. God created us and threw a runner inside you. It is up to you: do you want the runner to stay there and be miserable or do you want that runner to come out and enjoy it?"

Haydar made his decision to throw himself fully into running back in 2001 when he joined the L-Street Running Club in South Boston, but his initial foray into the sport came years earlier when his daughter was a member of the Central Middle School track club.

That first time he ran it was a shock to the system.

"I actually started running a little bit when my daughter was at Central on the track team. She would ask me to go out and practice with her and the challenge was to do a loop around our house, and the loop was just under two miles," Haydar remembered. "The challenge was to run the whole thing without stopping. It took probably a year for me to do it without stopping. Then I didn't run for years until 2001 when I joined the L-Street Running Club."

That decision has become a game-changer for Haydar. In the twelve years since he began running with L-Street, he has completed 34 marathons, and last year at Boston, Haydar placed eighth in his age group (60-65) with an impressive time of 3:16. He hopes to run Boston this time between 3:10 and 3:15.

"The first time I went (to L-Street) I was scared to death, but I ran the whole five miles that the club was doing that day and from there on I've never missed a Sunday," he said. "I had no plans whatsoever to run a marathon, but what happened was I came across somebody who helped me get a number for the Boston Marathon that year."

"I got the courage to run it but at the end of the marathon I said exactly what everybody else (has) said through history, 'I would never do that again.' Two weeks later the pain subsided and I did it again."

26 for 26

Hassan Haydar considers himself lucky.

He moved with his wife and daughter to the United States from Lebanon in the 1977 for a chance at a new start on life and, despite some early difficulties, Haydar had faith in God that everything would work out. And it has.

Quincy has become a second-home for him and his family.

"Not only were we lucky enough to come to the United States, we were more lucky to end up in Quincy," he said. "Life at the beginning when we came was extremely difficult, but I heard the saying: 'Find the good in people, everybody has some'"

"From Day 1 when I arrived in America, we found nothing but the good in everyone we met. I was lucky to be given the opportunity to work. I was without a job in the United States for one day, which is remarkable," said Haydar who works as the Property Manager for Marina Bay Management Services LLC. "Not only through employment did I get to meet the best-of-the-best in Quincy, but my daughter went through a great school system in Quincy."

After 35 blessed years in Quincy, Haydar decided it was time to give back and find a way to inspire people in the same manner he was inspired when he first set foot in America. His idea centers around running and all the good that can come from finding yourself on a long run with a clear mind.

Haydar has set a high goal for himself and anyone who wants to take part. He is planning on running the Boston Marathon on April 16 and then running the marathon route from Hopkinton to Boston on 25 consecutive Sundays through October (Sunday April 22-Sunday October 7). He sees this as a way for him to give back to the community that has given him and his family so much.

"The truth behind this idea is I thought about a few things I could do to thank God for the blessing He gave our family," he said about his 26 for 26 concept. "I wanted to raise the bar higher than high to see if I could satisfy myself and to thank God for all we have been given. We have been in Quincy for 35 years and the people we have met have been nothing but sweet and we are not going anywhere."

"I want to do something unusual and hopefully inspire other people to see if they could see what is in running. Running will do wonders for anyone physically, mentally, socially and thinking-wise. It is amazing after awhile what your focus turns to and that is nothing but the beauty of life."

Haydar plans on starting his Sunday marathon run around 7 a.m. (rain or shine) in Hopkinton. He plans to run about a nine minute pace, placing him in Wellesley around 9 a.m. and on Boylston Street in Boston at 11 a.m. But you can meet him anywhere along the 26.2-mile route.

"I am hoping that people will pick a place along the course to meet," he said. "If someone wants to run two miles, three miles, and chat about something, I'll be along the road. It is going to be, hopefully, the same time, the same thing, same place. It is an opportunity for somebody who is afraid to run to try and meet me along the way."

Haydar has plans to launch the website 26for26.com later this month; this site will be dedicated to recording why this is being done as well as updating folks about his journeys along the way.

Time To Get Started

Those running shoes in your closet are begging to be used. Lace them up and hit the pavement.

Haydar promises that running will do wonders for anyone who is looking for some sense of balance in their life.

"Knock off the excuse," he said about people's fears

HASSAN HAYDAR will be running in his twelfth consecutive Boston Marathon on April 16. He plans on running 25 straight Sunday marathons following Boston and is hoping there are folks out there who would like to join him along the way.

that running just isn't for them. "Join a running club and don't be afraid. I guarantee you when you start you are going to be embarrassed that you don't have the right clothes or shoes, but don't worry about it, we all feel that way at first. Anyone can go out and run and with time you learn what you need to do."

"Running delivers improvement no matter what shape you're in, or how old you are, regardless of injuries or shortcomings from birth. Your gender doesn't matter; nor does your intelligence. Simply grab your running shoes and meet me along the Boston Marathon course this summer."

Haydar will be there. He hopes someone out there will join him.

Both programs will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 8:15 a.m. and 9:15 a.m. Mrs. Karen Gaughan will instruct the courses.

Each class includes exercises to improve and strengthen flexibility, endurance and overall fitness. Adaptations in the exercises allow each participant to work out at their own pace.

The cost of the program is $80; the sessions begin on April 11 and conclude on June 29. Registration is on a first come first serve basis, and will be taken at the first class.

Persons who cannot make this registration may register at the main office of the Recreation Department, One Merrymount Parkway, or online at QuincyRec.com.

Track Teams Loaded With Young Talent

The North Quincy and Quincy track teams opened up their spring season with a freshman-sophomore meet at Archbishop Williams High School facility in Braintree. QPS athletes won nearly every event and numerous youngsters got to establish themselves in the sport and get their spring underway on the right foot.

Winning in the girls' 100-meter was Emma Papile of Quincy High with Gabby Flaherty of North Quincy taking second and Julia Donovan of Quincy in third.

Brandi Parker of Quincy won the 400 and also took the long jump and triple jump while Emily and Julia Bryson dominated in the mile. Camille Mullaney won the high jump and 100-meter hurdles. Maya Umoren of North won the shot put with a nearly state-leading tenth-grade performance of 35,' and Angela McDonald of Quincy took the javelin. A girl's combo relay of Parker, Donovan, Xhona Ferro (North) and Papile dominated the 4 x 100 event.

In boys action, Don Sharp won the shot, Antoine Allen took the 100-meters, Eddie Guinto won the 200-meters, Mike Mullaney the mile with Aidan McMorro (Quincy) in second, and the NQ relay team of Antoine Allen, Chris Clare, Ed Guinto and Jerry Verrill earned first-place the 4 x 100.

"We have a young team, especially with the boys" said coach Geoff Hennessy about his program's influx of young talent. "It's no surprise that certain athletes have gone right to the front."

Mullaney was the state middle school champion in the high jump last spring; Maya Umoren is a Patriot League all-star in two sports (spring track and basketball); the Brysons have been tearing it up all winter in the distances, and Gabby Flaherty is a multi-event talent in the sprints and jumps. Parker was listed as a "Top 10 Frosh" last year in the triple jump by MileSplit MA, the premier track and field website in the country ranking Massachusetts athletes in all events.

McDonald was also a state champ in the turbo javelin and has wasted no time converting to the real spear. McDonald also is a multi sport athlete. Papile is easily the fastest girl at Quincy High - she turned heads on the soccer pitch last fall and was destined to challenge for the win in the 100 meters at last summer's Hershey Games when she broke her arm days before the meet. She just came off a basketball season and has done well in sprints and is learning the long jump as well.

"These kids are used to winning and know what it takes to get to the top," said Hennessy about his underclassmen. "We work hard, learn new things and have fun. I only wish we had even more kids. The team esprit de corps is much improved over past years. I credit our captains council comprised of Olivia Umoren, Rose Bennett, Sam McNally, Danielle Mullaney, Brianna Mullaney, Si Han Huang, Mary Zheng and Vanessa Bolden."

Olivia Umoren is another member of that talented family who has been to the winner's circle. A league all-star in volleyball, she qualified for the Mass All-State a year ago and won the Patriot League championship in the shot last spring. McNally has played soccer and basketball and made it to the Division I class meet in the javelin, Danielle Mullaney made the switch from soccer to cross country last fall and helped the Red Raiders to third place in the Patriot League and ran in the Eastern Mass meet at Franklin Park last fall, while Huang and Bolden have qualified for state events in shot and discus.

Bennett has been the top hurdler and jumper for the Raiders the past two years and competed in the MSTCA pentathlon two winters ago. This past fall she started on the volleyball team and competed for the swim team this winter. A promising newcomer is junior Colleen Bellotti who was a middle school standout in track.

The boys have an interesting nucleus of newcomers, some from the Red Raiders football team, and some new students form the bilingual program, which has recently moved from Quincy High to North Quincy.

Danny Tran has been a miler, but is also venturing into hurdles; Mike Mullaney was a league all-star and will run the mile and two mile; sprinters include Verrill, Allen, Guinto and Clare. Sharp has a football and wrestling background that will help as he assists in the shot and discus.

Several Quincy High athletes are also making the transition from the gridiron to the track, including Jon Cherwek, Hassan Ali and Viet Doan while Aidan McMorro had a successful cross-country and indoor season in the mile and is ready for spring.

"I would like to thank Mrs. Peng the bilingual guidance counselor at North for encouraging these boys to join the program," Hennessy noted. "It is beneficial to all of the students to encounter others from different cultures and learn that we are more similar than different. It is also helping these new students learn English, but I am learning as much from them as they learn from me and my staff!"

Hennessy is being assisted by Jim Hogan, the Quincy High head coach, Lauren Brooks, a former North Quincy star now attending UMass-Boston, Nicole Kananoff a member of the Mass National Guard, and Holly Madden, a former Hanover HS and Harvard University standout, now a nationally ranked Masters runner representing the L-Street running club (Hennessy is also a member).

Hennessy handles the throwers, Brooks the sprinters, Kananoff the hurdlers and high jumpers, and Madden and Hogan work with the distance runners.

"We want this program to be firmly established and successful because next year we move into our new facility currently under construction behind Quincy High on Faxon field. It's no secret we want to be the premier sport in this city and we can do it."

Team Finished Season at 18-1-5; Defeated Charlestown, 1-0, in Division Championship

Quincy Squirt B Team: Greater Boston Youth League Division Champs

The Quincy Squirt B hockey team, a travel squad out of Quincy Youth Hockey, won the Greater Boston Youth League (GBYHL) Eastern Division championship on March 18.

Quincy defeated Charlestown, 1-0, to claim the division crown.

Quincy Squirt B, otherwise known as the Quincy Killer B's, got the first and only goal in the first period on a close-range shot from Danny Kelly off an assist by Stephen Flynn. Quincy then hung on for the victory behind inspired goaltending by Matt Connolly.

Charlestown threw everything but the kitchen sink at Connolly, but the young goalie finished with the shutout - his fourth of the season. Quincy's defensemen played a strong game in front of Connolly and frustrated numerous scoring chances from the Townies.

Quincy had reached the finals with an overtime win on March 17, outlasting Needham B3 team that had battled Quincy to identical 5-5 ties during the regular season, so it was only fitting that the semifinal contest would end in a 6-6 deadlock.

Trailing 6-3 heading into the third period, Quincy rallied and got the fourth goal with six minutes remaining. With Connolly again providing outstanding goaltending, the Killer B's were able to work together to tie the score shortly before the end of regulation. In overtime, Ryan Quirk netted the deciding goal just seven seconds into the extra session, sending Quincy into the final round.

Nick Murray, Jake DeFranco, Jack Mariano and Quirk all scored regulation goals for Quincy.

The Quincy Killer B's ended the year with an impressive 18-1-5 record. The team outscored opponents by a combined 154-57 total. They joined the Quincy Mite A, Squirt A, Bantam A, and Bantam B teams in qualifying for the GBYHL Championships, signaling that hockey is alive in well in the City of Presidents.

QYH Bantam B's: Greater Boston League Champions

Continuing Quincy Youth Hockey's strong youth hockey season, the league's Bantam B's travel team recently completed a very successful season, which cumulated with a 1-0 victory over a very talented Brookline A team in the Greater Boston Youth Hockey League championship game.

Winners of 17 of their final 18 games, the Bantam B's finished the season with an overall record of 25-7-2.

In the Greater Boston

Youth Hockey League's semifinals, Quincy overwhelmed a gritty Norwood squad by a score of 8-2. Earlier this season, the team also traveled to New Hampshire to play in the prestigious Hooksett Spring Hockey Tournament. Quincy advanced to the championship game of this tourney, before losing to a talented Putnam, New York A team by a score of 3-1.

BMX Rider Kevin Robinson Visits Quincy

By EMILY TAFT

The Quincy After School Child Care (QCARE) organization invited five-time X Games BMX gold medalist Kevin Robinson to speak to packed house on March 28 at Broad Meadows Middle School. Robinson urged those in attendance to "Dream your life and then live your dream."

"I want to show students that it is a great thing to live a positive lifestyle," Robinson said in a phone interview before the event. "We live in an age now where there is so much negative behavior that gets recognized by the media and television shows, that I want to remind kids that it still pays to be the good guy."

QCARE is a non-profit organization providing licensed care for school aged children, kindergarten through thirteen years old. They offer school-aged programs in nine Quincy elementary schools and one middle school. A variety of programs are offered through QCARE during the school year, through February and April vacation and during the summer as well. This is the first year they have asked Robinson to come and speak, according to Macro Social Work Administrative Intern Sara Pateras.

"Events like Kevin's bring together the community for an event that is not only fun, but also educational. Kevin discussed topics that are important to a child's emotional and social well-being," said Pateras. "QCARE is invested in the Quincy community as a whole, not just the children in our program. It was of the utmost importance to the agency that we were able to welcome in a large audience so we could open our doors to the whole community."

Robinson has been riding professionally since the age of 19, and began riding BMX at the age of 10. He has nine X Games medals, five of which are gold medals, and has also won the Athlete of the X Games Award. In 2008 he broke the world height record by soaring 54 feet in the air over Central Park in New York City.

"The greatest moment of my life was getting on my bike for the first time," said Robinson. "I knew from that moment on I wanted my bike in my life for the rest of my life."

During his hour-long presentation Robinson performed tricks on his BMX bike and discussed topics about bullying, cyber bullying, perseverance, trust and facing your fears. Using examples of his past experiences, Robinson spoke of how bullying and being cruel to others can have a life long effect on a person.

"I got made fun of when I was a little kid because I loved riding my bike, and back then it wasn't the norm to do what I do. You never forget the person who picked on you as a kid," said Robinson. "I like to use tricks to remind me to treat people nice."

Robinson credits his success to hard work and perseverance, and said that in order to achieve your dreams you must never give up.

"I never say the words 'I can't,' I say I will try and sometimes I try and fail. I don't ever give up," he said. "You have to stick to the task at hand no matter how hard that task may be. You have to make working hard your habit in order to achieve your dreams."

Pateras said that QCARE

KEVIN ROBINSON demonstrates the value of trusting someone during his presentation on bullying by jumping over four audience members on his BMX bicycle.

Quincy Sun photos/Emily Taft hopes to bring Robinson back for future presentations not only because he is able to transcend age but also because of how involved he was from beginning to end.

"Throughout the planning stages of the event,

Kevin was engaged in the needs and interests of our community. He truly cared what issues were prevalent among our youth and wanted to make sure he delivered a message that would create positive change," said Pat-eras. "Kevin was genuinely interested in wanting the best for our community and truly partnered with QCARE in bringing a presentation to our Quincy community that will generate change and foster growth."

MEMBERS OF THE MIGHTY JOE FINN CLUB included Michael Collins, Patrick Hurton, Joe Hurton, Cameron Jacobs, Tyler Larsen, Charlie Maher, Teddy Maher, Paul Martin, Will Martin, Fintan Murtagh, Brady O'Connor, Martin O'Flaherty, Kevin Salmanowich, Michael Steele and Sammy Stone. HEALTH and FITNESS

QUINCY COUNCIL ON Aging recently held a forum on the importance of staying healthy. Among those attending: (from left) state Rep. Bruce Ayers, state Sen. John Keenan, Quincy Council on Aging Director Thomas Clasby Jr., Ann Hartstein, secretary of Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs; Christie Hager, regional director of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services; and Kathleen Otte, regional director of the Administration on Aging.

Healthy Living Luncheon For Seniors At Kennedy Center

By EMILY TAFT

Seniors at the Kennedy Center's Council on Aging ate healthy and learned the importance of staying healthy at a recent forum.

The seniors were also introduced to new government campaigns to raise awareness, and the new health care laws.

"Programs are happening in Council on Aging centers throughout the nation," said guest speaker Ann Hartstein, the secretary of Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs. "We are teaching seniors how to better manage their health, with community based programs."

The Kennedy Center's Council on Aging is one of many community-based centers, which provides programming to meet the needs of every senior who walks in the door.

"The whole philosophy here is to hit every aspect of life," said Quincy Council on Aging Director Thomas Clasby Jr. "We have something for everyone here. We want to help them begin living healthy."

Clasby said the programs aren't just about participating in them but about the social aspect as well. Clasby encourages seniors to make friends with those in the programs they attend that they might not know, saying that even talking and making new friends increases how long you will live.

"Thirty percent of longevity is related to genes," said Clasby. "Your quality of life isn't just about exercise, and eating right, but there is also a socializing factor to it as well."

The center provides programs such as volleyball, yoga, Zumba, line dancing, and Senior Olympics among many others. Their mission is to provide the elder members of the community with uncompromising services to ensure a high quality of life.

They provide support groups, recreational and social gatherings, outreach to many different levels such as legal services housing assistance, and referral services to a host of elder care agencies. The center also offers medical and social transportation.

"This center is fantastic," said Kathleen Otte, regional Director of the Administration on Aging. "It is a great example of what wellness and prevention should look like."

Hartstein along with Otte and Christie Hager the Regional Director of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, answered questions and talked with seniors from the Kennedy Center, about the Million Hearts Campaign, and any concerns they had about health care and healthy eating.

The Million Hearts Campaign is an initiative overseen by the U.S. Department of Health and Services to prevent one million heart attacks and strokes within the next five years throughout the United States. The campaign will focus, coordinate, and enhance cardiovascular disease prevention activities across the U.S.

"It is such an important opportunity to talk with seniors about heart health," said Hager. "The campaigns main purpose is to increase public awareness."

Hartstein spoke of other programs throughout the nation that are keeping seniors healthy, and teaching them the signs and symptoms of a stroke and heart attack, and even providing a support group for their caregivers. Some programs being put out by the Massachusetts Department of Health include a blood pressure clinic called "Get checked just for the health of it," and a consumer campaign to help seniors and their family members understand the symptoms and signs of a stroke.

"What we do on a daily basis makes a difference," said Hartstein. "Developing good eating and exercise habits will help us live longer, that is why we have these programs throughout Massachusetts."

Hartstein added that every dollar they receive in the Elder Affairs office they try to put back into health insurance benefits, and senior programs.

New service programs and tools have been implemented for the Medicare program because of the new healthcare law, according to Hager.

"There are new preventative services in the Medicare program that allow the availability of screenings with no out of pockets costs," said Hager. "There are also new tools that are similar to the tools credit card companies have been using for years, that allow fraudulent claims to be tracked."

Along with protection against fraud and free preventative services, the new law provides seniors with cheaper prescription drugs and protected Medicare coverage.

One issue that arose during the presentation was how to eat healthy without breaking the bank. For many in attendance the task of buying healthy products for a family can become expensive even if buying at a farmers market or organic foods in the grocery stores.

"I find it very difficult to feed my family with healthy food, it can become very expensive," said Linda MacPhail a board member for the center. "I find that even farmers markets, that are suppose to be cheaper, are too expensive for me to buy from, how do you do it without breaking your budget?"

Hartstein responded to the question by saying that although it may be a little more expensive to buy the products at a farmers market, they last longer and are better for you in the long run.

"Locally grown is just much better, and lasts longer, it does make a difference. You can leave a head of lettuce in the fridge for weeks if it is from a farmers market, you can't do the same with a head of lettuce from the grocery store," said Hartstein. "It is important to think about what you're buying. You just have to take it one day at a time to try and eat healthier."

Planning To Lose Weight? Think About It

With spring here and summer just around the corner, weight loss goals are top of mind for many who are about to shed their winter layers.

As consumers begin their quests for healthier bodies (no doubt with exercise and nutrition plans), it is also critical to have a mental health plan in place to support weight loss goals.

Kent State University's Dr. John Gunstad offers five mental cues to help think your way thin - in a way that is healthy for both body and mind.

- Don't rely on "will-power." Eliminate the word from your vocabulary, because there are no strategies to boost it. Instead, plan weight loss actions in advance.

- Strengthen your memory. Gunstad's most recent research reveals people with better memory have a better chance at losing weight and keeping it off. Trouble remembering? Set visual cues (like stickers on your calendar or notes on your desk) to remind you to stay in weight loss mode. The simple act of remembering to lose weight improves your chances.

- Envision a clearly defined goal. Unclear goals are less motivating than something that is specific.

- Assess your goal - is it realistic? It is human nature to want to do too much too soon, but it is unhealthy and dangerous to try to achieve too much too soon. Small improvements add up over time.

- Mentally monitor progress. Give yourself honest feedback on whether strategies are working, take note of those to continue and those to modify, and celebrate accomplishing mini-goals - all will motivate you to keep moving forward rather than getting stuck.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SECOND THOUGHTS

Dental patients have many reasons to prevent periodontal (gum) disease before it exerts far-ranging adverse effects. Aside from the more immediate potential consequences of gum disease, which include inflammation and possible tooth loss, research links gum disease with heart disease, diabetes, lung problems, and premature and low-weight babies. Fortunately, early stages of gum disease can be reversed with professional cleanings and at-home brushing and flossing. In more severe cases that involve build-ups of hardened tartar, professional "scaling" and "root planing" may remove unwanted deposits above and below the gumline. However, only patients have it in their power to reduce exposure to secondhand smoke, which research now shows increases the likelihood of developing severe gum disease by 30%.

We will be happy to discuss any oral concerns you may have. Any time you have a question, please don't hesitate to ask. Good dentistry is more than excellent clinical skills and state-of-the-art equipment. We feel that mutual trust, too, is a factor in the success of your treatment. Our entire staff believes that open communication can help build this trust. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a full trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Both smokers and non-smokers who are exposed to secondhand smoke may come in contact with toxins in the smoke that increase inflammation and oxidative stress.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

FEELING YOUR PAIN

While the word "pain" is often used to describe the response to damaging stimuli, "nociception" may be a more apt term. It refers to the electro-chemical signals that are generated in the body in response to injury and then transmitted along nerve fibers to the spinal cord and up to the brain. In this sense, pain is what the brain perceives, not what is occurring at an injury site. While pain can be an acute event, such as when touching a hot stove, chronic pain can persist long after an injury has healed. This prolonged perception is due to "rewiring" and alteration of the nervous system, which may be something that chiropractic treatment can help address.

At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we recommend a continuing schedule of regular chiropractic checkups, which can help detect, correct, and maintain optimum spinal and nervous system function. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Chiropractors are specially trained to alleviate vertebral misalignments as a means of taking stress off the nervous system and allowing nerves to function and heal normally.

HOLY WEEK and EASTER SERVICES

Star Of Sea Faith Community Easter Sunday Liturgy At First Church Of Squantum

The Friends of Star of the Sea announce that a Catholic liturgy will be held at noon Easter Sunday at the First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Quincy.

The liturgy is called a "Celebration in the Absence of a Priest" and has been approved by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) and the Vatican for use in American dioceses. The liturgy will include communion, using hosts consecrated by a Roman Catholic priest in good standing in the Archdiocese of Boston.

The Celebrations in the Absence of a Priest guidance states, "For their part, it is the right of the lay faithful, barring a case of real impossibility, that no priest should ever refuse to celebrate Mass for the people or to have it celebrated by another priest if the people otherwise would be able to satisfy the obligation of participating at Mass on Sunday or the other days of precept."

Guidelines for this service encourage the faith communities using this liturgy to think of themselves not as a community without a priest, but rather, as an "assembly in expectation of a priest."

The Friends say the use of this liturgy is not a permanent fix, nor can it be called a Mass. However, they point to guidance from the USCCB that says this liturgy does serve as a substitute for Mass on an interim basis.

A collection will be taken to help support the efforts of the Friends with their ongoing Canonical appeals.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church To Hold Annual Easter Vigil Worship Service

On Saturday, April 7 at 7:30 p.m. Quincy Community United Methodist Church located at 40 Beale Street in Wollaston will celebrate the Easter Vigil.

"With the exception of the Episcopalians, very few Protestants have had the opportunity to experience the Easter Vigil," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of Quincy Community. "I think this is really unfortunate. The Vigil is one of the most ancient and certainly one of the most dramatic celebrations of the Church year. It's my very favorite worship service."

Dating from the earliest years of the Christian Church, the Vigil literally leads the congregation from Lent to Easter. It does so through word, song, and most importantly symbols that refer to Scripture. Because many people today are unfamiliar with symbolic interpretation, explanatory notes are provided in the text of the Vigil service.

"I hope people will take the time to read the explanations," commented Rev. Dr.

Jarek-Glidden. "The Vigil is a rich, wonderful service on its own, but when a person understands the meaning behind the ritual, it becomes even richer."

People planning to attend the Vigil should expect the unexpected, because the Easter Vigil is a service unlike any other. For example, everyone planning to attend the Easter Vigil is asked to please bring a flashlight and to wear comfortable walking shoes.

"I realize that a flashlight sounds like an odd thing to bring to a worship service," said Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden. "But believe me, a flashlight is pretty essential - it's simple a modern version of the traditional candles. Quincy Community United Methodist Church has chosen to use flashlights for safety reasons; there will be some available in case anyone forgets to bring one. Comfortable shoes are also important, because some walking is involved - a short staircase. People then have the option of continuing with the traditional Vigil, which includes more walking, or the non-traditional in which people remain seated in one place. Both groups then join together for the major portion of the service."

The Easter Vigil is very much a participatory worship experience and the more a person puts into the Vigil, the more that person will get out of it.

Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden explained: "I think a friend of mine put it best when he said, 'I used to think I 'got Easter here' - and he pointed to his forehead. 'But now,' he continued, 'I get Easter here' - and he pointed to his heart. That's what the Easter Vigil is all about, and everyone is cordially invited to share in this wonderful experience."

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is con-located diagonally from the Wollaston T stop, and is fully handicapped accessible; the handicapped entrance is located in the front, the door closest to the flagpole. Each week a coffee hour follows worship.

Music Matters At Quincy Point Church

Debut Performance Of Choral Composition For Easter Morning

On Easter morning, Christians around the world join in the same ancient words of acclamation: "Christ is risen, indeed!" And yet each congregation finds their own unique way of expressing the joy and excitement of the Easter message.

This year at the Quincy Point Congregational Church, the Chancel Choir will offer the debut performance of a brand new choral composition. Music Director Ben Mafera challenged soloist and composer Ashi Day to set the Easter morning narrative from the Gospel of John to music.

In speaking off her efforts as composer, Day says: "I hope to find a way to both make an impact on arts education and be an artist myself. I feel like I am successful when performers or listeners get my song stuck in their heads.

"Of course, it's also important to try to find music that reveals some of the layers of meaning around a text, but nothing beats the feeling of something you made making other people happy."

"When joy outruns our capacity for the spoken word, we turn to music," remarks the Rev. Ann Suzedell. "When hope needs a foothold; when the human spirit needs a place to soar, we turn to music."

Four years ago, violinist Alan Espinosa and mezzo-soprano Alyson Greer Espinosa stopped Rev Suzedell in her tracks with the statement: "No child should ever live without music!" And so the new non-profit school Quincy Point Music Academy was begun. It started with less than a dozen students on violin, piano and voice. It is now thriving with over 70 students and more than a dozen faculty teaching cello, clarinet, flute, guitar, saxophone, trombone, trumpet, viola as well as piano, violin and voice.

A scholarship program is available.

Another new music initiative began this year for older elementary and middle schools students with Band Boot Camp. Every Sunday after church, students have been learning the skills, teamwork and dynamics of playing in a band.

Adult mentors offer instruction and encouragement on keyboard, drums, saxophone, guitar and drums.

Excitement is building for their first public performance this spring. Music matters at the Quincy Point Congregational Church.

Free Screening Of 'Sister Act' April 13 At Houghs Neck Congregational Church

Houghs Neck Congregational Church will present a free screening of the comedy "Sister Act" Friday, April 13 at 6:30 p.m. in the church's Fellowship Hall.

All are welcome to attend.

Starring Whoopi Goldberg, Harvey Keitel and Maggie Smith, Sister Act follows a Reno nightclub singer forced to hide out as a "nun" in a convent after she witnesses a mob murder.

Sister Mary Clarence's unorthodox style and musical talents soon ruffle the feathers of the church hierarchy even as she injects new life into its congregation and surrounding community.

Sister Act is being shown as part of Hough's Neck Congregational Church's "Faith and Film" Fridays, a series of free monthly screenings of popular films that explore issues of faith.

Houghs Neck Congregational Church is located at 310 Manet Ave. in Quincy.

Faith and Film Friday screenings are held on the second Friday of each month downstairs in the church's Fellowship Hall. Admission is free.

Films begin at 6:30 p.m.; a snack bar offering homemade soups, sandwiches, snacks and drinks opens at 6 p.m. For directions or more information, call 617-479-8778.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Avoid having someone else take credit for the project you started by finishing it yourself. Then it will be you lovely Lambs who will be wearing those well-deserved laurels.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The facts about a new opportunity are still emerging. Wait until they're all out in the open, and then use your keen business sense to help make the right decision.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel confused, even hurt by a friend who suddenly puts distance between you. If she or he won't discuss it, don't push it. An explanation should come in time.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your willingness to be part of the team opens doors that had been shut to you. Keep them open by keeping your promises even when your commitment seems to be wavering.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Congratulations. You're really getting things done to perfection. And don't forget to take a catnap now and again to keep those energy levels up and bristling for action.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your "plain-talking" honesty is admirable. But sometimes sharp words can leave painful scars. Be careful that what you say doesn't come back to hurt you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A stress-filled period takes a positive turn as you deal with the underlying problem. Act now to avoid a recurrence by changing some basic rules in your relationship.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your rising energy levels make it easier for you to achieve some important objectives. This could lead to a big boost in how you're perceived, both at home and on the job.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A changing picture begins to emerge as you learn more about an offer that seemed so right but could be so wrong. Look to a trusted adviser for guidance.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Spiritual aspects are strong. Take time to reflect on the path you're on and where you hope it will lead you. It's also a good time to reach out to loved ones.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You could be assuming far too many responsibilities, whether it's at work or in personal matters. Be careful that you're not weighed down by them.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're getting closer to your goals. And since nothing succeeds like success (or the promise thereof), don't be surprised to find new supporters swimming alongside you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are always the first to try new ventures and confront new challenges. You inspire others with your courage to follow your bold example.

Rev. Dr. Sheldon Bennett Honored For 25 Years Of Service

Commonwealth has access to health care. I thank Sheldon, and I thank you all, for all the work you did on that. It's good, important justice work."

Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of the Quincy Community Action Program, or QCAP, a nonprofit organization which assists low-income individuals, recalled Bennett's passion in organizing one of the first citywide celebrations of Martin Luther King Jr. Day. Bennett, who joined the board of QCAP in 2001 "dedicated so much of his time to the work that we do at Quincy Community Action," according to Strollo. "He went on to become the president of our board, and lead us through many different issues."

Strollo encouraged Bennett to continue being an activist and advocate, despite his retirement.

Representing local community ministry leaders was Rev. Michelle Walsh, affiliate community minister for Quincy and Newton, and prior ministerial intern to Bennett. "I stand here today representing not only myself in my own words, but also a large number of colleagues who view Sheldon not only as a minister, but as a minister to ministers," she said.

Throughout his career, Bennett strove to unify religious leaders of all faiths in Quincy. Rev. John W. O'Brien, of the Sacred Heart Parish, spoke glowingly of Bennett's interfaith activities. "He was one of the first people to welcome me to the community," he said. "Sheldon has been, I think, the ultimate minister to the religious leaders within the city of Quincy. He's always been very conscientious in striving to gather us together...to welcome the new people." He went on to congratulate Bennett for convening the clergy of Quincy during difficult times, such as the weeks following Sept. 11, and for offering instruction on how to discuss the tragedy with parishioners.

"Sheldon has always worked at building relationships for the betterment of all," said O'Brien. "I am extremely grateful for all that he has done for me personally, and for our fellow religious leaders, within our city of Quincy. Our city is better for the work that he has done."

Speaking on behalf of Bennett's public service work was Quincy Councillor Joe Finn. "Whether he was defending the civil rights of all people, and the liberties of all people, whether he was advocating for affordable housing, whether he was feeding and helping the poor and the disabled, he consistently and compassionately...stood for all that which is the best in all of us," he said.

Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, commended Bennett for his dedication to preserving the historic "Church of Presidents" and promoting the Adams' family history. "Your personal attention and appreciation of the Adams' legacy lives on," she said. "We thank you for that." The crowd applauded upon mention of Bennett's involvement in the restoration of the church bell tower. His efforts secured $300,000 in preservation grants used towards the reconstruction. "It was a remarkable project indeed," said Peak, who urged Bennett not to "drift too far," and to continue his relationship with the Adams National Historic Park.

"He's an active member of the historic community," said Edward Fitzgerald, Ph.D., executive director of the Quincy Historical Society. He hopes that Bennett, in his free time, will continue with his history-based pursuits, and hopefully "put pen to paper, or keystroke to laptop," to share his vast knowledge of local history with other historians.

Bennett, who is retiring as senior minister this summer, said that he was humbled by the tributes presented during the ceremony.

"It takes a congregation, and a minister together to make a ministry," he said. "This is a day for joy, but it is also a day for sadness, but it's a happy sadness. There are so many memories, weddings celebrated, children dedicated, lives commemorated, public advocacy, White House wreaths being placed on the presidents' tomb...restoration projects completed, and some that I must leave to others."

Through tears, Bennett thanked the people of his congregation, saying that he was deeply grateful to them for supporting his ministry, and that "it has been a deep privilege and a joy to serve this historic congregation, and this city and its people."

Police Chief: Crime Rate Here
Comparable To Neighboring Towns

Quincy Leaders: 'City Very Safe 'Community'

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy is a "very safe community," according to Police Chief Paul Keenan.

Keenan was to address the issue of public safety Tuesday at a meeting of the City Council's Public Safety Committee. In a phone interview Tuesday morning, he said the crime rate in Quincy was comparable to that in neighboring communities.

"We're as safe as other communities," Keenan said. "We're the biggest city in Norfolk County, and bigger cities have bigger issues, but we're as safe as Weymouth, Braintree, and Randolph."

The police department earned the praise of Mayor Tom Koch. He lauded them for their efforts, while also echoing Keenan's sentiment that Quincy is a safe community.

"It is important to look at crime statistics along a continuum," Koch said. "The numbers can vary from year to year, up or down, based on what's happening in so-

GOOD CITIZENS - Two local high school seniors, Donna Niosi (left), a senior at Quincy High School, and Mary McGough, senior at North Quincy High School, were recently honored as Good Citizens by the Deborah Sampson Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution. With the recipients is Paula Pierce, regent of Sampson DAR Chapter. The award recognizes high school seniors who demonstrate dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. Each student had to write an essay on what it means to be a Good Citizen. Mary's essay will be entered in the Massachusetts Daughters of the Revolution contest for Good Citizens. Mary also received a scholarship award. Mary's essay focused on trying to help an older gentleman who couldn't breathe. She called 911, but did not know how to do CPR. She never knew what happened to the gentleman, but didn't want that to happen again. She decided to get her CPR certificate, then got her certificate to teach CPR. Not stopping there, she taught every senior at NQHS CPR.

Emergency Notifications On Cell Phones, E-Mail

Quincy residents can now have emergency notifications sent to their cell phones or email addresses.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron and Capt. Richard Bryan met with Norfolk County

Corrections Officer Tony McLeish Monday to discuss the county's new 'reverse 911' system CodeRED. Unlike the previous system used in the city, it allows residents to have alerts sent to their cell phones as a phone call or text message or to their email addresses.

Landline phones are already included in the system, provided the number isn't unlisted. But according to McLeish, residents should have them sent to their mobile phones as well because landlines don't always work in emergencies. The system was used in Foxborough last year when the town experienced widespread power outages, but many calls failed because landline service wasn't working, for example. Plus, people aren't always at home during emergencies.

Quincy residents can sign up for the service by going online to norfolksherrif.com and clicking the red banner that says "Click Here to Sign Up for the Rapid Alert Noti-

Neponset River Bridge Construction Done In August

After nearly six years of construction the "in place" reconstruction of the Neponset Bridge will conclude, officials say.

The project was undertaken in two phases. The first phase replaced all the bridge's bearings and rebuilt the concrete pillars upon which the bearings sat. This assured that the Phase II road bed reconstruction would be supported by sound foundational elements.

JF White, the general contractor for the Neponset River Bridge, has completed all of the demolition necessary to rebuild the remaining bridge decks.

This final demolition in-involved the bridge's ramp from Quincy Shore Drive northbound toward Neponset Circle and the right hand lane of the bridge northbound beginning from the ramp at Neponset Landing.

The final work includes the building of forms and the installation of rebar reinforcement in preparation for the final decks being poured. According to JF White through MassDOT's Municipal Affairs Liaison, John Romano, "This work will take place until the end of August at which time JF White expects to be substantially complete with the contract."

This announcement marks the end of a 3 1/2 year project that has affected the commute of over 70,000 passenger vehicles a day.

In an email to John Romano, JF White went on to say, "JF White will spend the majority of the fall completing the punch list items on the bridge and doing any landscaping/street restoration work underneath the bridge."

Quincy Police Awarded Grant To Combat Underage Drinking

The Quincy Police Department announces it will receive $10,000 from the Executive Office of Public Safety (EOPSS) as one of 31 grants to local police departments to combat underage drinking.

EOPSS awarded $217,000 in U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Funds. The funds were awarded on a competitive basis; grants varied between $5,000 and $15,000 based on the size of the community.

"There are many tools to combat underage drinking, and this grant provides much needed funding to target the problem," said Quincy Police Captain John Dougan. "Whether you are underage, plan to sell to a minor, or buy alcohol for a minor, we will be on the look out."

The grants will fund a variety of law enforcement activities including: stings/compliance checks in bars, restaurants and retail locations; reverse stings; "shoulder tap" and "Cops in Shops" programs; and party patrols.

The city's Liquor Inspector, Lt. Peter Turowski, will conduct the compliance checks beginning this month and continuing through the end of the summer. Through a combination of these techniques, departments will be able to analyze and crack down on both minors who seek to circumvent the law and those people and businesses that allow them to.

"Teens and parents need to be reminded that underage drinking is deadly serious," Dougan said. "Parents need to know that hosting a party where alcohol is served to minors is both illegal and extremely dangerous for the minors, for others in the community, and for the parents themselves, given the legal liabilities they face."

According to the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration (NHTSA), in 2009 nationwide, 33 percent of 15-to-20-year-olds killed in crashes had a blood alcohol content of .01 or higher. Compounding the problem, drivers who have been drinking are less likely to use restraints.

Also in 2009 nationwide, 60 percent of young drivers of passenger vehicles involved in fatal crashes who had been drinking were unrestrained. Of the young drivers who had been drinking and were killed in crashes, 70 percent were unrestrained.

"Any loss or injury on our roadways is one too many. The Quincy Police Department, in partnership with EOPSS, recognizes that traffic crashes are preventable, and is committed to using this grant to reduce the number of motor vehicle-related fatalities and injuries in Quincy," Dougan said.

Stepped Up Traffic Enforcement, Education Campaign For Motorists And Pedestrians

Mayor Kicks Off Public Safety Week

Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Police Chief Paul Keenan kicked off Public Safety Week Monday by announcing a stepped-up traffic enforcement and education campaign for motorists and pedestrians.

Quincy Police Officers will be out across the City this week, especially in higher visibility intersections, communicating the rules of the road and key safety points to both drivers and pedestrians.

Mayor Koch said he believes that the added emphasis on basic safety will provide an immediate boost to safety on Quincy's roads.

"Many of us just need a reminder about things we learned as teenagers in driving school," Koch said. "The police officers aren't out there to get you - they're simply trying to reinforce proper safety measures that everyone should abide by."

Chief Keenan was scheduled to go before the City Council on Tuesday to discuss the city's current crime rate and arrest statistics.

Keenan will join Mayor Koch on Thursday during the Mayor's regular QATV broadcast where the two will discuss general crime trends in the City.

The mayor also announced that the Sea Street Advisory Traffic Committee will hold its first meeting on Thursday. The committee will be discussing a number of improvements to traffic flow and pedestrian safety along the Sea Street corridor, especially between Quincy Shore Drive and Palmer Street.

"It is always beneficial to bring key community stakeholders together to make a difference, and this week is no exception," Koch said. "As we head toward summer, reinforcing proper procedures and being aware of potential safety problems becomes even more important."

Soil Cleaned Up At Seven-Acre Site Land Remediation Process Complete At Faxon Park

By SCOTT JACKSON

Land that was nearly home to the new Quincy High School has been cleaned up and will soon be incorporated into Faxon Park.

The city had planned on building the school on a seven-acre site near Quincy Avenue, but withdrew that proposal when the soil was found to be polluted by hazardous waste from the Fore River Shipyard, including PCBs and asbestos. Instead, the city bought land as open space and the developer who sold the land put money into an escrow account to pay for remediation. That remediation process was recently completed, according to Parks Department foreman Paul Franz.

Franz appeared before the City Council last week to give an update on the project. He said that the remediation process involved removing the soil contaminated with PCBs and transporting it to Canada, a process that ended in March. The site was also capped with more than three feet of dirt and topsoil. The developer is nearly finished with seeding and loaming four acres of the site, and the city will be responsible for the remaining three acres.

Franz said dirt from Faxon Field, where the city plans to build a track next to the new Quincy High, will be used on Faxon Park. "We have thousands of yards of dirt at Faxon Field where the track is going to be built and that dirt - fill and topsoil - will then be going up to Faxon Park to be shaped, loamed, and seeded," he said.

One task the Park Department will undertake is leveling off the land. Franz said there's an approximate 30-40 foot change in elevation on the land, which would render it essentially unusable. After the land is leveled, it will be loamed and seeded, and the final use of the land will be determined. Franz said in addition to a policy decision by the Parks Department and mayor, maintenance at the site will figure in to how the land will ultimately be used.

"I think we're headed towards a three-acre flat piece of land that will have grass growing on it and will drain properly," Franz said. "How it's handled from maintenance and policy stand point is what's going to determine its use. If it's never cut and nobody ever uses it, it's a meadow. If Quincy Youth Soccer gets a hold of it, it could be a very nice soccer field."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall's ward includes the park, and he requested the update on the site from the Parks Department. In addition to information on remediation work, he inquired about concerns he'd heard from abutting residents over safety issues, particularly having a water main installed in the park to help fight fires.

Franz said work to install pipe had already started. The pipe will extend from Faxon Park Road into the park parallel to the exit road. Because the pipe needs to go uphill, it's not known how far into the park the pipe will extend. Franz said it will go as far as "engineering and hydraulics allow."

Wollaston to North Quincy 'Walk-Shop' Saturday

The City of Quincy, in partnership with the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) and Asian Community Development Association, is sponsoring a "walk-shop" from 9:30 a.m. to noon this Saturday.

The walk-shop will be an interactive event through which participants will walk in groups from Wollaston to North Quincy, all the while taking pictures of various sites which will ultimately be uploaded into a virtual reality game called Community PlanIt. After the game is fully developed, people who live and work in Quincy will be invited to play. During play, the game will prompt players to answer questions in an effort to increase civic engagement for future planning and community visioning in these neighborhoods.

Participants of the walk-shop will take photos and talk to local business owners, government employees, community leaders, and residents about how the area around Wollaston and North Quincy has changed over the years.

The event will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the Crown Royal Bakery, 11 Brook St. in Wollaston. At the end of the tour, there will be a debriefing in North Quincy, which will include time for participants to share photos.

All ages are welcome to participate in the walk-shop.

Space is limited, so those interested are encouraged to register at <http://quincy-walkshop.eventbrite.com/>. For optimal experience, participants should bring a camera-enabled smartphone or a digital camera.

Any questions about the walk-shop should be directed to Sean Glennon in the city's Department of Planning and Community Development at 617-376-1167 or sglennon@quincyma.gov.

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible? This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 10-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 10-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 10-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard, VP/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750. Or apply online at colonialfed.com. (Have another loan or term in mind? THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 20, 1841, Edgar Allen Poe's short story, "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," first appears in Graham's Lady's and Gentleman's Magazine. It is generally considered to be the first detective story. Like the later Sherlock Holmes stories, the tale is narrated by the detective's roommate.

• On April 22, 1889, at precisely high noon, thousands of would-be settlers make a mad dash into the newly opened Oklahoma Territory to claim cheap land. All told, from 50,000 to 60,000 settlers entered the territory that day. Towns like Norman, Oklahoma City, Kingfisher and Guthrie sprang into being almost overnight.

• On April 21, 1918, in the skies over France, Manfred von Richthofen, the notorious German flying ace known as "The Red Baron" with 80 victories under his belt, is killed by Allied fire. He was 25 years old.

• On April 17, 1937, Daffy Duck makes his debut in the Warner Bros. short "Porky's Duck Hunt." In the 1920s, movie houses had started showing a short cartoon before feature presentations, but the form became more popular after sound was introduced in 1928.

• On April 16, 1947, in Texas City's port on Galveston Bay, a fire aboard the French freighter Grandcamp ignites ammonium nitrate, causing a massive blast that destroys much of the city and takes nearly 600 lives. The fire department tried to douse the flames, but the ship was so hot that the water from their fire hoses was instantly vaporized.

• On April 19, 1957, the Brattle Theater in Cambridge, Mass., presents its first showing of "Casablanca," introducing a new generation to Humphrey Bogart, who had died months earlier. Bogart had been wounded aboard a Navy ship during World War I. His upper lip was scarred and partially paralyzed, giving him the tough-guy poker face and slight lisp that characterized his acting.

• On April 18, 1983, Joan Benoit wins her second Boston Marathon in the women's division with a time of 2:22:43. The inaugural Boston Marathon was run on Apr. 19, 1897, and was a men-only event until 1972, when women were officially allowed to compete.

Where's The Crime?

The indictment of former State Treasurer Tim Cahill and two of his aides last week has a lot of local people scratching their heads.

"Where's the crime?" many have asked.

Their reaction followed the news last Monday that Attorney General Martha Coakley had accused Cahill of authorizing $1.5 million in taxpayer money to finance television ads for the state lottery to bolster his 2010 independent gubernatorial campaign.

The ads in question never mentioned Cahill by name. Didn't show his face.

And didn't state he was candidate for governor.

Instead, they promoted the state lottery and the revenue it generates for the state's 351 cities and towns.

After those ads aired some 18 months ago, Coakley ordered the ads halted and Cahill complied. He would lose the governor's race finishing a distant third with only eight percent of the vote behind winner Democrat Deval Patrick and Republican Charlie Baker who was second.

But that apparently wasn't the end of the story.

On Monday, Cahill was indicted on charges he illegally positioned those lottery ads to help his gubernatorial campaign. Two of Cahill's staffers, Scott Campbell and Al Grazioso, also of Quincy, also face charges. Campbell was charged with procurement fraud and conspiracy. Grazioso was charged with obstruction of justice.

All three pleaded not guilty at their arraignment last Wednesday at Suffolk Superior Court.

Cahill, the affable former Quincy city councillor and at one-time a popular small business owner in Quincy Center, staunchly defended his decision to run those ads after his arraignment.

"I understood the risk associated with running the ads. I chose to do what I believed, and what I still believe, and what the Lottery believes, was the right thing to do," Cahill said.

The former state treasurer and his attorney said the ads were in direct response to negative ads run by the Republican Governors' Association. The ads attacked the integrity, trustworthiness and management of the lottery, said Cahill's attorney, E. Peter Parker, who also noted that sales promptly dropped compared to the same time period the previous year.

The RGA ads, some may reason, forced Cahill's hand. You can certainly bet if he chose not to run those ads and Lottery receipts took a substantial hit, his political opponents would have harped on this.

"How can you run the state if you can't manage the state lottery," they could have charged.

In fact, Parker insists Cahill acted appropriately and legally in response to the RGA attack ads.

"A candidate for office who is also an incumbent can use the public resources of his office to respond to criticism of the official's record, even if that criticism comes from political opponents," Parker said. "That is what the Office of Campaign and Political Finance has said in a bulletin that has been on the books since 1995... What Treasurer Cahill did here was legal under the laws specifically directed at regulating campaign finance."

"The Attorney General is trying for the first time ever to make conduct that is legal under one statute illegal under another, the brand new one, never before applied criminal section of Chapter 268A."

"We stand ready to put this novel legal theory to the test and to clear Tim Cahill's name and reputation," he added.

The indictment also raises other questions.

Haven't other state treasurers run similar ads promoting the lottery? We've all seen them but they never seemed to bother anyone before. And Cahill's not the first state treasurer to run for governor. Seems ads promoting the lottery were aired or published by other treasurers seeking the governor's office.

Which brings up another point:

The current treasurer - Steve Grossman - is a likely Democratic candidate for governor in 2014. Shouldn't Martha Coakley tell Grossman that he can't run any ads promoting the lottery if he's going to campaign for governor.

Since Coakley laid out her reasoning for the indictment in a story in last week's Quincy Sun, we wanted to dedicate some space to Cahill's defense this week.

Here's what else Parker had to say about the lottery ads in question:

"Top management at the Lottery, top management at the Treasury and senior management at the Lottery's advertising agency all knew that the RGA ads had gone for the jugular of the Lottery and that a response was necessary, a defense had to be mounted."

"It was the judgment of top management at the Lottery to respond by running permission ads, which had proven effective in the past and were based on solid public opinion research the Lottery had conducted. Top management at the Lottery recommended to Treasurer Cahill that the Lottery run permission ads. That advice was given in early July, long before the July 27th text message or email that is the centerpiece of the Attorney General's case."

"Senior management at the ad agency told Treasurer Cahill the very same thing - the RGA attack ads are hurting the integrity of the brand. We suggest the Lottery run permission ads."

"Candidate Tim Cahill and his political advisers did not cook up some scheme to use Lottery money to make a permission ad. Treasurer Cahill and the people he relied on to run the Lottery and make decisions in the best interests of the Lottery, and the Lottery's ad agency, advised that permission ads were the appropriate type of ad to run in response to the RGA attacks."

"I cannot overstate how confident that I am that this is the evidence that has and will come out. It is the truth," Parker added.

Some of his former colleagues in local government know Cahill as an honest guy and a straight-shooter who tells it like it is.

"I've known Tim Cahill a very long time," said former Mayor James Sheets. "He was on the City Council while I was the mayor. He was always honest and straightforward. If he agreed with you, he told you that. And if he didn't agree with you, he told you that too."

"He was his own thinker. I just think he's one of the most outstanding young men I've ever met."

Mayor Tom Koch said the allegations "are a slippery slope" for public officials everywhere.

"If what they're alleging holds true, then every politician I think has an issue. I'm not being judgmental but you look around and you see 'Welcome to Massachusetts' with Deval Patrick on the board; Bill Galvin whom I respect and does a great job as secretary of state is on TV all the time with ads (promoting voter registration); Tom Menino has his name on every Council on Aging van in Boston."

"Where do you draw the line on this stuff and I say that respectfully? I just don't see the crime here. I just don't."

Koch and Cahill were city government colleagues while Koch served as executive secretary for then Mayor Sheets and Cahill served as a councillor at-large.

"Tim Cahill always did the right thing," the mayor continued. "He worked hard. Always made sure the issues were vetted. He was tough on financial orders coming through. He did a remarkable job as Norfolk County treasurer. He did an outstanding job in two terms as treasurer of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. He's the one who put together the whole School Building Authority which became a fabulous success state-wide."

"First of all, we should thank him for his public service. He did an outstanding job for the people of this state. I know all three individuals involved - Tim, Scott Campbell and Al Grazioso - they're all outstanding husbands, wonderful fathers, and have been pillars of our community for many, many years."

"My heart and thoughts go out to each of them and their families. I'm certainly hopeful that things work out for all of them."

For anyone who knows Cahill, the indictment is hard to swallow. He's a great family guy with a wife and four daughters. He's been a hard-worker all his life. Nothing was ever handed to him. And he did a pretty good job as the state treasurer.

And let's remember that an indictment is not a conviction. We'll see how this all plays out in court.

Scenes From Yesterday

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS ago, on May 6, 1937, the German zeppelin Hindenburg was destroyed in a spectacular explosion as it landed in New Jersey. It was on its inaugural scheduled commercial flight between Germany and the United States. This picture is a rare real photo postcard showing the famous airship cruising over Quincy Square on Oct. 9, 1936. On that day, the huge zeppelin, known as the pride of the Third Reich, was carrying 81 VIP's on what was a private "Billion Dollar Party" that began early in the morning at the Lakehurst Naval Air Station in New Jersey. The special 10-hour excursion cruised all over the major cities in New England and then over New York City on its return. Quincy photographer Alan Pierce, who had his studio in the Adams Building on the lower left of this view, took this photo just after noon from the belfry of the First Parish Church. Just eight months later, in May of the next year, the hydrogen-filled airship was arriving at Lakehurst on a two and a half-day flight from Germany when it exploded in a huge burst of flames on its approach for docking. The German captain of the Hindenburg who was flying over Quincy in the photo above was killed in the explosion along with 34 of the 97 crew-members and passengers. The cause of the fire has never been positively determined, but this horrific accident marked the beginning and end of commercial transportation with airships. A mural made from this postcard has been painted on a wall in the new dining room at Alba Restaurant in Quincy Square. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Pleased Bike Lanes Part Of New Quincy Center

I am pleased that plans for the New Quincy Center and Adams Green include bike lanes and other bicycle friendly features.

I am concerned, however, that without intentional efforts to promote bicycling as a viable and safe means of transportation throughout the rest of Quincy, the redeveloped Quincy Center will become an isolated island of safety for bicyclists.

There are many reasons for a community to promote bicycling. In its application for a state grant to purchase bicycle racks a couple years ago, the Quincy Planning Department stated, "it is critical that we do not ignore the accommodation of alternative modes of transportation in Quincy.

With the recent soar in energy costs and the recognition of the importance of reducing CO2 emissions, bicycling offers great promise for our City as a means to improve public health, reduce air pollution, and aid the local and regional economy."

These benefits are as true today as they were a couple years ago, especially with gas prices climbing to over $4 per gallon.

Funding for bike racks was awarded and many were installed, but much work remains in promoting bicycling in Quincy.

Our streets are largely devoid of bicycle accommodating features such as bike lanes and sharrows.

These features both encourage responsible bicycling and acclimate motorists to a culture of sharing roadways with bicyclists.

Bicycle routes should be identified to thoughtfully and safely guide bicyclists through Quincy in ways that recognize the interests of both bicyclists and motorists. The economic impact of linking the historic sites of Quincy and Boston by bicycle routes should be explored - especially since Boston has made great strides in improving the conditions for its bicyclists and as the Neponset River Bridge repairs are completed which will provide a safe link for bicyclists between our cities.

Boston, Milton, Cambridge, Brookline, Somerville, and dozens of other communities in the Commonwealth have formed Bicycle Committees comprised of city officials and residents working together to promote bicycling in their communities.

I believe it is time for us to do so in Quincy as well.

For that reason, I extend an open invitation to all persons interested in promoting bicycling in Quincy to attend a Community Meeting on Thursday, April 19 at 7 p.m. at 308 West Squantum St. in North Quincy (Good Shepherd Lutheran Church).

For more info, contact me by email bikingquincy@gmail.com or phone (617) 471-0258.

Houghs Neck Girl Scouts Decorate Easter Baskets For Senior Citizens

The Girl Scout troops of Houghs Neck were very busy during March making and decorating home-made Easter Baskets for the senior citizens who enjoy lunch at the Seaside Cafe at the Houghs Neck Community Center, as well as for the Meals On Wheels recipients in Ward One.

The Daisy (grade 1), Brownie (gr. 2), and Junior

(gr. 4) Girl Scout troops made 180 baskets out of recycled plastic soda bottles! They decorated the baskets with stickers and filled them with sweet treats for the seniors. The girls learned the value of making a home-made gift and sharing it with others. The seniors will LOVE receiving a special surprise with their lunch, just in time for Easter.

The Girl Scouts have participated in a variety of community service projects this year.

In the early fall they sponsored the "Treats for Troops" program, when they donated leftover Halloween candy and toothbrushes to military serving overseas. In November, the girls raked leaves in the yards of senior citizens throughout Houghs Neck.

The girls will be doing some spring clean-up projects around the neighborhood as well. We are very proud of the work the girls have done this year. By working together, they are learning the valuable lesson of helping others in and around their community.

String Bean Fritters Over Crusty Bread

Whenever I am invited to any family gathering, I'm sometimes asked to bring an appetizer. And when I do, I like to make some kind of fritter, a family favorite.

And so it was when I was having Sunday dinner at my daughter Suzie and Anthony's home that I decided to make string bean fritters.

This time though, I served it with crusty sour dough bread. It gave it a totally different taste, as you will note.

String Bean Fritters

1 large package of frozen string beans (or fresh equivalent)

2 eggs (slightly beaten)

1/4 cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

3 tablespoons flour (I used oat flour)

1/4 cup milk

Salt and pepper to taste

Vegetable oil for sautéing

Sourdough bread (or a crusty French bread) cream cheese for bread topping

Cook the beans according to directions. Beans should be well done. Cut into small pieces set aside.

In a bowl add the eggs, flour, grated cheese and the milk. Mix well. Add the beans and stir until well blended. Mixture should resemble pancake mixture. Season with salt and pepper.

In a large skillet, heat the oil and then drop by tablespoons to fry. Turn until lightly browned on both sides. Drain on paper towel.

If you prefer to eat them plain, that's fine. If you use the bread, slice each piece about 1/2 inch or so thick. I toasted them, and spread them with cream cheese and then placed a fritter on each one. They looked pretty on a platter, and were a delicious treat.

Quincy Catholic Academy Announces Khan Academy Pilot Program

Quincy Catholic Academy (QCA) announces it will be piloting a new and innovative math program from Khan Academy for Grades 5 and 7 beginning in September.

"We are thrilled to be involved with this incredible program!" said QCA Principal Cathy Cameron.

Endorsed by Bill Gates, Khan Academy is a technology-based teaching resource with a library of over 3,000 videos on many educational topics. These videos provide a complete self-based learning tool. This concept can also be applied to the classroom with teachers continuing to cover all of the current curriculum and necessary state standards while adjusting their role as more of a coach and allowing the students to progress at their own pace, moving forward or receiving support when needed.

Khan Academy describes their vision for the classroom as such: individualizing learning by replacing one-size-fits-all lectures with self-paced learning; taking a mastery-based approach to learning critical knowledge and skills (every student takes as long as he/she needs to learn each concept fully); creating collaborative learning environments with students solving problems together and tutoring one another; using focused coaching by teacher to address students' individual needs; and providing guidance to the teacher through real-time metrics and reporting on student performance.

The Lynch Foundation

(through a grant) will cover all expenses of the participation in the pilot program including the purchase of a Chromebook (a computer notebook similar to iPad) for participating students and teacher training. "We are grateful to The Lynch Foundation for giving us this remarkable opportunity with Khan Academy," said Cathy Cameron.

Established by Carolyn and Peter Lynch in 1987, the Lynch Foundation provides assistance to programs primarily in Massachusetts with emphasis on education; culture and historic preservation; healthcare and medical research; and religious and educational efforts of the Roman Catholic Church.

Established in 2010, Quincy Catholic Academy is a Roman Catholic School enrolling students in Pre-Kindergarten (starting at age 3) through Grade Eight.

RHAPSODY IN BLUE!

If you fancy blue sapphires, turquoise, blue topaz, kyanite, lapis lazuli, and other blue-hued gemstones, you should have no problem getting firmly in step with this year's predominant fashion color. Aquamarine and tanzanite are other notable favorites when it comes to gemstones with color that elicits thoughts of sea and sky. Other intriguing gemstones, such as lesser-known smithsonite and pectolite, exude their own "en cabochon" blue appeal. The good news for anyone who has never before ventured into this color category is that there is a blue to complement almost any skin tone. Further widening the appeal of these gorgeous gemstones are touches of violet or purple that make spinel, amethyst, and iolite so regally appealing.

Feeling blue? Our staff will lift your mood with a selection of jewelry with gems the color of a clear sky. We have a knowledgeable and professional staff that will help you make a confident purchase. Time To Dust Off Your Financial Plan

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Spring is officially here. That means it's time for spring cleaning!

People everywhere are shedding the effects of fall and winter. But what about dusting off your long-term financial plan? April is National Financial Literacy Month — the perfect time to spring into action when it comes to planning your financial future. And if you already have a plan, this is a great opportunity to take another look.

According to a 2011 survey by the Employee Benefit Research Institute, more than half of workers report they've put away less than $25,000 in total savings and investments; a whopping 29 percent have less than $1,000 saved for the future.

If you haven't started already, now is the time to begin saving for your retirement — no matter what your age. If retirement is near, you'll want to jump into the fast lane right away. If you're younger and retirement seems a lifetime away, it's still in your best interest to begin saving now, as compound interest will work to your advantage. Experts agree that saving when you're young will make a world of difference when the time comes to draw on your retirement savings.

Don't take our word for it. You can check out the numbers yourself. A great place to start figuring out how much you will need for retirement is to learn how much you could expect from Social Security. You can do that in minutes with Social Security's online Retirement Estimator.

The Retirement Estimator offers an instant and personalized estimate of your future Social Security retirement benefits based on your earnings record. Try it out at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

We encourage saving for retirement, but there are reasons to save for every stage of life. A great place to go for help is www.mymoney.gov. MyMoney.gov is the U.S. government's website dedicated to teaching Americans the basics about financial education. Whether you are planning to buy a home, balancing your checkbook, or investing in your 401(k) plan, the resources on www.mymoney.gov can help you.

Another excellent resource is the Ballpark E$timator at www.choosetosave.org/ballpark. This online tool takes complicated issues, like projected Social Security benefits and earnings assumptions on savings, and turns them into language and numbers that are easy to understand.

Spring into action! Get started right now at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Crane Library Participating In 'Snapshot Day' Today

The Thomas Crane Public Library will join libraries across the Commonwealth and the nation today (Thursday) to provide a "snapshot" of what happens in a day in the life of libraries.

How many books and movies are checked out? How many children enjoy a storytime? How many people receive help finding a job? Doing their homework?

During Snapshot Day, libraries will collect data and photos that help demonstrate the value of libraries and raise public awareness that libraries are busier than ever.

The public is invited to participate in this second annual event.

Visit the library today (Thursday) and do what you usually do, whether that is browsing for books, movies or music; picking up materials you've placed on hold; bringing your child to a storytime; checking your email on a library computer; or just relaxing with a cup of coffee from Billy's Café at the main library.

If a library photographer approaches you, consider having your photo taken and signing a photo release form.

New this year is online participation. Visit mass.gov/libraries and post comments about how you use your library.

Last year, Massachusetts residents downloaded more than 9 million articles from trusted library resources.

"We're looking forward to a fun, busy day that helps us show how much our residents use their library," said Library Director Harry Williams.

Busy days are the norm at libraries across the state. Over the past decade, libraries in Massachusetts have experienced a dramatic surge in usage, including a 50 percent increase in library visits and a 29 percent increase in circulation.

Usage at the Crane Library has exceeded statewide averages, with a 300 percent increase in library visits and a 50 percent increase in circulation between 2000 and 2010.

So far this year, the Crane Library has been breaking its own circulation records each month.

Nationally, Snapshot Day is supported by the American Library Association, which will compile state data to provide a national look at a day in the life of libraries.

Massachusetts Library Snapshot Day is presented by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, the Massachusetts Regional Library System, the Massachusetts Library Association, the Massachusetts School Library Association, and Boston Public Library. Visit mass.gov/libraries for more information.

'John Adams & The American Experience' Series

Join Newbury College Professor of History Dan Breen to take a close look at the life and career of John Adams at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

This free series combines film clips, readings and discussions.

A key participant in almost all of the major events of the revolutionary and early republican periods, Adams thought as deeply about the nature of America's experiment in self-rule as any of his associates in the founding generation. His experiences offer a matchless sense of the obstacles faced by that generation not only in breaking away from the British Empire, but in forging a new political arrangement likely to stand the test of time.

Session Three, "The White House Years," will be held on Tuesday, April 17 at 7 p.m.

Adams prided himself — perhaps excessively so — on his devotion to the "common good" regardless of selfish party programs. In the violent partisan atmosphere of the 1790s, President Adams would find that cherished self-image sternly tested, as the young United States found itself on the brink of war with its former French allies. As we will see, in stepping back from the brink and opting for peace, Adams both lived up to his own sense of what a statesman should be, and prevented a war that might have led to the early disintegration of the union.

Session Four, "The Long Retirement," will be held Tuesday, May 1 at 7 p.m.

For 25 years, Adams, his public career at an end, lived a quiet life in Quincy. It was in these years that he renewed his friendship with Thomas Jefferson, with whom he had bitterly quarreled during his tumultuous presidency. We will take a close look at that correspondence to see what it reveals about Adams' mature views about republican government, while looking also at the blossoming career of John Quincy Adams, Abigail and John's precocious son.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

the film stars Kevin Costner, Tim Robbins and Susan Sarandon.

The 108-minute movie is rated R.

The matinee is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Emergency Notifications On Cell Phones, E-Mail

fication System (RANS). That loads another page on the sheriff's site and from there residents need to click the link that says "click here to sign up" and that leads to the sign up page.

Residents who do sign up have the option of creating an account at that time. Doing so allows them to update their contact information, or change the types of notices they get. Notices are classified as either emergency ones — severe weather, terrorism, hazardous material incidents, Amber alerts, etc. — or general ones, which McLeish said could be used for community newsletters.

In addition to the being able to send messages to cell phones and email addresses, the CodeRED is also faster than its previous system.

Bryan said the old system would take 8-10 hours to call all Quincy numbers. On the other hand, a recent test of the new system where every number in participating Norfolk County communities was called took only two and a half hours to complete, according to McLeish.

McLeish also touted an application by CodeRED for iPhone and Android devices. The CodeRED Mobile Alert app sends notifications to cell phones based on their locations. A Quincy resident with the application traveling in Florida, for example, would receive notices of emergencies in the area they were visiting, without having to go online and update their account information.

The new system comes at no expense to Quincy taxpayers as the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office is using grant money to pay for it. Barron said Quincy was fortunate the sheriff's office was providing the service. "It's great, since we don't have it in our budget, that they were able to provide it," he said.

McLeish praised Sheriff Michael Bellotti for taking the initiative and upgrading to CodeRED.

"He was the one who sought it out and wanted to implement the system with the original," McLeish said. "He liked it, he knew it was doing good, it was definitely beneficial to the county but he was always looking at how we get this faster, how do we get it so that more people get the calls."

Pile-Supported Fixed Pier, Floating Docks, Proposed In Quincy Bay

Permit applicant Kim Shaughnessy is seeking a permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, New England District to conduct work in waters in conjunction with conducting a pile-supported fixed pier and doing other work in Quincy.

The applicant proposes to construct and maintain a new pile-supported fixed pier (134 feet by 4 feet wide) leading to a fixed deck for a boat lift and jet ski storage area (totaling 660 square feet), two pile-anchored floating docks (each 10 feet by 20 feet) and separate mooring piles.

The work is proposed in Quincy Bay at 124 Crabtree Rd. in Squantum. The applicant for the federal permit was filed with the Corps in compliance with Section 10 of the Rivers and Harbors Act, which provides for federal regulation of any work in, or affecting navigable waters of the U.S.

The proposed project will impact 1,596 square feet of essential fish habitat for various species and life stages. This habitat consists of sand and gravel and some shellfish deposits. Loss of this habitat may adversely affect some of the life stages of these species. However, the only impact will likely be pile-driving, shading and construction of the structures from floating construction equipment.

The Corps has made an preliminary determination that the site-specific adverse effect will not be substantial. Further consultation with the National Marine Fisheries Service regarding Essential Fish Habitat conservation recommendations is being conducted and will be concluded prior to the final permit decision.

For comment information, call 978-318-8166.

North Quincy Senior Stay Out All About Being Safe

By EMILY TAFT

Sixteen years ago, a group of North Quincy High School parents decided to form "Senior Stay Out," an all-night after-prom party to keep their kids safe, after a number of accidents had occurred during after-prom parties in the 1990s.

Today, a group of 15 parents gather once a month to continue the alcohol and substance free party to discuss fundraisers and activities they want to have in the after prom party held in the bottom level of the school.

"This event prevents the students from going off and having parties themselves, where they may be drinking and driving," said Senior Stay Out Chairperson Stephanie Ptak. "It is all about being safe. It is a great way to celebrate after the prom and continue having fun in a safe environment."

Ptak said when parents first organized the event 16 years ago, they weren't sure if students would show up. Now the event has an 80 percent class participation rate. The party takes up most of the lower level of North Quincy High and is free to every member of the senior class along with their date or one guest.

"The number of kids that attend goes up every year," said former Chairperson Kathi Moreschi. "You know you're doing something right when that is happening."

Senior class president Tessie McGough said she is attending the event for a second time this year. Last year, McGough was able to go as a junior after helping at the senior prom. She said she wants to go again this year because of how impressed she was with the event.

"I had an awesome time last year. I was really impressed with it all. The parents do such an amazing job," said McGough. "This event helps keep students away from the partying, and everybody looks forward to the night. It's a great opportunity to have fun in a safe environment with one of the last nights you have with your classmates."

Students and their dates enjoy food, entertainment, games, a large inflatable obstacle course, and prizes throughout the night. Prizes include gift baskets with iPads, GPS systems, and Kindles. The event is held from after the prom ends on May 18 at midnight to 5 a.m. on May 19.

"It is a long night but it goes very quickly," said Ptak. "We have a lot of things to keep them entertained."

In order for the night to happen, parents organize fundraisers throughout the year to help raise the $15,000 that is needed to run the entire event. They begin their fundraising in January and continue to hold different events through April. Ptak said that at the end of each year they try to have some money left over to carry to the next.

Ptak said when the night was first organized in the 1990s, the parents solely relied on the local businesses to help pay for the event, but now with the economy they have had to find other ways of raising funds. Recently Ptak said they received a donation from the Quincy Lodge of Elks to help defray the costs of the event.

"It is amazing what we end up getting," said Ptak. "The community has been really generous."

Ptak said that around $9,000 is put towards the cost of activities that will be done throughout the night, and the remainder is put towards prizes. The committee has already held some events to raise money such as a Zumba night and an afternoon to see a medium, "Messages from Heaven." The medium event was something that was new this year according to Ptak, and because of the response they received she said they would most likely bring it back as a fundraiser next year. Other events include a parent social a meat raffle, and raffle to see a Red Sox - Yankees game.

"This is such a great alternative to everything else that is out there for kids to do after prom," said Moreschi. "This is the last opportunity they will have with all their classmates all night together."

By the end of this year the organization will focus on not only fundraising but how to recruit parent volunteers and members of the board to organize and set the night up. A number of parents are leaving the committee at the end of the year according to Parent Volunteer Coordinator Jennie Hallisey.

"We need to make more parents aware that this event doesn't happen without them," said Hallisey. "We need underclassmen parents to volunteer to work the overnight. They should help now so that when their children are seniors they can just sit back and celebrate. We have to keep this going. The kids look forward to this from when they first enter high school."

According to Hallisey, Ptak and Moreschi the night would not happen without the support of parents and the school. Moreschi said that without the cooperation of the school principal the night would be harder to organize.

"As principal, it makes me proud every year to witness the parents working with the learning community at North to keep our kids safe and provide them with the vehicles to make good choices," said North Quincy High Principal Earl Metzler. "Our core values, knowledge, character and service are exemplified by our parents at this event every year. North is such a special place to work and go to school because of the families that we serve."

The next fundraising event will be held on April 24 and is called Zumba for Stay Out. Admission is $10 and will be held at the Kennedy Center. For more information on how to donate or on fundraising events along with a video and pictures of past events visit <http://nqseniorstayout.com/>.

Manet Community Health Center To Present Highest Award At Dinner, Auction April 26

Dr. Ralph De La Torre To Receive 2012 Manet Medallion Award

Manet Community Health Center will present its highest honor, the Manet Medallion Award, to Ralph de la Torre, MD, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of Steward Health Care System, during Manet's Dinner and Auction Thursday, April 26 at 6 p.m. at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy.

The Manet Medallion Award is given by the Manet Board of Directors to an individual or group that has significantly championed or advanced the health center's mission of providing care to all, regardless of financial circumstances or health coverage status.

This year, the Manet Board of Directors unanimously voted to honor Dr. de la Torre, who leads New England's largest fully integrated community care organization, with 10 acute care hospitals and approximately 17,000 employees serving more than one million patients annually in 85 communities in Massachusetts.

Since 2008, Dr. de la Torre has emerged as one of the most influential voices in Massachusetts health care and, increasingly, in the national debate over health care reform.

"We could not find a more deserving recipient of the Manet Medallion Award," said Joseph M. Reardon, president of the Manet Board of Directors. "Dr. de la Torre is an innovator and leader who is dedicated to expanding access for vulnerable and harder-to-reach patients by reducing barriers to care while augmenting wellness and lifestyle-changing programs."

The end result, added Reardon, is that patients and

Dr. RALPH DE LA TORRE communities are healthier, "in part by stemming the tide and consequences of chronic diseases like obesity, diabetes, asthma and cardiovascular disease."

"I am honored to receive the Manet Medallion Award," said Dr. de la Torre. "Manet and Steward share a commitment to high quality community-based care and to lowering health care costs."

In January, Manet announced a new affiliation with Steward Health Care System which will enable the federally qualified health center to strengthen its workforce, achieve greater efficiencies and expand high-quality, affordable, culturally and linguistically appropriate primary care for residents across southeastern Massachusetts.

"What unifies us with Dr. de la Torre is a shared vision for the future of health care that includes a willingness to invest in the improvement of our patients' care while maintaining, or even reducing, their total medical expenditures," said Henry N. Tuttle, Manet CEO. "Manet's Board of Directors seeks to celebrate and honor Dr. de la Torre for his impassioned and effective advocacy."

Prior to joining Steward Health Care System, Dr.

de la Torre was founder, president and CEO of the Cardiovascular Institute and Cardiovascular Management Associates at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Boston. He graduated from Duke University in 1988 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Engineering and holds a Medical Degree from Harvard Medical School and a Masters of Science degree in Health Science and Technology from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. de la Torre is a child of immigrant parents. His father was an internist in Cuba who left his homeland for political reasons and later built a thriving cardiology practice in Florida.

The April 26 Dinner and Auction is open to the public. It will take place from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills, 100 Quarry Hills Drive, Quincy. Single dinner tickets are $100 each and tables of 10 are $1000 each. Various levels of sponsorship are available.

All proceeds will go to further Manet's programs for its patients and families. "As an independent, not-for-profit, charitable community health organization, our day-to-day operations are made possible by special events such as this one," said Reardon. "The participation of our supporters and the community enhances Manet's ability to deliver coordinated care and supportive services of the highest quality."

To purchase tickets for the April 26 Dinner and Auction, or to inquire about sponsorship, contact the Manet Development Office at 857-403-0424 or events@manetchc.org.

Bernazzani Elementary School Third Graders Study Animals

Third grade students at the Bernazzani Elementary School recently produced reports about certain animals. They spent two months writing about a certain animal.

Some examples of the animals are a scorpion, koala, shark, wild horses and many more. They also created an animal habitat. The habitats were very creative. Third grade parents were invited in to a show and were able to ask questions about the animals. The kids worked very hard on this project.

John Adams And Religion Lecture Tonight

John Adams was a man of faith, but his was an original and considered faith.

As well read on the religious controversies of his time as many theologians, his library included more than two hundred books on religion, a subject which he engaged with the same insatiable curiosity and critical independence of mind as he did the many other subjects which filled his library.

Learn more about John Adams and his religious thought at a free lecture entitled "An Unbounded Faith: The Religious Life & Thought of John Adams" by Rev. Sheldon Bennett tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Rainbow Smelt Return To Town Brook

By PAT ARTIS

Over the last two weeks the first groups of rainbow smelt have arrived back in the Town Brook.

Right now there are hundreds swimming in the small pools of deeper water in the open day lighted areas of the brook.

Smelt, unlike herring, lay their eggs within a mile of an estuary or bay, along a stream bed where conditions are just right. Smelt are much smaller than herring, and as the old time winter smelt fishermen of Quincy Point/Town Brook will tell you, "much more tasty."

For many Quincy citizens this annual event is totally unknown and never has been really publicized. Much of the area that the smelt return to spawn in is located on private property in the Ward 2 neighborhoods the brook flows through. In the late 1800's the city built bridges at upper and lower Bigelow Street and at Miller Stile Road that allow the public to view the smelt.

Arline Goodman, whose property borders the brook near the Quincy American Legion, has been inviting teachers and school groups for over thirty years to view the smelt spawning. Goodman reports that in the 1970's - 1990's thousands of smelts were in the brook during the March to mid May spawning time: signs were posted then with warnings not to catch or remove the spawning smelts.

After the Deep Rock Tunnel was built in the late 1990's, the smelt population suffered from lack of water in the brook; the Department of Marine Fisheries has been involved since then in trying to solve the problems caused because of the diversion of water from the brook by the construction of the tunnel.

Most recently the construction of the Hannon Parkway has impacted flow rates and storm water runoff into the brook. Goodman has reported that "now there are much lower numbers of smelt in the brook and for fewer days."

Best viewing of the smelt is right now during mid day at any of the bridges, and at the American Legion/Revere Road culvert near Mechanic Street. You will find them in the deeper areas; smelt need a water level of at least 3 cfs for successful spawning. Smelt spawning occurs usually on a high tide and full moon - check your almanac and bring a flash light.

Pat Artis is the president of Wollaston Garden Club, a retired history teacher and coach in the Boston Public Schools, and a longtime resident of Quincy.

FIRST GROUPS of rainbow smelt have arrived back in the Town Brook.

Quincy Leaders: 'City Very Safe Community'

ciety. While we are not without our problems, we are a safe city, and we have an outstanding, professional police department.

Keenan said his department received slightly more emergency calls in 2011 than in 2010, but that number has fallen by several thousand since 2005. The number of level one crimes - serious crimes including murder and rape - stayed flat in 2011 compared to 2010. Street crimes - including assault and car break-ins - fell from 7,841 in 2010 to 6,440 in 2011.

While the number of level one crimes fell, rapes increased from 79 in 2010 to 108 last year, but Keenan attributed the increase to cases where the victim knew the rapist, and not cases of stranger rape.

Other crimes also saw increases in 2011 over the previous year. Breaking and enterings were up by 39, robberies by 40, and aggravated assaults by 20. Larcenies, however, fell by 40 over the same time period.

Drugs remain one of the larger issues the city is facing, according to Keenan, not only because of the harm they cause users but also because users are more likely to commit other crimes. There were 315 drug arrests in Quincy in 2011, up from 303 in 2010 and 254 in 2007. Keenan said the number has gone up because the mayor increased focus on drug control after he was named chief in 2008.

Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will offer a two-part workshop for first-time homebuyers, to be held from 5 to 9 p.m. on Monday, May 14 and Wednesday, May 16 at Citizens Bank, 1200 Hancock St., Quincy.

Sponsored by Citizens Bank, the workshop will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, insurance agents, attorneys and loan originators. Attendees will also learn about grant programs and speak to a lender about different mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshop is $20. To register or for more information, visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org or call (617) 770-2227.

"When I became chief, the mayor was interested in getting rid of drug issues in Quincy," Keenan said. "The drug unit was doubled and we began working with the DEA (the federal Drug Enforcement Administration), the South Shore Drug Task Force, and the Norfolk County DA's office. The partnership has been pretty effective. We do a pretty good job."

Keenan also said that the department's efforts to train all its officers to use the Narcan system has paid off. Narcan is a nasal spray used to fight the effects of opiate overdoses, and Keenan said the department used the spray 62 times since the program was introduced in October of 2010.

The chief also praised his detectives. Keenan said that in 2011, they investigated 924 cases, and cleared 47 percent of them, a rate which he described as better than average because of the work the unit puts in. The rate hasn't changed much in the past several years.

Keenan expressed some concern over an increase in accidents involving pedestrians. The chief said there have been 33 such accidents so far in 2012, compared to 71 for all of last year. In light of the increase, he said the city was stepping up both education and enforcement.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, March 31, at approximately 7:30 a.m., Officers Tim Kaes, Scott Doherty, Patrick Folan and Sergeant Guarente were dispatched to a Houghs Neck residence for a disorder between a male and a female. Upon arrival, Officer Kaes interviewed the caller, who stated that he looked out the window of his home and saw a vehicle parked out front, with a male and female inside having a loud argument for approximately 15 minutes. The caller stated that the male was throwing his arms around as he was yelling at the female.

LT. DAN MINTON

The female attempted to exit the vehicle and the male pulled her back in by her neck and head. Seeing this, the caller exited his house and ran toward the vehicle in an attempt to intervene, but the vehicle drove off. The caller could see that the female passenger was hanging out of the vehicle with the male attempting to pull her in. When the caller lost sight of the suspect vehicle, he used his cell phone to call the Police.

The responding officers searched the Houghs Neck area to locate the vehicle. Approximately 15 minutes into the search, Officer Kaes pulled behind a parked vehicle that met the description, with fogged up windows on Manet Avenue by Newton Street. Immediately, a female with a bruised and bloody face exited the passenger side screaming and crying as she ran toward the police. Officer Kaes escorted the female into his cruiser for her safety as he notified dispatch that he was out with the suspect vehicle.

As the officer approached the driver of the suspect vehicle, the driver accelerated quickly and fled the area at a high rate of speed. The vehicle was running and as Officer Kaes reached the driver's side door, the driver took off at a high rate of speed towards Sea Street. Officer Kaes, with the victim in his cruiser, could not follow the suspect, but informed dispatch of what transpired. Fallon Ambulance was dispatched to treat the victim for injuries.

The victim said that she has had an "off and on" relationship with the driver for the past eight years and has two children with him. The female victim said that the driver/suspect kept grabbing at her and attempted several times to hold her by grabbing her face and neck. She added that she had a restraining order against him, but recently modified it through the court to a "No abuse order." She stated that she made the change as part of a probate issue in order to make it easier for him to see his children.

Meanwhile, the search for the suspect was aided by a citizen, who reported that a vehicle drove down Post Island Road at a high rate of speed to the dead end, then exited the car and fled into the marsh. Officers were able to surround the area, where the suspect was taken into custody on the beach. Fallon Ambulance transported the victim to Quincy Medical Center for treatment of cuts and bruises all over her face and complained of a big lump on the back of her head.

Officer Ryan Donnelly went to Quincy Medical Center and took photos of the injuries, then took photos of the vehicle's interior for the excessive amount of blood and hair loss, which will be used for prosecution. Detectives Pieper and Dentremon attempted to interview the suspect after booking to get his side of the story, but he opted to be silent.

The detectives then interviewed the victim at the hospital. The victim said that she has been battered by the suspect in the past. She said that she tried to escape from the car but on three different occasions, he used his right arm to put her in a headlock, so tight that she almost lost consciousness. He also banged her head against the inside of the passenger door.

As a result of their interview, the 30 year-old Roxbury resident was charged with, "Attempted Murder, Kidnapping, Assault and Battery, Violation of a Protective Order, Resisting Arrest, Operating after License Revoked and Operating to Endanger." Due to the serious nature of these crimes and the imminent danger to the victim, Officer Kaes requested no bail for the suspect.

Locating Source of Toilet Leak

Q: The other day I noticed a small puddle of water at the base of the toilet. I wiped it up, only to notice the next day that the puddle was back. It's clean water so I think it's a leak from the tank, but I can't find any visible drips. The tank itself tends to sweat a bit, so I can't pinpoint where the water is coming from. Should I call in a plumber? — Christine H., Toledo, Ohio

A: Try a few more things to try and pinpoint the source of the problem. Visually check the tank and the bowl for cracks — most toilets are pretty sturdy, so it's unusual for them to crack for no reason, but do check. The tank is more likely to crack, and if so, it needs to be completely replaced. At least it's easier than replacing the bowl.

If you don't find a crack, check the shutoff valve (usually what looks like a faucet handle jutting from the wall below and behind the toilet) and its attached inlet tube for leaks. Flush the toilet so that the tank begins filling, and observe the inlet components. You may also need to run your hand along the valve, inlet tube and the inlet connection at the bottom of the tank, checking if any water is leaking and running down the inlet tube or the back of the toilet, out of sight.

Next, test for a silent leak to confirm whether the leak is happening in the tank or not. Take the tank top off. Flush the toilet and let the tank refill completely. Then, take a crayon or wax pencil and mark the high-water point with a small line. Walk away for 10 minutes, come back and see if the water is still at that point or has gone down. If it has fallen below the line, mark the new water point and leave it for another 10 minutes. Check again to see if the water level continues to fall.

If the tank is leaking, check some possible sources of the leak. First, make sure the flapper valve at the bottom of the tank is completely closed. This is one of the biggest causes of a slow leak from a tank — although it doesn't explain the water on the floor, as the water leaks through the flapper valve into the toilet bowl. Next, check the seal at the base of the flush assembly, and any other visible seal, for deterioration.

Finally, consider that small amount of condensation on the tank. Could it be the cause of the puddle? Try insulating the interior of the tank, or sliding a tank cover over the outside (both available at home improvement stores) to reduce the condensation.

Once you've eliminated all the smaller reasons for the puddle of water on the floor, it's time to look at a more serious possibility: that the seal between the base of the toilet and the floor has begun to fail. It's not a particularly difficult or time-consuming repair, but the toilet will have to be lifted off the base in order for the wax ring, which acts as the main sealant, to be replaced. If you don't have much experience with toilet repairs, this is where a plumber would come in.

HOME TIP: To keep the seals and other parts of a flush assembly in top shape for years, avoid placing a bleach-based toilet cleaner cake in the tank. Bleach can corrode the assembly components.

BBB Warns Homeowners: Be Wary Of Deed Selling Businesses

Better Business Bureau is warning consumers about businesses purporting to be selling Grant Deeds to homeowners in the New England area.

Consumers should be suspicious of invoices from retrieval businesses charging excessive fees for deeds that can be obtained from the County Registry of Deeds Office.

Retrieval businesses have been popping up throughout New England sending homeowners notices recommending them to obtain their deed now for a fee of $50 to $100, if they do not already have the important document. The notice comes with instructions to fax consumers' credit card information or to use the provided return envelope with a check. The businesses list addresses but of UPS stores and post offices; not actual office locations.

"The fine print consumers often overlook states that these businesses are not affiliated with any government agency," said Paula Fleming, vice president of Communications and Marketing for the local BBB.

"Homeowners can obtain records from the County Registry of Deeds Office instead of being duped by retrieval businesses."

BBB advises homeowners to ignore these businesses' offers and go directly to the County Registry of Deeds Office to get a certified copy of their deed.

Running Back Named To South Roster For 34th Shriners Classic All Hail Quincy's Reggie Cesar

By SEAN BRENNAN

Reggie Cesar was one of the more productive players on the Quincy High football team the past three years, but despite rushing for over 2,000 yards from scrimmage during his high school career, the senior running back's performance on the gridiron had been regulated to local football circles.

That will all change for Cesar on June 15.

He was recently selected by the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Association (MHSFCA) to play for the South Team in the 34th Shriners All-Star Classic Football Game on June 15 at Gillette Stadium. Cesar was among 100 Eastern Massachusetts all-star football players invited to play in the game, which will be broken down into a North and South side.

"This will be a stepping stone for my future," said Cesar who is still undecided about where he will attend school next year. "I am looking to play my best. My expectations are high and I really want to raise some eyebrows. I am feeling good and healthy and I want to go out with a bang."

The process of getting Cesar selected to the prestigious event began immediately after the fall season finished. QHS head football coach Bill Reardon nominated him at the Patriot League's end-of-the-year meeting and, the Shriners Committee, made up of members of the MHSFCA, went through a list of Eastern Massachusetts nominations and gave him the nod.

Cesar becomes the first Quincy Presidents player to garner a spot in the Shriners All-Star Classic Football Game since Patrick Stroud back in 2005.

"(Reggie) is our best player," Reardon said. "He rushed for over 2,000 yards in his career and had over a seven-yard per carry average. If there was ever a kid since Pat who was capable of playing in this game, it was Reggie."

"At the Patriot League year-end meeting every coach submitted their nominations of the players they thought should be part of the game," continued Reardon. "Then the Shriners Committee went through and picked the teams."

For Cesar, the chance to showcase his football skills on the big stage at Gillette Stadium means he needs to ramp-up his pregame training regiment. A small forward on the Quincy High basketball team, he kept himself in shape throughout the winter months, but Cesar now needs to quickly readjust his core training back to football.

"I found out about being selected maybe about a month ago," said Cesar before adding, "so I have been working out with the (football) team in the gym and jogging on the side trying to get myself ready."

The South Team, which will be coached by Jon Bartlett, head football coach at Boston College High School, will begin practice on June 4 at Xaverian Brothers High School. Cesar has been told by the South coaching staff to expect to see the majority of his playing time on the offensive side of the ball.

1990 Graduate Was A Star Runner for Bishops' Cross-Country, Track Teams

Thomas Sullivan Honored By Archbishop Williams

By SEAN BRENNAN

Some students walk their way through high school.

Thomas Sullivan ran.

The lifelong Quincy resident graduated from Archbishop Williams High School in 1990 as one of the Bishops' most-decorated school-boy runners and, for his individual and team-oriented accomplishments, Sullivan was inducted into the school's Athletic Hall of Fame on March 25 in a ceremony at The Lantana Restaurant in Randolph.

"It was a great honor to be inducted with a great group as well as joining over 1,000 athletes of the past," he said in a phone interview last week. "It is special to be considered among the best ever (at Archbishop Williams)."

Sullivan was inducted for his accomplishments in the specialties of cross-country and winter and spring track.

As a member of the Archbishop Williams' cross-country team, he lost only two races in the Catholic Central League and won the Massachusetts Catholic High School Invitational by running the 3.1-mile race in a time of 16:45. In addition, Sullivan placed third in the Catholic Central League Championship Meet; he also took sixth at the Division IV State Class Meet and 28th at the All-State Meet.

During his junior year, he was named a two-season Catholic Central All-Star and, during his senior year, Sullivan earned Catholic Central League all-star honors in the three seasons (cross-country, winter track and spring track) he competed.

Some of his best times came during the winter track season. Sullivan ran the Class D two-mile in a time of 10:04, finishing third and, at the All-States, he ran the same race in a time of 10:01. His personal best two-mile time came at the State Coaches Meet at Harvard when he finished in a time of 9:59.

With so many impressive running milestones, his win at the Massachusetts Catholic High School Invitational was the one that has stood the test of time for Sullivan.

"It has been awhile but that victory is the one that I remember most on an individual level," Sullivan said before adding, "but there were also a number of team accomplishments that I am proud of as well."

At the top of that list was the role he played as a member of the undefeated 1988-1989 Archbishop Williams' cross-country, winter and spring track teams. That three-season unit was recognized for its perfect record at the March 25 Hall of Fame induction ceremony.

"Individually, I had some great moments, but my greatest memories are from that year," he noted. "To accomplish (going undefeated) as a team was special."

Sullivan received a Division 1 scholarship to the University of Hartford and later finished his academic career at Suffolk University in Boston. He currently works for Big Brothers, Big Sisters, a non-profit organization.

1969 Babe Ruth State Championship Team

BACK IN 1969, Quincy had two Babe Ruth All-Star teams. That year the road to the state championship was a single-elimination format at the District and Regional level. Each Quincy team competed in separate district and regional divisions but the two all-star teams eventually played each other with a trip to the four-team state finals on the line. The team made of members of the Elks, Bryan Post, Couch Yankees, Quincy Post 95, Houghs Neck, and the Fire Department defeated their city counterpart, 3-2 at Adams Field to earn a spot in the state finals. Quincy would go on to win the 1969 state championship. Members of the 1969 state championship teams were: (Front row from left) Tim Flynn, Batboy Gerard Sheppard and Dave Drew. Middle row: Coach Dave MacMillan, Steve Cannon, Tom Burke, Jim Walker, Manager Mike Gormely, Connie Driscoll and Russ MacDonald. Back row: Coach Norm Nelson, Bob McKay, Bob Torino, Dave Nelson, Mark Whelton, Bob Morton, Bob Sylva and Bob Malvesti.

Dudek Gets Another Chance With Jets

By SEAN BRENNAN

North Quincy's Joe Dudek, who led the Raiders to wins over Quincy in 1979 and 1980 and who broke the NCAA record for career touchdowns at Plymouth State with 79, breaking the previous mark set by Walter Payton, figured his chances of making the National Football League were ended last year when he was cut by the Denver Broncos following the signing of Tony Dorsett.

However, Dudek will get another chance of making the pros when he reports to the New York Jets' training camp at Hofstra University on Long Island in June.

The Jets have invited Dudek to camp as a specialist playing on passing downs and on kicking teams. He plans to report weighing 200; he now weighs 193 and feels comfortable.

"People say I'm not big enough," said the 25-year-old. "But I'm 6-1, so I'm one of the bigger running backs. Then I see all these little scatbacks weighing 180, and I'm not big enough?"

After the setting the NCAA touchdown record and leading Plymouth State to four straight New England Conference championships, Dudek played in the Japan Bowl but wasn't drafted by any NFL team.

He signed with the Broncos as a free agent but was cut. He was asked to return during the players' strike but he held out and refused to cross the picket line.

"I held out until I eventually decided that I had to pay the bills," he said. "My teammates understood. I showed sympathy by staying out and they knew why I came back."

Dudek helped the Broncos get to the 1988 Super Bowl by playing well in two games during the strike. In one nationally televised game he ran for 128 yards and two TDs in a Denver win.

He was on the disabled list during the Super Bowl but received a Super Bowl ring, something many players can't boast of.

"Now my goal is to get in shape for Jets' camp," Dudek said. "If you don't work out, you don't get in shape and you don't make the team. It is that simple."

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

DEEP-SEATED PROBLEM

At the bottom of the spine, below the lumbar spine and above the tailbone (coccyx), the sacroiliac (SI) joint connects the triangular bone at the bottom of the spine (sacrum) with the pelvis. This shock-absorbing structure, which is reinforced with strong ligaments, transmits all the forces of the upper body to the pelvis (hips) and legs. The sacroiliac joint is not subject to much motion. When there is too much movement, the alteration in normal joint movement can result in low-back and/or leg pain. Too little movement can also be problematic. Because symptoms are similar to those associated with sciatica, it is important that the chiropractor correctly isolate the cause and apply appropriate treatment.

At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are dedicated to providing you with a care program designed for your age, condition, and lifestyle. Your spine is under constant strain during waking hours. Call us at 617.472.4220. We are located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are currently accepting new patients. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Symptoms of problematic hypermobility (too much movement) of the sacroiliac joint include the experience of pain in the lower back or hip that may radiate into the groin area.

Event Followed With Presentation By Two Olympic Swimmers

Central Swimming: Middle School Champions

The annual Quincy Intra-City Middle School Swimming Championships were held March 31 at the Lincoln-Hancock Community Pool. And, again, thanks to the support of numerous volunteers, coaches and the dedication of Quincy/North Quincy head swimming coach Bob McGillicuddy, the event was a rousing success.

"I get too much credit sometimes when things go well, but I had a lot of help," McGillicuddy said April 4 at the Quincy School Committee meeting after the middle school swimmers who participated in the Middle School Swimming Championships were recognized by school committee members. "Coaches Chris Murdock, who started the meet, Erin Leahy, Paul Griffith, Beth Hogan, Sue Foley, and Amy Curtin; without them this meet wouldn't have been a success."

Coming out on top was Central Middle. Central's combined boys and girls team total was 232.5 points, which was evenly distributed between the girls (114) and the boys (118.5) teams.

Sterling Middle placed second overall thanks to 64.5 points from the girls' side and 39 points by the boys, while the Atlantic Middle boys' team finished second in their competition with 43.5 points and the girls' side took third place (43 points), for a third-place combined finish with 86.5 points.

Central was paced by eighth-grader Maura Crum who earned a pair of silvers in the 25-yard freestyle (15.44 seconds) and 25-yard backstroke (18.41 seconds) and she also contributed on the 100-yard freestyle relay, which swam an event-best time of 1:08.75.

Crum's teammate in that 100-yard freestyle relay effort, eighth-grader Lauren Donovan, also touched the wall first in the individual 100-yard freestyle event (1:09.06) along with a second-place showing in the 25-yard butterfly at 16.72 seconds.

THE LINCOLN-HANCOCK COMMUNITY POOL was the site of the annual Quincy Intra-City Middle School Swimming Championships. The top-three schools were Central (232.5), Sterling (103.5) and Atlantic (86.5).

Quincy Sun photos/Larry Carchedi

For the Central boys, seventh-grader Skerdilaid Hoti won the 50-yard backstroke, clocking 44.56 seconds and later placed second in the 50-yard freestyle at 34.93 seconds, while also helping Central to first place in the 100-yard medley relay with a combined time of 1:24.03. Bryan McMahon, a Central Middle School eighth-grader, paced the 25-yard backstroke field and placed second in the 50-yard backstroke at 50.15 seconds, behind Hoti.

Central sixth-grader Daniel Wong tallied three gold medals, swimming the 100-yard medley relay (1:24.03), the 25-yard butterfly (17.900), and the 100-yard freestyle in 1:29 flat.

For the Sterling Middle School girls' team, Kady Mustafai contributed a pair of silvers in the 50-yard freestyle (32.97) and the 100-yard freestyle (1:15.56).

Atlantic Middle School's Anthony Alexander, a seventh-grader, completed a gold medal sweep of the 25-yard and 50-yard freestyle events in 14.79 and 34.16 seconds, respectively.

Following the Middle School Swimming Championships, Lacey Nymeyer, the 2009 NCAA Woman of the Year and 2008 Olympic silver medalist and 2008 United States Olympian Gil Stovall (200-meter butterfly), hosted a private clinic where young participants watched drills and demonstrations, swam with the invited guests and had an opportunity to ask questions, take photos and get autographs.

This event was part of the Fitter and Faster Tour, which is a series of professionally managed events featuring many of the world's greatest swimmers.

Presidents Off To A 1-1 Start To The Season

New Era For Girls' Lacrosse At QHS

By SEAN BRENNAN

There is a renewed feeling of excitement this spring when it comes to girls' lacrosse at Quincy High.

With over 40 girls currently playing the sport for the Presidents at the varsity and jayvee levels, the program has begun to turn that proverbial corner. Quincy is not yet where elite programs such as Duxbury and Hingham are, but the future is full of promising possibilities.

"We have some great senior leadership with senior captains Emily Nguyen and Olivia Goldson, who have done a great job building the team culture," said first-year head coach Tim Lewis. Lewis, who also coaches the QHS boys' hockey team, is being assisted this spring by Carolyn Hicks. "They really have a good sorority with the girls. I am also excited about the underclassmen, particularly the sophomore class who really have cemented their place as key players on this squad."

"I have some experience coaching boys' lacrosse at Catholic Memorial," continued Lewis, "but the (girls') game is different and the players are different. One of the things that I am pleasantly surprised at and, I shouldn't be surprised, is how well the girls take feedback; how coachable they are and how committed to the game they are."

Coming off a less than stellar 2011 campaign, Nguyen and Goldson put it on themselves to improve the culture of the team in 2012. It hasn't hurt that the captains are buying into what Lewis and Hicks have brought to table.

"I think this year is going to be a good year," said Nguyen a three-year varsity starter at D-Wing. "Coach Lewis has brought in more discipline and he has tried to motivate us. We should be good because we have some good young and returning players."

"Last year we lacked communication," Nguyen added. "I feel this season we should be better at that."

Goldson, a two-year starter at center midfield for Quincy following her transfer from Long Island, New York, expects a stronger showing this spring because of the talent up-and-down the varsity roster.

"We have already learned some new things," she said, "and our team is closer this year. There is a good senior class and a good junior class and we have some great sophomores."

Joining Nguyen and Goldson in the senior class are Jess Bowe, Victoria Wallace, Christina Walsh and Brielyn O'Leary. The junior class is headlined by Samantha McArdle, Ashley Gouthro, Rachel Mullin, Jennifer Scarnici (captain), Eileen Skudris, Lindsey Nazzaro and Sarah Goonan.

Kayla McArdle, Olivia Wallace, Gabby Zorkers, Stacey Gallagher, Maddy Kamb and Courtney Ryan make up an impressive tenth-grade core while freshman Kerry Phelan is a rising lacrosse star.

"These girls have done a good job with the team-building exercises and we have over 40 girls and that is in large part to effort of the captains," said Lewis about the program's upward trend. "We are taking the people who are our top athletes and putting them in a positions where they can succeed. It is a young season but things are encouraging."

Girls' lacrosse at Quincy

High has gone through its ups-and-downs, but it is gaining traction and Lewis made sure to give credit where credit is due for this progression.

"Kerry Duffy built this program a few years ago," he said about the former Quincy coach who began the program before stepping aside. "Kerry and I have talked over the past few weeks to try and continue what she established. This (program) would not be here without her."

Following a season-opening defeat to nonleague Brookline, Quincy broke into the win column with a 19-9 victory over nonleague Fontbonne Academy on April 2. Goldson led the Presidents with four goals and Zorkers and Kayla McArdle chipped in with two tallies apiece.

Olivia Wallace, Gallagher and Phelan all potted their first varsity goals in the victory as Sam McArdle, Victoria Wallace and Nguyen shined defensively.

The Presidents played Patriot League foe Silver Lake on Tuesday and have league road games scheduled with Hanover and Scituate on April 23 and 27, respectively.

April Vacation LEGO Workshops

The Quincy Recreation Department and Director of Recreation Barry Welch announced Monday that the department will offer LEGO Workshops during next week's April School vacation for boys and girls K-3.

These workshops will offer children the opportunity to participate with others in the fun-filled, creative world of LEGO activities. With the emphasis on fun, children will create and build with the popular LEGO toys in both individual and group projects.

Scheduled for Wednesday and Friday of vacation week, the workshops will be conducted in the Community Room of the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex located at One Merrymount Parkway. The cost of the program is $20 for a three-hour session and will include the LEGOs, supervised instruction and a snack.

The sessions are: Wed., April 18 from 9:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. and Friday, April 20 from 9:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Enrollment is limited, and a minimum number is needed for each session for proper group activities. Supervision is provided by members of the Quincy Recreation Department staff and participants will be guided in related LEGO activities such as design challenges and games.

Registration is ongoing and may be done online at QuincyRec.com or in person at One Merrymount Parkway from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. For additional information call 617-376-1394.

The month of May gets underway with a home game with Whitman-Hanson on May 3 before the Presidents travel to W-H to play the Panthers on May 9. Three straight home games with Duxbury (May 10), Pembroke (May 15), and Hingham (May 17) will be followed by an away game at Hull on May 18.

The season winds down with a home game against North Quincy on May 22 and a road game at Brookline on May 24.

Jumping To First Place!

Raiders Dropped Season Opener To AWHs, 11-3 NQ Softball Out To Surprise This Spring

By SEAN BRENNAN

At the beginning of each sports season the ultimate goal for every team is to make the state tournament. On top of that, specific goals are laid out based on the talent up and down the roster.

This spring for the North Quincy softball program the mission is two-fold. The Raiders will be seeking a tournament berth for the first time since the 2009 campaign while also looking to achieve and set personal goals, both individually and collectively as a team.

"We are a little young but we have a lot of talent," said NQ head coach Kerry Ginty on Tuesday. "The last couple of years we have been a young and athletic team and, that remains the same this season. This group is hard working and we have been getting more focused by the day. Our goals are to make the tournament and try and set some personal goals. I think we are going to surprise some people."

A trio of seniors is being asked to provide the varsity leadership necessary to achieve these milestones. Behind the plate Taylor McKay will be responsible for handling a young pitching staff while Rachel Chu and Julia Murphy will man the corner outfield spots.

"This is a good group," Ginty said about her senior class. "It is not a big group but they have the experience to be our leadership core."

At the eleventh-grade level, North Quincy has three three-year varsity players expected to make impacts in the infield. Shortstop Liz Kelly, a two-time Patriot League all-star, is steady at one the sport's more critical positions while Christine Kelliher has taken over the hot corner (third base) after seeing the majority of her time last year at first. Kelly Thompson is penciled in as the Raiders' starting second baseman.

"This is an amazing group," said Ginty. "We have three juniors who are three-year varsity players and they have experience to make a difference."

Joining Kelly, Kelliher and Thompson in the junior class are Caitlin Bulger and Lauren Magoon. Bulger is slated to play multiple positions on the field at super utility. She is also expected to see time on the mound. Magoon is taking over for Kelliher at first base.

for this season as she is expected to start 90% of the games in the circle.

Freshman centerfielder Courtney Campo rounds out the starting nine.

"Courtney has done a nice job making the jump to the varsity level," said Ginty about her youngest starter. "She is fast and has really made an impression."

The Red Raiders opened the season on April 3 at nonleague Archbishop Williams. The Bishops won 11-3, but there were positives to be taken out of that first game, most notably was the display North Quincy put on at the plate.

Eight players finished with at least one hit as the Raiders banged out ten in total. Kelliher had single and two-run home run, Campo finished with a single and RBI and Kelly had two hits.

"We hit the ball against Archies and that was good to see because we are going to need our bats to help the cause," said Ginty.

North Quincy opened the Patriot League schedule on Tuesday with a home game against league favorite Silver Lake and will travel to Hingham today (Thursday) before playing Quincy on Friday (4 p.m., Mitchell McCoy Field).

High School Track Results

Despite numerous first-place finishes and individual state qualifying marks the Quincy and North Quincy track squads lost both ends of tri-meet with Silver Lake on April 3.

On the boys' side, a mix-up in the time schedule resulted in Jaquan Harris of Quincy High, one of the fastest runners in the state to miss the scoring heat in the 100-meters. Harris ran from the second to last heat in 11.0 seconds, but the time did not count in the scoring.

Harris made amends for that by dominating the 200-meter race with a Patriot League best time of 22.8 seconds. Antoine Allen of North was the overall second place finisher in the same event. In the mile, Mike Mullaney was second and Aidan McMorro third while Don Sharp took third in the shot put. The 4 x 100 relay of Allen, Essien Benjamin, Jerry Verrill and Eddie Guinto took the win.

In the girls' meet, Emily Bryson easily won the two-mile in a time of 12:17, which was string enough for a state qualifying mark; her sister Julia Bryson was second in the mile event with Brianna Mullaney taking third.

Danielle Mullaney won the 800 with Mary Zheng coming in third overall. Camille Mullaney took second in the 400 hurdles, third in the 100 hurdles, and second in the high jump despite clearing 5'0" and qualifying for state. Brandi Parker won the 400 with a win in the long jump and a second place mark in the triple jump.

Emma Papile won the 100-meter with Olivia Umoren of North Quincy in third. Maya Umoren and Olivia Umoren were first and second in the shot, both over 34' for state qualifying marks and were first and third in the discus with 90 and 89 respectively also over the state qualifying mark.

Sam McNally was third in the javelin. The 4 x 100 relay on Papile, Parker, Julia Donovan and Isabelle Cobble took first place, and the 4 x 400 relay of Danielle and Brianna Mullaney and Emily and Julia Bryson ran uncontested for the win.

The teams travel to Whitman-Hanson today (Thursday) to take on the Panthers in what should be a good meet with several hotly contested field events and distance races. On Saturday, 15 freshmen and sophomores will compete in the Route 228 Invitational at Notre Dame Academy. Several Raiders and Presidents are predicted to score in this multi-school event.

30th Senior Olympics Applications Available

One of the most anticipated rites of the spring is right around the bend.

Director of Recreation Barry Welch announced Monday afternoon that applications are now available for the 30th annual Senior Olympic Games in Quincy.

According to Welch, the addition of Steward Family Hospital is a natural fit for the Senior Olympics. "The goal of our games is to promote active and healthy lifestyle for our senior community," Welch noted. "Quincy Medical Center through Steward Healthcare shares our goals. We thank them for their commitment and look forward to their involvement in our games."

Applications have been mailed to past participants and applications are available at the office of Mayor Thomas Koch, The Kennedy Center, and the Recreation Department at One Merry-mount Parkway.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The Lamb loves to be surrounded by flocks of admirers. But be careful that someone doesn't take his or her admiration too far. Use your persuasive skills to let him or her down easily.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This is a good time to begin setting far-reaching goals and connecting with new contacts. Aspects also favor strengthening old relationships — personal and/or professional.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A personal disappointment should be viewed as a valuable learning experience. Go over what went wrong and see where a change in tactics might have led to a more positive outcome.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't leave projects unfinished or personal obligations unresolved, or you might find yourself tripping over all those loose ends later on. A relative has important news.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Expect a challenge to the usual way you do things. Although you might prefer the tried-and-true, once you take a good look at this new idea, you might feel more receptive to it.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Much work has yet to be done to polish a still-rough idea into something with significant potential. Expect to encounter some initial rejection, but stay with it nonetheless.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) There still might be some communication problems in the workplace, but they should be resolved soon. Meanwhile, that "tip" from a friend should be checked out.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A new relationship appears to need more from you than you might be willing to give right now. Best advice: Resist making promises you might not be able to keep.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) That restless feeling encourages you to gallop off into a new venture. But remember to keep hold of the reins so you can switch paths when necessary.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A demanding work schedule keeps the high-spirited Goat from kicking up his or her heels. But playtime beckons by the week's end. Have fun. You earned it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're beginning to come out from under those heavy responsibilities you took on. Use this freed-up time to enjoy some much-deserved fun with people close to you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Before you get swept away by a tidal wave of conflicting priorities, take time to come up for air, and reassess the situation. You might be surprised by what you'll find.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your leadership qualities are enhanced by a practical sense of purpose that keeps you focused on your goals.

QCAP New Head Start Early Learning Center Dedicated To Rosemary, Archie Wahlberg Room Named For Former Cong. William Delahunt

By EMILY TAFT

Over 200 people packed into Quincy Community Action Programs' (QCAP) new Rosemary and Archie Wahlberg Head Start Early Learning Center April 11 to dedicate the building and the Honorable William Delahunt Room to the city's former congressman.

"We have traveled a long way to get to this building," said QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo. "We knew this was the right building for us, and we knew this location was perfect for us."

The new school, located at 22 Pray St. in Quincy, cost $7.5 million, and has the capacity to serve over 240 children in 16 new classrooms. Originally the home of St. Joseph's Elementary school, it was purchased by QCAP after 15 years of searching for a permanent home for their Head Start program.

"The families of the current students really appreciate the work that has been done. The

During last Tuesday's meeting of the City Council's Public Safety Committee, Keenan said Mayor Tom Koch asked him to prepare two budgets. The first would stay largely level compared to the department's current budget, and the second would be a wish list. He said the wish list would add more officers at every level of the department.

Square Dedications, 25th Anniversary Of Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower Vietnam Combat Veterans Memorial Service April 26

By SCOTT JACKSON

Three Quincy residents who were killed in the Vietnam War will be honored next Thursday. Air Force Major Basil L. Ciriello, Marine Corps Private First Class David A. Pitts, and Army Specialist George W. Underwood will all have squares dedicated to them.

The intersection of Connell and Robertson Streets in West Quincy will be dedicated to Ciriello at 11 a.m. Ciriello was a 1951 graduate of Quincy High School, who led the school's basketball team to the state championship. He then played basketball at George Washington University before becoming an assistant coach at GWU and then at the Air Force Academy. While coaching there, he decided to be a pilot and learned to fly cargo planes.

Ciriello was killed on Oct. 21, 1968 when his C-47 cargo plane crashed in South Vietnam's Darlac Province. The 34-year-old was buried with full military honors at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Former Norfolk County District Attorney George Burke will be the guest

CAPT. PAUL W. BUCHA, U.S. Army Medal of Honor recipient and Past President of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society, will be the guest speaker at a ceremony Thursday, April 26 at 2 p.m. marking the 25th anniversary of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower at Marina Bay.

speaker at the dedication, according to Lawrence Norton, the president of Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter.

Burke and Ciriello were close friends, according to Norton, and both were drafted by Boston Celtics coach Red Auerbach. Norton said they were the two best basketball players in the history of Quincy High, and he jokes that Ciriello was a better player than Burke.

"I like to tell George that Basil was a better basketball player and he gets all upset," Norton said Monday, "but it's in all in fun."

The dedication for Pitts will be at 11:45 a.m. at the backstop of Fore River Field, near the intersection of Beechwood Street and Nevada Road in Quincy Point.

Pitts attended Quincy High and had been a member of the Quincy Little League and an altar boy at St. Joseph's Church. He was killed in action at age 18 on Feb. 19, 1968 near the city of Hue in South Vietnam's Thua Thien Province.

Phillip "Buddy" Pitts, David's brother and a Vietnam veteran himself, will be the guest speaker at that ceremony.

The square in front of the Merrymount School will be dedicated to Underwood. Underwood attended the school before going to Central Middle School and Quincy High. He joined the Army in 1961 and completed airborne training before volunteering for Special Forces training, and becoming a Green Beret.

Major BASIL L. CIRIELLO U.S.A.F.

During his second tour of duty in Vietnam, Underwood was assigned to Special Forces base camp in Boun Brieng, where part of his mission was to provide humanitarian aid. On July 23, 1964 Underwood was leading a convoy with building materials for a school. The 21-year-old was killed when NVA and Viet Cong forces ambushed the convoy. The school was named in honor of Underwood, the first Quincy and New England resident killed in Vietnam.

Retired Quincy Police Lt. Robert Perchard and retired Quincy Police Officer Frank Calabro will speak at the ceremony. They both served as Green Berets with Underwood.

Norton will emcee each ceremony, and elected officials will speak at each one as well. Norton said he expects state Rep. Bruce Ayers and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci to speak at the dedication for Ciriello, House Majority Leader Ron Mariano and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall at the dedication for Pitts, and state Sen. John Keenan, state Rep. Tackey Chan, and Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest at the ceremony for Underwood.

P.F.C. DAVID A. PITTS U.S.M.C.

Norton, who has helped organize the ceremonies for 22 years, said he was thankful for the support he's gotten from Quincy's politicians.

"They help me do this, when I need something I call and say 'how do we go about this,' and they're always there for me," Norton said.

A ceremony will also be held at 2 p.m. at Marina Bay to commemorate the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower's 25th anniversary. The special guest for that event is Medal of Honor recipient Paul W. Bucha. Bucha served as a captain in the Army during the Vietnam War and was awarded the Medal of Honor after his company of about 90 men came under fire from a full brigade of NVA soldiers in March of 1968. During the engagement, Bucha crawled on his own towards a bunker 40 meters away, destroying it with grenades. He also stood in full view of enemy snipers, directing helicopters with a flashlight at night. Bucha's company killed 156 members of the enemy brigade, forcing them to withdraw. Bucha received the Medal of Honor in 1970, and he went on to serve as president of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society.

Norton said he expects Mayor Tom Koch and Sen. Keenan to speak at that event, and U.S. Sen. Scott Brown could join them. Norton anticipates that 400-500 people will be in attendance, including U.S. Reps. Bill Keating and Steve Lynch, Joe McCain - the brother of former Presidential nominee John McCain - and Joe Galloway, who co-wrote the novel We Were Soldiers Once...And Young which was adapted into a movie starring Mel Gibson. Norton said that the Mayor's office, led by Director of Policy and Information Chris Walker, is preparing a 45-page book for the clock tower's anniversary. It will include information and pictures of the tower, as well as biographies of each of the 48 Quincy residents killed in Vietnam.

Quincy Police, QCAP Join DA Morrissey's Effort Campaign To Combat Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children

Three Quincy Police Officers and three staff members from Quincy joined Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey this month as the Norfolk Advocates for Children, the DA and dozens of local police and service agencies launched a joint effort to combat the recruiting and selling of young girls for sex in this region.

"The internet has taken what was, years ago, thought of as an urban problem and made it an everywhere problem," Morrissey said. "We need a coordinated, thoughtful effort to combat it and help these children. As we heard today, the most common age that girls are being drawn into the commercial sex trade and sold is now middle school."

The task force launching from this training will be developing information and guidelines for how providers and law enforcement can identify girls who are being targeted, and how to respond to best protect and help the victims while holding the abusers accountable, Morrissey said.

The District Attorney said he was very encouraged to have 80 members of regional law enforcement, school departments and social service providers—including Quincy Police Lt. Patrick Glynn, Detectives John Menz and John McIsaac, and Anne Leister, Christina Barletto and Shana Allen from QCAP—attend the all-day "Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children: Identification and Response" training he and the Norfolk Advocates for Children hosted at the Bank of Canton auditorium April 3. "This was an important move forward in helping these kids."

"We are seeing your girls. We are seeing girls from a number of Norfolk County communities," Lisa Goldblatt Grace said at the opening of the conference. Grace is the founding co-director of the "My Life My Choice" program in Boston, which provides outreach and intervention to target populations—like group homes, programs and schools—to help those children avoid the traps that pimps use to bring young girls into situations where they can be exploited.

The program also helps girls escape, and stay free, if they are already trapped "in the life," according to program associate director Audrey Porter. "I come from the era of the combat zone, era when young girls were charged with prostitution," and their pimps and johns were able to buy and sell sex with children with impunity. Porter was targeted by a pimp as a young teen and was exploited for about 15 years before a medical crisis brought her to help—and that experience is invaluable in mentoring girls who are trying to break free.

The fact that Norfolk County prosecutors do not have many of these cases entering the courts is more a concern than a cause for reassurance, Morrissey said. "It is happening, the exploitation is happening, but out in the communities it is too NORFOLK COUNTY District Attorney Michael Morrissey (center) and Norfolk Advocates for Children coordinator Michele Friel Mullen (right) welcome conference presenters, from left, Lisa Goldblatt Grace, State Police Sgt. often going undetected. If it is not being reported to us or law enforcement, there is no opportunity to intervene; that is one of the obstacles we need to break down."

"Prostitution has gone indoors," Grace said. "Girls are sold on web sites...girls are more invisible than ever before."

"We are at the kind of precipice today that we were at 30 years ago in how society, law enforcement, the courts and service providers viewed domestic violence, and how all of those attitudes had to be redrawn," Morrissey said.

"We need a new framework and a new partnership across society to deal with the rampant commercial sexual exploitation of children. The Norfolk DA's Office, Norfolk Advocates for Children and our community partners are dedicated to pushing that forward."

'Tales Of Boston Harbor Islands' Topic Tonight

"Tales of Boston Harbor Islands" featuring former Quincy resident and author James Green will be the topic of a program presented by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission Thursday, April 19 at 6:30 p.m. at the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex, 1 Merrymount Parkway. Books will be available for purchase.

Ken McPhee Called To Coaches Hall Of Fame

Ken McPhee remembers the day like it was yesterday. "I was walking out of the superintendent's office just after signing my teaching contract. It was 1972. Ralph Frazier, the head coach of North Quincy football, was walking in. We exchanged pleasantries and he asked me, 'what are you doing?'"

"I told him I just signed a contract to teach. He then said, 'Are you coaching?'"

"I said no. And then he said, 'you are now.'"

Frazier brought McPhee back up to the superintendent's office where he signed an application to coach football. Frazier made him an assistant coach that fall.

"That was the beginning of my coaching career," McPhee said during a recent interview.

Some 40 years later, it's now a Hall of Fame coaching career.

McPhee, who guided the North Quincy High School football team on the gridiron for 17 years and served as an assistant for 11 years, will be inducted in the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Association Hall of Fame Sunday, April 29 at 5 p.m. at Lantana's in Randolph.

It's an honor that humbles McPhee. It's also one that he shares with every player, coach and family member who's mentored and supported him over the years.

"I'm shocked and taken back by it," McPhee said in a recent interview. "It's a nice recognition but it's not an award that I've done on my own. It's an award that's been contributed to by so many people."

"My mom and dad, my in-laws, my wife, all people who are really part of it. And former players and coaches and assistant coaches."

"It's not about me. It's nice to bring it home to the high school."

McPhee's service to Red Raider football spans more than 30 years as a player, assistant coach and head coach. Over a 17-year period as head coach, McPhee compiled a record of 93 wins, 73 losses and two ties.

He looks at his record and achievement with humor and humility.

"I think there are far more successful coaches than I had been but you know what they say: 'you stick around long enough, they give you an award and tell you leave,' he says with a laugh.

Reminded that he's had considerable coaching success including a Div. 1 crown in 1992, he responds:

"Wins and losses I don't think I stack up with a lot of coaches in this state," McPhee says. "We had some good years during the mid 1980s through the early 1990s. We had some tough times, too."

His Coaches Hall of Fame induction puts McPhee in very select company. Only two other local high school coaches — Jack Donahue and Henry "Hank" Conroy — are in the Hall of Fame. Donahue, the first Red Raider football coach, patrolled the sidelines for 27 years. He was enshrined in 1967. Conroy, who led the Presidents to an undefeated season in 1970, was inducted in 2006.

McPhee is also believed to be the only local high school football coach to win a league championship as a player and coach the same high school to a league title. During the mid 1960s, McPhee, a member of the Quincy-North Football Hall of Fame as a player, was a hard-hitting cornerback and offensive guard for the Red Raiders. He played on the 1966 undefeated NQ team that shared the Class A title with Arlington that was also undefeated that season. Back then, there were no Super Bowl match-ups.

McPhee is quick to point out that Bill Maver was a member of the QHS undefeated 1970 team and has coached Acton-Boxboro to multiple Super Bowl titles.

Anyone who has followed Red Raider football knows McPhee, a former Boston Globe Coach of the Year, has his rightful place among the pantheon of great local high school coaches.

And his signature game occurred one snowy Saturday 20 years ago this fall.

McPhee's Red Raiders squared off against Arlington for the Div. 1B title after North had run the table of regular season victories including a 20-0 shutout against city-rival Quincy on Thanksgiving.

In some respects, the 1992 game was also bragging rights for the 1966 title since North Quincy and Arlington didn't meet on the field that year to find out what team was best.

The game took on surreal proportions.

"The captain of the Arlington team that we defeated for the Super Bowl in 1992 — his father played on the Arlington team that was undefeated in 1966," McPhee pointed out. "The quarterback on the Arlington team was the nephew of a kid that played on the NQHS team in 1966 — Gerard Hirsch."

Son Beams

But the most dream-like sequence was saved for the game's end. North led 14-9 when a "Hail Mary" pass to an Arlington receiver was ruled a touchdown on the last play. But the yard line stripes were covered as a snow-squall enveloped BU's Nickerson Field.

"The official put his hands up signaling a touchdown but as it turned out the Arlington player was actually on the four-yard line. It was snowing. Earl Metzler — our defensive coordinator — ran down the sideline and wiped off the line. If it weren't for a very good official, he marked his foot and called a touchdown and never moved his foot so when he marked the foot and then they wiped it off they ruled it was on the four-yard line."

"No touch down. It was called a touchdown and then it was reversed."

Many believe North had a guardian angel that day looking down on its football fortunes.

An angel named Tommy Gilmartin. The 12-year-old popular boy had served as North Quincy's ball boy for four years before losing a courageous battle with a brain tumor in May, 1992.

But Tommy was in the team's hearts all season long.

"The kids dedicated the 1992 season to Tommy's memory. The Super Bowl ring has the initials 'T.G.' on it. Every time we won a game," McPhee said, "the kids extended a 'number one' finger in the air. It wasn't 'we're number one,' it was number one for Tommy Gilmartin."

Tommy was one of those kids that people took an immediate shine, especially McPhee and the other coaches and players that magical season.

"Tommy used to draw up a play every week. I'd get it on a Tuesday and I'd look at it and tweak it a little bit. We'd always use one of his plays in a game."

"There wasn't a kid who loved North Quincy High School more than Tommy Gilmartin. He was a good kid. To see him go was very sad."

McPhee said the team gave Tommy's parents the League Title ball — and they had it painted and gave it back to McPhee. The coach gave the parents the Thanksgiving Day football game ball when North Quincy completed its undefeated regular season and went on to the Super Bowl.

Tommy wore number 1 as the ball boy and that jersey number was retired at a school rally before the 1992 Thanksgiving Game against Quincy. Only three other Red Raiders football players have had that honor bestowed: number 20 for the legendary Pete Zoia and Billy Curran — whom McPhee calls probably the best player in Red Raider history — and number 51 in McPhee's honor.

The Gilmartins are still involved in North football. Tommy's dad, Dan, gives out a hat to every North Quincy senior player if they win on Thanksgiving with the score on the hat.

Like his Hall of Fame honor, McPhee takes pride in sharing that 1992 title with his assistant coaches.

"A lot of assistant coaches contributed mightily to that 1992 title. Earl Metzler, Tommy Carter, Peter Chrisom... we had a plethora of really good coaches that year. Any time a head coach gets an award, it's really not his award. It's really an award of the guys who coached with him."

He also has a lot of respect for guys he coached against, including former Presidents head coach Jack Raymer whom he called instrumental in lighting Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"There wouldn't be lights at that stadium today if it weren't for Jack Raymer," McPhee says of Raymer who served as an assistant with McPhee at North Quincy before becoming Quincy's head coach.

McPhee will celebrate his 63rd birthday May 6. Before graduating NQHS in 1967, he was a three-sport athlete in football, baseball and hockey. He was a standout in football at Central Connecticut State College where he received his degree in 1971.

McPhee, who worked many years as a physical education teacher and as a Dean of Students at NQHS, was an assistant coach from 1972 to 1982 and the head coach from 1983 to 1999. He stepped down as coach to become the school system's director of security and transportation. He retired from that post in 2009 and has since rejoined the Red Raiders as an assistant football coach.

Football has meant a lot more to McPhee than just wins and losses, x's and o's.

It's the people whom he's shared the sidelines with.

"My father was on the sideline of every game I ever coached. That's one of the things that coaching allowed me to do. He loved football. He loved athletics. He had his own little seat with George Page. Every game, no matter who we played, they were there."

"I used to call him the 'get-back' coach. He'd tell the kids to 'get back, get back' and there was a point when I had to have the kids tell him to get back because he was edging towards the front sideline."

"The wins and losses, they are what they are. I've been involved with some great kids, some great coaches, some wonderful memories. It's a lifetime of memories. It's been a lot of fun."

McPhee also took pride instilling in his players lessons that last a lifetime.

"It sounds cliché but football teaches a lot more than football. It teaches about life lessons. It teaches you about when you feel like you want to quit, it's not an option. When they get into a situation in life they want to quit, they can fall back on some of that North Quincy Cavanagh Field dust that all of them have gone through that gets them through some of those tough times."

"Humility, team work, comradeship, they're all clichés but they're all true. I used to say to the kids, 'we're going to put on pads now and you're going to get hit and you're going to get the snot knocked right out of you and you're going to say one of two things: 'let's go or get me out of here.' That will teach you about yourself."

McPhee adds:

"Football is not an easy sport. Football hurts. When you get whacked it hurts, and when you hit somebody it hurts. It's a life lesson. You're going to get knocked down and you'll have to get right back up."

Frazier, who got McPhee's coaching career started, will introduce his former assistant coach at the induction ceremony. McPhee says he has a lot of people to thank.

"When one person gets an award, there are so many people who contributed to this Hall of Fame award and there's so many people I need to thank for this. People like Ralph Frazier, Carl Leone, Lloyd Hill, Ted Sadowsky, (Robert) Knobby Nolan — all guys who were mentors to me. They positioned me to be a football coach. And family and of course the players — we've had a lot of great players."

And those players had a great head coach — Hall of Famer Ken McPhee.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 real photo postcard reproduction of the first Coddington School. It was located on the site of what is now known as Coddington Hall on Coddington Street in Quincy Square. The covered entrance was on the left and the wide side of the building faced the street. The land had been left to the community for school purposes by William Coddington when he exiled himself from here in early Colonial days. This wooden building built in 1855 was replaced in 1908 by the handsome Colonial Revival style brick school building here today. This picture could have been the celebration of the old building.

In 1890 the state had mandated that all new schools be made of brick for fire safety. Over the following 24 years, at great expense to its taxpayers, the City of Quincy built 15 new brick schools. That averages one new school building every 20 months. Coddington Hall, one of the few city-owned survivors of that building frenzy, has made many uses over more than 100 years and it is now proposed to be restored and become new offices for the Quincy School Department. Mayor Burgin Eyes Bid For Lt. Governor

Mayor Thomas Burgin was mentioned this week as a possible candidate for the post of Lieutenant Governor on the Republican ticket.

Burgin said that there was support for South Shore representation on the state ticket. It was noted that in the past the South Shore had furnished few candidates for top-of-the-ticket positions.

If Burgin did decide to run for the Lieutenant Governorship, it was speculated that his running mate for Governor would most likely be ex-Lieutenant Governor Arthur Coolidge or former District Attorney Clarence Barnes.

Renewable Energy Supporters Aren't Celebrating

This April 22 the world will celebrate Earth Day, but as supporters of renewable energy here in Quincy, we don't feel much like celebrating. So far the year has been a disaster for renewable energy in the city. First we had the Moon Island debacle. Now, as reported in the Sun, City Councillor Kevin Coughlin has proposed a new ordinance placing "stringent" regulations on residential solar installations.

To put a few solar panels of your rooftop under the new rules, you'll need to develop a "safety plan," you'll need a "site plan review," and you'll need permission from the planning board, which means substantial inconvenience and legal expense. The ordinance even specifies what colors to paint electrical lines connected to your solar installation and what kind of cleaners you may apply to the panels. Perhaps worst of all, the ordinance forbids the siting of solar installations on the front roofs of houses. Because the installations need to be sited for maximum sunlight, this will make solar impractical for at least half the city.

The ordinance also places heavy burdens on people wishing to install a backyard solar array. As reported in the Sun, all but the tiniest ground-mounted arrays would need approval of the Zoning Board. Again, the effect, if not the intent, is to prevent Quincy residents from adopting a technology whose safety has been proven through the years and whose environmental benefits are universally acknowledge.

As rapidly growing part of our economy, residential solar energy could provide work for Quincy residents in the building trades, which have suffered disproportionately in a slow economy. Why do anything to further depress this sector? And why prevent Quincy residents from generating non-polluting energy that doesn't come from countries hostile to our own?

From 2010 through last month, almost 2,700 small to medium-sized solar ar-rays have been installed in Massachusetts' communities rich and poor, urban and rural. None of these communities has an ordinance like the one proposed for Quincy, yet none has experienced any problems for lack of such an ordinance.

Fortunately, Quincy's ordinance is still just a proposal. May it forever lie buried in a drawer at City Hall so that clean solar energy can live on in Quincy.

BOSTON COLLEGE HIGH School's Concert Choir, featuring 11 students from Quincy, recently performed at Carnegie Hall in New York City.

Local B.C. High School Students Sing At Carnegie Hall

Michael Coffey, David Coletti, Sean Dooling, Peter Jensen, Matthew Levine, Alexander Loughnane, Brendan McAdams, Connor McGonagle, Brendan Murray, Patrick O'Connor and David Emmanuel Paradelo of Quincy, students at Boston College High School, along with 74 other members of The BC High Concert Choir, recently performed at Carnegie Hall in New York City.

In the weeks leading up to the Carnegie Hall performance, the 11 young men and their fellow-singers were asked to come to school at 7 a.m. three to four times per week to rehearse, even during school vacation week in February.

The repertoire was carefully considered for the world-renowned venue by Dr. Marina Rozenberg of Quincy, Choir Director at BC High. The choir students mastered selections in Latin, Czech, Russian and English as the repertoire included classical pieces composed by Puccini, Prokofiev and Dvorak. The program also contained a traditional spiritual, a sea chanty, a Russian folk song and would conclude with a powerful, emotion-filled arrangement of Battle Hymn of the Republic.

After arriving in New York City, there were more rehearsals before the Monday night performance at Carnegie Hall. Just prior to the performance the students held an inspirational pre-concert gathering where Michael Brennan, BC High's Vice Principal of Student Affairs and Mr. Gene Holmes, an English teacher at BC High, himself a valuable member of the Concert Choir shared thoughts with the boys that allowed the group to settle and focus on what they were about to accomplish.

All were ready to give the performance of a lifetime and give they did. By all accounts, the concert could not have gone any better. It was a complete success on so many levels. The concert hall audience rewarded the concert choir with thunderous applause and a standing ovation. Carnegie Hall music professionals, used to hearing many performances in the venue, listened intently just offstage, congratulated these students and described the performance as "outstanding". Smiling from ear-to-ear, with a feeling of euphoria, the group exited the stage knowing they had been changed by this experience.

Dr. Rozenberg, commenting on their success, said "I am honored to have outstanding young gentlemen and I feel honored to work with them. I am thankful to have parents who support them so much and to be part of our team. We are all fortunate to have the support of the BC High administration, faculty and staff for their help in making this dream come true."

In addition to Boston area concerts, previous performance locations of the choir under Dr. Rozenberg's direction have included The White House, the National Cathedral in Washington D.C., with The University of San Francisco on their beautiful campus last year, and at the Trapp Family Lodge in Stowe, VT. The group has traveled internationally to sing in The Vatican, The Czech Republic, Ireland and Russia. Dr. Rozenberg is currently planning a return trip to Russia next year that will include concerts in Moscow, Kazan and St. Petersburg.

Selected members of The Concert Choir spent a recent Saturday morning in a recording session of the repertoire that was performed at Carnegie Hall, which should be available for sale shortly. This CD will be dedicated to Boston College High School as they begin a to celebrating its 150th anniversary.

Maria Droste Fashion Gala May 4 At Lantana's

The Annual Maria Droste Fashion Gala will be held Friday, May 4 at Lantana's in Randolph.

The "Celebration of Spring" will feature a fashion show, cocktails, dinner, music and a silent auction.

Serving as this year's gala committee chairpersons are Linda and Peter Racicot.

The gala event is dedicated in memory of Darlene Sheehan. Some of Darlene's friends as well as several local trend setters, both male and female, will take to the runway to model four fantastic collections of spring ensembles.

For the ladies both playful and professional collections from Caryn's Corner, Quincy and exciting late day and evening stunners from Grandasia, Quincy will be featured.

Male fashions will feature casual and work ensembles from Natale's of Hanover and formal wear from Hajjar's in Quincy.

Hair and makeup will be provided by the Luminosity Salon in Quincy.

The Maria Droste Agency is a very caring counseling agency, staffed and operated by the Sisters of the Good Shepherd and several clinically trained professionals who serve as volunteers.

Since opening as a counseling service in Quincy Center in 1992, this agency has provided critical support to individuals, couples, and family groups in need of compassionate understanding.

For 20 years, the staff and volunteer clinicians have provided hundreds of counseling hours serving clients as young as 5 and as senior as 75 years of age; on a sliding fee scale that is structured to the client's ability to pay. The principles that dictate this agency's mission statement are in perfect tandem with the mission Darlene Sheehan worked so hard to foster during her personal illness and right up until her untimely death. That is why Darlene's friends, in celebrating her life, have chosen this agency to receive the benefits of their philanthropic efforts.

For more information or reservations, call the agency at 617-471-5686.

Hash Browns With Peppers

I was preparing a breakfast one Sunday morning for a few family members, and I always try to make home fries or some kind of a potato.

So I decided to cook hash browns with peppers, something I hadn't done in a while. Everyone seemed to enjoy them and I hope you will after you read today's recipe.

HASH BROWN POTATOES

- 1 green pepper (diced)
- 1 red pepper (diced)
- 1 medium onion (sliced)
- 4 medium sized potatoes (boiled)

Salt and pepper to taste
Olive oil

Boil the potatoes with the skin on until fork tender. Peel if you wish and cut up in small pieces.

In hot oil, sauté the onions and peppers. After they have cooked for a while, add the potatoes, salt and pepper.

Cook uncovered in a cast iron skillet if you have one, or a good heavy one until browned on both sides, pressing down each time so it has a nice crust on both sides. Keep on low until ready to serve.

Owls Program Topic At Historical Society

Norman Smith, director of Massachusetts Audubon's Trailside Museum, will discuss his 35 years' experience studying and caring for elusive and beautiful owls, in the next Quincy Historical Society program, Wednesday, April 25, at 7:30 p.m., at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

Since 1981, Smith has spent countless days and nights, in every imaginable weather condition, observing, capturing, banding and color marking Snowy Owls at Logan International Airport. He maintains an ongoing project trapping and banding migrating hawks and owls in the Blue Hills Reservation. He has rehabilitated injured birds and successfully fostered more than 1,000 orphaned hawks and owls into adoptive nests. Norman will discuss his experiences, the data he has collected on owls' roosting, hunting and other behaviors, and how most recently satellite transmitters have been attached to owls to learn more about their movements.

The audience will find out what has been learned to date about these fascinating birds, what questions remain, and how these projects developed to include research on Saw-whet Owls.

Everyone is welcome to attend. There is no charge for admission.

Tour Tuesday Of John Adams Library

New Textile Bins At Public Schools

By EMILY TAFT

Mayor Thomas Koch announced at a recent school committee meeting that there would be new textile bins being placed at every public school throughout the city.

Bins will be placed during the months of May and June and all proceeds will go to the individual school's PTO's (Parent and Teacher Organizations).

"The more items we can collect the more money that will be given to each individual school," said School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. "We will be working with the principals of each school to make sure things run smoothly."

Bay State Textile Inc., located in Pembroke, will be distributing the three feet wide by six feet high bins to each school and checking them daily. For each ton of textiles collected Bay State will pay $100.

"The owner of Bay State has guaranteed us that we will receive $10,000 at the end of these two months," said John Sullivan, Quincy's manager of energy, waste and recycling. "Even if we don't collect one textile we still get that money for the schools. The fact that the owner is going to guarantee us $10,000 went a long way in the decision to do this."

Sullivan added that they hope to offer first, second, and third place prizes to the top elementary, middle and high school's PTO's but that is something they have to wait to do until they see how much money they raise from the textiles donated.

"There is no cost to the city at all," said Sullivan. "It will never cost us even if we decide to continue to have the bins. The hope is to have the bins stay in the school yards if they are successful."

Two years ago Sullivan said that they tried a similar pilot program at five elementary schools throughout Quincy. The trailers were much larger than the ones being placed this year, which was an issue because they were taking up too much space.

"Back then you only received $40 a ton," said Sullivan. "We were able to give a couple hundred dollars back to the schools."

Flyers will be sent home with each Quincy public school student with more information on what can and cannot be donated. The trailers will be available for donations 24 hours a day, and the textiles collected will be recycled and donated to third world countries.

Bins will be painted white and will display the school's name and mascot on them. Sullivan said that the city isn't worried about any break-ins or thefts because the bins only open up enough to allow a bag of clothes at a time.

"We want people to remember that all the money raised is going to the schools," said Sullivan. "As long as it is clean it can be donated, anything from clothes to bedding, towels, and stuffed toys. Those items that are ruined can still be donated and will be shredded for other uses."

For N.H. Chief, Norfolk County Deputy Sheriff Quincy Police Contingent Attends Funerals For Fallen Law Enforcement Officers

A large contingent of Quincy Police officers traveled to two wakes and funerals this week for two fallen law enforcement officers who died tragically in separate incidents last week.

Local police attended the wake for Norfolk County Deputy Sheriff Ryan Tvelia on Tuesday and his funeral yesterday (Wednesday).

Tvelia, 42, of Plainville, died last Tuesday after being thrown from his police motorcycle on Interstate 95 in Sharon as he was heading to serve as an honor guard at the funeral of another officer's mother.

Quincy Police also planned to be part of a large showing of respect for Greenland, N.H. Police Chief Michael Maloney who died in the line of duty April 12. Maloney's wake was yesterday (Wednesday) and his funeral scheduled for today (Thursday).

Maloney, 48, was shot and killed April 12 while issuing a drug-related search warrant. The shooting closed down much of the small town of Greenland N.H., and went into the early morning of April 13th.

Maloney was due to retire in a few weeks and had 26 years of experience.

"When one is affected we all are affected, especially in these tragic circumstances," said Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan. "We attend these wakes and funerals to show solidarity."

Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan added:

"We attend out of respect for all police officers and their families. The men sign up to do this all on their own time, because we know it could be any one of us."

Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan along with Dougan and 20 to 30 other Quincy police officers attended both wakes and funerals. Dougan said that also sent a dozen motorcycles to both funerals.

To Support Cradles To Crayons, Orphans In Zimbabwe Benefit Yard Sale Saturday At Broad Meadows

By RON ADAMS

Broad Meadows
Middle School Teacher

Hanging on a wall in a corridor inside Quincy High and on a bulletin board inside a classroom at Broad Meadows Middle are the usual author posters and Honor Roll lists, but if you look carefully you will also notice a photo of children in Nepal holding "Thank You ODW" signs.

A letter from the Thomas Crane Public Library Director also saying "Thank You ODW" hangs alongside the photo.

What is ODW?

ODW (Operation: Day's Work-USA) is an ongoing, after school activism club co-founded by Quincy students in the 1998-1999 school year. (www.odw-usa.org) The ODW student written Constitution promises that two communities will benefit from the collective ODW members' actions each school year. These students have delivered on that promise every year since 1999.

ODW promises to serve and beautify Quincy each year.

ODW also pledges to provide life changing aid to poverty stricken peers in one developing country annually.

The Quincy Kids in ODW need your help and ask neighbors and others to attend their April 21 Yard Sale and Clothing Drive so they can fulfill this year's promise of helping Quincy and orphans in Zimbabwe. The Yard Sale runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy.

This year, just like they have every year since 1998, the ODW student members nominated many organizations as potential annual partners. The debate over which one to choose was spirited, intense at times, but in the end the ODW members voted to partner this year with the American Foundation for Children with AIDS in Zimbabwe to provide life saving medicine, livestock and hope to 960 orphaned and vulnerable children in Zimbabwe.

This year, just like they have every year since 1998, the ODW members have chosen to participate in a range of service to Quincy including: the April 21 Clothing Drive in partnership with Governor Patrick's Project 351 and Cradles to Crayons; setting up a water station for the Quincy Half Marathon in partnership with Geoff Hennessey; beautification of the public library on Cleaner Greener Quincy Day in partnership with Claire Fitzmaurice and City Councillor Margaret Laforest, and more.

Last year, students worked a day creating gardens at the Thomas Crane Public Library by planting hundreds of flowers around the building. Last year, the students raised over $9980 and helped GoodWeave-Nepal rescue 52 girls and boys from child labor in the carpet industry in Nepal. Twenty of those children posed at a school in Nepal for that "Thank You ODW" photo which hangs at Quincy High and at Broad Meadows Middle, and the library director sent that "Thank You ODW" letter.

bors locally?

To help, you could stop by and buy at the April 21 ODW Yard Sale and Clothing Drive.

The Yard Sale and Clothing Drive runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on April 21 on the green outside Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy.

Checks can be made payable to ODW and mailed to: ODW c/o Broad Meadows Middle School, 50 Calvin Road, Quincy, MA 02169.

All proceeds from the Yard Sale will go to the 2012 Annual ODW Project, namely medicine, livestock and hope for 960 orphans in Zimbabwe. Grade 6 ODW member Caroline Bloomer is coordinating the Yard Sale portion of April 21.

Yard sale surprises include a henna table and a table of hand woven "frisbees" for sale made by cl-derly women in Zimbabwe.

To help, you could drop off at the Yard Sale gently used clothing and toys. Grade 8 ODW member Jackie Shuttleworth has made arrangements with Cradles to Crayons for them to pick up all donated clothing and toys and distribute the clothing and toys to needy families in our area.

It's amazing what young people can do in a day's work.

ODW member schools include: Quincy High; Broad Meadows Middle; Silver Lake Regional Middle; Archbishop Williams High; the Newton School in Stratford, Vermont; Thetford Academy in Thetford, Vermont and Riverdell Middle in New Hampshire. Any school with students in grades 5-12 may join ODW. Membership is free. Details at: www.odwusa.org

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

LAPSE IN THE POOL

If you're going to be spending a lot of time swimming in a pool this summer, you should know that chlorinated water has the potential to erode tooth enamel. The problem largely rests with poorly maintained pools in which the pH of the pool water is allowed to go to low (too acidic). One immediate indication of this problem is a burning sensation in the eyes, which is due to low pH (not necessarily too much chlorine). Highly acidic pool water has the potential to corrode tooth enamel, resulting in stained teeth. According to one study, 39% of competitive swimmers suffered from dental enamel erosions when pH levels dropped to 2.7 (compared with the recommended pH of 7.2 to 7.8). Prevention requires participation from both the swimmer and the person maintaining the pool. By simply closing your mouth while swimming can possibly reduce your exposure to chlorine. Our mission is to treat every person coming to us for dental care as if they were the only person in our practice. We invite you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule your next appointment. We are dedicated to your oral health and offer a variety of procedures to help achieve a beautiful smile. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a full trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If necessary, purchase pH test strips and test the water in pools that you regularly frequent.

Police Chief Seeks More Staffing

down," Keenan said. "The captains, lieutenants, sergeants, and the patrol officers. I'd like to get back to at least the fighting strength we had when I took over."

When he took over in 2008, there were five captains, 16 lieutenants, 27 sergeants, and 154 patrol officers on the force. After recent hirings and promotions, there are currently four captains, 14 lieutenants, 27 sergeants, and 145 patrol officers.

During the meeting, committee chair Brian Palmucci asked if a decline in arrests in the city since 2007 was attributable to cuts at the police department. Keenan said he felt the decline was responsible.

"It's subjective, I can't tell you directly, but my sense is if you've got less officers on the street, you're going to see less arrests," Keenan said.

The police department's budget has been largely stable over the past four years, increasing annually by about one percent. The current budget is about $21.97 million.

The chief also reported a tenfold increase in gun seizures since he took over. In 2011, 108 guns were seized compared to just 11 in 2008. Keenan said the increase was more of a reflection of society than anything else, specifically gang activity.

"We haven't actually seen much gang activity in the city," Keenan said. "A lot of times we'll refer to gangs as gangs of youths. There are kids that are hanging in the parks, kids that are drinking, the quality of life type of gangs. We haven't seen an uptick in hardcore gang membership. We don't have the Bloods and the Crips, thankfully, we do have kids who hang at Wollaston Center or down at Mound Street Beach."

Police Chief
PAUL KEENAN

While Keenan did say he's been more liberal at granting gun permits than his predecessor, he said most of the guns seized have been unregistered ones.

Keenan also touched on pedestrian safety at the meeting. He cited faulty walking habits as a reason for the dramatic rise in pedestrian-related accidents so far this year.

"In 2011, there were 71 [pedestrian related accidents], we're already up to 33 [this year] and we're only a third of the way through the year," Keenan said. "A lot of it has been pedestrian generated, we've charged a number of people - operators - we've charged them with motor vehicle homicide and that type of thing, but it seems to be a lot of it lately is pedestrian generated, just faulty walking practices - distracted walking, going into an intersection distracted with an iPhone or cellphone or an iPad or iPod or whatever."

The number of homeless people arrested declined in 2011 compared to past years. Last year, 147 people were arrested and booked as homeless when they didn't provide a current address. In 2010, there were 169 such arrests.

Calls to Father Bill's in-

creased during that same time span, however. In 2011, 244 calls to the shelter were made, up from 199 in 2010.

But of the calls in 2011, 106, were medically related. In 2011, 93 calls were for ambulances and 13 were for additional medical issues. Prior to the meeting, 56 calls to Father Bill's had been made in 2012, though no breakdown was provided.

Keenan attributed the arrests to out-of-town homeless. He said that just one of the last 18 people arrested at Father Bill's shelter was from Quincy, with most coming from Boston or Brockton. The chief added that the influx of out-of-towners was troubling to him.

"What we are seeing lately is a significant number of out of town homeless coming to Quincy," Keenan said. "Father Bill's is a good location for them, but that is a little bit troubling to, I think, the citizens of Quincy and to me."

Councillor Joe Finn, who serves as the president and executive director of Massachusetts Housing and Shelter Alliance, took issue with that, saying it wasn't unusual for out-of-town homeless to claim family ties to Quincy and stay at the shelter.

The two did agree that the correctional system's failure to adequately prepare inmates for release was an issue facing shelters, such as Father Bill's.

"The corrections system is pouring people into our communities without re-entry or discharge planning or those types of things," said Finn.

"The social stigma associated with having been in prison makes it very difficult to secure work or housing. My greater fear, and this is the trend that disturbs me, and it's not specific to Quincy, is that these shelters are becoming the acceptable housing niche for populations that Father Bill's or no shelter is equipped to handle."

Keenan agreed with Finn on the matter, saying that shelters were being forced to function as halfway houses, but without the proper resources.

The two also agreed that shelters hide the true location of sex offenders. Six level III offenders registered at Father Bill's as their residence, but both Keenan and Finn said it wouldn't surprise them if sex offenders simply registered at the shelter and took off. Finn added that Massachusetts would be wise to follow in the lead of other states that don't allow sex offenders to register at shelters.

"Some states have actually removed shelters as a place to register, and that to me would be a positive thing," Finn said. "Because it would force the state to deal with the issue rather than just consigning them to these warehouses."

Town Brook Levels Dangerously Low

By PAT ARTIS

Even though the state's reservoirs and dams are currently at 106 % capacity, the water in the Town Brook is extremely low and will affect the successful spawning of the thousands of rainbow smelt which are in the brook right now. Given that the state's streams and waterways are being affected by drought due to lack of early spring rains, the situation at Town Brook has become even more critical.

The source of water for Town Brook is within the Blue Hills/Braintree Highlands; water gathers and is held/conserved in the Braintree Dam. According to an agreement with the Department of Conservation and Recreation, both Braintree and Quincy are responsible at different locations for getting more water into the brook when needed.

A few weeks ago, after prompting from QEN members, the low water level was reported to both Brad Chase of the Department of Marine Fisheries and Dan Raymond, Quincy's DPW commissioner. On April 12 water was released from Braintree Dam, but its overall effect was minimal. Currently the water level is still below 2 cfs and according to Chase should be between 4-6 cfs for successful spawning to occur. It is important that the city develop new procedures for monitoring water levels in the brook in case of smelt spawning and during times of flood.

Since the Centre Street Junction Box at Burgin Parkway/Center Street, Burgin Parkway Conduit, School Street Deep Rock Tunnel

Inlet and Diverter (behind Star Market), and the Deep Rock Tunnel were completed in the 90's, the water levels in the brook have been a source of Town Brook degradation and a contentious issue between the city, and the environmentalists and the Department of Marine Fisheries. All three of these structures were engineered and built to control flooding in times of emergency, but when not needed they drain water from the Town Brook. All year long water that belongs in the brook is being diverted by flood control structures. This puts the responsibility clearly on the City to clear culverts, grates, and drains along the brook's course in early March before spawning begins, and regulate meticulously the water flow at the different flood control junction boxes.

With Dan Raymond as the new Quincy DPW head and responsible for regulating both the flood control engineering structures and flow of water into the brook; there is real hope for improvement. The "problem" with Town Brook is a human one - caused by years of local development, minimal maintenance and oversight. The brook and all our local waterways, large and small, deserve conservation and protection. Despite all this, the Town Brook is healthy and thriving; it is not polluted and its tested water quality good. Both American eels and rainbow smelt have been spawning in it for hundreds and hundreds of years.

White House Easter Egg Roll Fun For Madison Logan

6-Year-Old Quincy Girl Has Amazing Experience In Nation's Capital

By EMILY TAFT

Six-year-old Quincy resident Madison Logan took her first airplane ride on April 9th to visit the White House and be apart of the 134th annual Easter Egg Roll. Logan joined participants from all 50 states and the District of Columbia for the all day event.

"It was all my favorite part, we did an Easter egg roll, it was fun," said Madison. "I liked flying too."

The Easter Egg Roll is a White House tradition dating back to 1878 and President Rutherford B. Hayes. Before taking place on the South lawn of the White House, Washingtonians would celebrate Easter Monday on the West grounds of the U.S. Capitol.

A bill banning the rolling of the eggs on Capitol grounds is what inspired the idea of rolling at the White House, and in 1878 Easter Monday celebrants headed to the White House where President Hayes instructed the guards to let the children through the gates. The roll did not take place from 1917 to 1920 during World War I because of rationing, as well as 1943 to 1945 during World War II. The event took a 12-year hiatus for various reasons before returning during Dwight D. Eisenhower's presidency. Over 35,000 total tickets were given out for this year's Easter Egg Roll.

Madison, who has been legally blind since birth, was chosen by her school, Perkins School for the Blind, along with three other students to attend the event. The school paid for the trip for both Madison and her mother Christine to fly to Washington for the day.

"My favorite part about the whole experience was everything really," said Christine Logan. "Just to be able to watch and experience Madison's excitement was the best part. It was quite an experience for the both of us."

Madison and Christine started their morning on April 9th on a 4 a.m. flight to Washington D.C. From there, they were able to see some sights before heading to the White House event. They went to the Museum of Natural History where Madison's favorite exhibit was the Butterfly conservatory.

"It was fun for her to really experience that," said Christine. "She was able to go back to school and tell the kids how she got to see butterflies up close."

After visiting the museum they headed to a day of activities at the White House, including an Easter egg hunt and roll, entertainment, a dance party, arts and crafts, story time, and yoga among many others. The activities are centered on the theme "Let's Go, Let's Play, Let's Move," which encourages healthy and active living in coordination with the First Lady's, Michelle Obama, "Let's Move" initiative. The White House provides 'chirping eggs' for the visually impaired visitors, during the Easter egg hunt.

"Her highlight was being able to meet Clifford the Big Red Dog," said Christine. "It is an experience she will always remember."

Christine added that they also received a gift of a wooden egg stamped with paw prints of the first family's dog BO. The souvenir wooden egg was given to all children at the event ages 13 and younger. The First Lady and President Obama attended the event but Christine said that they had to leave before they arrived.

"It was such an amazing experience for her," said father Scott Logan. "She hasn't been able to stop talking about how much she loved it."

LINKS WITH THE PAST

Not every man wears cuff links, but those who do have an appreciation for how well-starched cotton serves as a background for fine jewelry. Prior to their widespread use about three centuries ago, men tied their shirt cuffs together with ribbon, which eventually led to the detachable double-sided button. While the French were fond of gold "boutons de manchette" and cuff links adorned with faceted gemstones, the British optimized the use of these pieces of fine jewelry. Then, as now, they provided men with one of their rare opportunities to show off their masculine individuality. From the 19th century on, cuff links have been associated with a fine sense of style. Cuff links link stylish men with an elegant past. Discover a sophisticated collection of cuff links in an assortment of classic and fun designs. We are excited to display these cuff links at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. Contact us at 617-773-3636 so we can assist you in making a confident jewelry purchase. Animal Rescue Leagues' Lt. Alan Borgal Quincy Man Named One Of America's Top 10 Animal Defenders

By EMILY TAFT

Lifelong Quincy resident Lt. Alan Borgal has made it his goal to help those animals that can't help themselves, and it is for that reason that he was recently recognized as one of America's Top Ten Animal Defenders during the 2012 National Justice for Animals Week in February.

"I accepted the award for all the people that have made my career very easy," said Borgal. "I may rescue these animals but it really is the whole shelter of volunteers, and the veterinarians that service them that do all the work. It is really a lifetime award for the Animal Rescue League of Boston."

Borgal was one of 11 that the Animal Legal Defense Fund said were "superstar officials in law enforcement, courtrooms, and legislature speaking out for animals from coast to coast, taking a real stand in seeking justice for abused and neglected animals."

Borgal is no stranger to receiving recognition for the work he has done during his 38-year career.

In 2007, the Boston Celtics recognized Borgal when he received their 'Heroes Among Us Award,' and in the same year he received the Animal Control Officers Association of Massachusetts (ACOAM) Richard A. Stein Distinguished Service Award. The Massachusetts Environmental Health Association also awarded him in recognition of his work with animal hoarding, among many other awards he has received along the way. Borgal said that he has also appeared on a number of different programs aired on Animal Planet. Throughout it all Borgal has stayed humble, always crediting the many who help throughout the long process with each individual animal he rescues.

"I'm nothing without the people that are a part of my staff," said Borgal. "It has always been a community effort. I am always calling for updates on any animal I bring to a shelter, to see how they are progressing."

Borgal is now the Director for the Center of Animal Protection, where he supervises the Animal Rescue League of Boston's (ARL) law enforcement division activities, technical animal rescue services and advocacy services, but his career in protecting animals started when he was 10 years old volunteering at animal shelters.

"I helped out at the shelters when I was 10," said Borgal. "I fell into the job really, because after that I continued to stay in the animal business."

Since then Borgal has always known he wanted to work with animals, and when the opportunity arose he became a rescue agent. After a few years of learning how to handle all different types of animals he would have to pick up on a day-to-day basis, he became a special State Police officer. Borgal attended the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council Fall River Police Academy in 1981, where he says he was known as "K-9."

"When I got out of there the first thing I did was work at the Norfolk Agricultural School," said Borgal. "I wanted to learn about all the different types of animals, especially live stock, since I knew I would be working with them at some point in my career. You have to know what you're working with when it comes to animals."

That training came in handy because since then he has worked with every animal imaginable, including 33 Miniature Horses that were recently surrendered from a small farm in West Boylston. The horses were extremely malnourished and neglected, but have now been under the care of many volunteers to help them become healthy and used to people.

The horses have already been given homes and will be released to their new owners as soon as they are fully rehabilitated. Right now they have been split up, some being cared for at the ARL of Boston's Dedham facilities, and others were sent to the MSPCA-Nevins farm in Methuen. The case itself, which had been an ongoing investigation by Borgal and his team, was something they tried to prevent from happening.

"Most people are fascinated to find out they are doing something wrong," said Borgal. "We try to go in and work with the owners and correct the issue. Education is many times the key to keeping the animal with their owner. We do a lot of re-checks to see if the issue is corrected."

There are a number of different issues and laws that Borgal has fought to bring awareness to throughout his career, but he said that his true passion is making people aware of how important it is to spay/neuter their animal to help prevent an unwanted overpopulation of animals.

"Spay and neuter is my passion," said Borgal. "People need to spay and neuter their animals. So much good comes from doing that."

While spay/neuter is his main focus, Borgal also works with raising awareness about a number of different issues that seem to be a recurring theme in his line of work. Issues such as leaving a dog out in cold weather, tethering a dog, imbedded collars, untrained animals (especially dogs) and hoarding are just some of the cases that stand out in Borgal's mind.

"I've seen some really bad cases, many which include imbedded collars. In every case I go to, the person I am talking to wants to know who called in the complaint," said Borgal. "I tell them if you can't properly take care of your animal then I am the one complaining. In most dog cases, the issues an owner has can be fixed simply by getting some training for the animal."

During his 38-year career, Borgal has seen his fair share of horrible situations but he said that the worst case he has seen was one that involved both human and animal suffering. The case, Borgal said, involved hoarding of over 30 dogs and when officers arrived at the house it had been clear that both the women involved and the animals involved had suffered tremendously. The house was in such bad shape Borgal said that they had to demolish it.

"I have seen animals in such filth and discomfort. But to see this case and how much both human and animal were suffering was awful," said Borgal. "There are many types of cases, especially hoarding cases, that still amaze me, and we don't know how to fix hoarding yet. There has been a lot of research but not a lot of progress."

It took 13 years to have a law passed making animal cruelty a felony, according to Borgal. The next step is to work with cases of domestic violence where an animal is in the home.

"A lot of times in a domestic violence case, where there is an animal in the home, the anger is first taken out on the animal and then the human," said Borgal. "Now judges are able to order the abuser to stay away from pets along with the human victim."

One thing Borgal said he would like to see for Quincy is a small shelter put in the plans of the new downtown project. Borgal said he has talked to a few people about the idea, and hopes it will be considered.

"I would like to see a small shelter put in the downtown, mainly for adoptions, but if that can't happen I would like to renovate the Quincy Animal Shelter to improve upon the building. A shelter binds a community into caring," said Borgal. "Shelter animals seem to live a long time and we think that is because they appreciate the homes they are placed into. I really believe that."

Borgal added that he has a long-term goal of being able to have a dog park in the city.

While most people Borgal's age are either thinking about retiring or have already retired, Borgal isn't showing any signs of slowing down or stopping, because for him the work he does is so much more than a job.

"I don't take a lot of vacation time because I like what I do," said Borgal. "The law enforcement part can be taxing but seeing the animals recover and go out to new homes and at the end of the day that's what makes this job worth it."

from 15 months to five years old and their families. The program provides comprehensive services including education, health, nutrition, family support, and parent involvement.

"The goal of QCAP's Head Start program is to provide affordable and high quality early education and care to low-income families," said QCAP's Director of Development and Marketing Susan Harrington. "The location is ideally suited to accommodate our Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree students since it is on the border of all three communities."

"The inspiration for the purchase was in part the result of leasing and renovating classrooms throughout Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth over the past 40 years and always facing the possibility of being evicted. This building gives us the stability we need to provide services in addition to a state of the art early childhood facility."

The new school, which opened in January, is serving more than 300 toddlers and preschoolers from Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Hull, and Milton. QCAP received grants from

FAMILY OF Rosemary and Archie Wahlberg gather with pre-school children Learning Center named for Archie and Rosemary Wahlberg on Pray Street in Quincy Point. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

State Street Foundation, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Office of Head Start, and the city of Quincy, among many other donors.

"This is a very special day for the QCAP family and especially the head start program," said QCAP Board President Josephine Shea. "Because of Rosemary's will and Beth Ann's commitment we stand here today to officially open the Rosemary and Archie Head Start Early Childhood Learning Center."

The school was designed by the architecture firm Bargmann Hendrie + Archetype, Inc. of Boston, and offers 32,000 square-feet of space. The playground space is reminiscent of a ship and moorings and uses recycled rubber for its playing surface. With so many children relying on the program for snacks and lunch, a key feature to the new school is a full-service commercial kitchen with a walk-in refrigerator and freezer as well as industrial appliances.

Inside the school is an indoor gross motor room named in honor of former Cong. William D. Delahunt who also served Quincy as a city councillor and Norfolk County as the district attorney. The room, aside from being used by the students on rainy days, will be used to host community meetings, conferences and other events in addition to being used as a physical activity area.

Delahunt was instrumental in securing funds to be able to renovate the center. According to Shea, Delahunt was on board with the idea and project from the first phone call made to him explaining what needed to be done.

"I am honored by this particular dedication," Delahunt said. "Today is a culmination of a tremendous amount of work on the part of so many people."

"This building today is a physical reflection of the character of this city. It really reveals what the city is about, and it has always been that way. I can sum up my impressions of this classroom and this building by one word - wow - just wow. The transformation is absolutely spectacular."

The main purpose of the event was to honor QCAP's former executive director Rosemary Wahlberg and her husband Archie, for whom the school is named after.

"It is an honor for me to make this presentation and dedication of this building," Stroll said. "It's a special day for us at QCAP. We have looked forward to the moment when we could finally recognize Rosemary and Archie properly."

"To dedicate something to them that really acknowledges the contributions that they have made to the city of Quincy, to Quincy community action, and really to the community action movement around the commonwealth and the country."

"It was a thrill to be able to name this building for them because, their work will live on in this building. There will be, for many, many years, thousands of children and families who will come through here who will be inspired and educated," Strollo added.

The couple received a plaque that will be hung in the main lobby of the building along with citations that were read in honor of them by Michael Jackman, representing Cong. William Keating, state Sen. John Keenan, state Rep. Tackey Chan, and Quincy City Council President Michael McFarland, joined by Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall.

"About 15 years ago under Rosemary's leadership as the director of QCAP we started looking for a permanent home," Strollo pointed out. "We had a lot of starts and stops to that process, it wasn't easy but we persevered through it."

"It is really an honor to be able to dedicate this building to them, for 50 years of work together. They really had the will to build this building, but there was another will that Rosemary always had, a very strong will to do the right thing for the low-income residents of Quincy."

Over 45 members of the Wahlberg family attended the dedication along with many residents, politicians, and public officials that they have touched over the many years they helped to inspire and groom leaders and residents. In 1957, the Wahlbergs moved to Quincy and joined the QCAP organization after seeing how in each household someone was volunteering their time to make the city a better place.

"We certainly learned something about people who were born and bred in Quincy and that is that you hardly knew a household that didn't have volunteers. It was a very special place. You could make a difference in this city," said Rosemary. "It is such a pleasure to be here, and we are very grateful to this group."

The couple has served on numerous boards and associations in Quincy throughout the years, and it wasn't uncommon for them to try and provide direct assistance to area families.

Archie is a past president and served on the Board of Elder Housing Corporation and he served on the Quincy Cemetery Board of Managers. He is also a founding board member of QCAP.

Rosemary, the former executive director of QCAP, has served on the Health Planning Council of Greater Boston and on the boards of Quincy Medical Center, Quincy Housing Authority, Quincy College, the Governor's Commissions on the Homeless and Energy, and South Shore Day Care.

They both led successful campaigns to start Quincy's first school lunch program, extended day childcare, and family planning.

"There are those constants in life and those constants in a community that make a difference and we have so many remarkable people that continue to serve this city in so many ways, and one of those amazing couples is truly Archie and Rosemary Wahlberg," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

"I had the privilege of serving with the both of them in different capacities long before I was mayor. They were always consistent in that they were always looking out for the little guy."

"They were always concerned that everyone had an opportunity. The Wahlbergs continue to stay constant, decade after decade," Koch added.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, April 6, at approximately 9:45 a.m., Officer Jamie Karvelis was dispatched to the "UHAUL" store on Quincy Avenue on a report of a "Breaking and entering into a Motor Vehicle."

Upon arrival, the officer met with the vehicle owner and his girlfriend, who stated that someone just stole his girlfriend's pocketbook from inside his parked vehicle. The victims led the Officer to their vehicle, which had a shattered passenger window. The victims said that they saw a male standing by their vehicle earlier, describing him as wearing a grey camouflage jacket with a red bicycle.

LT. DAN MINTON

The vehicle owner said he approached the suspect after the incident, attempting to find out if he was involved. The suspect spoke briefly and then drove off towards Braintree. Officers Mark Millane and Paul Foley responded to the area to help in the search.

Within five minutes, Officer Karvelis spotted the suspect riding a red bike on Quincy Avenue at the Braintree line. The officer activated his blue lights and directed the suspect to stop and then sit on the curb. The suspect, with clothes meeting the description given by the victim, was carrying a black backpack and had another bag attached to his handlebars.

Officer Millane arrived on scene while Officer Foley checked the area of the crime scene for further evidence. Officer Karvelis questioned the suspect, who denied breaking into the car, claiming that "I was just in a dumpster scrounging for scraps." The officer observed fresh and open lacerations on the suspect's right hand. For officer safety, Officer Milane pat-frisked the suspect for weapons and found a clear baggy in his pocket containing numerous pills. When asked about the pills, the suspect said, "They're my meds," but he could not provide a prescription or a prescription bottle for the pills.

Officer Milane then found pieces of shattered glass in the suspect's pocket. Based on the above information, Officer Karvelis gave the suspect his Miranda Warnings, which the suspect waived and said he would answer questions.

The suspect granted permission for the officers to look into his bicycle pack, where they found a hammer, two screwdrivers, two lights with head straps (so that one could attach them to their head); one box cutter and a flashlight.

Based on training and experience, the officers determined that these items were consistent with burglarious tools. When asked why he had these tools, the suspect said, "I change my tires with them."

There were no tires in his possession.

Officer Karvelis then brought the suspect back to the victim's location, where the vehicle owner positively identified the suspect as the man by his vehicle. The suspect, a 46 year-old Braintree resident, was placed under arrest for "Breaking and Entering a Motor Vehicle in the Daytime for a Felony, Possession of Burglari-ous Tools, Possession of Class B drug and Possession of Class C drugs."

Once at the police station, Officer Foley brought the victim's pocketbook in, which was located on a hill just up from the entrance of Quincy Mental Health located at 460 Quincy Ave., which was in between the crime scene and where the suspect was initially detained. All items inside the purse were recovered, except for the missing cash of $42. During booking, the suspect was found with $64 cash in his pocket.

The pocketbook was returned to the victim. The pills, 25 Suboxone, and 23 Clonazepam were placed in evidence.

Interesting Advice From An Email:

Spam mail: Any time you see an email that says "forward this on to '10' (or however many) of your friends", "sign this petition", or "you'll get bad luck," you'll get good luck" or you'll see something funny on your screen after you send it, it almost always has an email tracker program attached that tracks the cookies and emails of those folks you forward to. The host sender is getting a copy each time it gets forwarded and then is able to get lists of 'active' email addresses to use in SPAM emails or sell to other Spammers. Ignore them and don't forward.

Online petitions: Email petitions are not acceptable to government or any other organization - such as Social security, etc. To be acceptable, petitions must have a "signed signature" and full address of the person signing the petition, so this is a waste of time and you are just helping the email trackers.

Tips for Handling Telemarketers: Three words that work are "hold on please." Saying this, while putting down your phone and walking off (instead of hanging-up immediately) would make each telemarketing call so much more time-consuming, adversely affecting sales. When you eventually hear the phone company's "beep-beep-beep" tone, then you can hang up your telephone.

Do you ever get those annoying phone calls with no one on the other end?

This is a telemarketing technique where a machine makes phone calls and records the time of day when a person answers the phone. This technique is used to determine the best time of day for a 'real' sales person to call back and get someone at home. If you notice there is no one there, immediately start hitting your # button on the phone, 6 or 7 times as quickly as possible. This confuses the machine that dialed the call, and it kicks your number out of their system.

LARCENY, 9:15 p.m., Quincy Auto Body, 324 Quincy Ave. Fare evasion. Unable to locate male, cabbie was advised. This was a fare evasion.

Clearing Away Wasps

Q: Checking out the eaves last week, I saw several small wasp nests tucked into the more sheltered corners. What's the best way to get rid of these nests? — Charlie L. in South Carolina

A: There are a few ways to remove those small wasp nests from the exterior of your house, and the quicker, the better. Wasps could possibly begin extending the nests inside the walls if they're not dealt with. In fact, you'll want to check the attic or storage space above the eaves, as well as crawlspaces under the house, for evidence of wasps before starting the removal.

To remove the wasp nest, make sure the kids and pets are inside to prevent possible stings from angry wasps. Wear long sleeves, pants, work gloves and sturdy shoes to protect yourself. And of course, if you have an allergy to bee stings, don't clear the nests yourself; call in a pest-control service.

The most effective way to get rid of the nests and reduce the chances of the wasps coming back is to use a chemical spray. Wait until dusk, when the wasps have returned to the nests, then spray according to the directions on the product. You may have to wait up to a week for all activity in the nests to subside; then you can climb up to the eaves and carefully pull off the nests.

An all-natural method for wasp removal is to gear up (cover all your skin, put protective netting over your face, and have an escape route) and spray each nest with a jet of water from your garden hose. This doesn't kill the wasps, and you'll probably see them building nests again in fall or spring.

What if you found that the wasps have gotten inside your home's siding during your initial survey? You'll probably want to stick with the chemical spray of the outside nests (not your interior walls) in order to kill them. One of my readers recommended using a wet/dry vacuum with a hose attachment to suck up as many wasps from their entry/exit point as possible. If neither of these methods eradicate the wasps, contact a pest-control service.

HOME TIP: Found a wasp's nest in a tree at the far end of the yard? Consult a pest-control service before removing it, as the displaced wasps could simply move over to your house.

Help For Individuals, Families Facing Foreclosure

Local individuals or families who have lost their homes to foreclosure as a result of the national foreclosure crisis may be eligible to receive a grant of up to $7,000 to assist with expenses incurred as a result of moving out of their homes.

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore is currently seeking local residents who have lost their home to foreclosure and may be eligible for the grants, the funding for which came from the attorney general's office as a result of a multimillion-dollar settlement with Morgan Stanley & Co. But Neighborhood Housing officials say it's been difficult to locate local residents who qualify for the assistance.

"At Neighborhood Housing Services, we typically focus our efforts on helping families avoid foreclosure in the first place by working with lenders to modify the loans so that families can stay in their homes," Executive Director Robert Corley said. "Once a person or family has lost their home to foreclosure, it can be difficult to locate them, as they've been forced to move and may be staying temporarily with friends or relatives."

"That's why we're trying to get the word out that these grants are available to help people make the transition to a new home."

For those who qualify, Corley said, the grants of up to $7,000 may be used to help pay for temporary housing or rental assistance to help families pay the first and last month's rent and security deposit generally required to rent an apartment. Grants may also be available retroactively, providing assistance to families that have already been foreclosed upon and relocated to new housing.

In some cases, the grants may be used to help families rent back the home they lost to foreclosure.

Corley encouraged local residents who have lost their home to contact Neighborhood Housing Services to see if they qualify for a grant.

"This is their money," he said. "This funding was secured by the attorney general in damages for predatory lending practices, so the grants are essentially payment to the victims of these practices. This amount of money can't repair the damage caused to these families, but it could make the transition a bit easier. It would be a shame to see it go unclaimed."

To learn more about the grant program and its eligibility requirements, contact Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore at (508) 587-0950, ext. 45 or toll free at (855) 464-7669, ext. 45.

Quincy Wins 7-0 To Improve To 3-2 On Season Parry, Presidents Shut Down North Quincy

By ALAN McCALL

Some athletes can be dominant in the early stages of a contest, but tend to tire out in the later stages. But others, like Quincy High School's Nicole Parry, just keep getting stronger.

The senior hurler was in top form from the first pitch to the last on Friday night, tossing a complete game, three-hit shut out, while striking out eleven batters in leading the Quincy High softball team to a 7-0 win over North Quincy at McCoy-Mitchell Field.

"She pitches well to the situation," said Presidents' head coach Greg Sommers. "Usually she can dominate with her fastball the first time through the batting order, and then she is able to get hitters to chase balls out of the strike zone the next time through. She was able to do that effectively today."

Quincy (3-2, 1-1 in Patriot League) gave Parry the only runs she would need with a three-run second inning, without ever hitting the ball out of the infield. Ashley Faiella led off with a walk, followed by an infield hit by Saxon Bresnahan. After a fielder's choice cut down the lead runner, an infield hit by Devon Varmahmoodi (three hits) loaded the bases. The first two runs scored on consecutive walks to Blair Hajar and Bethany Walker, and the third run came across on an infield error off the bat of Parry.

The score remained 3-0 until the seventh inning, largely due to the effort given by North Quincy southpaw pitcher Caitlin Bulger, the Red Raiders number two pitcher, and some timely defense behind her.

In the third inning with Caity Lowry at first base with two outs, Varmahmoodi singled to center field. Low-QUINCY'S NICOLE PARRY threw a complete game, three-hit shut out to help the Presidents blank North Quincy, 7-0, last Friday at Mitchell-McCoy Field. Parry finished with seven strikeouts and has 55 on the season.

Quincy Sun photos/Lisa Aimola

NORTH QUINCY'S CAITLIN BULGER retired six of seven Quincy batters in innings five and six, but the Red Raiders dropped a nonleague game to the Presidents.

ry tried to take third base but was thrown out on a perfect throw by Courtney Campo to Lauren Magoon. The Presidents threatened again in the fourth frame as two more infield hits and a passed ball gave Quincy runners at second and third base, but Bulger stopped the bleeding by getting Bresnahan to ground out to shortstop.

Bulger retired six of the next seven Quincy batters in the fifth and sixth innings, but Quincy put the game out of reach in the seventh with a four-run rally. Taylor Parry started things with a leadoff single, but was forced out at second base on a fielder's choice ground ball by Bresnahan. A bunt single by Faiella and a base hit by Lowry loaded the bases. Moments later, the bases were cleared by a line drive double that reached the left field fence by Erin Chiocchio, who took third on the throw home. She scored on a hard hit ball to right field by Varmahmoodi.

The Red Raiders (0-4, 0-1) made some noise in the sixth inning on a single and two stolen bases by Taylor Mackay and a walk by Kelly Thompson to put runners at the corners. However Parry got out of the jam with a strikeout.

Campo singled in the seventh for North Quincy.

"We usually don't wait until late in the game to get our offense going, but she (Bulger) being a lefty pitcher had us off balance a little," said Sommers. "Our kids adjusted to it and we hit the ball well in the seventh inning."

North Quincy head coach Kerry Ginty was pleased with her team's effort. "We played a good game, we did some good things on defense, and it was just another one of those games that the final score won't show how well we did. She (Parry) is tough to beat. She has been there forever it seems and she shows that veteran poise out there. She had us chasing stuff out of the strike zone late in the game, and that's the experience she has to beat you," said Ginty.

Around the Horn: North Quincy's talented shortstop Elizabeth Kelly left the game after the first inning. She re-injured a right quad muscle while running out a ground ball... Nicole Parry's eleven strikeouts made it four games this season where she has had double-digit strikeouts and a season total of 55... This contest was a non-league game between the two rivals, who will meet again later this season in Patriot League action... Both teams resume their schedule on Friday when North Quincy hosts Milton and Quincy travels to Stoughton, looking to avenge an earlier season loss.

THE RED RAIDERS Taylor McKay takes a hack during last Friday's Quincy-North Quincy girls' softball game. Quincy won 7-0 to improve to 3-2 on the spring.

Dr. Alan Yacubian Honored For North Football Support

By SEAN BRENNAN

Dr. Alan Yacubian, Wollaston dentist, a former North Quincy football player and one of the Raiders' staunchest boosters, was recently presented the Distinguished Service Award from the Massachusetts Secondary Schools Athletic Directors.

The presentation was made by Marty Finnegan, coordinator of athletics for the Quincy schools.

Dr. Yacubian, the principal speaker at the North Quincy football banquet in January 1985, has done much for the Raider football program and the school's other programs through the years.

He was the inspiration for the North Quincy mascot, "Yakoo," the Indian.

A friend of his was a member of the Student Council and had an assignment to come up with a picture of an Indian. He asked Dr. Yacubian to take off his glasses and pose, which he did. Yakoo was the result and has remained a symbol of North Quincy High School.

'SHINE' BUCKLEY TO BE HONORED

The Quincy Recreation Department has planned a salute to Lionel "Shine" Buckley for his 38 years of service. Buckley recently retired from the Recreation Department and the Boston Public Schools.

The date of the event is May 22 at the George F. Bryan Post on Broad Street in Quincy. Dinner will be included in the night's festivities. Friends, family and former employees of the Recreation Department and the Boston Public Schools are invited to attend.

(Editor's note: Lionel "Shine" Buckley passed away on April 10 at the age of 89.)

COLLINS STANDOUT GOALIE FOR NORWICH UNIVERSITY

Tim Collins of North Quincy recently completed his freshman season as a goalie on the 16-11-1 Norwich University hockey team.

He posted a 6-4 record despite missing over a month of the season with a severe ankle injury. He had 232 saves with an 8.50 save percentage and 3.81 goals against average with one shutout.

Collins is a graduate of Boston College High School in Dorchester.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

DIGGING DEEPER

As home gardeners return to their beloved flower beds and vegetable gardens, they might find that their bodies respond less enthusiastically to bending, digging, and raking. Aside from aches and soreness, activities like digging in the garden, raking the lawn, and hauling away debris pose the threat of more serious injury to the out-of-shape body. As a result of the physical exertion, many may pull muscles, twist tendons, and strain ligaments. That is why it is important for gardeners to understand what their bodies can and cannot do, even when they are in shape. With regular chiropractic care, amateur gardeners can learn their body's limitations and better understand proper body mechanics for performing outdoor tasks.

Be aware of your body technique, body form and correct posture while gardening. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we provide safe and gentle chiropractic care for the entire family. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you feel better the natural way—the chiropractic way. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Gardening is a vigorous form of exercise that can be useful in building leg, arm, back, and abdominal muscles.
